President's Week in Review: December 30, 1965 - January 12, 1966

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

December 30.—BY popular mandate of the people, Ferdinand Edralin Marcos is installed formally as the sixth President of the Republic of the Philippines.

The transfer of the reins of administration from Diosdado Macapagal to Ferdinand Marcos takes place a few minutes high noon at the Luneta with Chief Justice Cesar Bengzon administering the oath of office to the new Chief Executive. The ritual of change, which is simple and brief, is witnessed by millions of people including representatives of 38 friendly nations headed by U.S. Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey.

From his residence in San Juan, Rizal, the incoming President motors to Malacañang and, in accordance with tradition, fetches Mr. Macapagal and proceeds to the inaugural rites at the Luneta.

Following a military parade, President Marcos takes his oath of office before Justice Bengzon. Vice-President Fernando Lopez took his before the President.

After the oath-taking ceremony, the new President delivers his inaugural address.

In his speech, President Marcos rallies the country to a new heroic adventure to greatness. His battle cry during the election campaign has now become his hope and vision—"This nation can be great again."

The President urges each of the more than 33 million Filipinos to march forward with him "towards the dream of greatness."

"This is your dream and mine," he declares. "By your choice you have committed yourselves to it. Come then, let us march together towards the dream of greatness."

In his extemporaneous, 30-minute address, the President asks for the "hastening of our social and economic transformation" and the broadening of the "narrow social and economic base" set by earlier Filipino leaders.

The Chief Executive likewise:

1. Bares an administration policy to launch a program of "rigorous fiscal restraint," warning that "conspicuous consumption and extravagance shall be condemned as inimical to public welfare."
2. Declares that he would use the fullest powers of the presidency to stop smuggling and lawlessness.
3. Asks that the Philippines makes common cause with other Asian nations in a drive toward prosperity and peace, and intensify her cultural identity with them.

The President points out:

"One of the most galling of our inherited problems is that of lawlessness. Syndicated crime has been spawned by smuggling. The democratic rule of law has lost all meaning and majesty, since all men know that public officials combine with unscrupulous businessmen to defraud the government and the public—with absolute impunity.

"The sovereignty of the Republic has never before been so derided and mocked as when the lawless elements, the smuggling syndicates and their protectors, disavow the power of laws and of our government over them. This is the climate for criminality. Popular faith in the government deteriorates."

He unfurls a “vision of greatness for our country” and underscores the imperative need of renewing it if the nation was to forge ahead.

The pursuit of this vision, he states, means hardwork, the facing of formidable challenges and overcoming them, good government, the rejection and discarding of “the inertia of centuries,” the exploitation of the nation’s resources, the transformation of the Philippines into a hub of progress and the people’s courageous shaping of their own future.

To achieve this greatness, he says “we must awake the hero in every man.”

He adds: “We must harness the will and the hearts of all our people. We must find the secret chords which turn ordinary men into heroes, mediocre fighters into champions.”

The President warns, however, that “our government is gripped with the iron hand of venality, its treasury is barren, its resources are wasted, its civil service is slothful and indifferent, its armed forces demoralized and its councils sterile.”

But, he said optimistically, “we shall draw from our rich resources of spiritual strength that flow from this place of martyrdom.”

Following his address, the President motors with his family to Malacañang where he and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, are luncheon hosts to some close friends and members of the President’s official family.

After luncheon, the President inducts the member of his Cabinet on mass and then immediately calls a Cabinet meeting to tackle problems of the country.

During the meeting, the President:

1. Issue Executive Order No. 1 creating an anti-smuggling committee, headed-by Justice Secretary Jose Yulo.
2. Issues Administrative Order No. 1 prohibiting public officials and employees from, dealing directly or indirectly with his relatives and those of the First Lady in matters relating to contracts, purchase of property or supplies and appointment of government personnel.

He also orders:

1. An inventory of the stocks of the Rice and Corn Administration and the Namarco.
2. The creation of study group to assess rice and corn production.
3. The preparation of a report on the irrigation systems of the country.

Present at the Cabinet meeting are: Acting Public Works Secretary Marciano Bautista, Secretary of Commerce Marcelo Balatbat, Presidential Assistant on Community Development Ernesto Maceda, Secretary of Public Works designate Antonio Raquisa, Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos, Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Labor Secretary Emilio Espinosa, Jr., OEC Chairman Constancio Castañeda, National Integration Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, NEC Chairman Filemon Rodriguez, Secretary of General Services Vicente Duterte, Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo, Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez, Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Land Authority Governor Conrado Estrella and Health Secretary Paulino Garcia.

In the afternoon, the President proceeds to the Luneta and the Libingan ng mga Bayani to pay homage at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

From the Libingan, he motors to the La Loma Cemetery where he is joined by the First Lady and Mrs. Daniel Romualdez to pay homage at the tomb of the late Speaker Daniel Romualdez.

In the evening, the President joins a group of Manilans at a popular program held at Plaza Santa Cruz to mark the change of administration.

December 31.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the Department of Agriculture to immediately recall all lease contracts entered into by the previous administration in December or earlier for the cutting of timber in any portion of the national forest preserves and national parks.

The President's action is prompted by reports that 46 000 hectare; of the Mt. Apo National Park in Mindanao had been doled out in 10-year lease contracts to a favored few.

In his directive the President emphasize that the national resources of the country will be preserved and any or all persons engaged in destructive deforestation will be stopped and punished.

In another directive, the President takes measures to implement immediately the stated policy of the administration to exercise the utmost economy in government spending, by issuing a memorandum restricting operational expenses.

The directive, contained In Memorandum Circular No. 1, is issued through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas.

The memorandum which specifies six orders for immediate and strict compliance by all bureaus, departments, and other offices of the executive branch, led off with the dismissal of all casual employees, restriction of travel within and outside the country, and the freezing of all promotions.

The Executive Secretary's memorandum specifies the following:

1. Terminate the services of all casual employees.
2. Suspend all promotions and the filling of all existing vacant positions and those which may hereafter become vacant.
3. Suspend all purchases of equipment, motor vehicle and furniture except those which are absolutely necessary.
4. Limit all travels whether abroad or local, or those that are urgent or necessary, and in such cases, only the minimum in number and in expenses shall be allowed.
5. Observe strict economy in the consumption of office supplies and materials and in the use of office facilities and utilities.
6. Observe strictly all existing orders, directives and measures promulgated to effect economy in the expenditures of public funds.

The memorandum is issued "in view of stringent financial conditions for which the need for economy has become imperative, particularly in the operational expenses of the government.

In the afternoon, the President motors to Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City where he is honored with a welcome parade and review by the Armed Forces of the Philippines as their new Commander-in-Chief.

In his extemporaneous remarks, the President exhorts the Armed Forces to adhere to duty, lead in the smuggling drive, and rely only on performance for advancement in the ranks.

The Chief Executive asks the men and officers of the armed forces to pay devotion to duty at all times, and let not friendship nor influence nor relationships substitute for performance in the matter of advancement. He warns that he will not condone any breach of discipline or wrongdoing, and that he will always be “on the sidelines watching.”

The President says he looks forward to the updating of arms and equipment, particularly those of the engineering construction battalions. He states the armed forces should be committed to civilian authority and will not tolerate cliques within the military establishment.

He pledges strong and fair leadership. He tells the members of the AFP that he will “protect your rear” as they move forward in the performance of their missions for the good of the country. He asks there should be a revitalization of the armed forces, in spirit and morality as well as in

In the evening the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, tenders a “state dinner in honor of the representatives of chiefs of state and foreign dignitaries, and their ladies who attended the presidential inaugural ceremonies.

Earlier in the morning, the President receives U.S. Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey who headed the U.S. delegation which attended his inauguration. Accompanied by Ambassador William McCormick, Blair, Jr. Vice President Humphrey calls at Malacañang to say goodbye prior to his return to Washington.

During the call the President and the U.S. Vice President has had an exchange of views on the broad range of Philippine-American relations.

Vice-President Humphrey particularly expresses his gratification at having been asked to convey President Johnson’s warm feelings of friendship and respect to President Marcos, the newly chosen leader of the Filipino people.

“The general question of Southeast Asia and the possibility of the Philippine Government to immediately associate itself even more closely with the joint efforts of the Free World in this region, are discussed during the meeting,” a formal statement issued during the call, says.

Another gift presented to the President is a Norman Rockwell photograph of President Johnson.

As his own parting gift, Vice-President Humphrey presents the Philippine President with a Steuben glass vase.

Meanwhile, President Marcos issues the following message on the eve of the 74th birth anniversary of President Manuel Roxas:

“It is with both sorrow and pride, and with warm personal recollection, that I commend to you the memory of the late President Manuel Roxas, who will surely loom large in our history, and for all times remain a supreme example of the nobility and genius of our race.

“President Roxas was one of those rare men of splendid spirit and singular eloquence, who are destined to lead nations. He took helm of our country at a time when we were prostrate from a ruinous war, and a newly born nation needful of direction and mentorship. Manuel Roxas provided these, and more. He laid the foundations of our present Republic, and pointed the way forward.

“Remembering Roxas is a very personal thing for me, for it was he who also sent me off on my way, to a public service career that, in reaching the present eminence which I have been privileged to achieve, I must own, was in great part due to his tutelage, encouragement, and example.

“But each of us will remember Roxas, should indeed remember him, as a great Filipino, who was an architect and a builder of the future. We can best remember him by continuing the task he started, and crowning it with success.”

President Marcos, at the same time, issues the following message on the eve of New Year’s day:

“Never before have I wished for a New Year more laden with hope than I do now at this time which I feel must surely become the beginning of a new epoch for our young nation, otherwise all our good intentions and fine words will be to no avail.

“I look forward to a hopeful year because we are burdened with grave problems that we must try to solve not only with brains and brawn but, in attempting this monumental task, we should endow it with hope and goodwill as well. It is often said that the New Year is the day for renewing hope and personal resolve. Be it so, therefore. Let us hope and let us resolve as a people to make this hope burgeon into a bounty of achievements, in every field, in every area of enterprise that we undertake for the good of our land and our people.

“And I would certainly hope, too, that if we find the tasks before us difficult, we should not bow before these difficulties but bear up with fortitude and increased determination. It is the only way we could dominate our problems and win through to our noble goals.

To my countrymen, Mrs. Marcos and I wish them in the time honored way, a happy and prosperous New Year.”

January 1.—PRESIDENT Marcos ushers in the New Year with midnight mass at the Malacañang Chapel following the dinner and reception at the Palace on the eve of New Year’s day

With him at the mass are the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, members of the Cabinet and other ranking government officials who attended the reception.

Following the mass, President and Mrs. Marcos receive thousands of people who swarmed to the Palace grounds to greet the First Couple during the traditional New Year’s Day reception at Malacañang.

An estimated 100,000 throng of people, many of whom had come all the way from the provinces stream in and out of the Palace premises the whole day.

The First Couple first receive ranking government officials, members of the diplomatic corps and their ladies.

In an exchange of greetings and toasts with members of the diplomatic corps, the President expresses the hope that the New Year would see continued peace and prosperity not only in the Philippines but also in the whole world.

“I hope for continued peace and prosperity not only in our area but in the whole world. It is my hope that God will grant us the strength and the wisdom in the attainment of this objective,” the President says.

He explains to the diplomats their warm greetings and high hopes for the Filipino people reflected the country’s sentiments about the relationship between the world’s family of nations and the Philippines.

“As you know, our people have again demonstrated their fidelity to the democratic institutions which they themselves have chosen, and your presence here is not only an honor to Mrs. Marcos and myself but to the Filipino people as well,” the President adds.

The foreign envoys, through Monsignor Carlo Martini, dean of the diplomatic corps, express confidence that the President's first year of administration would be "a giant step to greatness."

They state they knew how arduous the new mandate of the people was, which demanded a new leadership for progress, prosperity and greatness.

The diplomats assure the President of "friendly collaboration," saying that peace and international collaboration are indispensable conditions in the "Life March" of nations.

Taking time out only for lunch, the First Couple resume receiving their well-wishers until the evening.

Later in the evening, the President and the First Lady entertain the President's comrades-in-arms in the USAFIP-NL guerillas, headed by Gen. Russel Volckmann, at dinner at the Palace.

January 2.—IN a determined effort to install without delay a policy of rigorous fiscal restraint, President Marcos orders the Philippine National Bank to defer the processing and release of all loans in excess of P50,000 until further advice.

At the same time, the President directs the Development Bank of the Philippines, the Government Service Insurance System, and the Social Security System to submit immediately a report on their financial status as of December 31, 1965.

The Chief Executive issues these directives through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas.

Reiterating his observation that the economic condition of the government requires immediate retrenchment, the President emphasizes that every form of waste and extravagance, should be condemned as inimical to public

"Frugality with government funds and resources must be developed into a habit at every level of government," the President had stated in his inaugural address. "High officials must themselves set the example."

In another directive, through Secretary Salas, the President asks the Securities and Exchange Commissioner to submit immediately a report on the financial position of all transportation companies as reflected in their books of accounts for the period ending December 21, 1965.

The President issues the directive to determine the extent of losses being sustained by these companies which warranted the recent increases of fares in busses and inter island vessels.

In the morning, the President starts the day by playing a round of golf at the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club, with Speaker Cornelio Villareal, former Japanese Premier Nobosuke Kishi, Japanese Ambassador Harumi Takeuchi and Jose Laurel III.

Following the game, Premier Kishi presents the President a souvenir silver cup with the inscription: "Presented by Premier Nobosake Kishi to His Excellency, President Ferdinand E. Marcos, January 2, 1966.

Back at Malacañang, the President works the whole day on slate papers in the seclusion of his study.

January 3.—PRESIDENT Marcos signs the administrative order formally signifying his assumption of the secretaryship of national defense as of the time he took his oath as sixth President of the Republic.

The President then holds a three-hour long conference with top defense officials at Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City where, among others, he informally installs retired Brig. Gen. Ernesto Mala and retired Col. Manuel Syquiao as special assistants to him; he undertakes studies of the problems of the department.

Other points taken up at the conference are:

1. Updating of military equipment through reparations from Japan;
2. Increasing the number of trainees in order to reach a closer approximation of the spirit of the National Defense Act; and
3. Reshuffle of the defense establishment to affect only policy determining positions but all personnel under the classified civil service to be retained and given ample protection.

The President is likewise given a closed-door intelligence briefing by Gen. Rigoberto Atienza, AFP chief of staff, during which is discussed at length the extent and degree of smuggling activities all over the country.

The Chief Executive also issues a proclamation declaring Thursday (January 6), this year as a special public holiday in Quezon City. January 6 is the birth, anniversary of Melchora Aquino, known as “Tandang Sora,” a famous heroine of the Revolution.

In issuing the Proclamation, the first to be issued under his administration, the President says the people of Quezon City where “Tandang Sora” was born should be afforded an opportunity to honor her with appropriate ceremonies “for her humanitarian work and sacrifices.”

In the afternoon, the President meets with officials directly concerned with the anti-smuggling drive.

During the meeting, the President issues a series of directives aimed at intensifying the government campaign against smuggling, namely,

1. The immediate replacement of Brig. Gen. Segundo Gazmin by Col. Manuel Yan, as commander of the second PC zone, and the transfer of Gazmin to the general staff of the AFP chief of staff;
2. Asks Prof. Enrique Fernando, whom he had designated legal adviser to the President and legal counsel of the anti-smuggling committee, to confer with Justice Secretary Jose Yulo and Executive Secretary Rafael IYL Salas on the feasibility of assigning special judges to areas pinpointed as smuggling centers, to try smuggling cases;
3. The Civil Affairs Office to undertake a massive information and educational drive in support of the campaign;
4. All government personnel not to use smuggled goods under pain of administrative punishment;
5. That in the reshuffle of zone and provincial commanders, Gen. Olivarez may submit names of all officers, including those from the army who may replace incumbents; that the reshuffle may include the reassignment of affected officers and enlisted men to training camps;
6. Constabulary and customs personnel to coordinate efforts and conserve their energies for the tasks at hand; and
7. The study of a system whereby payment of customs duties shall be made direct to the banks thus eliminate intermediaries who, in the past, have contributed to the perpetration of irregularities in customs transactions.

It is also decided at the conference that the departments of justice, finance and defense will organize their respective operations and coordinating centers which, however, will be subordinate to the operations and coordinating centers at Cabinet Level.

January 4.—SIGNIFYING his intentions to give his administration’s land and rural development program full emphasis, President Marcos issues two executive orders elevating the Presidential Assistant on Community Development and the Land Authority to Cabinet rank. The positions are invested with “all the rights, honors, and privileges” pertaining to a member of the Cabinet.

The Chief Executive names former Gov. Conrado Estrella of Pangasinan as the new Land Authority governor and former Manila Councilor Ernesto Maceda as the PACD chief.

In the morning, the President receives a number of callers among whom are Col. Robert Arnold, one of his American comrades-in-arms during the Second World War who attended the inauguration ceremonies. Arnold rays the President a farewell call prior to leaving for home shortly.

In the afternoon, he receives three officials of the Bus Operators Association of the Philippines (BOAP) who pledge the lowering of bus rates following the President’s appeal to them.

The BOAP officials, during their call, voluntarily pledge a lowering of the present hiked bus rates to ten centavos per five kilometers, in response to the President’s appeal in behalf of the public.

They also state that they would go to the Public Service Commission to ask for the reconsideration of the previously increased minimum fare on buses. This increase of the minimum fare from ten to 15 centavos was implemented sometime last week.

The PSC had approved and implemented the increase in minimum fare for buses operating in Manila and suburbs, explaining that the general rise in prices had made it more difficult for the bus operators to keep their units running. But it met with instant opposition from the public, particularly from regular commuters.

Meantime, President Marcos reconstitutes the National Parks Development Committee, naming the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos as chairman and taking civic leaders into its membership.

The committee is reactivated with the issuance of an Executive Order, which also amended Executive Order No. 69, dated Feb. 7, 1964, reconstituting the membership of the body. The committee was formerly headed by the previous First Lady, Mrs. Evangelina M. Macapagal.

The body will continue to function as the main agency charged with the maintenance and improvement of national parks scattered all over the archipelago, some of which are forest reserves and the others are public gardens and historical monuments.

January 5 —PRESIDENT Marcos makes a surprise visit to the customs area and the piers, and confers with customs officials and sees for himself the operations of this revenue-collecting agency of the government.

Upon his arrival at the customs zone, the President proceeds direct to the office of Acting Customs Commissioner Pablo Mariano. He learns that customs collection increased by P1.5 million during the past two days, as compared to that of the same period last year. Commissioner Mariano also briefs the President on all the phases of customs operations.

The President gets a detailed picture of the red tape in the processing of incoming cargoes when he visits all the divisions involved in the procedure. At the Marine Division alone, he is informed that some 14 officials sign or initial export declarations. Other divisions into whose operations the President looked were the cash division, the appraisers division and the examining division.

The Chief Executive looks into the customs operations for an hour-and-a-half, but before leaving he asks the customs officials to submit recommendations on how to do away with red tape and bottlenecks at the pier sheds, as well as on the prevention of pilferages of goods.

From the customs area, the President inspects the progress in the construction of Pier 15, which is part of the expansion program of the customs bureau.

Following the visit, the President appoints retired Col. Jacinto Gavino as commissioner of customs. Gavino has the reputation of being an organization man, and has served extensively in key posts in the government before his retirement, and after he terminated his army career. He is expected to streamline the customs service in line with the President's objective to make it a more effective, arm of the government.

Back in Malacañang, the President confers with Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco on the proposed budget for the next fiscal year. Also at the conference which ended at 4 p.m. is Honesto Mendoza, chief of the technical staff of the finance and economy committee of the Senate.

At the same time, President Marcos issues an executive order which revises the system of-payments of taxes, fees and other charges on imports at the customs, by authorizing the Central Bank to collect all payments through agent banks.

The President takes this step to fill an "imperative need" for a "more effective system of collecting customs duties, taxes and other levies" in order to tighten the method of raising revenues. The new system will have the Central Bank collecting payments on all imported goods through its authorized agent banks, which will later be remitted to the commissioner of customs.

Excepted from the order are customs duties, taxes and other levies due on no-dollar imports which are not covered by release certificates issued by the Central Bank. These payments will continue to be collected by the bureau of customs.

The customs bureau will continue to assess, appraise and examine imports, and impose the amounts necessary. Adjusted payments after assessment balances, as the case maybe, will be paid through the Central Bank. In case of over payment, the customs bureau will refund directly.

The monetary board- will promulgate the implementing rules and regulations. He also orders:

1. The department of finance to study expansion of the customs zone. Affected initially are the NDC, Nacida, and PC warehouses; the department of commerce compound up to Engineering Island;
2. That construction of Pier 15 in the vicinity of the Legaspi Landing be expedited;
3. That henceforth the assessment and examination of all imports be made in the presence of representatives of all business chambers and trade organizations;
4. The department of foreign affairs to look into the participation of department personnel abroad in the misdeclaration of imported goods-
5. The department of justice to extend full cooperation to the foreign affairs, commerce and finance departments in the investigation and disposal of cases of misdeclaration;
6. The reexamination of the security system at the customs zone, with the view simplifying operations, possibly to bring all security agencies there under one command, in order to pinpoint responsibility.

At present, there is an overlapping network of security agencies at the customs zone, including the harbor police, the security personnel of the arrastre service and a PC task force.

January 6.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the outright recall and return of all appointments pending action by the Civil Service Commission., the Wage and Position Classification Office (WAPCO) and the Budget Commission, for further study and review.

In an administrative order, the President points out that numerous appointments had been hurriedly made or issued by the outgoing administration which are now pending action by the three offices.

The present administration deems it necessary in the public interest to review and study further said appointments, particularly in the light of its administrative program and the present precarious fiscal position of the government,” the President states.

He stresses that no further action be taken on all these appointment papers and that they be returned to the respective offices where they originated. Appointments pertaining to purely provincial or municipal offices are not included in the order.

The whole afternoon up to the early hours of the evening, the President receives provincial delegations which took up with him matters concerning their respective localities.

Following the calls, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children hear mass at the Palace chapel in observance of the Feast of the Three Kings.

Meantime, President Marcos states that his administration will give full support to the participation of private agencies and civic organizations in community development work.

In a message he issued on the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the office of the Presidential Assistant on Community Development (PACD), the President stresses that integrated and coordinated community development efforts, “exerted on a holistic approach, should be directed to pursuing undertakings which will redound to the greatest good to the greatest number.”

The Chief Executive, calls on the people to join hands in the huge task of liberating “our less fortunate brethren from the bondage of poverty, hunger, illiteracy, and disease, and to restore their faith in themselves.”

The President also issues an executive order raising the PACD to Cabinet level.

The President reveals he will urge the passage of necessary legislation to convert the PACD into a full-fledged department with expanded activities geared towards the uplift of the rural masses.

He notes that “nation-building is a great and massive task in which every Filipino, young or old, rich or poor, in the public or private sector, of whatever creed or belief, has to contribute his share.”

He concludes saying he will utilize whatever resources and facilities are within* his command and influence, to enable a more effective and vigorous implementation of this program directed at bringing social justice and a more meaningful life to all—the best way to make this nation great again.”

January 7 — AS the need for stopping the illegal acquisition of material gains through dubious means such as graft and corruption, smuggling, subversion and lawlessness arises President Marcos issues an executive order creating the Presidential Agency on Reforms and Government Operations in place of the Presidential Anti-Graft Committee.

In his executive order, the President abolishes the Presidential Anti-Graft Committee (PAGCOM) and names former Rep. Bartolome Cabangbang as the chief of the Presidential Agency on Reforms and Government (PARGO), the new agency.

Cabangbang is a former representative of Bohol. He was an army pilot in the World War II and later served with the Philippine Air Force during and after the war.

The PARGO, which was placed on a Cabinet level, thereby vesting on Cabangbang all the powers and privileges of a cabinet secretary, will function in many ways like the PAGCOM—as a graft-busting arm of the executive branch with authorization to investigate graft and corruption in the public service. It has also been given other and wide-ranging duties by the President.

The new office will also serve as the Presidential link to the people as a clearing house for information and data needed by the President regarding the national situation, and as an information and education agency with the specific objective of strengthening the spiritual and moral fiber of government employees, and the people in general.

At the same time, the President appoints Col. Manuel B. Syquiao, as one of two undersecretaries of defense; and retired Major General Ismael Lapuz, as chief of the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency.

The new defense undersecretary, is a veteran military career man. A colonel in the signal corps and AFP comptroller at the time of his appointment, Syquiao is from Hagonoy, Bulacan. A graduate of the PMA and various service schools for advanced command training in the U.S., the new DND official has had a wide variety of experience in the military service, and has won several commendations.

Gen. Lapuz takes over from Gen. Marcos Soliman as NICA chief. Recently retired from the military service, Lapuz has headed many sensitive posts in the armed forces, capped by his tour of duty as vice chief of staff of the AFP.

In the morning, the President swears in Col. Segundo Velasco as chief of the Philippine Constabulary, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos. Teodoro Valencia, and Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, as chairman, vice chairman and treasurer, respectively, of the National Parks Development Committee.

Following the induction ceremonies, the President receives a group of visiting Japanese businessmen led by Shutaro Kamiya, president of the Toyota Motors, who paid him a courtesy call. Kamiya and his companions arrived the other day for a five-day visit during which they will discuss business expansion programs with Filipino business partners.

During the call of the Japanese businessmen, the President gives assurance that joint ventures between Filipino and Japanese businessmen will receive the cooperation and protection of his administration.

The Japanese businessmen reveal the plans for expansion of a joint undertaking in paper pulp manufacturing between the Japan Chemical Industries and the Canlubang Sugar Estate. Established at a cost of P5-million, the plant processes sugar bagasse into pulp for paper manufacturing. Submission of the Philippine-Japanese treaty to the Senate for ratification was one of the matters taken up between the President and former Japanese Prime Minister Nobosuke Kishi, one of the Foreign dignitaries who attended the inauguration of the Chief Executive.

Kamiya presents to the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, a check for P10,000 for cultural projects.

In thanking Kamiya for the donation, the First Lady says it will go a long way in realizing her project of constructing a National Theatre.

After the call, the President meets Public Works Secretary-designate Antonio Raquiza and acting Public Works Secretary Marciano Bautista on the public works program.

In his talks with the two, the President orders them to confer with officials of the departments of agriculture and commerce, as well as with those of the UP College of Agriculture in Los Baños which is conducting a rice research, on the construction of irrigation systems

The President bares a systematic approach to public works construction and better coordination with the private sector, whose participation in projects, such as the expansion of bridge building and road construction will be worthwhile.

He emphasizes planning in the expansion of national roads and bridges in order to give financiers in the private sector an idea of where and how they could fit in. A meeting among the public works and finance officials, as well as private financiers, to explore ways of coming to an agreement on the terms and types of investments, is suggested by the President.

Participation of the private sector in public works construction could mean the mobilization of private capital to help government projects, which investment could be recovered through tolls. How these tolls will be collected will be worked out among the parties concerned.

On the construction of irrigation systems, the President feels that there should be close consultation with rice research authorities in Los Baños in order to discover where they could be of greatest service in rice production.

Then, the President meets at luncheon Manila newsmen covering the Palace.

During the luncheon, the President reveals to the newsmen that the barrio Capipisa in Tanza, Cavile which had heretofore been off-limits to the AFP is the target of an amphibious force of the AFP.

The President orders the assault of that main capital of smuggling this noon. The assault was classified as top secret, with the operation designed to surprise the smugglers. The President bares this assault shortly after the government force had carried out its orders.

The government troops started landing at 4:15 p.m. Friday, and immediately found indications of smuggling activity, as they noted the fresh truck tires criss-crossing the beach, and fish nets scattered about, presumably used to haul away contraband goods.

The Capipisa strike is the first of several assaults planned on smuggling bases, as part of the total anti-smuggling drive activated by the President, an important phase of which is the AFP participation which the Chief Executive in effect personally directs in his concurrent capacity as defense secretary.

The Chief Executive remarks that the success of the anti-smuggling drive of the government will depend to a large extent on the firm and able leadership in the Philippine Constabulary.

The President devotes the whole evening going over state papers in the seclusion of his study.

January 8.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the immediate investigation of the reported sale of a choice piece of government land to a private party which was approved by the previous administration only last December.

In his directive, the President orders the Executive office and the justice department to conduct the investigation. He says he wanted the probe started immediately.

The property involves an 82-hectare, P65-million worth of rolling land and part of the National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority reservation near the Balara Filters, which was sold at the giveaway price of P3-million. The property was originally intended for a housing project for the Nawasa employees.

The President spends almost the whole morning laying the groundwork of the administration's determined drive against smuggling and criminality.

The Chief Executive first summons the newly-designated PC zone commanders to Malacañang, upon whom he impressed the seriousness of the task ahead of them.

Following the meeting with chiefs of the national police agencies, the President appeals at luncheon to the officials of the department of foreign affairs, including chiefs of Philippine diplomatic missions abroad who are now in Manila, to complement the efforts of the government in solving domestic internal problems, particularly smuggling. He slates that Ambassadors and other diplomatic and consular officials could help great extent in the anti-smuggling drive by preventing misdeclaration of goods for import, to the Philippines.

After the conference with foreign affairs officials, the Chief Executive appoints three more cabinet undersecretaries, to fill vacancies in the foreign office, national defense and labor departments.

Named to the No. 2 posts in the three departments are:

1. Brig. Gen. Ernesto S. Mata, retired, as one of two undersecretaries of defense.
2. Manuel Collantes, career minister, as undersecretary for administration in the foreign affairs department.
3. Raoul Inocentes as undersecretary of Labor.

Gen. Mata retired from the armed forces after 30 years of service, his last post being as commanding general of the Philippine Army. A graduate of the Philippine Military Academy, he became its commandant in the course of his service. He was a BCT commander in the link campaign, as well as commander of other famed units. He also underwent further training in US command schools. Among the award; he holds are the Distinguished Service Star with one bronze Anahaw leaf, the Philippine Legion of Honor, the US Legion of Merit, and the Military Merit Medal with 4 bronze Anahaw leaves.

A veteran of numerous international conferences, including duty at the United Nations, Collantes has been on home assignment since 1958. At the time of his appointment, he was serving as Secretary-General of the Conference of Chief of Missions at Padre Faura.

One of the aides to President-elect Marcos last December, the new undersecretary played a key role in the drive for the selection of Manila as the site of the newly-created Asian Development Bank.

A native of Tanauan, Batangas, Collantes joined the foreign service in 1946 as a senior assistant. Following successive tours of duty in Washington, Paris and New York, he rose rapidly in the career service and became counselor on administration in 1980 and chief of protocol in 1963.

A holder of a Bachelor of Laws Degree, Inocentes has had extensive training in labor administration both here and in the United States.

His stint in the labor department started in 1954 when he was private secretary to the secretary of labor.

Subsequently, he was at one time conciliator and legal assistant acting director of the bureau of labor relations, thrice acting Undersecretary of Labor, acting chief of the Labor Statistics Service and officer-in-charge of the bureau of labor standards.

Inocentes has also been a member of Philippine delegations to international labor conferences, and professor and lecturer on labor and social legislations in several colleges.

Meantime, President Marcos bares he will press for the renegotiation of the $800 million Philippine Veterans claims with the United States and for this reason will reconstitute the Philippine panel to meet with Washington officials.

He will also work for the release of $28 million earmarked by the U.S. for an education fund. This sum represents the unclaimed portion of the $73 million appropriated by the U.S. Congress to pay in full the Philippine War damage claims.

The Philippines had originally filed an omnibus war claim of $3 billion but this amount was reduced to $800 million.

In refusing to recognize the $800 million claim, the U.S. had contented that there was no authentic roster of veterans on which to base the actual amount of the claim.

The Filipino veterans, in cooperation with the armed forces, has completed their researches on the matter and are ready to submit authentic documents to support the Philippine claims.

The claims cover the pay differentials of Filipino soldiers who were not given equal pay and equal benefits as their American comrades in the last war.

January 9.— PRESIDENT Marcos enjoins all government officials and employees, as well as private citizens, to cooperate more fully in the intensified campaign launched by the administration against smuggling.

The Chief Executive, in an executive order, points out that under existing laws, smuggling and traffic in smuggled goods as well as mere possession of smuggled goods are penal offenses, and, in the case of government personnel, administrative offenses.

The President notes that smuggling and traffic in smuggled articles is a form of subversion which erodes our economic gains, promotes crime and encourages lawlessness.

He observes that in recent years there have been rampant and unabated smuggling and illicit trading in smuggled products of all kinds, not limited to blue seal cigarettes alone.

He urges the people to comply with existing laws and orders on smuggling “under pain of being subjected to civil, penal and administrative sanctions, as the case may be.”

The President cautions that any violation of anti-smuggling orders by government officials and employees shall be enough ground for administrative action against them and for the imposition of severe penalty, including dismissal from the service, “whenever appropriate.”

He orders all heads of government offices, including government-owned or controlled corporations, to file corresponding administrative charges against any officer or employee found violating the order.

At the same time, the President appoints Manuel Nieto, Jr., as commissioner of the Board of Travel and Tourist Industry, and Flores Bayot as Malacañang assistant executive secretary on local governments.

Nieto, a former chairman of the Games and Amusement Board, replaces Conchita Sunico as head of the BTTL. A prominent sportsman, the new chairman of the government tourist office has travelled widely and is in a unique position to head successfully this bureau.

Bayot, a practising lawyer and political leader in Capiz, is deputy secretary-general of the Nacionalista Party.

In the morning, the President takes to the greens for relaxation, following a week of continuous ground-laying work on solutions for the more urgent problems of government.

Back in Malacañang from the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club shortly before one o’clock in the afternoon, the President meets with his financial and economic advisers, among whom were Finance Secretary Eduardo Z. Romualdez, Commerce Secretary Marcelo Balatbat and Governor Andres V. Castillo of the Central Bank.

In the evening, the President hears mass at the Palace chapel, with the members of his family.

January 10 — In response to a public demand, President Marcos meets the executives of the different oil companies in the country with whom he discusses the return of the original prices of kerosene and gasoline.

The return to the old prices was agreed upon during his meeting with six top executives of oil companies operating in the Philippines.

During this period the government will reexamine policies that affect the “proper return on capital invested” of such companies as these oil firms, which have a special problem of “abnormally heavy receivables.” In this connection, the President directs Finance Secretary Eduardo Z. Romualdez to head a special committee to review the problems of the oil companies.

The executives explain at the meeting the background and reasons for the recent price increases. They particularly cite the low return on invested capital, and the “special problem” of carrying unduly heavy receivables, which is further aggravated by the tremendous capital outlays required to meet increasing demands.”

Present during the meeting are: E.P. Edmunds, president of Mobil Oil Philippines, Inc.; R.V. del Rosario, president of Filoil Refinery Corporation; W.E. Menefee, president of Caltex (Philippines), Inc.; I.P. Bruce, president of Shell Company; G.H. White, general manager of Esso Standard Eastern Inc.; and W.F. Hagans, president and general manager of Tidewater Oil Company (Philippines) Inc.

The prices of gasoline and kerosene were raised recently lay one centavo per liter. For example, kerosene which sold for 20 centavos before the increase, sells at 21 centavos; ordinary gasoline was raised from 25 centavos to 26 centavos, while premium gasoline sells at 29 centavos after the increase. These prices will be now, marked down by one centavo, restoring them to the old levels.

Following his conference with the officials of the oil firms, the President meets with some 40 ranking officials of the bureau of Internal Revenue-Commission led by BIR Commissioner Misael Vera, on the efficient collection of taxes.

At the meeting, the Chief Executive impresses upon the internal revenue men the need for vigorous enforcement of tax laws and the collection of all taxes due, in the face of the critical financial situation of the government.

The President states that acts inimical to an efficient and honest public service, particularly in revenue collecting agencies will not be condoned. “We cannot stand another year or four years of venalities,” he adds.

The Chief Executive stresses that the BIR is one of the most sensitive and important agencies of the government. Because of this, he states, each employee in the bureau must work diligently to earn the taxpayer’s respect and good will, as well as to instill confidence in the national tax system.

The President points out that there must be an honest tax administration where undue interference and influence of any nature will not be tolerated, where employee integrity should prevail, and where taxpayer honesty must be rigidly enforced.

The government, the President states, can barely operate with its present financial position and is even indebted in the amount of P133-million.

He says that while he is concerned with past irregularities in this collecting agency of the government, he is now more interested in the constructive aspects of the bureau’s work.

The BIR, the President observes, is not only the biggest source of government revenue but is also an office that influences the morality of the people because of the nature of its work.

Because of this, the President concludes, he would be compelled to take action against erring officials and employees.

In the afternoon, the President swears in Undersecretaries of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles and Manuel Collantes, BIR Commissioner Misael Vera, RCA Board member Osmundo Mondoñedo, BTTI Commissioner Manuel Nieto Jr., and CAA Administrator Nilo de Guia.

January 11.—PRESIDENT Marcos issues a directive reminding all public officials to file their sworn statements of assets and liabilities.

The President, in his directive contained in a memorandum circular issued through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, points out that under Republic Act No. 3019, otherwise known as the Anti-Graft Law, every public officer is required to file with the offices of his department head such sworn statement “within 30 days—after assuming office and within the month of January of every other year thereafter- as well as upon the expiration of his term of office, or upon his resignation or separation from office.”

Secretary Salas explains that failure to file the required statement within the prescribed period is punishable by a fine of not less than P100 nor more than P1,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both, at the discretion of the court; or by dismissal from the service in a proper administrative proceeding even if no criminal prosecution is instituted against the official or employee.

The sworn statement shall cover the period from the day immediately following the date included in the previous statement up to December 31, 1965.

In the afternoon, the President receives delegations of provincial and municipal officials who consult him on problems of their respective localities.

Then the Chief Executive confers with Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez, permanent delegate to the UN; and Brig. Gen. Francisco Licuanan, military adviser to the UN mission, who called on him for instructions prior to returning to their UN posts on Friday.

Ambassador Lopez has been in Manila since December 28 last year, to attend the inauguration of the President and the recently-concluded conference among Filipino Chiefs of Missions and key officials of the department of foreign affairs.

Meantime, President Marcos conveys the condolences of the Filipino people to the people of India on the death of Prime Minister Lai Bahadur Shastri.

The Chief Executive designates Benjamin Romualdez as his personal representative at the state funeral of the Indian premier. Romualdez leaves for New Delhi in the afternoon.

In a message he dispatches to President S. Radhakrishnan in New Delhi, the President states that the premier’s death thousands of miles away from his homeland in his quest for peace “all the more magnified his unflinching dedication to the cause of mankind and serves as a shining symbol for all peace loving people everywhere.”

The Indian prime minister died of a heart attack in Tashkent, Russia after concluding a reconciliation summit meeting with Pakistan’s President Ayub Khan.

The text of the President’s message reads:

“It is with shock and profound sorrow that we received the news of the death of Prime Minister Lai Bahadur Shastri in Tashkent.

“His death thousands of miles away from his homeland in the quest for peace all the more magnifies his unflinching dedication to the cause of mankind and serves as a shining symbol for all peace loving people everywhere.

“On this tragic occasion the Filipino people join me in conveying to Your Excellency and through you to the people of India sincere condolences and sympathies.”

January 12.—TO avert the threatening disruption of power services to ^ the detriment of the national interest, President Marcos certifies to the Court of Industrial Relations for outright arbitration the dispute between the management of the National Power Corporation and the NPC employees and labor association.

Some 3,000 employees of the power corporation walked out the other night following the failure of the department of labor to settle the labor-management dispute.

In certifying the labor dispute to the CIR, the President stresses the necessity of its immediate settlement because it “clearly affects an industry indispensable to the national interests.”

The President points out that the prolongation of the strike would consequently result in huge economic losses, untold inconveniences, and grave danger to public order and human life.

Stoppage of operations by the NPC, even briefly, the President cautions, will result in the suspension of most activities directly related to daily living. Operations in industrial and business houses may have to stop, and medical and hospital services will be immensely impaired.”

The NPC strike was called after management disputed the demand of the union for the reopening of negotiations for across-the-board salary increases by 21%, even before the expiration of the existing collective bargaining agreement. The workers alleged that certain promotions affected by the NPC aborted the agreement and thus freeing the union to reopen negotiations.

The Chief Executive, at the same time, releases P355,000 to the Social Welfare Administration for cash assistance to the refugees from the Taal volcano eruption late last year, pending arrangements for their resettlement in permanent locations.

The amount is ordered released by President Marcos following the decision of the Presidential Committee on Relief and Rehabilitation to extend more direct material assistance to the refugees in the face of the extreme difficulties they are experiencing.

The amount will be doled out by the SWA, after due processing of the refugees and investigation of their needs.

In the morning, the President enlists the support of the municipal mayors of Rizal province in the administration’s anti-smuggling drive, saying that some Rizal towns serve as entry points for smuggled items to Manila.

The Chief Executive makes the exhortation during the call of a delegation made up of 29 mayors of the province.

“Let us be more vigilant and, if possible, stop smuggled items from entering through your towns,” the President appeals.

In the afternoon, the President confers with Defense Undersecretary Ernesto Mata on matters concerning the defense department, including nominations to the Board of the Veterans Bank of the Philippines.

Then, the President receives some members of Congress who consult him on problems of their respective districts, particularly public works projects.

President's Week in Review: January 13 - February 15, 1966

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

January 13.—DUE to numerous pressing problems concerning the entire range of government business necessitating full and undivided attention, President Marcos issues a directive prohibiting department secretaries and heads of government corporations from accepting speaking engagements during the first 100 days of the current calendar year.

The Chief Executive's directive is embodied in a memorandum circular issued through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas who points out that "the administration is faced with numerous urgent problems concerning the entire gamut of government business which require the undivided and uninterrupted attention and full application to work of all concerned."

The directive, which takes effect immediately, bans officials of Cabinet rank, as well as heads and chairmen of governing boards of corporations owned or controlled by the government, from accepting speaking engagements or other similar activities that will involve time to prepare or draw them away for some time from their work.

The President spends almost the whole day hard at work on the draft of this State-of-the-Nation address which he will deliver at the opening of the regular session of the sixth Congress on January 25.

Except for a limited number of callers, the President isolates himself in his study all day, organizing and documenting the speech which will contain his legislative proposals on such important matters as the anti-smuggling campaign, the economic development projects of the administration, and the reorganization of the government.

The President's immediate main concern was reflected earlier by an announcement from Malacañang outlining the administration's priority legislative proposals aimed at strengthening the anti-smuggling law, providing new incentives to rice producers, reparations support to economic development projects of the government, and the revamp of the government machinery to simplify functions and sharpen efficiency.

In his message, the President will spell out to Congress the economic program of the administration, with emphasis on priority projects, such as rice production, which will be geared to the increase of yield in such a way that the nation will, in the foreseeable future, be self-sufficient in the cereal. In this connection, the President will mobilize every resources that will upgrade irrigation systems and provide better distribution and utilization of fertilizers.

He will also press for amendments in the smuggling law with an eye to increasing penalties for violators, including the imposition of the death penalty on smugglers who are found guilty of homicide in the pursuit of their illegal activities.

In connection with the reorganization of the government, the President will seek authorization from Congress to revamp the entire executive branch from top to bottom. He has a two-fold objective in this revamp, namely: to cut down government expenses and to increase efficiency.

Among the few callers received by the President is Albertus Taapken, vice president and manager, International Banking Department of the Crocket-Citizens' National Bank in San Francisco, California, who pays him a courtesy call.

During their meeting, the President and Taapken find occasion to talk about economic planning and foreign investments.

The President expresses the hope that financial institutions will find a more favorable climate under his administration, adding that he is thinking of pushing through the enactment of a foreign investments bill by the incoming Congress.

He points out that economic planning in the country dates back to the time of the late President Roxas but then, he states, there has been failure in the establishment of priorities.

Under his administration, the President stresses, priorities will be established in the country's economic planning.

On the other hand, Taapken informs the President, his company will only be too willing to help in the administration's projects that will redound to national progress.

January 14—PRESIDENT Marcos enjoins all government agencies to participate and provide support to the survey of the cattle industry which will be undertaken by the Philippine Government with the help of the United Nations Technical Assistance Board.

The Chief Executive, in a memorandum circular issued by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, creates an inter-agency committee to coordinate the activities of the various agencies of the government which will undertake the survey.

The inter-agency committee will have as its chairman the director of the Bureau of Animal Industry with the director of the Agriculture division of the Program Implementation Agency as co-chairman. The directive takes effect immediately.

In the morning, the President meets with officials of inter-island shipping companies on the restoration of old passenger fares and freight charges.

The meeting with the shipping operators is the third held by the President with leaders of the business community in the brief span of 10 days in an effort to maintain the status quo in prices until after an exhaustive study shall have been made on policies affecting capital investment.

The first was on January 4 when the President, on behalf of the public, appealed to bus operators in the greater Manila area to return to the old minimum rate of passenger fares.

On January 10, the President conferred with executives of the different oil companies in the country on the return of the original prices of kerosene and gasoline.

During the meeting with shipping executives, an agreement on keeping the old rates for the greater number of ship travelers, who include students and "average-to-low income groups," is reached quickly when the shipping officials respond to the appeal of the President in behalf of the welfare of the "greater number of people," and of essential public needs.

It is also agreed at the conference that cargoes of rice, flour and medicine will be charged the rates prevailing before the Public Service Commission approved the increased shipping rates.

The agreement takes effect immediately, and will be in force for six months, after which the rate increases approved by the PSC will be partially enforced, that is: by 5% for passenger fares and 9% for freight rates. The full rates as authorized by the PSC, that is: 10% increase in passenger fares and 18% increase in cargo charges, will take effect after another six-months period.

The shipping operators inform the President that they had increased the rates because of corresponding increase in the cost of operation, particularly in fuel, food, supplies, insurance, and wages arising from the new Minimum Wage Law.

The shipping officials explain that because of these overall increases, the rates formerly prevailing had made the business a losing proposition. They add that since 1961 when the old rates went into effect losses have progressively increased.

In this connection, the President directs Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez to work out a program with the shipping operators for solving the interisland shipping industry's problems with the assistance of the government. The program will tackle more particularly the problem of high operating costs for local shipping.

The President issues this directive "in view of the hardships imposed on the low-to-average income earners who are the people most affected."

The new rates would have increased the fare from Manila to Iloilo by approximately P2.50, raising the cost of a third class ticket to about P27; or the fare from Manila to Cebu in the same class to about P30 from the old rate of P28.25. The fare from Manila to Zamboanga would soar from P37.50 to about P40. The same drastic rise would obtain with cargo rates, which tacked on an 18% increase.

Following the meeting, the President receives Senator Jack Miller of Iowa who pays a courtesy call. Miller arrived this morning in the course of a tour of Far Eastern countries for the Senate Committees on Armed Services and Agriculture.

Then, the Chief Executive receives Warren Richmond, an international public relations man from New York, who is undertaking a "one-man crusade to break the world's largest shipping bottleneck."

Richmond requests the President to be the first to help in breaking the shipping bottleneck by authorizing private shipping companies to lease two LST ships of the Philippine Navy for the purpose of moving out dormant cargoes from ships lying idle at the Manila Bay. The President assures Richmond that he will consider his request.

In the afternoon, the President administers the oath of office to Eusebio Moore as vice governor of Samar.

Moore who was originally the vice governor, had vacated the post when he ran for Congress in the last elections.

The Chief Executive also appoints Juan Triviño as presidential assistant on legislative matters.

Triviño is former governor and representative of the first congressional district of Camarines Sur. He succeeds Francisco M. Pajao, the legislative secretary under the previous administration.

January 15.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the investigation of the reported release of prisoners at the national penitentiary in Muntinlupa, Rizal through forged pardons.

The Chief Executive issues the directive in the wake of reports that certain Prisons and Malacañang Records Division officials had conspired to provide inmates with bogus unconditional pardon papers at prices ranging from P3,000 to P25,000 per head.

In the morning, the President rallies customs brokers and importers behind the administration's campaign against smuggling by asking them to confine their activities within the sphere of legitimate business.

In a meeting with some 40 customs brokers, the President asks that they enlist their clients' cooperation in keeping their activities legitimate and to abandon any further attempts to evade payment of fees, duties, charges, and taxes due the government.

The President emphasizes the need for cooperation and goodwill in the projected reorganization of the Bureau of Customs, because, he states, no attempt at improving the customs service will succeed without the help of everybody dealing with the bureau.

He warns that if tax collection does not improve by next month, the government will not be able to pay its officials and employees.

"I ask your help, therefore, and in turn we will use the full powers and influence of the presidency to correct what is wrong," the President tells the brokers.

The brokers, in turn, ask the Presidents assistance in their effort to lift the ban against cargo trucks using certain Manila streets which, they state, has caused business difficulties and imposed undue hardships on the laborers of brokerage companies.

The President assures them that he will take up the matter with the city authorities.

Following his meeting with the brokers, the President receives Harry O. Bercher and Jack L. Camp, president and vice president, respectively, of International Harvester Company of Chicago, who pay him a courtesy call. They are accompanied by I.H.M. President G. R. Whisenant and former Press Secretary Antonio L. Arizabal. The IH officials arrived recently in the course of a tour of IH subsidiaries all over the world.

In their conversation with the President, Bercher and Camp reveal that their company stands ready to do what it can in helping any project of the administration, particularly in the fields of transportation and agriculture. They further say that they will be glad to furnish the services of experts in any effort at mechanization, especially in connection with rice and corn production projects of the government.

Later, the Chief Executive receives Frank Doolittle, executive secretary of the Filipino Professionals and businessmen's Association of San Francisco, who pays him a courtesy call prior to enplaning back for the US the next day.

Like the IH officials, Doolittle extends an invitation to the President to visit with the Association should he decide to go on a state visit to the U.S.

In the evening, the President inducts five top officials of the government, namely: Claudio Teehankee, as undersecretary of justice; Ramon Nolan, SQA administrator and director of the Philippine Sugar Institute board; Mario Moreno, member of the RCA board of administrators; and Jose Moras and Angel Leviste, members of the board of directors of the PHILSUGIN.

An active law practitioner since 1941, Teehankee graduated LL.B. from the Ateneo de Manila summa cum laude and went on to top the 1940 bar examinations. He was the recipient of the "Lawyer of the Year" award from the Justice and Court Reporters Association in 1960.

Nolan is former executive secretary of the National Federation of Sugar Planters. A member of several sugar missions to the United States, the new SQA administrator is generally considered one of those responsible for increased sugar quota exports to the U.S.

Moreno is a rice farmer. He is vice president of the Rice and Corn Producers Association and first vice president of the Philippine Chamber of Agriculture.

Moras is president of the Bugo-Medellin Sugar Planters Association of Cebu. He was reappointed to the PHILSUGIN board upon the expiration of his three-year term.

Leviste, another newly-installed PHILSUGIN director, was member of the Development Bank of the Philippines' board of governors from 1954 to 1962. He is the younger brother of Gov. Feliciano Leviste of Batangas.

After the induction ceremonies, the President receives Benjamin Romualdez, the President's personal envoy to the funeral of India's Prime Minister Lai Bahadur Shastri. Romualdez reported on his trip to India.

January 16.—PRESIDENT Marcos receives U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk who is here on a brief stopover en route back to the U.S.

Secretary Rusk, accompanied by Gov. W. Averell Harriman, Sen. John Sherman Cooper and 13 other American officials, arrived early in the afternoon from Saigon.

Upon their arrival in Malacañang, the American officials are ushered into the Music Room where the President had an exchange of amenities With them for some five minutes.

From the Music Room, the President and his guests repair to the Chief Executive's study room where they confer for 55 minutes.

Following the talks, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras issues a communique stating that:

"President Marcos, Secretary Rusk and Gov. Harriman had an exchange of views on the current Southeast Asian situation.

"Secretary Rusk and Gov. Harriman brought the President and Secretary of Foreign Affairs Ramos up-to-date on Vietnamese and Allied efforts in Southeast Asia and the status of U.S. initiatives for peace in the region."

After the talks, the Chief Executive and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, entertain the guests at tea.

Earlier, the President inducts into office other key officials of his administration. Inducted are: Dean Onofre Corpuz of the University of the Philippines' graduate school, as Undersecretary of Education; Jose Leido Jr., son of Ex-Rep. Leido of Oriental Mindoro, as assistant executive secretary for legal and administrative affairs; Gilberto Duavit, head of the technical staff of the Senate Committee on ways and means, as assistant executive secretary for political and social matters; Juan Ponce Enrile as undersecretary of finance; and Fernando Campos as undersecretary of commerce.

At the same time, the President appoints Carlos Ledesma as member of the board of directors of the Sugar Quota Administration.

In the evening, the President and his family hear Mass at the Palace chapel.

January 17.—PRESIDENT Marcos summons key officials of the Philippine Virginia Tobacco Administration (PVTa) to a meeting to explore ways of improving the operations of the government tobacco agency.

During the meeting with some 40 officials of the state tobacco agency, the President directs the PVTa to fully settle its obligations to tobacco farmers, totalling P28 million, for the 1965 crop year.

At the same time, the President orders the suspension of all "midnight" transactions made by the past administration and warns PVTa employees from engaging in any deals involving the tobacco agency.

The Chief Executive asks that payment of PVTa obligations be made immediately in strict accordance with the priorities established by the procurement and service departments of the tobacco office.

Basis of priorities in the payment of PVTa creditors will be the time and date of acceptance of tobacco remitted to the agency.

The President cautions tobacco growers and others who expect payment to refrain from utilizing fixers or other agents outside of the PVTa in following up papers. He explains that violation of this rule will prejudice the chances of those entitled to payments to collect the same and promises severe penalties for those found acting as agents for the payees.

In connection with the eleventh hour transactions, the President orders their suspension with a view to reviewing each case individually. This includes contracts for the exportation and importation of Virginia leaf tobacco.

The questioned transaction involved the proposed sale of PVTA stocks to the Consolidated Flue-Curing Company, a private corporation which will then be absorbed by the government following the transfer of stocks. The deal reportedly would have involved P9-million.

The transaction was questioned in the light of the fact that the government at the time, and to the present, had contracts with other private flue-curing firms, which services were adequate for the PVTA needs. The sale of stocks and the subsequent acquisition of the private firm owning the stocks by the government is, in itself therefore, considered highly irregular.

The President, in prohibiting the PVTA people from contracting business obligations linked to the tobacco agency, sought to prevent irregularities that might arise from the undue or biased interest the men may have in the agency in favor of the parties they have acquired as business associates or customers.

Following the meeting, the President discusses at length developments in Congress with Legislative Secretary Juan F. Triviño and Legislative Liaison Officer Ariel Bocobo.

Then the President repairs to his study where he works on voluminous state papers and in the process of which he signs the appointment papers of six other officials of his administration.

The new officials whose appointment papers the President signs are:

1. Romeo F. Edu as commissioner of the Land Transportation Commission, vice Apolinario V. Ponio who was suspended in the wake of charges filed against him for various irregularities.

A practicing lawyer, Edu first won prominence as a student leader in college. He edited the University of Manila campus paper, was active in student organizations, notably the College Editors Guild, CONDA and Student Council Association of the Philippines. He later participated in the late President Magsaysay's campaign for the presidency, was a technical assistant in the Senate and private secretary to Senator Gaudencio Antonino. Edu is a partner in the law firm of Abadilla, Edu, Domingo and Associates.

2. Teotimo Aguilar as undersecretary of General Services, vice Estanislao Bernal, resigned.

Aguilar is a career man in the Department of General Services, having served in this office since its creation in 1959. As head executive assistant he was No. 3 man in the department before his appointment as undersecretary.

Aguilar has been in the public service for 26 years, and has held various positions in different offices of the government. He was sent to the United States and Europe in 1959 and 1960 as NEC-AID participant on public administrative management.

3. Former Gov. Francisco E. F. Remotigue of Cebu as Social Welfare Administrator.

Remotigue was councilor of his hometown, Ronda, Cebu; provincial board member, vice governor and then governor of Cebu. He is a practicing lawyer.

4. Benjamin del Rosario, as general manager of the Government Service Insurance System, vice Eugenio Eusebio, resigned.

Del Rosario is a certified public accountant. He was president and director of the Filipinas Bank and Trust Company with more than 20 years experience in the field of banking.

5. Col. Salvador L. Villa (ret.) as chairman of the Philippine National Railways board of directors.

Villa was credited with having lifted the PNR out of the red when he effected a major reorganization in the state railway firm as general manager and director during the administration of President Magsaysay.

A retired colonel in the armed forces, Villa who is noted for his executive ability, had been president, vice-president and director of a number of business organizations such as the Salt Industry of the Philippines, Tropical Commercial Company, Philippine Sales, Inc., Compania Celulosa de Filipinas, Tabacalera Industrial Development Corporation and the Central Azucarera de Bais.

6. Jose L. Guevara as special assistant to the President. Guevara was appointed special assistant at the rate of P1 per annum. His appointment took effect January 14. He is a lawyer, veteran newspaperman, political writer and columnist of the Manila Times.

He is a member of the board of governors of the Manila Overseas Press Club and former director of the National Press Club of the Philippines. He was former chairman of the Board of Review for Motion Pictures.

January 18.—AS the deplorable water service situation in Manila and other areas caught his attention, President Marcos orders the outright investigation of the use to which the P80-million loan from the World Bank has been put by the National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority (NAWASA).

The loan of $20.2 million (or P80-million) from the World Bank was extended to the NAWASA for the specific purpose of modernizing and enlarging the scope of the waterworks system in order to improve the quality of water service in the country.

With the projects funded by the loan lagging far behind schedule such that results are not yet visible, the President voices out his concern which led him to order an investigation.

The loan was approved in 1964 and early last year the NAWASA launched projects under the terms of the loan, including the construction of a tunnel connecting Bicti with the Novaliches reservoir, a Bicti-Ipo Dam tunnel, and a Novaliches-Balara tunnel.

One of the beneficiaries of this program of construction under the loan would have been the Greater Manila area where water service in the past few years has been substandard.

It is however, believed that one of the causes of the delay in the NAWASA construction program was the suit filed against the government water firm by the Silva Pipe Co., a local manufacturer, who won an injunction against the purchase of pipes from abroad by the NAWASA.

The President presses the NAWASA to expedite its construction program financed by the loan, in order to remedy as soon as possible the deplorable water service situation in Manila and other areas.

At the same time, the Chief Executive orders the immediate utilization of idle equipment of the Philippine National Railways (PNR) by other government agencies with economic projects.

The President directs the army engineers and construction crews to contact the PNR for the turnover to the former of this idle equipment so that it can be used for construction jobs geared to economic development.

The equipment referred to by the President was said to be in a state of deterioration although still serviceable. The entire lot is stockpiled in San Jose, Nueva Ecija, consisting of bulldozers, graders, tractors, and other heavy construction equipment valued at P20 million. The equipment was procured for the construction of a railway extension to serve the Cagayan Valley and has lain idle since last year.

The work on the railway was suspended, because the PNR lacked the counterpart funds required by the reparations agreement, from which the government railway firm got part of the financing for the Cagayan project.

The President also directs the Rice and Corn Administration to make use of the same equipment whenever possible in whatever projects it may have, particularly those projects relating to rice and corn production, such as irrigation systems and feeder roads.

In the morning, the President confers with customs and rice and corn officials on corrective measures aimed at improving operations at the waterfront and at the government rice agency.

At the meeting, Commissioner of Customs Jacinto T. Gavino reports to the President that he had already effected the reduction by one-half of the number of signatures previously needed in the processing of import documents.

The Commissioner of Customs further informs the President that he had withdrawn customs security units stationed at the sheds and that he has turned over the care of the cargoes at the piers to the arrastre security men in order to easier pinpoint responsibility for losses on a single entity.

On his part, RCA Chairman-General Manager Osmundo Mondoñedo informs the President that he had effected a partial reorganization of the RCA personnel, and that the agency is now ready to procure local palay the moment Congress amends the present law, Republic Act No. 3452, which limits the procurement price of palay to P12.50 per cavan.

Gavino likewise submits recommendations designed to ease congestion and prevent irregularities at the piers, among which are:

1. Expansion of warehousing facilities by transferring government offices in and around the customs zone to some other site in order that the bureau can utilize pier premises for warehousing needs;
2. Appointment of a special prosecutor to handle cases involving customs personnel. The present procedure of having the fiscal's office handle these cases, Gavino states, is not conducive to the speedy disposition of these cases because of the clogged dockets of the fiscals.
3. Appointment of a former justice of a high court to handle administrative cases in the customs bureau so that these could be disposed of at the earliest possible time. At present, he explains, several government officials have to go over the cases resulting in undue delay in their adjudication.

The appointment of a special prosecutor and a former justice to handle exclusively customs cases, Gavino says, will also correct the anomalous situation whereby customs personnel involved are allowed to return to their jobs even before the resolution of their cases.

EGA chief Mondoñedo inform the President that:

1. Various government agencies concerned are finalizing plans for increased rice production to stabilize the price of the cereal during the lean months;

Irrigation units of the government are maximizing the efficiency of existing irrigation systems, and inoperative ones are being repaired and completed in order that they could be utilized before the rainy season sets in;

3. The National Economic Council, with the assistance of the AID, is making available the necessary funds to complete these irrigation systems; and

4. The Department of National Defense is likewise making available the services of its engineer combat battalions for the construction of irrigation systems.

The President also receives Swiss Ambassador Loie de Geer who pays him a farewell call prior to enplaning for his home office in the afternoon.

Ambassador De Geer is due for reassignment in the Latin American countries after a three-year tour of duty here and in Indonesia where he was resident ambassador.

In his talk with the President, the Swiss Ambassador expresses the hope that his country will establish its own embassy in Manila soon.

In the afternoon, the President receives officials of the Philippine Cigar and Cigarette Manufacturing Association, Inc., led by Ralph Nubia, president, and of the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce, Inc., headed by Santos Chua Haw Co, president, who pledge their support to the President's anti-smuggling drive and other administration policies.

Following the call, the President inducts into office the newly-elected officials of the Philippine Chamber of Wood Industries.

In the evening, the President administers the oath of office to Attys. Jacobo (Jake) Clave and Ariel Bocobo as Malacañang Assistant Press Secretary and Legislative Officer, respectively. The President also inducts Virginia E. Cruz, member of the board of directors of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office, and former Gov. Ildefonso T. Cinco of Leyte as chairman of the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation.

Meanwhile, the President directs Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez, chief of the Philippine delegation to the United Nations, through the Department of Foreign Affairs to clear the way for the election of Chief Justice Cesar Bengzon of the Supreme Court as a member of the International Court of Justice.

The Chief Justice was chosen as the candidate of this country for the World Court post upon representation of a nominating committee composed of Associate Justices Roberto Concepcion, J. B. L. Reyes, and Jesus Barrera fed former Senate President Quintin. Paredes.

The Chief Executive is in full accord with the nomination of the Chief Justice, particularly because of the high qualifications of the nominee and because Bengzon is due for retirement by the middle of this year.

Chief Justice Bengzon has held the top post in the Supreme Court for over five years now, and during his administration the high court has won new prestige for its liberal views, lucid interpretations of the Constitution, and independence of action.

The International Court of Justice consists of 15 judges who are elected by the General Assembly and the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration or, in the case of members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, by national groups appointed for this purpose by their respective governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration. The General Assembly and the Security Council hold separate elections independently of each other.

Judges of the Court are elected for a term of nine years and are eligible for reelection. As a result of special transitory provisions made with regard to the elections held in 1946, with a view to ensuring the gradual renewal of the Court, the terms of five of the 15 judges expire at the end of every three years.

Every three years the Court elects its President and Vice President, who are also eligible for reelection.

January 19.—PRESIDENT Marcos issues a proclamation declaring Friday Jan. 21, this year, as Civil Liberties Day "to reaffirm our faith in the cardinal principle of the inviolability of the individual and the primacy of human rights."

In proclaiming the day, the President notes the need “to inspire our people to greater dedication and fuller adherence to the cause of democracy and freedom.”

The Chief Executive explains that the promotion of civil liberties assures the translation into reality of a “regime of justice, liberty and democracy.”

“Respect for, and observance of civil liberties constitute one of the glorious traditions of our people,” the President observes. “It is but fitting and proper that Filipinos be given full opportunity to celebrate Civil Liberties Day with appropriate ceremonies to assure that its import and significance be more fully appreciated.”

The President directs Public Works Secretary-designate Antonio Raquiza to find a way to begin immediately the construction of the Gamu bridge in Isabela which connects the rice-rich Mallig valley with the rest of Cagayan province.

The President points out that construction of the Gamu bridge will bring the big rice harvests of Mallig valley within reach of markets in rice-starved regions.

Mallig valley is composed of seven agricultural municipalities, namely: Aurora, San Manuel, Roxas, Gamu, Mallig, Quezon and Santa Maria.

The moment the Gamu bridge is completed, the valley will be linked to the national highway, and thus facilitate the distribution of the rice yield in this region to other areas where rice is scarce. It is estimated that the bridge can be completed in seven months, at a cost of P3 million.

At the same time, President Marcos relieves Prisons Director Dominador Danan of his post and orders further investigation of the pardons irregularities to pinpoint other persons involved.

The President’s swift action is based upon the partial report of Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo and Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee, who had personally undertaken an investigation of the case upon direction of the Chief Executive.

Danan had earlier been reported as implicated in the pardons racket which consists of selling forged pardons to prisoners for substantial sums.

In the report submitted by the Department of Justice, it was revealed that the racket in fake pardons had a scope “larger than at first thought.”

The report disclosed that a search made by Criminal Investigation Service agents of the prisons bureau offices turned up a sheaf of Malacañang stationery and pardon forms. These were found in a drawer of the desk of Vicente Arciaga, chief of the Documents Section of the bureau. The search was made on the strength of search warrants issued to the CIS agents.

Detailed to take over from Danan is Catalino Macaraeg, chief of the technical staff of the Department of Justice and member of the Board of Pardons and Parole. He will be officer-in-charge of the bureau until the investigation is completed and a new director is named.

The President orders a full dress probe of the case, with an eye to pinpointing the responsibility of others who might have helped in selling the fake pardons.

Danan was implicated by Arciaga, who told CIS investigators that Danan had ignored his report on the forged signature of former Executive Secretary Ramon Diaz on the pardons given a number of prisoners. Over 50 pardons have been questioned by the CIS, who noted the forgeries by accident during the routine check of certain missing Chinese.

A certain Captain Manuel, also of the bureau of prisons was similarly fingered by Arciaga, as the man who handcarried the fake pardons and expedited the release of the prisoners.

In the morning, the President holds a caucus with Nacionalista members of the House of Representatives upon whom he impresses the necessity of enactment of the urgent legislative measures he has certified to the special session of the sixth Congress.

The President's proposal is contained in two measures, one certified to Congress at the opening of the special session last Monday, and the other still to be submitted for consideration,

The bills are:

1. An increase in the ceiling of government bonds authorized under R.A. No. 1000, from a maximum of P1 billion to P2 billion.
2. An increase in the loans authorized under R.A. No. 16 from a maximum of P200 million to $1 billion or P3.9 billion.

The President tells the NP congressmen present that the increases he seeks are necessary to re-finance the indebtedness of the previous administration and to firm up the fiscal position of the government, which he describes as precarious.

The money obtained through these loans will be primarily spent on socio-economic development projects. In asking for the support of the congressmen, the President stresses that the shaky fiscal position of the government requires the attention of the lawmakers.

Under R.A. 1000 the President is authorized to borrow money by floating bonds locally, not to exceed P1 billion. In the measure certified to Congress, President Marcos has asked for authority to increase this amount to P2 billion.

The proposed loan is earmarked for socio-economic development projects.

Under R.A. 16, the President is authorized to borrow funds from the United States, its agencies and instrumentalities, not to exceed P200 million, for government operations and development projects.

The President proposed to increase this from P200 million to $1 billion.

In addition the President wants the authority broadened to include other sources of loans, such as the World Bank, and other countries besides the U.S.

In order to impress upon the solons the importance to the public welfare of these loans, the President asks Acting Public Works Secretary Marciano Bautista to explain to them the projects that urgently need financing.

The projects mentioned include the cementing of principal trunklines, reconstruction of bridges, repair of existing irrigation systems and the construction of new ones, the rehabilitation and construction of 71 national ports, 70 airports and 50,000 kilometers of feeder roads, as well as the financing of other development projects, such as those programmed by the Mindanao Development Authority.

The Chief Executive emphasizes the utter necessity to raise immediate cash to meet the operational requirements of the government.

The President, in this connection, instructs Undersecretary of Finance Placido Mapa, Jr. to immediately consult with Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez, Governor Andres V. Castillo of the Central Bank, former Auditor General Pedro Gimenez and financial experts of the House of Representatives.

January 20.—THE Chief Executive issues an executive order abolishing the Sugar Development Committee and transferring its functions to the Philippine Sugar Institute.

The Sugar Development Committee (SDC) was created on July 10, 1964, through Executive Order No. 89 by former President Macapagal “for the implementation of nationwide development program for the sugar industry. . . “while the Philippine Sugar Institute (Philsugin), whose functions have been designed by law primarily for the continued development, improvement and expansion of the country’s sugar industry, was created through Republic Act 632, dated June 6, 1951.

The SDC is composed of 11 members headed by a chairman. The President directs that its functions, records, property, equipment and unexpended balance of appropriations, if any, be transferred to the Philsugin. He also directs that officials and employees detailed to the abolished body from other government agencies be returned to their respective offices.

At the same time, the President proclaims Saturday, January 22, this year, a special public holiday in eight Mindanao provinces and cities in connection with the feast of ID-UL-FITR, a very important Muslim holiday.

Affected by the proclamation are the provinces of Cotabato, Lanao del Norte, Lanao del Sur and Sulu and the cities of Basilan, Cotabato, Iligan and Marawi.

The proclamation decrees that it shall be considered a special public holiday for Muslim officials and employees in their respective stations.

The President confers with Commissioner of the Budget Faustino Sy-Changco on the preparation of the 1966-67 budget for submission to the Sixth Congress.

During the conference, the President lays firm stress on the government anti-smuggling drive even as he directs that the strictest economy be observed in the appropriation of funds. He tells Commissioner Sy-Changco to increase the appropriations for the bureau of customs and the bureau of internal revenue in order that these agencies will function better in support of the administration’s all-out drive against smuggling.

Greater logistics for the BIR and the customs service will among other things increase their effectivity in the collection of taxes and other government revenue, thus dovetailing with the President’s desire for the utmost economical use of appropriations.

In the two-and-a-half hour long conference, the President also directs Sy-Changco to:

1. Include an outlay for P3-million for the resettlement and rehabilitation of the Taal Volcano disaster victims;
2. Submit appropriations for expenditures only within the possible expected income of the government; and
3. Appropriate funds for strengthening police forces and augmenting the size of military trainees from the present 3,000 to as large as 20,000, or as funds will allow.

With respect to the funds servicing enabling acts previously approved by Congress, the President emphasizes these proposals should be supported only if funds can be made available. (These enabling acts provide for the construction of hospitals, markets, etc.) He likewise asks that provisions should be made to improve the subsistence allowance of prisoners.

The reduction at first contemplated in the proposed appropriations for the department of health is ordered restored by the President. The amount involved is P1-million.

He makes the restoration in view of his desire to make public health services, particularly as they apply to rural areas, more responsive to the urgent needs of the people.

In the afternoon, the President receives Chairman-General Manager Jose Abalos of the Philippine Tobacco Administration who submits his formal letter of resignation as head of the tobacco agency. He also receives Governor Conrado Estrella of the Land Authority who consults the President on matters concerning his office.

Meanwhile, President Marcos dispatches a message of felicitation to Mrs. Gandhi, daughter of the late Jawaharlal Nehru, upon her elevation as prime minister of India.

In his message sent to New Delhi this day, the President compliments her, saying "your election is a resounding affirmation of confidence in your distinguished leadership, support of your sentiments for peace and your courageous struggle for the progress of your great country and people."

January 21.—UPON being informed of the Defense Undersecretary's move to conduct an investigation of Commodore Ramon Alcaraz' criticism of the Philippine Navy and possibly to convene a court martial proceedings to pass on the charge "of conduct unbecoming" a military officer against the former naval operations chief, President Marcos orders the termination of the probe on Commodore Alcaraz and the approval of his retirement.

Alcaraz, in his remarks during the turnover ceremonies aboard the RPS "Incorruptible," assails that:

1. The failure of the A.F.P. to stop smuggling which is merely another form of infiltration reveals in a most dramatic manner the ineffectiveness of our entire defense system.
2. The AFP is poorly equipped that in a real shooting war, it would last only a few days.
3. "It is about time we stop making the armed forces a mere employment agency." About 85 per cent of the AFP budget goes to pay and allowances of officers and men, with the remaining 15 per cent to service, maintenance and equipment.
4. The defense posture is obsolete. There are certain aspects of our defense structure that warrant immediate reappraisal.
5. The AFP is shot through and through with politics and that professionalism is at its lowest.
6. Leadership in the AFP can still be improved. The concept that the different major commands are co-equal sister services under an integrated command at G.H.Q. is believed good only on paper. In actual practice, A.F.P. leadership is basically ground force oriented.
7. We are over-dependent on the United States for military assistance, leading to complacency on the part of our leaders, past and present. It is about time we tailor our defense set-up in accordance with our capabilities and national interests.

The President spends almost the whole day this day working on the draft of his state-of-the-nation message to be delivered at the opening of the first regular session of the Sixth Congress Monday.

Except for Chairman Juan V. Borra of the Commission on Elections with whom he discusses proposed electoral reforms, the Chief Executive did not receive any callers.

At the conference, the President states he will move for the simplification of presidential electoral campaigns, through a bill he will submit to Congress that will cut down expenses and the campaign period.

In his electoral reform bill, the President will seek to reduce the period of a presidential election by:

1. Holding the national conventions of contending parties to within the six-month period immediately prior to the elections;
2. Limiting the actual campaign to three months;
3. Limiting campaign expenses drastically, including the minimal use of radio-TV time, posters, and newspaper advertisements.

The President calls for these reforms in view of the great waste in energy and funds, including public funds spent to hold elections, during presidential polls.

He points out that “prolonged election campaigns upset the government machinery, distract officials, and generates undue tension in the public.”

The Chief Executive starts working on his message after reading the morning newspapers and having breakfast. He emerges from his private study at 11:25 a.m. to confer with Borra. The meeting lasts about half an hour.

Then the President resumes work on his message following lunch and a brief rest.

Meantime, President Marcos bares he will seek the cooperation of Congress in pushing through economic development projects designed to make adequate provisions for a fast growing population as he certifies to Congress the necessity of enacting a bill that will increase the ceiling of bonded indebtedness authorized under Republic Act No. 1000 from P1-billion to P2-billion for economic development purposes.

In certifying the bill, the President emphasizes that:

1. The population which is growing at the rate of about one million a year must be provided with sufficient supply of food and clothing;
2. Enough dwelling units for the 130,000 new households that are formed every year must be constructed;
4. Adequate health facilities for both the metropolitan and rural areas should be installed.

He pointed out that the remaining balance of P68.5-million under the present borrowing authority of the President is inadequate to fund the various infrastructure projects proposed to be financed through bond flotations.

“Raising the bond ceiling is therefore necessary to meet the requirements of the development program,” he says.

The President states that the production of goods and services for domestic consumption and for foreign commerce must be increased not only to maintain the people’s standard of living, in the face of their increasing needs, but to achieve a substantial improvement.

Borrowing from domestic sources, preferably non-inflationary ones is always a fruitful recourse if the borrowed funds are used for productive projects, the President affirms.

He explains that by increasing productivity, the government is provided with a wider tax base and additional revenues with which to service the debt.

The Chief Executive asserts that borrowing from abroad is often necessary to obtain the foreign exchange requirement of certain development projects and may be resorted to as long as undue burdens are not imposed on the country's external debt servicing capacity.

In urging enactment of the bill, the President concludes that the proposed bill will give the Chief Executive the increased flexibility needed to meet, by public borrowing, whatever requirements of the economic development program cannot be covered by taxes.

January 22.—PRESIDENT Marcos devotes most of his time this morning going over the draft of his State-of-the-Nation message to the Sixth Congress.

The President takes time out from the preparation of his message to send wires to the leaders of the four major political parties of the country invites them to submit their comments and recommendations on ad interim appointees of the previous administration for possible reappointment of deserving ones.

He consults Speaker Cornelio T. Villareal, president of the Liberal Party; Senator Gil J. Puyat, president of the Nacionalista Party; Senator Lorenzo Tañada president of the Citizens Party; and Senator Raul Manglapus, president of the Party for Philippine Progress.

The Chief Executive takes this step because of the possibility that the Commission on Appointments will not be able to act on the Pending ad interim appointments.

The President will consider these recommendations before extending new appointments which he felt is necessary to prevent "paralyzation of governmental functions."

January 23.—WITH the adjournment of the weeklong special session of Congress, President Marcos reappoints deserving officials in the executive and judicial branches of the government as well as in the armed forces of the Philippines whose appointments had not been acted upon during the special session.

The President likewise makes some appointments to key positions in the government rendered vacant by the failure of the Commission on Appointments to pass upon previous appointments to such positions during the special session.

At the same time, the Chief Executive informs the Commission on Appointments that he considers as "lapsed and terminated" all the ad interim appointments made by former President Macapagal previous to the recently concluded special session of Congress.

In his letter to the appointments body, the President states that all the ad interim appointments not resubmitted by him should therefore be "considered withdrawn."

The President's action is based on a legal opinion of Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee that the 1,717 ad interim appointments made by Mr. Macapagal and those by the President himself, expired upon the adjournment of the special session of Congress even if the Commission on Appointments were not constituted.

In his legal opinion, Teehankee draws support from the pronouncements made by Mr. Macapagal and Speaker Cornelio T. Villareal themselves when they were members of the House of Representatives in 1954.

Teehaakee's opinion is anchored on the constitutional provision that "the President shall have the power to make appointments during the recess of the Congress, but such appointments shall be effective only until disapproval by the Commission on Appointments or until the next adjournment of the Congress."

Pointing out that under this provision, ad interim appointments are subject to a resolutive condition (“disapproval by the Commission on Appointments”) and a resolutive period (“until the next adjournment of the Congress”), the Justice Undersecretary adds:

“As the provision is plain and free from ambiguity, I believe that there shall be no deviation from its literal import and that there is no room for interpretation which after all, is resorted to only when the meaning of the statute is equivocal or ambiguous.”

He likewise states that if the framers of the Constitution had intended to limit the application of the provision to the adjournment of the regular session, such intent would have been manifested in clear and unmistakable terms.

In the afternoon, the President inducts into office the officials reappointed or appointed.

Following their induction, the President repairs to his study where he resumes going over the draft of his message to the nation.

In the evening, the President hears Sunday mass at the Palace chapel with the members of his family.

January 24.—STRESSING economic development and better government in his State-of-the-Nation message to Congress, President Marcos reveals concrete plans for immediate construction of roads, bridges, and other public works projects as well as the utilization of the Armed forces in a wide range of socio-economic projects.

The President, in his message, calls for the revitalization of the judiciary, the national defense posture, the fight against crime, smuggling, graft and corruption in government.

Other topics discussed by the President in his message include financing, foreign policy, rice production, prices, public health, education, and the reorganization of the government.

The Chief Executive explains that the challenge to the nation was the problem of providing in ample measure for the basic needs of food, clothing, shelter, learning, and of enhancing human dignity and providing better opportunities for “our people to enjoy the benefits of economic progress.”

The ultimate goal however, he states, is more than just providing these basic needs and the necessary public services. The final goal, he declares, is to make the Filipino realize totally his “full spiritual and intellectual capacity,” and make him respond to the challenge of his country’s highest aspirations such that the nation can be truly great again.

In projecting the goals of his 4-year socio-economic development program, the President discloses that the administration will undertake immediately the construction of major infrastructure projects, including highways, electrification, waterworks and artesian wells, river control and drainage, air ports, better air navigation facilities, irrigation systems, ports and harbors, extension of the rail-road, and improved telecommunications.

Included in this program is the construction of 16,000 kilometers of feeder roads, some 30,000 lineal meters of permanent bridges, a generator with an additional electric power capacity of 1 million kilowatts, water services to service eight regions and 38 localities.

One of the important new proposals of the President is the revamp of the electoral law aimed at preventing the reoccurrence of last year’s electoral campaign which he described as “ruinous” and which “threatened to debauch the national treasury.”

Among the reforms sought are the limitation of campaign expenses of both candidate and political party, elimination of sample ballots, reduction of TV-radio propaganda to a “reasonable level,” and the restriction of the period of campaign to six months for national offices and three months for local offices.

He likewise proposes more powers for the Commission on Elections, to issue injunctions against candidates violating the limitations on expenses and the campaign period and to annul fraudulent votes; amendments to the new registration law that would penalize possession of voters' ID cards by persons other than the owners and increased penalties for public officials violating the election law.

The President also asks for amendments to the Constitution to synchronized elections, provide a single term of six years for the President, and increase the Senate membership.

Other new proposals of the President are the creation of new offices or agencies, including:

1. A department of interior to deal with local governments, without violating local autonomy and the decentralization of government functions.
2. A Maritime Commission to deal with the orderly growth and development of the shipping industry, for which no single official body now exists.
3. A National Export Trade Authority which shall unify and coordinate activities of government agencies concerned with exports and lend other aid to exporters.
6. An Investment Office which shall furnish all the aid and information needed by prospective investors, foreign and domestic.

The President points to the need for political and social stability as a prerequisite to increased investment and production which he stressed are the true and final answer to the country's economic ills.

To achieve this stability, the President will tighten internal and external security, and this in turn will depend on the military establishment and the police agencies. He proposed therefore a revitalization of these elements. To achieve this, the President recommends the following measures:

1. Extend the period of trainee service to 18 months and utilize trainees in regular military duties.
2. Modernize equipment, which entails the outlay of a supporting sum for operational costs.
3. Revamp of the military organization to restore corps spirit and morale.
4. Administrative reforms in the police forces to upgrade effectiveness and efficiency.
5. Mobilize AFP manpower, material, and equipment to assist in socioeconomic development projects.

The President further sharpens the necessity of increased investment and production by pledging the betterment of the climate for both through incentives such as easing tight credit, refinancing for ailing local industries, channeling of foreign investment to appropriate sectors that will not impinge on local industries and domestic investments, stabilize the exchange rate at the present level, hold the line on prices, maintain adequate international reserves, specify investment priorities.

In the area of financing, the President asks the Congress for new ceilings for loan under R.A. 1000 and R.A. 16, the first authorizing domestic: borrowing, the second foreign borrowing. Under the first authority, he asks for amended ceiling that would hike the limit from P1-billion to P2-billion; and under the second, a ceiling from P200 million to 81 billion.

In this connection, he proposes that all borrowings be made on a projects basis, and a clarification of the ceilings be made to make them apply to amounts outstanding rather than to amounts incurred.

President Marcos seeks early normalization of relations with Malaysia in the foreign relations field, an early resolution of pending treaties hardening the Philippines' economic and political relations with Japan, while maintaining commitments to friends and allies.

"We shall be friends to all nations that share our values and wish us no evil," the President declares.

He states that the nation will make common cause with new nations in Africa, Asia and Latin America seeking national and cultural identity, expand trade with other countries while keeping trade relations with the US firm, a trade which he says is "essential to the national economy."

The President expressed continued friendship for the US based on "common ideas and interests, of mutual respect and consideration," while exploring with the US government ways to eliminate irritants including the just settlement of claims of Filipino war veterans for benefits and reparations.

Early in his message, the President paints a dark picture of present conditions in the nation, saying that the country is "in crisis."

Toward the end of his speech, he states that he had come full circle, in that after the war he helped in the rehabilitation of the country and people, which as President he is now again doing.

He stresses that in this great task, the legislative and the executive are partners. "Our people now wait for us to act," he tells the Congress.

"I ask you and the rest of the nation to join with me in the massive and unrelenting effort to translate these weary hopes and expectations into action and accomplishment."

In the morning, the President receives the members of the special committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives who inform him that the Sixth Congress has convened.

In the evening, he receives Ambassador William McCormick Blair of the United States.

January 25.—PRESIDENT Marcos directs the bureau of forestry to stop the issuance of timber licenses and concessions until after the reorganization of the bureau.

The President makes the order during a conference this day with Vice-President Fernando Lopez, who is concurrently the secretary of agriculture and natural resources.

During the conference, the President and the Vice-President discuss plans for the improvement of national parks and reservations.

At the same time, the President orders Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to secure from the National Parks and Wildlife Office a list of the areas over which it has authority, and to specify which have been declared national parks and reservations.

The President likewise orders the bureau of forestry to make survey of existing concessions to delimit and ascertain boundaries of forestlands.

He wants the survey to determine exactly the true areas of these concessions and whether the concessionaires could comply, or have complied, with the terms of their concessions and permits.

"At the rate these logging operations are going, we will denude our forests in ten years," the President warns.

Then, the President receives Rep. Tokio Nakamura of Japan who pays him a courtesy call following arrival the other day on a four-day visit here.

During his call, Nakamura delivers to the President a personal letter from former Prime Minister Nobosuke Kishi.

With Nakamura, on the call on the President, are Dr. Kochiro Akao and Sokia Kitamura, managing director and assistant director, respectively, of International Engineering Consultants Associates; and Exdras H. Santua and Annie Rubio, the firm's local representatives.

In the evening, the Chief Executive receives Undersecretary of National Defense Alfonso Arellano and PARGO chairman Bartolome Cabangbang who consults him on matters concerning their respective offices.

January 26.—THE Chief Executive directs the chief of staff of the AFP to declassify the record of Commodore Ramon Alcaraz, recently retired from the Philippine Navy.

He also orders the declassification of confidential reports, without divulging the names implicated in said reports, nor the identities of special agents involved, and their sources of information.

President Marcos confers with a large group of members of the House of Representatives who call on him this day being "Congressmen's Day" at the Palace.

His series of conferences with the solons and their delegations takes up most of the President's time this morning.

In the afternoon, the President confers with Japanese rice experts preparatory to launching the Administration's crash program for increasing rice production.

The Japanese technical team is headed by Kasumasa Kojima of the International Engineering and Development Company of Japan. The team is brought here under the reparations program and will work without expense to the government. Also at the conference are Vice-President Fernando Lopez, concurrently secretary of agriculture and natural resources, chairman Osmundo Mondoñedo of the Rice and Corn Administration and Director Nicanor Jorge and Antonio Quejado of the bureaus of lands and forestry, respectively.

In the evening, the President receives Administrator Constancio Castañeda of the Office of Economic Coordination who consults him on matters concerning government-owned and controlled corporations.

January 27.—PRESIDENT Marcos takes steps to discourage government men from issuing public announcements about investigations initiated by their offices.

The Chief Executive issues an administrative order enjoining all government officials and employees from issuing press releases pertaining to matters which are still being investigated in their respective offices, agencies or instrumentalities of the government.

The President's concern in issuing the directive is solely to prevent "trial by publicity" for the men or entities under probe. He observes that often in the past, investigations had been made sometimes in harassment of those probed, or in the case of legitimate irregularities without the "full facts marshalled to support the charges."

The strictures imposed in the presidential directive do not cover public reports on investigations but would only encourage strong factual support for charges and findings before being released publicly. The President seeks to protect the innocent and at the same time give the investigation every leeway for accomplishing its purposes in the public interest.

He feels that premature publicity on investigations is "inimical to public interest" and serious enough to call for stern penalties for those who make a practice of it.

Then, the President inducts into office two more ranking officials in the government, one in the department of agriculture and natural resources and the other in a government corporation. Both officials are appointed in acting capacities. They are: Isosceles Pascual as acting undersecretary of agriculture and Gregorio S. Licaros as acting chairman of the Board of Governors of the Development Bank of the Philippines.

Pascual is reappointed, his appointment by President Macapagal having lapsed with the adjournment of the special session of Congress on January 22. He is re-nominated to his old post.

Licaros is a former Malacañang financial assistant, chairman and general manager of the Government Service Insurance System, and chairman of the DBP board under President Magsaysay.

In the afternoon, the President receives some 200 regional, provincial and city representatives of the Ramon Magsaysay Foundation headed by Senator Manuel Manahan, chairman; Judge Guillermo Santos, vice chairman; and Col. Nicanor Jimenez, campaign director.

These representatives are currently attending a three-day seminar in Manila on the Philippines participation in the establishment of an RM Foundation center.

During its call, the delegation presents the President with a miniature model of a projected 16-storey foundation center building to be constructed at Plaza Militar on Roxas Boulevard. The group likewise invites the President to be the guest at kick-off ceremonies for a nation-wide fund-raising campaign for the establishment of the center.

Construction of the center will also be financed from the Rockefeller Brothers fund which will donate $1-million and grant a long-term low-interest loan of up to P2 million.

Regarding the foundation's project to introduce modern farming methods in the rural areas, Col. Jimenez informs the President that the organization has put up 500 demonstration farms of one hectare each all over the country.

The President assures the foundation that the administration will extend all possible assistance to this laudable project.

In the evening, the President administers the oath of office to newly-elected officers of the Business Writers Association of the Philippines and the Philippine Chamber of Industries.

Following the ceremonies, the President receives officials of the Philippine Rural Reconstruction Movement (PRRM) headed by Greg Feliciano.

The PRRM officials report to the Chief Executive on the progress of the training of youth in rural areas in progressive living. Feliciano states that the PRRM has trained not only Filipinos but youth from Asian and African countries as well.

Then, the Chief Executive meets at a closed door conference with military top brass headed by Defense Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano and Gen. Ernesto Mata, AFP chief of staff.

January 28.—IN response to the appeal for assistance made by Philippine National Railways General Manager Alfredo M. Santos, who points out the urgency of the improvement and rehabilitation of the state railway firm, President Marcos directs OEC Administrator Constancio Castañeda, PNR Chairman Salvador Villa and PNR Gen. Manager Santos to take up with Bureau of Customs officials the settlement of P22,151,904.70 due the state railway firm from the Customs Arrastre Service. Incurred when the Manila Port Service, operated by the government rail firm, transferred its materials and equipment to the Custom Arrastre Service in October, 1964.

The precarious financial position of the PNR is taken up by the President in his conference with OEC Administrator Castaneda, Gen. Santos and Col. Villa.

During the conference, Gen. Santos recommends that the President certify to Congress an enabling provision amending R.A. 4156 by setting aside P5 million annually to be included in the General Appropriations Act, as the annual subscription of the government to the PNR.

Santos states that with the release of much-needed funds and settlement of outstanding receivables, the PNR will be able to update the payment of salaries and wages, pay local purchases of supplies and equipment, and meet foreign obligations guaranteed by the national government.

He adds that because of the precarious cash position of the PNR, the salaries and wages of about 8,000 officials and employees were delayed for one month, adversely affecting efficiency and morale.

In the afternoon, the President receives Ambassadors Trevett Wakeham Cutts of Australia and Han Lih-wu of China.

Ambassador Cutts pays the President a farewell call preparatory to leaving for his home office after completing a three-year tour of duty here, while Ambassador Han pays the President a courtesy call prior to leaving for Taipeh on Monday to attend important conferences there.

January 29.—PRESIDENT Marcos clears the way for retired Commodore “Ramon Alcaraz to scrutinize the record on his case and at the same time present his side of the controversy on his retirement which had already reached Congress.

The President meets earlier with defense officials who make representations with him for opening the records of Alcaraz in order to clarify the situation to the retired naval officer.

During the meeting, Defense Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano shows deep concern over the unsettled state of the Alcaraz case, and makes strong recommendations to the President for the opening the records on the controversial retirement of the ranking Philippine Navy officer.

The defense undersecretary discloses that since the case involves the integrity, morale and safety of the forces operating in the field, it should be speedily resolved. That is why, he says, he and the chief of staff appeal to the President to clear the way for calling Alcaraz to the DND, both to examine the records of his case, if he so desires, and to present his side.

The President approves the request, cautioning the officials, however, to observe the usual security measures in declassifying the records.

Following the meeting, the President receives Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, who reports on various investigations being conducted by his department, notably on certain fund disbursements made by then National Treasurer Amable Aguiluz who, in his present capacity, will then pass on the same disbursements.

Teehankee also discusses other important matters with the President.

The Chief Executive spends most of the time closeted in his private study clearing his desk of a pile of official papers.

Because of a series of conferences he had during the week with various government officials, national as well as local, the President did not have enough time to attend to the heavy paper work study.

Today, he takes full advantage of the let-up in Palace callers to work on important state documents brought to him for action.

January 30.—AS disturbing reports of intensive infestation of gamu-gamo (gnat-like fly or midges) reach him, President Marcos orders a concerted and coordinated drive against the insect infestation of certain Laguna towns.

In separate wires he dispatches through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, the President directs the Departments of National Defense, Health, Agriculture and Natural Resource and the Social Welfare Administration to “extend immediately all assistance possible in combatting the gamu-gamo infestation in certain Laguna towns.”

Secretary Salas discloses that the President had ordered the same government agencies two weeks ago to help the people of Laguna fight the insect infestation in their province.

The President’s intervention in the problem leads several government agencies to agree on three steps: 1) light trapping of the insects, 2) spraying of certain areas of Laguna Lake, and 3) fogging of infested localities.

At the same time, the President appoints former Press Secretary Jose C. Nable as presidential assistant on housing.

Nable was press secretary to former President Carlos P. Garcia and legislative secretary to the late President Ramon Magsaysay. He succeeds former Manila Councilor Pedro S. de Jesus as presidential assistant on housing.

Before he was tapped for the public service, Nable was a political writer and congressional reporter for the Manila Chronicle. He was also at one time president of the Congressional Press Club and one of the founders of the National Press Club, for which he was awarded an NPC citation.

In the afternoon, the President leads some 50,000 devotees in a mass prayer imploring Divine Guidance “so that as we advance in age as an independent nation, we may also advance in wisdom and grace before God and Men.”

The Chief Executive also leads the Catholic faithful who hear Mass at the Luneta consecrating the Filipino people to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. The mass is celebrated by Cardinal Santos before an altar at the Independence Memorial Grandstand.

The solemn liturgical rites mark the closing of the nation’s observance of the fourth centenary of Philippine Christianization which opened in Cebu City last April 27.

A feature of the observance is the voyage to Manila of the Sacred Image of the Holy Child from Cebu where it had been enshrined for the last four centuries since it was first brought to the Philippines by Spanish missionaries. The President arrives at the grandstand at about the same time the Holy Image is entering the Luneta at the head of a long procession from the San Agustin Church in Intramuros.

Together with Cardinal Santos, the President helps carry the Image from the carriage to a platform beside the improvised altar on the grandstand.

Following the rites, the President returns to Malacañang where, after a short rest, he repairs to his study and works on a pile of official papers.

Meanwhile, President Marcos receives a report of the Budget Commission showing that items in the budget of the House of Representatives that former President Macapagal vetoed as congressional allowances were virtually restored by him after his veto through the transfer of presidential funds.

The report revealed that P15,249,830.58 representing various balances of unexpended appropriations under the Executive Department was transferred to the Lower House in payment of “prior years’ obligations.” The transfer was said to have been effected under Advice of Allotment No. 2-03, signed by the Budget Commissioner.

The items in the House appropriations vetoed by then President Macapagal the report explained, totalled P15,860,000, of which prior obligations during the three-year period totalled only P2,500,000. Payment for this sum was authorized under the same budget.

It was clearly understood that the sum transferred by the former Chief Executive to the House approximately matched the sum vetoed by him and, in effect, covered the amount utilized as allowances of congressmen, which the veto ostensibly set aside.

Aggravating the circumstances of transfer," it was reported, "is the fact that the amount transferred is culled from various items that would have funded important projects and public services."

As reported, the sum of over P15 million transferred to the House came from so-called unexpended appropriations covering the following items:

- | | | | | | | | | |
|----|--|------------|----------|-------------|-------------|---------------|---------|----------------|
| 1. | Relief | of | Filipino | fire | victims | in | Manila, | P500,000. |
| 2. | | Panay | | Development | | Authority, | | P200,000. |
| 3. | | Samar | | Development | | Authority, | | P200,000. |
| 4. | | Mountain | Province | | Development | Authority, | | P100,000. |
| 5. | | Land | | Authority | | programs, | | P4,000,000 |
| 6. | | Fertilizer | and | certified | seeds | procurements, | | P1,000,000. |
| 7. | | Mindanao | | State | | University, | | P3,249,830.58. |
| 8. | Salary standardization fund, P6,000,000. | | | | | | | |

It was emphasized that these eight items were sacrificed in favor of payment of prior years' obligations incurred by the House in the printing or reprinting of records, journals, etc.; purchase of furniture and equipment; expenses for repair and maintenance; vacation, sick leave and retirement pay of members of the House and employees.

The report concluded that "it is clear that the veto of House allowances by then President Macapagal was not made seriously for shortly afterwards the same amount was restored almost intact, through the transfer of the said sum with more urgent public welfare appropriations suffering in the process."

January 31.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the customs commissioner to report within 24 hours on the results of an investigation into the case of a Filipino war veteran who lost his belongings in the customs zone of the South Harbor late last year.

The victim is Pedro A. Calustro, a retired sergeant in the U.S. Army, who returned to the Philippines last November, lost most of his belongings, including gifts for his kin in Vintar, Ilocos Norte, and his U.S. Congressional Medal of Honor.

The President directs Customs Commissioner Jacinto Gavino to comb the whole area from top to bottom, if necessary, to solve the case and apprehend the culprits.

In the morning, the President confers with senators on the legislative program of the administration.

At the same time, the President, through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, directs all departments, government-owned or controlled corporations and financial institutions to submit recommendations and legislative proposals on the reorganization of the government not later than Feb. 28, this year.

The reorganization of the government was one of the prime proposals made to Congress by President Marcos, and was previously submitted to the special session of Congress which he called last Jan. 15.

Passed by the House in the regular session, the reorganization bill is now in the Senate, and it is expected that the Senate will pass the measure this week.

The President calls for the reorganization of the government in order to sharpen efficiency and cut back on public expenditures, through a judicious pruning of the government offices, many of which overlap in organization and services.

The revamp will streamline the machinery of public service in that superfluous offices will be eliminated and the bulk of casual employees will be trimmed down to a working minimum.

In the evening, the President confers with former Senator and newly-appointed chief of the Reparations Mission to Japan Eulogio Balao, who calls on him for instructions prior to his departure for Tokyo to assume his new post. Also present during the meeting are Jesus Evangelista and Manfredo Castro, first and second senior officials, respectively, of the mission.

February 1.—THE Chief Executive lifts the “ban” on press release originating from government offices relating to investigations being conducted by said offices, shortly after a conference with newspaper publishers and officials of the Philippine Press Institute.

The withdrawal of the administrative order restricting publicity on unfinished government investigations is made by the President during a conference in which the pros and cons of the controversial order are explained by both sides.

The publishers inform the President that misinterpretation of the order by government officials and employees had resulted in an “atmosphere” that tended to restrict the flow of news.

On his part, the President states that the order was issued primarily to protect innocent parties from “trial by publicity” and to infuse into government officials a hard sense of responsibility about facts.

At the conference, the President instructs the Malacañang Press Office, through Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, to facilitate access by the press to government offices and documents, particularly in such sensitive areas as the bureau of customs, bureau of internal revenue and others, where there are more strict security rules than usual.

President Marcos likewise declares that he will encourage public officials to give full and free access to the press in search of news.

National Press Club President Nereo Andolong supports the President’s order, saying that the ban is two-pronged: 1) To allow a more objective inquiry and 2) to uphold the innocence of the subject or subjects investigated until otherwise proven guilty.

The President stresses that the order at no time ever prohibited public officials and employees from submitting to interviews with the press, nor from cooperating in providing news and information, nor from answering direct queries from the press and radio.

At the same time, President Marcos issues a proclamation declaring the second week of February every year as National Press Week.

The President issues the proclamation in order to afford the people a “fuller appreciation and keener realization of the vital role of the press in safeguarding individual rights and promoting the national welfare.”

The Chief Executive, in his proclamation, urges the people to extend “their utmost support and cooperation in the proper observance of National Press Week to the end that the free and militant press shall be further encouraged to fulfill its noble mission so indispensable in a democratic community.”

The President also approves in principle the conversion of the Sapang Palay relocation center in San Ildefonso, Bulacan into a national training center in resettlement and rehabilitation techniques, with the assistance of the United Nations, in the effort to help present urban squatters and slum dwellers find security and a better environment.

He informs Morris Juppenlatz, UN housing expert, who pays him a call this day that the administration is ready to extend support to the, project, designed to solve the squatter problem.

Juppenlatz on his part, informs the President that the United Nations wanted to train urban squatters and slum dwellers in modern resettlement and rehabilitation methods which can be adopted as a universal pattern for all developing countries plagued by the same problem.

The plan is for the center to train squatters relocated there in methodical ways of resettlement in new communities, which can be opened in undeveloped regions of the country. Training will include practical know-how in such fields as health and agriculture. Should the Philippine project be adopted, he states, the United Nations will give assistance, including equipment.

The project, Juppenlatz continues, will require a counterpart fund of P1 million for, among others, the maintenance of equipment, buildings and personnel.

In the morning, the President receives visitors who stop over in Manila in the course of business tours of Asian countries.

First to call on the President is Byron Buck, president of the Book Publishing Program of New York and International Training Director of the Franklin Books Program, and a group of local publishers and librarians. Buck is on a survey tour of Southeast Asian countries.

During the call, the President directs Customs Commissioner Jacinto Gavino to look into feasibility of having the Tariff Code amended to lower the tariff on book paper and to correct the faulty classification of this material by customs appraisers.

The group informs the President that the recent raising of the Tariff on bookpaper from 5 to 30 per cent and the faulty classification of bookpaper by the customs have worked against the interests of the local publishing industry.

Following the call of Buck, the President receives Charles B. Love and Wilfred D. Wickendek of the Chemical Bank and Trust of New York who arrived recently on their annual visits to their company's local subsidiary.

Other foreign callers are Ellis Eisenstain and Donald Greplen of the Child's Securities Corporation, of New York who are in Manila for a survey of investment possibilities here.

In the evening, the President administers the oath of office to former Press Secretary Jose C. Nable as presidential assistant on housing, and former Iloilo Governor Jose Zulueta as presidential consultant on local governments.

February 2.—TO concentrate the entire efforts of the Philippine Constabulary on the accelerated anti-smuggling campaign and missions other than police work, President Marcos transfers the responsibility for training police officers entirely to the National Bureau of Investigation Police Academy.

Under the present setup both the Philippine Constabulary and the NBI conduct police training separately, with the PC conducting the training of chiefs of police at Camp Crame, and the provincial or company commander providing training for rank and file policemen, depending upon the needs of the particular police force.

The President points out that the NBI is particularly fitted for the task of training police officers because it has specialized in this field and is adequately equipped for such work.

The special course for police chiefs is conducted once a year and runs from four to 11 months, while the extent of training depends upon the needs, whether for discipline or for a more proficient organization.

The President also creates an office under the secretary of finance to handle the disposition of seized smuggled goods.

The President is impelled to create this office, by sizeable discrepancies observed in the quantity and value of goods seized from smugglers and the corresponding revenue realized from the auction of these goods.

He feels that this discrepancy can be averted if the disposal of seized contraband is centralized in one agency. He further explains that the continuing losses to the government through faulty disposal of these goods will nullify the government's efforts to fight smuggling and minimize its effects on the economy.

The disposition of seized smuggled goods is jointly made by the Bureau of Customs and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Goods seized by the navy at sea are commonly classified under technical smuggling and turned over to the Customs for assessment of customs duties and taxes, while those seized by the PC are turned over to the BIR for assessment of specific taxes.

It was found that in the past few years there are huge differences in the value of goods seized and the amount realized from auction sales. The differences have never been satisfactorily explained.

The usual explanation being advanced by some quarters is that the goods, while awaiting disposal, are pilfered or lost under mysterious circumstances.

In the afternoon, the Chief Executive meets the Vietnamese envoy, Ambassador Pham Dang Lam.

At the meeting, the South Vietnamese envoy reiterated his government's requests for assistance from the Philippines in the form of "an engineering construction battalion with its own self-defense personnel."

Ambassador Lam returned recently from Saigon where he was called for consultations.

Then, the President receives Rogelio do la Rosa, Philippine envoy to Cambodia, and discusses with him the current Southeast Asian situation with emphasis on Philippine-Cambodian relations.

In the evening, the Chief Executive designates Leonardo E. Canoy of Toledo City as Assistant Press Secretary for Radio-TV-Movies, Dr. Heraldo del Castillo and Major Venancio Duque as members of the board, of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office and the National Shipyards and Steel Corporation, respectively.

Canoy was program producer-director of ABS, Channel 9. A former infantry captain in the armed forces, he left the army after he was wounded in action during the war. He has a B.S.C.E. diploma from the Mapua Institute of Technology.

Dr. Del Castillo, the new PCSO board member, has been with the Quezon Institute for 52 years, the last six years of which he served as Director of the Sanitarium. He is President of the Philippine Medical Association, and the Confederation of Medical Associations of Asia and Oceania which is composed of 13 Asian countries.

Major Duque served in the office of the Senate President as an economist and chief of the Political and Veteran Affairs Office. A lawyer in active service, he served as defense counsel, PA headquarters; staff judge advocate officer, AFP Chief of Staff; chairman, Board of Review, AFP War Crimes Commission; and chief, Military Intelligence Legal Office, G-2, AFP.

February 3.—PRESIDENT Marcos hosts a series of conferences with various groups resulting in the formation of a Citizen's Action in the Philippines against Smuggling (CAPAS), a civic organization to assist in the government's anti-smuggling campaign on a nationwide scale.

The organization is composed of representatives of the private sector all over the country, including labor and religious organizations operating through local committees, coordinated at the top. The civic body, aside from having a semi-official status, enjoys the full support and protection of the government.

In calling for the citizens' support, the President stresses the destructive effect of smuggling which, he states, has not only corrupted government officials and threatened the very foundation of the nation's democratic government but also eroded the economic base of the country.

"The basis for the campaign is not only the fact that has corrupted men and deprived the government of its due income but that failure in upholding the rule of law will mean" the failure of the government itself," he adds.

I feel that if it's a matter of survival for our people, such that if we miss, this opportunity to help stomp out smuggling, which has become the symbol of the breakdown of the rule of law, our democracy will fail the President, explains.

The Chief Executive asks the various leaders to call the attention of the people to the menace of smuggling by word of mouth, leaflets, posters and rallies all over the nation.

"Appeal to their patriotism and nationalism, and tell them that the salvation of the country also depends on them," he states.

The citizen, the President points out, can help in the drive by providing evidences or information on the movement of smugglers. Others can encourage witnesses to testify against violators, help people who want to help in the drive but do not know how to go about it.

Business and industrial leaders, the President says, have great stake in the drive, and he therefore asks them to call on their chapter members to participate actively in the campaign on the local level.

At the same time, the President designates Mamerto B. Endriga, a career man of 28 years service in the Department of Finance, as undersecretary of finance.

Endriga has been in the government service for a total of 39 years 28 of which were spent serving in various capacities in the Department of Finance. Starting as a law clerk in the Bureau of Internal Revenue in 1933, he later rose to provincial revenue officer and, in July 1950, was taken into the newly created technical staff of the Department of Finance then the premier division in the department.

In the technical staff, he was successively senior examiner, tax expert, senior economist, and then chief of the group. Subsequently, he was named assistant secretary of finance, the position he held until he was designated undersecretary by the President.

Following the meeting with the business and civic leaders, the President receives Dr. Salvador Araneta and Dr. Ernesto Sibal who take up with him the adverse effects of the new tariff on book paper, particularly on the student population of the country.

In the afternoon, the President receives James F. Crafts, chairman of the board of the Firemen's Fund American Insurance Company and F. Arthur Mayes, president of the American Foreign Insurance Association who pay him a courtesy call.

Crafts and Mayes arrive recently to look into the insurance business in the country. During their call, they discuss with the President the problems of insurance in relation to Philippine economic conditions.

In the evening, he confers with members of the different fishing groups in the country who are accompanied by Gov. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal.

February 4.—THE Chief Executive orders the outright demolition of constructed fishpond dikes in Bulacan.

The President issues the order shortly after signing a proclamation revoking Proclamation No. 500 issued by former President Macapagal last November 20. The President's action is made in response to the petition of a large group of fishermen who call on him this day.

The proclamation of the former Chief Executive, which the Bulacan fisherman termed as "midnight proclamation," set apart from the communal fishing grounds of the province some 155 hectares of choice and strategic coastal areas. The fisherman state that this benefited only a few rich people.

The disputed coastal area is part of the 2,925 hectares of communal fishing ground reserved by former President Garcia in 1959 for the fisherman of Bulacan. This is done to discourage big fishpond owners from encroaching on the area.

President Marcos' proclamation will benefit some 100,393 people in nine towns of the province who depend on these fishing grounds for a living. The towns are Bocaue, Bulacan, Malolos, Paombong, Meycawayan, Obando, Hagonoy, Valenzuela and Bigaa.

In the morning, the President receives Sir Percy Claude Spender, president of the International Court of Justice, who pays him a courtesy call. The World Court president arrived the other day from Sydney Australia for an eight-day visit here as guest of the Philippine Constitution Association.

During their meeting, the President and Mr. Spender exchange impressions on government, particularly on the matter of electoral reform.

Following the eminent jurist's call, the President meet officials of the Manila Lions Club, the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation and the GSIS Village Association.

In the afternoon, the President confers with Commissioner Gregorio Santayana of the Commission on Elections on electoral reforms.

February 5.—PRESIDENT Marcos underlines the administration's determination to stamp out syndicated crime and smuggling by urging greater cooperation between civil authorities and the military in upgrading law enforcement agencies in a conference this day with provincial governors, city mayors and ranking military officials.

The President impresses on those present at the three-hour long conference the need for closer cooperation and understanding between the military and the governors and mayors in order to meet effectively the problems of smuggling and rampant lawlessness.

While stressing the supremacy of civil authority over the military, he also asks for the understanding and cooperation of civil officials in the effort of military commanders to pick the best men for their assigned missions, and for the present effort of the military establishment to revamp its organization in order to deal better with the crime and smuggling problems of the nation.

Likewise taken up at the conference are the following proposals:

1. A coordinated program that will gear public works projects to the stepped-up food production drive.
2. A school financing program to be supported partly by U.S. war damage payments, $28 million of which had been earmarked by the U.S. Congress for an Education Fund.

3. Revitalization of the Presidential Assistant on Community Development office and the Land Authority.

4. More participation of local governments in the utilization of national government tax income.

In the fight against smuggling, the President seeks the cooperation of the provincial and city executives, asking them to recommend measures for ensuring the success of the drive.

The President reiterates that the anti-smuggling drive will be pressed by the administration during his entire term, contrary to the doubts expressed in certain quarters that it will peter out in six months.

He declares that he will support any program that will strengthen the police forces of the country, and, in this connection, reveals that he had already directed the National Bureau of Investigation and the PC to tighten their investigation forces.

In regard to the food production program, the President states that initial public works projects will be dovetailed into the rice production crash program, with the construction of irrigation systems and feeder roads given high priority.

The President explains that this program will be financed, besides from the general fund and special highways fund, from three other sources: Japanese reparations payments, private financing, and public borrowing.

Pointing out that the problem of counterpart funds has stymied utilization of Japanese reparations, even in the use of such items as equipment, he states he contemplates harnessing foreign firms to do the road-building here, to be paid out of the reparations or loans through reparations.

The school financing program he proposes will utilize the $28 million still unpaid from Philippine war damage claims on the US, which has been earmarked by Washington as an Education Fund.

The President asks for the cooperation of the provincial and city executives in enhancing the effectivity of the PACD and Land Authority, which are agencies directly involved with rural development, he states, and “will be more important in years to come.”

President Marcos proposes that these agencies be assisted financially through funds realized from the sale of idle government property.

The President asks the civil officials to “recommend ways of increasing the participation of local governments in the tax income,” declaring that “we can make decentralization work only if the provinces are economically stable.”

In the afternoon, the President receives Mayor Jimmy Rishwain of Stockton, California and Jose C. Alba, president of the Filipino delegation from Stockton, who pay him their respects. They arrived recently at the head of a 30-man mission from Stockton to formalize the sistership of Iloilo City and Stockton.

February 6.—TO facilitate access of the public to government agencies concerned in meeting their complaints, President Marcos creates an office under the Presidential Agency on Reforms and Government Operations (PARGO) to handle exclusively complaints and grievances from the public.

The new office under PARGO will channel these complaints to the proper offices and agencies and expedite action on the same. The office will give emphasis to complaints about tax collection and to matters concerning smuggling. It will be open 24 hours a day.

In the interim, the President states that Colonel Jose Lukban is still the acting director of the National Bureau of Investigation. He issues the statement following a conference with Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo.

The President spends most of his time this day preparing his message on the national budget for the fiscal year 1966-1967.

He has until Tuesday (Feb. 8) to submit the proposed budget to Congress.

In the afternoon, the President confers lengthily with Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

Following the conference, the President resumes working on his budget message in the seclusion of his private study.

In the evening, the President hears mass at the Palace chapel. With him are his children Maria Imelda, Ferdinand Jr. and Maria Victoria Irene and the First Lady Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

Meantime, President Marcos reaffirms support for a free Philippine press and intimates his administration's search for ways of "broadening the scope" of the press to make the Filipinos "one of the best informed in the world," in a message he issues on the eve of the celebration of National Press Week.

In his message the President lauds the "superior performance of our press in discharging its exacting duties and meeting its grave responsibilities."

The Chief Executive expresses the hope that the press and the people who "value and support" the free press of the country will not let each other down.

The President's message for the occasion follows:

"The celebration of Press Week once more projects before the nation the crucial role a free press plays in the life and times of a democratic country such as ours, and at the same time underlines the superior performance of our press in discharging its exacting duties and meeting its grave responsibilities.

"This administration is pledged to the support and perpetuation of free speech, and will continue to explore various ways of broadening the scope of our press such that it will be able to play an increasingly more important role in deepening the people's partnership with the government, and in the process make our people one of the best informed in the world about great issues here and abroad.

"My warmest felicitations to the members of the Philippine press, and to the Filipino people who value and support this vital element of freedom. May neither one let the other down."

February 7.—PRESIDENT Marcos issues a proclamation declaring Tuesday (February 3), as Constitution Day. In his proclamation, the President recalls that the late President Quezon had proclaimed February 8 of every year as Constitution Day "for due and fitting observance throughout the country, particularly in all public schools and institutions of learning."

The Chief Executive points out, however, that the "passage of time has underscored the importance of our people's setting aside at least one day of each year for the purpose of keeping in mind the great ideals enshrined in our Constitution and the hopes of the framers for a regime of justice, liberty and democracy."

He explains that "events of recent years have impressively demonstrated the importance and significance of the fealty and respect which every citizen must have for constitutional processes and the rule of law."

At the same tune, the President—in a message he issued on the eve of the observance of Constitution Day—focused attention on Philippine international relations, in a general foreign policy statement. The President's foreign policy statement follows:

“As we celebrate Constitution Day, it would perhaps be timely and useful to recall that the Constitution reposes the power to formulate foreign policy with the President. The implementation of this policy is the responsibility of the Executive Department following consultation with all parties concerned and with the leaders. In the final analysis, what is acted upon is the result of a sober and judicious study of facts received and carefully assessed. It would indeed be in the best interests of the nation and our people if there are frequent consultations with national leaders and some consensus were always reached before major foreign policy decisions are reached,

“While I have, in the past, already enunciated the bases upon which Philippine foreign policy should rest, once in my inaugural address and again in my State-of-the-Nation speech, I would like to redefine these principles as briefly as possible:

“Informing our international relations which now stretch throughout most of the world is our deep concern for the maintenance of our national security against external aggression. To this end, we seek to work in close cooperation with all nations which share our deep faith in the democratic values of living. We shall endeavor to preserve the integrity of our relations with our friends and allies within a framework of mutual respect, equal dignity and genuine identity of purpose.

“We move in a continuum of peril—both to the political choices we have made as well as to the very foundations of law and order under which we live.

In Asia, Africa and Latin America, these values stirring into life, are faced with direct threats from the communist world. We hold that these threats pose a very real danger to our own existence and survival.

“I wish to reiterate what I said on the occasion of my inauguration as President of the Philippines, to wit:

“What threatens humanity in another area threatens our society as well. We cannot, therefore, merely contemplate the risk of our century without coming to a decision of our own. Whenever there is a fight for freedom we cannot remain, aloof from it. But whatever decision we shall have to make shall be determined by our own interests tempered by the reasonability of that patriotic position in relations to the international cause.

“Of immediate concern to us is the present unhappy conflict in Vietnam with its overtones of international conflagration. We continue to support all moves that will bring about the end of the conflict on the conference table. Some observers feel that the fall of Vietnam would not necessarily mean the fall of the Philippines. But the least that can be said is that Philippine defenses would be weakened by the fall of South Vietnam. A communist victory there would encourage the Communists to step up the subversion of governments in Southeast Asia, including the Philippines, and weaken the resolution even of our own people already committed by the legislature to a policy declaring communist activity illegal. Our response to this crisis will depend in a large measure on the demands of the primacy of national survival and national commitment to the cause. Whatever we decide to do, we shall do not for any other country but principally for the Philippines.

I would like to mention another aspect of our foreign policy. It is true that many of our institutions—religious, political, legal and cultural —sprang from the West. On the other hand, it is equally true that we are Asians by destiny and aspiration. As Asians, therefore, it is our solemn obligation to strive as best we can towards the defense and economic well-being of the peoples within the region.

“We have, therefore, taken the first steps leading to the normalization of our relations with Malaysia, a sister nation and a friend of long-standing. In this regard, I must emphasize that the Philippine claim to Sabah (North Borneo) will not be bartered away and that we shall continue to press our claim in an amicable manner.

“In this connection, I would like to stress that in the interests of Asian solidarity, we shall strive to bring together those at variance and reconcile their conflicting views in a spirit of mutual accommodation and brotherhood. I am certain that our recognition of Malaysia will be accepted by Indonesia in this light. We view with cautious optimism the decline of the communist movement in Indonesia and express the sincere desire that the Philippines and Indonesia will continue to cooperate with each other.

“By the same token, we recognize the grave danger to our security emanating from Asian communism. We cannot ignore its inexorable goal of national expansion through the overthrow of constituted governments by so-called wars of national liberation.

“These immediate goals of our foreign policy find concrete expression in our memberships in regional associations such as the SEATO. The Organization plays an important role in discouraging the onslaughts of communist aggression and subversion within the treaty area. On a larger scale, our commitments to the objective of the United Nations and its sub-agencies will be honored to the best of our capacity.

“It is almost superfluous for me to state that no foreign policy can remain static. If it persists in ignoring the demands of flux and change in international relations, it cannot but fail. The Philippines, therefore, will maintain a watchful attitude in the face of international crises, adjusting to the political realities of the times without sacrificing national interest or honor.”

In the morning, the President meets at breakfast at the Palace newspaper publishers, editors and other prominent newsmen in connection with the celebration of Press Week ushered in by a special memorial Mass for deceased newsmen officiated by Cardinal Santos at the National Press Club.

In his remarks before the members of the press at the breakfast, the President strongly points out that “I am for a free press and that I will stand foursquare behind your efforts to maintain the freedom of the press

The Chief Executive assures his guests, “you shall be free and shall have access to whatever information there may be in the files of the government, except those that affect the security of our country.”

The President recalls that he co-authored a bill that guaranteed the inviolability of the confidential sources of newspapermen. This law was signed by President Magsaysay.

He declares that he believed in what Dr. Jose Rizal said, that a free press is an absolute necessity in government.” In this connection, he points out that the press has been instrumental in stopping abuses and crime perpetrated by those in authority.

He likewise touches on his recent administrative circular prohibiting government officials and employees from issuing press releases on investigations, when he calls on the press to avoid “trial by publicity.”

The President explains that the circular meant no more than limiting government press releases, for it did not curtail the newspapermen’s initiative to get at the news from government offices, nor did it ban government officials from opening their files, answering queries from the press, or from cooperating with newsmen following up developments on official investigations.

“In short,” the President states, “it merely meant that the public official should engage less in issuing press releases than in discovering the truth and the facts,” of the investigation being conducted.

He says that he rescinded the circular, however, when he was informed that it had established an atmosphere of concealment, which he feared will lead to the encouragement of official venality and abuse.

He stresses that “it is my hope, however, that in the same way that the administration has imposed self-restraint on itself as a rule of conduct,” the press will “in accordance with the noble traditions of the Fourth Estate,” practice the same restraint and responsibility to the end that it will not abet trial by publicity.

He concludes by congratulating the Philippine press for the “manner you have exercised the power of the Fourth Estate,” and adds that “perhaps, preservation of our democracy lies with you and the freedom of the press.” Immediately following the breakfast reception, the President receives the 26-man Italian Trade Mission led by its chairman E. Tosarelli, of the Italian Ministry of Foreign Trade.

The Italian mission arrived recently for an eight-day stay to explore ways and means of expanding economic relations between the Philippines and Italy.

Tosarelli informs the President that his mission is composed of leaders in various fields of industry and that they will be happy to assist in the economic development of the country.

The President in turn welcomes the mission into the country in behalf of the Filipino people, and expresses confidence that the visit will prove mutually beneficial to both countries.

After the meeting, the President confers with Mayor Pablo Cuneta and Brig. Gen. Segundo Velasco, PC chief, on the drive against smuggling, vice and criminality in Pasay City.

During the conference, the President directs Brig. Gen. Velasco to look into complaints of extortion and harassment supposedly committed by certain PC agents in Pasay City even as he asks Mayor Cuneta to crack down on gambling and prostitution in that city.

The conference is the first of a series of conferences the President will hold with executives of suburban cities in the drive against criminality and smuggling.

At the meeting, Mayor Cuneta reports on alleged indiscriminate raids conducted by agents of the constabulary in Pasay City. He says he had received many complaints about PC agents arresting them elsewhere for other purposes.

More often than not, the Pasay mayor states, the women are charged with vagrancy when the PC failed to get enough evidence of either graver offenses. While Cuneta will not say so categorically, he states there is every reason to suspect that the women are taken advantage of by these agents.

Mayor Cuneta reports that almost every unit of the PC from the Criminal Investigation Service based in Alabang, Camp Crame and Rizal province raids Pasay City ostensibly in connection with anti-vice drives.

The mayor explains that he has no objection to the PC making arrests in his city, but he stresses that such arrests must be conducted properly, and should not be made to harass city residents. He requests that arrests for crimes falling under the city ordinances be referred to the Pasay police or to the Pasay City fiscal.

The President expresses grave concern over reports of gambling and prostitution in Pasay, particularly along Roxas Boulevard which, he states, contribute to the moral degeneration of the people.

It is because of reports about bigtime gambling in that city, the President says, that he decided to meet with Mayor Cuneta first. He adds he will meet separately later on with the mayors of Caloocan City, Quezon City and Manila.

Mayor Cuneta assures the President of his full support and cooperation in the all-out drive against criminality, vice and smuggling, saying that he will soon call on all sectors and leaders of his city to help in the drive.

In the afternoon, the President receives officials of Baguio City led by Mayor Norberto do Guzman, and discusses with them pressing problems of the summer capital, including its inadequate waterworks system and the squatters on public lands.

The Chief Executive also swears in Mayor Jose A. Roño of Calbayog City as acting chairman of the board of the National Cottage Industries Development Authority (NACIDA).

Then, the President confers with Oscar J. Arellano and Bonifacio Gillego, president and manager-director and executive officer, respectively, of Operations Brotherhood, on the projects of the civic organization.

In his talks with the OB (Operations Brotherhood) officials, the President expresses deep concern for the welfare of cultural minorities and asks for the revival of the organization's projects in Mindanao and Sulu.

Arellano states that the OB had plans to extend its services to the Muslim areas in Mindanao, but they were abandoned when President Magsaysay died. He adds that Magsaysay was a staunch supporter of the civic organization.

The civic organization head and other officials seek the President's official endorsement of OB as the government's citizen arm to promote international assistance on a people-to-people basis. He says that while this organization has contributed significantly to the national effort to improve the people's lot, it has not received assistance from the government in recent years.

Mr. Arellano explains that the community projects being undertaken by OB are aimed at teaching skills to people out of school, and to displaced rural residents unemployed in urban and metropolitan centers.

In pursuit of its objectives, Arellano states that OB workers work in close collaboration with the Armed Forces of the Philippines and other civic organizations, particularly in establishing training centers for unskilled workers, and in the task of returning them to their places of origin in the rural areas.

The President asks Arellano to submit a list of such OB projects that the administration can support, particularly through legislation.

Following the conference, the President receives a delegation of 15 labor leaders headed by Democrito Mendoza, national president of the Philippine Labor Center, who submits recommendations on how to improve the working conditions of laborers.

The Chief Executive refers the various matters embraced in the recommendation to the proper executive departments for further study and possible implementation. Among the requests and proposals made by the labor leaders are:

1. Enactment of a law creating a Philippine Worker's Bank. The proposed bill is under preparation by the PLC executive board.
2. Creation of a labor advisory council by presidential proclamation.
3. Enactment of a law to authorize the President to sell a portion of the national government land to the Visayas-Mindanao Confederation of Trade Unions. A draft of the bill was submitted to the President.
4. Enactment of another law seeking tax exemptions for labor organization properties. A draft of the proposed bill, as submitted, seeks to exempt all labor organizations throughout the Philippines from taxes on all properties they own, whether real or personal.
5. Representation of the Philippine Labor Center in the government.
6. Enlargement and organization of the Court of Industrial Relations.
7. Recognition of the Philippine Labor Center (PLC) as the most representative workers' group in the country.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, tender a black tie dinner in honor of President Sir Percy Claude Spender of the International Court of Justice, and Lady Spender.

The eminent jurist of the World Court arrived recently from Sydney, Australia as guest of the Philippine Constitution Association.

Meanwhile, President Marcos directs the Department of Justice to submit to him a full report on the status of NBI Director Jose G. Lukban's detail from the AFP to his present position, after which he will decide whether Lukban will continue as top man in the National Bureau of Investigation.

Since the appointment of Arturo Xavier as deputy director of the NEI had lapsed as a result of Congress' inaction in its last session on all ad interim appointments made by former President Macapagal, Serafin Fausto, third ranking officer in the NBI, will be the officer-in-charge of the bureau during Col. Lukban's absence.

The President will make his decision on the case of Lukban when Lukban returns from Taipeh, where he has been authorized to undertake an official mission. He will be away one week.

He hands down these decisions during a conference with Justice Secretary Jose Yulo and Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee.

At the conference, Secretary Yulo shows the President the Justice Department's files on Lukban and Xavier.

Lukban was designated acting NBI chief on May 23, 1958 by then President Garcia. Yulo says that such designations, according to the law, "shall in no case continue beyond the date of adjournment of the regular session of the Congress next following such designation."

The Justice Secretary also informs the President that under the special provisions of the current Appropriations Act, (R.A. 4642), as well as under similar provisions in past Appropriations Acts since 1958, no officer of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, such as Col. Lukban, may be detailed to any civilian position in the government for a period exceeding one year.

Yulo further reveals that according to the AFP files which were confirmed by Defense Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano, Lukban was last detailed on "detached service," meaning temporary service, with the NBI in 1954, by then Defense Secretary Jesus Vargas, by authority of President Magsaysay.

On Xavier, Secretary Yulo, reports that files showed the former had accepted an ad interim appointment as deputy NBI director from President Macapagal dated Sept. 28, 1965. He has taken his oath of office and assumed his position on Oct. 28, 1965.

February 8.—DISSOLVING the Program Implementation Agency, President Marcos creates in its place the Presidential Economic Staff which will provide him with the necessary assistance for day-to-day decisions and policy formulation in this area of government activity.

In his directive, the President orders the transfer of all records, personnel, properties, equipment, unexpended balances, obligations and pending work of the PIA to the new office.

The Presidential Economic Staff which will serve as the presidential technical staff for economic development matters will be headed by a director-general with the rank of department undersecretary. Its personnel will be drawn from qualified technical men in the various departments, bureaus, offices, and other instrumentalities of the government, with the approval of the Executive Secretary.

The functions of the new presidential economic staff are:

(1) Undertake economic development planning at a level in-between the overall aggregative view of the National Economic Council and the specialized view of individual government departments, corporations and financial institutions.

(2) Collate, analyze, coordinate and integrate plans, programs, projects and proposals of various government departments, agencies and instrumentalities in the formulation and development of policy recommendations, establishing priorities, and programming the utilization of public funds, manpower resources and equipment.

(3) Analyze, coordinate and initiate, with the approval of the President, major capital projects requiring utilization of available funds.

(4) Prepare necessary staff studies and formulate and develop recommendations for consistent domestic and foreign economic policies of government.

(5) Establish and maintain working relationship with various international financing institutions and assist government and private entities in tapping foreign sources for credit or other forms of assistance.

(8) Assist in the preparation of legislative programs designed to achieve economic development.

(7) Provide the necessary staff work for consistent day-to-day decisions affecting economic development.

(8) Operate and maintain a physical facility which will make available current status reports of all major economic development programs to the President.

(9) Perform other functions which the President may direct. Upon being informed that a huge conflagration had levelled one-fourth of Iloilo city the other day resulting in thousands of persons losing their homes and properties reaching close to P50-million, the President mobilizes all the relief agencies of the government to give immediate aid to the victims of the fire.

The President orders the initial release of P50,000 to meet the immediate relief needs of the victims.

The Chief Executive, during a conference with Vice-President Fernando Lopez, who had just returned from the scene of the disaster, creates a committee headed by Vice-President Lopez—who is from Iloilo—with Commissioner of the Budget Faustino Sy-Changco, Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia and Social Welfare Administrator Francisco E. F. Remotigue, as members to map out a plan for the rehabilitation of the victims.

The President likewise directs:

1. Secretary of Commerce Marcelo Balatbat, concurrently chairman of the National Marketing Corporation, and Chairman Osmundo Mondoñedo of the Rice and Corn Administration, to make available NAMARCO canned goods and RCA rice to indigent fire victims at reduced prices or for free, if possible;

2. Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo to suspend classes in the disaster area so that the school buildings could be utilized as temporary evacuation centers for the thousands of homeless;

3. Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia to airlift medical teams and supplies to the fire area to prevent the possible outbreak of diseases as a result of the breakdown of sanitary facilities;

4. Social Welfare Administrator Remotigue to airlift social workers and relief materials to the area;

5. The Constabulary to assist the local police forces in the maintenance of peace and order and to avert any undue spiraling of prices, particularly of prime commodities, by unscrupulous traders; and

6. The Department of Public Works to assist in clearing the area and the restoration of public works facilities in order to hasten normalization of the city.

Late in the afternoon, the President pays tribute to the surviving members of the Constitutional Convention at cocktails he tenders in their honor.

In his brief remarks, the President also reiterates his pledge to uphold and defend the rule of law.

He warns that without the Constitution there will be chaos in the country. He expresses the hope that with the enthusiasm of the surviving delegates the Constitution they devised will still grow beyond mere survival.

Following the cocktails, the President submits to Congress his budget recommendation for the next fiscal year totalling P2.333 billion, of which P1.872 billion is earmarked for the general fund. The P1.372 billion amount requested for operational expenses of the government is smaller by P13 million than the current year's appropriation of P1.885, and sets a precedent since, budget proposals always tend to increase each year.

The President indicates he is more determined to push through his policy of fiscal restraint without endangering essential services.

In the evening, the Chief Executive confers with Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos and Malaysian Consul Ali Abdulla.

He likewise meets with officials of the Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) on his request for a joint FAO-World Bank team to conduct a study of the implementation of the Administration's agricultural plans.

Meantime, President Marcos sends a message to Premier Eisaku Sato of Japan conveying the "deepest sympathies" of the Filipino people for the recent air disaster which claimed the lives of 133 Japanese nationals in Tokyo Bay.

In his cablegram dispatched to Tokyo this day, the President assures the Premier of the "continuing friendship of the Filipinos toward the Japanese people."

February 9.—IN a conference with the officials of the Philippine Virginia Tobacco Administration, President Marcos directs them to act immediately toward giving maximum benefits to tobacco farmers, including making instant payments, eliminating middlemen and red tape.

At the same time, the President orders the PVTA officials to submit a report and recommendations on all transactions made at the close of the past administration.

His orders are issued at a meeting with the PVTA officials, where the President states the payment of tobacco farmers must begin immediately, following a system of priorities based on the order of acceptance of tobacco products by the government agency.

The PVTA still has to settle P28-million in back accounts to the tobacco farmers for the last crop year.

Earlier in the morning, the President officiates at the opening of the annual golf tournament of the National Press Club held at the Fort Bonifacio golf course. He formally opens the tourney by playing a foursome of nine holes with Nereo Andolong, NPC president; Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano and Luis O. Reyes.

In the afternoon, the President is guest of honor at the 27th anniversary celebration of the Philippine Navy held at the PN parade ground on Roxas boulevard.

In his brief remarks the President underscores the vital role of the Philippine Navy as the principal arm of the Armed Forces in the mounting drive against smuggling. He pledges to give the navy all the assistance and aid within his command and expresses the hope that he will be able to modernize its vessels and equipment and provide the support for their maintenance. In turn he asks the navy to use these tools in the best way they can.

He urges the navy men to live up to the expectations of the people, saying "I expect from you a continuing devotion to the principles for which the armed forces was created and to which it is dedicated." He stresses, "I ask you to perform your tasks with greater vigor and unswerving loyalty to your country and people."

The Chief Executive also warns that he will be stern with those officers and men who dishonor the navy. "I expect discipline," he tells them, "and I will be stern with wrongdoers. That is my painful task, but I shall perform my duty."

Congratulating the men of the navy, the President reiterates his confidence in them, and pledges to extend to the service all the assistance within his command.

During the ceremonies, the President presents awards to four naval officers and 11 newspapermen for outstanding services.

Back in Malacañang, the President receives officers of the Philippine Public School Teachers Association (PPSTA) who present him with resolutions embodying requests and recommendations for the improvement of the organization and its members.

Notable among the resolution was that in which the PPSTA offered its services and resources to the President in his drive against smuggling and venalities in the government.

February 10.—IN a two-hour conference with city executives, President Marcos call for closer liaison and intensified cooperation between various agencies in Manila and environs involved in the current anti-smuggling drive, saying that this could result in closing the outlets and clearing houses for smuggled goods, operating in these population centers.

The President also discusses with the city executives other means of combatting all other forms of crime and lawlessness in the metropolitan area in connection with the government's all-out campaign to restore the rule of law. Present at the meeting are Mayors Antonio V. Villegas of Manila, Norberto Amoranto of Quezon City, Pablo Cuneta of Pasay City, Macario Asistio of Caloocan City and Maximo Estrella of Makati.

The Chief Executive proposes closer coordination among the suburban police agencies on one hand, and the National Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Finance through the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs, on the other. He says he will establish a liaison service between the Finance Department and the suburban governments.

The city executives take the occasion to inform the President that one of their biggest problems is the harassing activity of some Criminal Investigation Service (CIS) agents. They report to the President that a common complaint is that when CIS operatives make arrests, those apprehended are usually taken to undisclosed places and local officials are often embarrassed when they cannot pinpoint the whereabouts of the persons arrested.

The Chief Executive pledges to act on all complaints within 24 hours after receipt provided they are supported by affidavits. He likewise directs his assistant, Col. Jaime Ferrer, to instruct the Philippine Constabulary to notify either the mayor or the chief of police of the suburban cities before its agents conduct raids therein.

On smuggling, the President observes that if the thriving market for smuggled products in the greater Manila area is plugged off, smuggling will wither by itself.

The Chief Executive concludes the conference by seeking the mayors cooperation in the overall drive, saying that even with the best efforts of first-rate intelligence operatives, the drive against smuggling and other crimes will fail if local governments do not help in the national government's campaign.

Following the conference, the President receives Sen. Fujio Tashiro of Japan and Kazuya Morita, secretary-general of Sokagakkai, an influential Buddhist sect in Japan, who pay their respects after their arrival recently in the course of a fact-finding tour of Asian countries.

Then the Chief Executive meets administration officials on the coordination of the relief and rehabilitation work for the victims of the recent fire, the biggest ever to hit Iloilo City in decades.

At the meeting, the President announces the possibility of utilizing a loan of P20-million from private U.S. financing institutions for the rehabilitation of areas ravaged by fire, notably the severely stricken Iloilo City business district.

The President states that he is now studying this plan, even as he releases another P50,000 from the Philippine Charily Sweepstakes Office as additional aid to the Iloilo City fire victims. This doubles the amount already released by Malacañang for that fire ravaged city.

In the afternoon, the President receives the loiter of credence of Dr. Marco Aurelio Lino Benitez as Argentine's ambassador to the Philippines.

Setting a precedent in Philippine diplomacy, the President—whose mastery of the national language has been amply demonstrated in his public speeches—accepts in Filipino the letter of accreditation of Argentine Ambassador Benitez in colorful ceremonies held at the Ceremonial Hall of the Palace.

In English, the acceptance speech of the President, translates as follows:

“Mr. Ambassador:

“I am happy to receive the letters by which His Excellency Dr. Arturo Illia, President of the Argentine Republic, accredits you as Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Argentina to the Philippines, as well as the letters of recall of your distinguished predecessor.

“I share your Excellency's views that although the Philippines and Argentina are separated by geographical barriers, our peoples are linked together by their common dedication to the democratic ideal and to the advancement of the cause of peace throughout the world.

“The recently concluded Fourth Centennial celebration of the Christianization of the Philippines to which your Excellency's Government graciously sent a representative in the person of no less than the distinguished Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs, further strengthened the historical and cultural association between our two countries.

“Deeply cognizant of the vital role of economic advancement in the development of our respective peoples' well-being and prosperity, the Philippines looks forward to greater collaboration with Argentina in the furtherance of our commercial and trade relations.

“I wish to assure you, Mr. Ambassador, that in the performance of your assigned tasks, the Government and the people of the Philippines are prepared to extend to you all the necessary cooperation and assistance which you may need.

“Mr. Ambassador, I wish to reciprocate the sincere expressions and sentiments of friendship extended by His Excellency President Illia. Please convey to him my best wishes for his continued good health and well-being, as well as for the enduring amity of the government and people of the Philippines for the government and people of Argentina.”

The ceremonies are held in the presence of the members of the cabinet and officials of the department of foreign affairs and the Argentine Embassy, headed by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

A doctor of dentistry, writer, sportsman and diplomat, the new Argentine envoy was successively director of dental services of the Ceni hospital, provincial deputy, president of the deputies of the State Civic Radical Union, and director of the institute of social services of Corrientes province.

He entered his country's foreign service in 1962 when he was appointed ambassador to Paraguay, which post he held until his transfer to Manila.

February 11.— THE Chief Executive receives a few callers in order to devote more of his time clearing his desk of important state papers preparatory to his departure for Iloilo City for an on-the-spot survey of damages wrought by the recent fire there.

Among his callers are Sen. Manuel Manahan, Sen. Eva Estrada Kalaw, Gov. Manuel Barretto of Zambales and Mayor Hector C. Suarez of Zamboanga City.

In the afternoon, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, motor to Pier 9 where they board the Philippine Navy ship, the RPS "Roxas," for Iloilo City.

Also aboard the ship are P100,000 worth of canned goods, clothing, construction materials and other relief supplies for distribution in the disaster area.

President Marcos, before boarding the RPS "Roxas," indicates that he will help commercial establishments destroyed by fire in Iloilo City to rehabilitate through loans from abroad at reasonable rates, and to zonify the city to prevent future fires.

The President states that loans are now being arranged for businessmen who are victims of the recent fire. He says he has already asked the National Planning Commission to draft a plan for rebuilding the city including zoning to minimize fires.

He says he did not recommend a special calamity fund for Iloilo although Congress reportedly has approved a bill to meet the contingency, because he wants the government to do everything first within its means.

The President's trip to Iloilo City is his first outside of Manila since he assumed office. He feels it necessary because the Iloilo fire was the worst in a decade to hit the Visayas, and he wanted to show Iloilo that the national government is interested in that province's welfare.

February 12.—ARRIVING in Iloilo City late in the afternoon, after a four hour train trip from Culasi, Roxas City where the RPS "Roxas" dropped anchor to save time and also to inspect the damage wrought by a recent fire in Roxas City, President Marcos orders government financial institutions to make available to Iloilo City fire victims rehabilitation loans at very liberal terms.

The President states that he expects the Social Security Commission, Government Service Insurance System and the Development Bank of the Philippines, each to make available about P2.5-million to the fire victims, particularly to businessmen who suffered substantial or total losses in the conflagration.

Roberto Benedicto, president of the Philippine National Bank, who came here with the President, indicates that the PNB has some P2.5-million already set aside for loans to fire victims.

The President and the First Lady debark from the navy vessel some 400 yards off the shore and take a navy life boat to the beach where they are received by a huge crowd led by Capiz Gov. Antonio Reyes, Roxas City Mayor Lorenzo Arnaldo, Vice Mayor Mabini Altavaz and officers of the third PC zone.

From the port, the President motors to the railroad station passing through the plaza to inspect the fire area in Roxas City, which has not yet been rehabilitated.

The First Couple is wildly applauded all along the route to Iloilo City. Local residents had hastily put up welcome arches and signs and cheered as the presidential train passed.

At Dumalag, they are forced to alight to shake the hands of the insistent crowd. The train is likewise met at Passi, the first Iloilo town on route where Gov. Rafael Palmares met the party and rode to Iloilo with the President.

From Passi, the First Couple, along with Manila newspaper men proceeds direct to the devastated area upon arrival here and interviews the fire sufferers.

They also inspect evacuation centers, in public and private schools here and turn over to the local authorities relief goods for distribution to fire victims.

Following the tour of the ravaged area, the President and the First Lady proceed to the Jaro parish church where a Te Deum is sung in their honor.

After a conference at the Del Rio Hotel and dinner at the residence of Vice President Fernando Lopez, the presidential party reboards the RPS "Roxas" for the return voyage to Manila.

Meanwhile, President Marcos this day urges the collaboration of civic, educational and professional groups in a massive management, audit in connection with the administration's policy to reorganize the executive branch of the government.

Executive Secretary Rafael Salas announces that in his resolve to effect reforms in governmental operations, the President intends to mobilize the best talents available in the private sector, as well as those in the public service.

The Executive Secretary states that groups numbering about 330 will be topped for this purpose. They will be divided, into several committees to formulate recommendations on the various aspects of governmental operations, in order to achieve maximum, economy, simplicity and efficiency in the conduct of public affairs.

These groups include experts from, all institution of learning, both public and private, particularly the University of the Philippines institute of Public Administration which had undertaken extensive studies on the project, with the Executive Office in Malacañang as the secretariat.

In effecting the reorganization, the President will seek to gear government operations to developmental purposes, reduce expenditures, eliminate duplication of work and bring order and method to functions, services and activities.

The President earlier recommends to Congress the enactment of a measure authorizing the President of the Philippines to reorganize within one year the executive branch with the view to streamlining its functions and improving its services. He explains that the administrative machinery of the government must be regenerated to gear it to the requirements of national growth.

February 13.—ABOARD RPS "Roxas" en route to Manila, President Marcos orders the National Civil Defense Administration to mobilize a national effort to secure cities and towns from fires.

In a brief press interview, the President likewise outlines plans to create a committee charged with the task of mapping out ways of preventing fires. He also announces the upgrading the fire-fighting techniques of local communities.

The President explains that there is necessity for adopting zoning plans for cities whereby establishments deemed as fire hazards, like lumberyards, will be barred from the commercial district.

The President will have the NCDA establish on a national level the machinery for meeting fire hazards and for coping with fires of every degree and dimension. He envisions the establishment of water systems throughout the country.

He emphasizes that the national effort to prevent fires should include the teaming of local police forces in fighting fires and the formation of citizens' groups to augment the regular fire departments in times of emergencies.

The President tells newsmen he might use in the meantime some water pumps acquired through reparations for irrigation purposes, in the national effort to meet the hazards of fire. He says he was disturbed by the recurrence of fires during the last few weeks.

Taking note of the haphazard planning of cities, he points out that "it is time that a national effort is made to zonify cities."

At the same time, the President also states that the reported recall of Col. Jose Lukban, chief of the National Bureau of Investigation, to army service could be part of a plan for general reversion to active duty of some 600 military personnel holding civilian posts.

The President observes that it is necessary to return to military service officers occupying civilian positions "because they may lose their military capabilities if not recalled sooner."

He states that the recall of military personnel from civilian positions will pave the way for the appointment officials under more permanent status.

The President and his party leave Iloilo City at 4 a.m. after conducting an on-the-spot survey of fire damage and conferring with officials of the Belief and Rehabilitation Committee headed by Vice President Lopez.

The Committee which includes city officials and representatives of the various agencies participating in the relief work, discusses with the Chief Executive the relocation and rehabilitation of indigent fire victims, and the zonification of the city.

On board ship the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, hear Mass officiated by Fr. Ciriaco Escutin, chaplain of the Philippine Navy.

Then the President, accompanied by Commodore Felix Apolinario, chief of the Philippine Navy, inspects this vessel and takes up the problem of overhauling it.

In the evening, the President spends his time in his cabin going over state papers he had brought along on the trip. The President is expected to arrive Manila early tomorrow.

February 14.—THE President, arrives from a brief trip to Iloilo City where he and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, conducted an on-the-spot survey of the damage wrought by the recent fire and conferred with the members of the Relief and Rehabilitation Committee headed by Vice President Fernando Lopez.

They debark from the Philippine Navy ship RPS "Roxas" at Pier 9 before sunrise, arriving in Malacañang at 6 a.m.

After breakfast, the President receives Filemon Tanchoco and Waldo Perfecto, president and vice president, respectively, of the Association of Philippine Universities and Colleges; and Juan Nabong, president of the Association of Christian Schools and Colleges, who submit to him a proposal for the establishment of a private educational foundation fund to be financed from the $28-million Education Fund from the United States under the War Damage Payment Act.

The foundation, they explain, will be a continuous source of assistance to worthwhile projects of private educational institutions which have yet to receive assistance from the government in spite of their considerable responsibility in meeting education needs.

Then the President confers with defense and military officials on the procurement and disposal of ammunition under RP-US military agreements.

At the conference, the President directs national defense and AFP officials to brief legislative leaders behind closed doors on the procurement and disposal of ammunition. The briefing will cover the procedures followed in such procurement, and disposal of ammunition and other materials under the RP-US defense pacts.

The President also orders defense officials to immediately reexamine, clarify and update the procedures and arrangements on the procurement of military equipment and the disposal of surplus.

At the same time, Undersecretary of Defense Alfonso Arellano states that the present procedures followed in the disposal of excess or surplus equipment furnished by the US had been set under previous administrations, ever since the signing of the Mutual Security Pact of 1951 and the Military Assistance Pact in 1949.

Arellano says that the disposal of ammunition, now under question, was agreed upon by RP and US representatives under the previous administration, with the talks taking place last year, from September through November.

The present administration is now merely implementing this agreement.

Arellano stresses that Philippine ammunition requirements are being maintained at the highest possible level and that the Philippines has more than enough today for "our purposes even with this disposal of excess ammunition."

The defense officials add that the AFP makes the declaration of excess ammunition, and the JUSMAG merely concurs "in accordance with the procedure already established by formal agreements between the two countries."

The President appeals, in this connection, to both our leaders and the public to exercise caution in discussing matters that might prejudice national security.

In making his appeal for circumspection in discussing publicly military affairs and defense plans, the President points out that such unguarded discussions may prejudice or even betray the country's defense posture.

He asks for the cooperation of every sector in the matter of guarding national security for, he says, it involves all political parties and the people. The President at the same time expresses confidence that legislative leaders wanted merely to point out defects in the procedures and in the agreements relative to the disposal of excess ammunition and equipment. He also says that he is confident the press had no intention of "sensationalizing" the case, nor would deliberately undermine national security through careless publicity.

The rest of the President's statement follows:

"I am confident that the intention of both the Armed Forces and the legislative leaders in calling attention to the disposal of excess ammunition is to point out defects in the procedure as well as in the agreements governing the disposal and declaration of excess or surplus equipment and material secured under the Military Assistance Program.

"I am also certain that the Fourth Estate has no intention of sensationalizing this matter to the prejudice of national security.

"I have therefore directed the Undersecretary of National Defense and the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces to immediately take steps in order that the leaders of Congress may be briefed behind closed doors on matters that may be required for legislation. At the same time I have requested the same officials to immediately re-examine, clarify and update the procedures and arrangements on the procurement of military equipment as well as the disposal of surplus.”

The President also receives a group of student leaders from the University of the Philippines who convey to him the stand of the UP Student Council on, among others, the question of military aid to South Vietnam and the entry of American nuclear-powered vessels into Philippine waters.

He assures the student leaders that in the conduct of the country’s foreign relations, the administration is guided by the national interest.

In the afternoon, the President inducts into office Leopoldo Figueroa and Oscar Paguia as members of the boards of the Philippine National Railways and the National Marketing Corporation, respectively.

Then, the President confers with Herbert Reynaldos, anthropologist of Siliman University, who presents in behalf of some 500 members of the Manobo and Tiruray tribes complaints of landgrabbing against ranchers in barrio Salangsang, Libak, Cotabato.

In the evening, the President meets with NBI Director Jose Lukban and, following the meeting, inducts Dr. Fermin G. Caram, Sr. as Presidential Assistant on Health.

Meantime, President Marcos reveals that studies are now being made to ascertain the capabilities of the national government to protect the national interest in relation to reported activities of Filipino citizens involved in intelligence activities for foreign governments.

The President makes the revelation in a formal statement issued through Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, as follows:

“Studies are being made to ascertain the capabilities of the national government to protect the national interest in the face of reports of activities of certain persons gathering information or intelligence reports which are utilized by authorities other than the Philippine government.”

He points out that if the government employees and officials have sworn allegiance to another government, then they violate the law.

The President adds, however, that the matter is now under study by the government. He stresses that if these activities are true, then the internal security might be endangered, although he also emphasizes that as of now, he is not prepared to give it the military term of “internal security.”

In this connection, the President reveals that routinary checks have been made on sensitive areas where officials or employees must be given an absolute clean bill-of-health as to loyalty to the Philippine government.

He states that the government wants to be prepared for any developments, and will study what alternatives the government can take, or what counter-tactics may be adopted.

February 15.—TO find a formula that would stabilize the peace and order situation in Ilocos as well as end once and for all the political feuds there, President Marcos calls a meeting with Ilocos Sur leaders in Malacañang.

During the three-hour conference, leaders of the warring political factions in Ilocos Sur assure the maintenance of peace and order in that province as they forge a four-point agreement.

The President exerts a major effort to thresh out differences in the province after post-election disputes between the two factions threatened a deterioration of peace and order.

After explaining their sides, the leaders of the political groups in the province agree:

- (1) To stop their groups immediately from further belligerent actions;
- (2) To abide by the decisions of courts of justice and give them freedom to do their duty;
- (3) To leave to the Philippine Constabulary and the police the task of apprehending all persons wanted by the law; and
- (4) To surrender all illegal weapons.

The Chief Executive emphasizes that he will hold the leaders of both factions to their commitments, particularly in enforcing the agreement on non-belligerence or other hostile acts.

He tells the conferees that he is especially concerned about removing any cause for suspicion and bad faith, and about the impartial administration

“We have unburdened ourselves and presented our sides,” the President says, “let us continue working and if necessary let us continue meeting

The President points out that the time and energy spend on the conference will be wasted if the commitments made were not honored.

Expressing the hope that peace will be strengthened in Ilocos Sur, the President states he will take up their recommendations with the proper PC authorities.

Rep. Pablo Sanidad denies the allegation that the pre-election shooting in Narvacan which killed several of Crisologo’s followers was perpetrated by 29 men at the windows of his house, saying the only two windows in his house could not have been used by so many men.

Sanidad also proposes a complete change in the PC command in the Province.

Of the 20 persons linked to the Narvacan killing, Sanidad says he has already surrendered 17 of them and would try his best to contact the rest.

The President orders the PC to extend all possible assistance so that all wanted persons in the province will be able to surrender peacefully.

He asks the conferees to let the courts decide on easements concerning the feud and that whoever should lose must abide by the courts decision.

Rep. Crisologo states that the problem in Ilocos Sur is not only peace and order but also the irrigation of farms and the protection of people in the rural areas.

Alfredo Somera decries the failure to arrest suspects in the Narvacan shooting who are still at large. He reports that relatives of his were among the fatalities.

He praises the President’s efforts, however, to restore peace and order in the province, saying “we are for peace and order and the majesty of the law.”

For his part former Rep. Faustino Tobia suggests that all cases be screened. He likewise commends the “peace conference” called by the President, saying “nobody else can unite us but the President.”

Others present at the conference are Provincial Fiscal Jovenal Guerrero, PC Chief Brig. Gen. Segundo Velasco, Col. Rafael Ileto of the first PC zone, and Capt. Emilio Narcise, officer in charge of the constabulary in Ilocos Sur.

Following the Ilocos peace conference, the President receives Gen. Jesus Vargas, SEATO secretary-general; and Ambassador Rogelio do la Rosa, Philippine envoy to Cambodia, with whom he had an exchange of views on the political situation in Southeast Asia, particularly in Vietnam. In the morning, the Chief Executive spends the whole day in conference with Nacionalista congressmen at the Pangarup guest house across the Pasig River, where foreign affairs and army officials hold a briefing on the Vietnam situation.

At the meeting, the Nacionalista members of the House of Representatives agree on a party stand to send an engineering-construction battalion with adequate self-defense support to South Vietnam.

The congressmen also decide to file a bill appropriating funds for the support of the civic action group to be dispatched to the beleaguered country.

After the briefing given by foreign affairs and armed forces officials, the Malacañang spokesman issues the following statement:

“The Nacionalista congressmen unanimously approved the proposal, adopted as a party stand, to send an engineering construction battalion to South Vietnam with, the necessary support for self-defense.

“The N.P. Congressmen likewise agreed to take the initiative to immediately file a bill in Congress appropriating funds for the expenses of the engineering battalion.”

The President also points out at the briefing to the NP legislators the stakes of the Philippine in the Vietnam struggle, stressing that a decision on the matter is now necessary.

He states that experience has shown, as in the cases of India, Pakistan and Indonesia, that Communist strategy encourages accommodation of friendly relations only to gain time for it to win a position of advantage.

President's Week in Review: February 16 - March 29, 1966

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

February 16.—IN the wake of reports that smugglers have made use of strip stamps for imported cigarettes to pass off “blue seal” cigarettes as tax-paid, the Chief Executive makes a surprise visit to the Bureau of Printing to inquire into the procedure being followed in the printing of strip stamps for the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The President, who had been informed about the easy access of unauthorized persons to the negatives of strip stamps, expresses concern that fakes of these stamps, contrived through photographic reproduction, are being used by smugglers to pass off “blue seal” as tax-paid.

In his tour of the plant, the President observes that the procedures are faulty and can be improved. He then directs BIR Commissioner Misael P. Vera to map out improvements in procedures and security control, and to make a thorough investigation of reports that BIR and strip stamps have been made available to cigarette smugglers.

He tells Vera that if irregularities are found to exist, the BIR chief must bring charges against those responsible for them.

He warns that utmost care must be taken in the safekeeping and printing of strip stamps, for they are worth P30-million annually in taxes.

During his tour of the printing plant, the President also observes the entire procedure of printing the stamps, from the issuance of the accountable forms to the final press run. He inspects the storerooms for the forms, molds, negatives, and watched the final printing.

Back in Malacañang, the President receives Madame Supeni, third Deputy Foreign Minister of Indonesia, who discusses with the President the question of Philippine recognition of Malaysia.

Madame Supeni, President Sukarno's diplomatic trouble-shooter, arrived from Bangkok Tuesday morning to ask for the suspension of normalization of Philippine-Malaysian ties.

At the meeting, the President tells Madame Supeni that the normalization of relations between the two countries was a fait accompli and, in fact, was already in the ministerial level.

In turning down the request of Indonesia for the postponement of the normalization of Philippine-Malaysian relations, the President explains to Madame Supeni that the normalization of diplomatic relations is “inescapable since the Philippines must deal diplomatically with Malaysia in its participation in the activities of the Asian Development Bank, the United Nations, the ECAFE and other instrumentalities to which Malaysia is also linked.”

At the meeting, the President, however, did not say when the Philippines will formally announce the recognition of Malaysia which was created in 1964.

Following the conference which was held in an atmosphere of cordiality, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras issued the following statement:

“President Marcos advised Madame Supeni that the normalization of relations between the Philippine Government and the Malaysian Government was a fait accompli, and in fact is already at the ministerial level.

“The President informed the Indonesian special envoy that the normalization was now a matter of elevating diplomatic relations from the consular to the embassy level.

“The President explained that the normalization of Philippine-Malaysian diplomatic relations was inescapable since the Philippines must deal diplomatically with Malaysia in its participation in the activities of the Asian Development Bank, the United Nations, the ECAFE, and other foreign instrumentalities to which Malaysia is also similarly linked.

“The meeting between the President and Madame Supeni was extremely cordial, and discussions included the better climate in which the two countries continue to strengthen the friendly ties binding them.”

Minister Supeni was accompanied to Malacañang by Indonesian Ambassador Abdul Karim Rasjid and Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

In the morning, the President meets Secretary of Education and UP President Carlos P. Romulo, who represents the various needs of the Department of Education and the University of the Philippines to the President.

The President then confers on legislative matters with some members of the Senate, among them: Senate President Arturo Tolentino, Senate Majority Floor Leader Jose J. Roy, Senators Gil J. Puyat, Eva Estrada Kalaw, Alejandro Almendras, Dominador Aytona and Wenceslao R. Lagumbay.

The Chief Executive also receives Pad Dmochowski, president of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company (ITTCO), who called to pay his respects. He is accompanied by Ike Joaquin, executive vice president of the ITTCO (Phil.).

In the evening, the President swears in officials of the Philippine Veterans Bank, the Philippine Association of Exhibitors on Rolling and Floating Exhibitions, the League of Administration Executives, and the Press Photographers of the Philippines (PPP).

Headed by Ramon Vecina of the Philippines Herald, the other PPP Officers are Romeo Vitug of the Manila Chronicle, 1st vice-president; Pablo Gullas of the Philippines Herald, 2nd vice-president; Ruther D. Batuigas of the Philippines Herald, secretary; Marcelino Roxas of the Associated Press, treasurer; and Resty Samson and Bob Duño of the Manila Daily Bulletin, Dominador Suba, Elpidio Rustia and Gualberto Keyes of the Manila Times, Jose del Rosario of the Manila Chronicle, and Orlie Barrera of the Makabayan Publications, members of the board of directors.

Following their induction, the PPP officers pledge their full support to the President’s anti-smuggling drive and request that PPP members be notified should any major anti-smuggling operation be undertaken by the administration so that they could give it full coverage.

February 17.— AFTER the bipartisan consensus is reached on the urgency of extending increased economic and technical assistance, President Marcos certifies to Congress a bill appropriating P35-million for an engineer-construction battalion the Philippines is contributing as assistance to beleaguered South Vietnam.

The bill points out that Philippine security, peace and freedom are at stake on the ability of South Vietnam to “resist communist aggression and subversion.” It adds that Southeast Asia Treaty Organization nations, as well as other free governments, have already provided such assistance, including technical, economic and military.

Philippine assistance will be economic and technical, according to the bill, and will augment the aid already authorized under R. A. 4162.

The South Vietnamese government makes the request for Philippine assistance after what is viewed as “the intensification of the conflict” in that country.

Meanwhile, President Marcos this day launches “Operation Pakikisama,” and is set to form a committee, which will be composed of representatives of civic organizations to handle the collection, shipment and distribution of the donations to the people of South Vietnam, as proposed in the project. In launching the drive, the President appeals to the Filipino people to give their full support and sympathy to the South Vietnamese, in the same manner they had responded to the plight of the victims of the recent Iloilo fire and the eruption of Taal volcano.

Symbolic of hands stretched across the sea, "Operation Pakikisama" is a people-to-people project calling for voluntary donations of such items as patis, a delicacy dear to South Vietnamese as it is to Filipinos; dried fish, used clothing, blankets and mosquito nets, locally produced rubber shoes, slippers, textiles, drugs, candles, canned goods, soap and other detergents, and the like.

The project is deemed corollary to the proposed engineer-construction battalion which the Philippines hopes to dispatch to Vietnam as assistance to the South Vietnamese. The drive is proposed to the President by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

The President likewise discusses at length with Rep. Jose Cojuangco the status of the Rice Subsidy Bill, which, Cojuangco states, is now with the conference committee. Rice production is top priority on the President's program.

Then the President inducts six more officials, including a deputy governor of the Land Authority and the chairman of the Abaca Development Board,

The new inductees are:

1. Benicio Eusebio, as deputy governor of the Land Authority;
2. Venecio Flores, as chairman of the Abaca Development Board;
3. Mrs. Adelina Rodriguez, as a member of the Board of the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation;
4. Mrs. Narda Camacho, as a member of the Board of the National Cottage Industries Development Authority; and
5. William F. Buquid and Rene Garcia, as members of the Board of Liquidators.

A law graduate of the Lyceum of the Philippines, Eusebio, who is the senior member of the Rizal provincial board, took graduate studies in economics and business administration at the Ateneo de Manila University, and in management and training at the UP Institute of Public Administration. He is a war veteran, the general manager of Rondo Industries and member of the Rizal Economic Development Commission.

Eusebio has also specialized in management and personnel training, and was a delegate to several conferences abroad. He has had wide experience in business and public administration, and holds membership in several civic organizations.

Flores, another lawyer, was formerly a technical assistant to the then Senator Pedro Subido.

One of the most active civic workers in the country today, Mrs. Rodriguez, wife of Governor Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal, is either an officer or member of over 20 civic organizations, both national and provincial. She holds the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education from the University of Santo Tomas, and has received awards for their civic work from the National League of Puericulture Centers, Community Chest, Pamana, Rizal Boy and Girl Scouts, Rizal Federation of Women's Clubs, Philippine Society for the Prevention of Blindness, and others.

Mrs. Camacho, who is the public information officer of Gov. Rodriguez, majored in journalism, graduating cum laude from the Holy Ghost College, in 1948. She worked successively as education page editor of the Philippines Herald, private secretary to Gov. Adelmo Camacho of Bataan, and private secretary on the campaign staff of Senator Puyat in 1961. Mrs. Camacho is president of the Eulogio Rodriguez, Jr. Nursery School PTA, member of the VWCA, Friendship Inc., Rizal Red Cross, Catholic Women's League, and PRO of some six other organizations.

Baquid was a member of the provincial board of Camarines Sur, and active in community development.

The President also inducts into office the officers of the Philippine Veterans Bank, the League of Administration Executives, and the Philippine Chamber of Engineering Services.

In the evening, the President receives the officials of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) who pays him their respects following their recent arrival.

Following the call of the World Bank and IMF officials, the President directs the department of foreign affairs to issue the passport to former Secretary of Finance Rufino Hechanova, making his case an exception to existing rules which deny passports to Filipino Citizens facing criminal, civil and administrative charges in court.

The President takes this step even as he issues an executive order which liberalizes present regulations governing travel abroad by Filipino citizen, by making it possible even for citizens with pending criminal cases in court to travel nonetheless simply by getting clearance from the court that has jurisdiction over such cases. Cases such as administrative and civil will no longer bar a citizen from travelling.

In making an exception of Hechanova, the President is of the belief that the former finance secretary will return from his projected trip abroad.

The President decides to lift some of the existing restrictions governing travel abroad in order to conform closer to the spirit of the freedom of citizens to travel, which is guaranteed by the Constitution.

Among the regulations now being followed by the foreign office which a passport applicant must contend with, under oath are the following:

1. That there is no administrative, civil or criminal case pending against him in any government agency, national or local, or court of justice in the Philippines.
2. That there is no decision or judgment ensuing or which has ensued from any said agency or court of justice in the Philippines against him or against his property.
3. That he is not a communist or a member of any organization or society whose purpose is to overthrow the Philippine government or any of its instrumentalities.

In the interim, President Marcos appeals to the provincial and municipal executives to play a more persuasive role in the drive against smuggling and in effecting administrative reforms.

In a brief message to the League of Provincial Governors and City Mayors who met at the Filoil auditorium on Taft Avenue, the President cites the evils of smuggling which, he states, have locked the country "in an iron band of pain," and weakened the moral fiber of the people.

The President, in his message read by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, says that smugglers' illegal trade has proved so lucrative that it matches the national budget in annual volume. He stresses that it has however pushed back the economic growth of the country, and spawned syndicated crimes in the process.

The Chief Executive points out that to combat smuggling, all elements of society should be mobilized with local leadership playing a key role in the campaign.

He observes that the success of the drive rests to a large extent on the cooperation, loyalty, and initiative of provincial and municipal executives.

He announces that he will soon issue an executive order forming the Preparatory Committee to make draft proposals for the revision of the Administrative Code, and also that he will mobilize scholars, experts and public servants in an effort to effect “simplicity, efficiency and economy in government operations.”

Appealing to their vast experience and insight, the President invites the League to submit proposals for the amendments of the Administrative Code.

The President explains that amendment of the Administrative Code will result in convocation between the local governments and the national officials and need undersecretaries who are ready to act immediately on their needs.

February 18.—ADDRESSING the nation on television and radio, President Marcos states publicly the compulsion behind his decision to support the dispatch of additional assistance to beleaguered South Vietnam.

The President points to two urgent considerations that make up the basis for his decision. They are: the national interest and international commitments.

The Chief Executive likewise stresses that the alleged concessions from the United States, in exchange for the dispatch of an AFP engineer-construction battalion, are without basis.

“I deny this,” he states, adding that this consideration had never influenced the decisions he made.

On the basis of national interest, he presents four principles which, he says, underlay the action taken:

1. The Philippine hope for an early peace in Vietnam, if possible through the conference table, any move toward which the government will support compatible with Filipino values and ideals.
2. The essentiality of stopping communist aggression in Vietnam, which had widened the conflict from a civil war to an international war, now affecting Laos, Cambodia and Thailand, and involving North Vietnam and Communist China as active participants in the Vietcong side.
3. The unquestioned obligation of the Philippines, as a free country, to aid peoples of kindred faith in the defense of their freedom.
4. The protection of Philippine security, which might be seriously endangered by a victory of communism in Vietnam, not specially from external aggression, but from a resurgence of a revitalized communist insurgency within.

On the necessity for honoring Philippine international commitments, the President states that through these commitments the Philippine government had long ago resolved the question of aid to South Vietnam.

He points out that these commitments were dictated by the choice we had made on the side of freedom and against communism. Thus, he stresses, the Philippines outlawed communism under R.A. 7100.

The President traces the Mutual Defense Pact with the United States to the internal danger faced by the country from the Hukbalahap rebellion, the defeat of which involved “all our human, spiritual and material resources.”

Other facts followed, he says, with the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization which primarily sought to stand fast against communism; followed, with the same sense of danger, by the Manila communique of April 12, 1964, and by the London conference of ministers the same year wherein the Philippines promised moral and material aid to Vietnam.

“The problem of involvement of our government in the conflict in South Vietnam has been resolved,” the President states. “The only question presented to us is whether this commitment and this involvement shall be manifested by an increase in the aid thus extended to South Vietnam.

The President notes that the Philippines is for securing peace in Vietnam. The Philippines will support any move that will lead to peace, he says.

But while supporting initiatives toward peace, he states, “we regard it as essential that the relentless pressure of communist aggression in Vietnam be stopped.”

He stresses that the necessity for stopping this aggression was obvious. “If we sat by, complacently awaiting the uncertain arrival of peace, we might wake up to find that we had nothing left to negotiate about,” he says.

Meanwhile, President Marcos leads the nation in honoring the late Jose Abad Santos on the occasion of the hero’s 70th birth anniversary the next day (Feb. 19).

In a message which he issued on the eve of the hero’s birth anniversary, the President extols the virtues of the hero, who was a jurist, statesman and patriot.

The President states that the hero’s example “serves us well in these times of conflict and decision, when we must choose again and again between our ideals and values on one hand, and mere survival and accommodation on the other.”

Following is the text of the President’s message for the occasion:

“In remembering Jose Abad Santos today, we honor all Filipinos of his breed, who place God and country above self. A jurist, statesman, and patriot, he was a hero long before he made the choice between life and death. For the late Chief Justice Abad Santos had lived a heroic life all of his years, valuing duty and honor more than pomp and pelf.

“His splendid example serves us well in these times of conflict and decision, when we must choose again and again between our ideals and values on one hand, and mere survival and accommodation on the other. As Jose Abad Santos had so nobly shown, death can be life too—a life of light and meaning for a country and its people.”

February 19.—PRESIDENT Marcos directs a committee composed of fiscal experts to set the policies for extending loans to the business community, with emphasis on the needs of necessary industries at present faced by financial difficulties.

The President takes the step to meet the problems of financing and credit of the business community which had deepened during the past administration and today constitute the primary concern over the private sector.

The committee consists of the heads of the Social Security Commission, the Development Bank of the Philippines, the Philippine National Bank, the Government Service Insurance System and the National Economic Council, with Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez as chairman.

In his directive, the President asks the committee to find ways and means to ease the distressed new and necessary industries’ problems, particularly as these problems affect growth and stability.

He likewise admonishes the committee to keep track of the Administration’s economic policies relative to development plans and projects, and to the enhancement of production in particular.

In the morning, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda P. Marcos, leads the nation in honouring the memory of the late Chief Justice Jose Abad Santos on the occasion of the martyr's 70th birth anniversary this day by laying a wreath before a bust of the patriot at the Palace Heroes Hall.

Following the rites, the President receives delegates to the week-long conference of the Organization Iberoamericana de Seguridad Social (OISS) who pays him their respects.

In the afternoon, the President and the First Lady tender a merienda for provincial governors and city mayors who pay them a courtesy call following the end of the three-day conference of these officials held at the Filoil auditorium on Taft Avenue.

The President spends the whole evening in the seclusion of his study working on state papers.

February 20.—SPENDING a quiet Sunday at the Palace with members of his family, the President do not receive any callers.

It is a much needed respite for the President after an unusually busy week of conferences with advisers, congressional leaders, provincial and municipal officials, and visiting foreign dignitaries.

Waking up early in the morning, the President motors to the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club in Mandaluyong, Rizal for a round of golf.

Following a brief rest back in Malacañang, the President retires to his private study where he works on a file of official papers.

In the evening, he hears Mass with members of his family at the Palace Chapel, with Major Juan C. Bautista, chaplain of the Presidential Guards Battalion, saying the Mass.

February 21.—THE Chief Executive issues a proclamation restoring certain government lots in Cebu province to their former status as forest reserves.

Located in the towns of Talisac and Minglanilla, the lots aggregating some 300 hectares were previously excluded from the local forest reserve and made available for disposition under Proclamation No. 487 dated Nov. 6, 1965.

The release of the area had been questioned by local residents who points out that it included portions necessary to preserve the watershed serving the locality.

Proclamation No. 13 issued by President Marcos recently, revokes Proclamation No. 487 and restores the lots to their former status as forest lands under the administration of the director of forestry.

In revoking the earlier proclamation, the President also points out that the concurrence of Congress, which is required by law in the conversion of forest into disposable lands, was not obtained.

At the same time, the President orders the confiscation of a large stock of remnants, embroidery materials and used clothing valued at more than P10 million, which has not been claimed since arrival at the South Harbor.

In a directive to Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, the President orders the seizure on the ground of abandonment.

The President issues the directive after a meeting with defense, customs and finance officials held to assess the progress of the anti-smuggling drive.

He instructs Secretary Romualdez to pinpoint responsibility for the importation and prosecute those found culpable for misrepresentation or misdeclaration of the imports.

Customs circles indicated that a prominent broker is involved in the unauthorized hauling of some of the goods under question.

The President likewise orders the prosecution of all such, persons, including any agent of the law, found to be responsible for “spiriting away” remnants and other questioned textile imports.

The textiles arrived in several batches, 70 per cent arriving during November and December last year, and the rest arriving in January and February this year.

The remnants consist of 2,612 bales of 700 pounds each valued at $1,828,400 or P7,373,600; the used clothing numbered 5,614 bales of 1000 pounds each, valued at $1,684,200 or P6,736,800; and the embroidery materials totalled 1,500 packages of undetermined value.

Undersecretary of Finance Juan Ponce Enrile declares that the customs code considers imports unclaimed after 15 days from the date of discharge from the vessel as abandoned if within that time the importer fails to file an import entry.

In the case of the said remnants and other goods, no importer has come forward to claim them since arrival at the piers. It was indicated that this failure is due to the inability of the consignees to establish price declaration, submit a commercial invoice, nor an export declaration certificate. These documents will reveal the true value of the shipments, which is believed to have been misdeclared.

In the afternoon, the President discusses the Administration’s policy on the 10th reparations schedule with Chairman Eulogio Balao of the Reparation Mission to Tokyo, Reparations Commissioner Gregorio Abad, Public Works Secretary designate Antonio Raquiza, and Undersecretary of Public Works Marciano Bautista.

Then later the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda Marcos, receive at cocktails delegates to the four-day Philippine-American Assembly to be held in Davao City starting Wednesday.

The group is headed by Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo, assembly honorary chairman; Emilio Abello and Clifford C. Nelson, co-chairman; Josefina Constantino and William K. Selden, co-directors.

Participants in the assembly are 43 Filipino and 34 American leaders in the fields of culture, economics, the military and public administration. They will exchange views and experience on major RP-US and international issues.

The assembly will make public the proceedings, recommendations and conclusions of its deliberations at the termination of the conference.

February 22.—TO accelerate economic growth in Asia and the Far East, President Marcos certifies to Congress the urgency of enacting four measures needed to hasten the establishment in Manila of the Asian Development Bank. The President describes the ADB as “a vital instrument in accelerating economic growth.”

In certifying the bill, the President submits the following proposals:

1. A Senate resolution ratifying the Asian Development Bank Charter.
2. Legislation to allocate P140-million ($35-million) to cover the Philippine subscription quota to the capitalization of the bank.

3. Authority from Congress and funds for the construction of a building for the bank.

4. Appropriation to finance the relocation of the Philippine Merchant Marine Academy whose present site has been formally selected as the location of the future ADB offices.

In the morning, the President meets behind closed doors U.S. Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

During the meeting, the President is briefed by US officials on the latest developments in Vietnam.

In remarks addressed to newsmen following the meeting, President Marcos and Vice President Humphrey reaffirm the determination of both their countries to extend aid to beleaguered Vietnam.

The President expresses optimism that the bill he sent to Congress appropriating P35-million for sending 1,000 security troops, will be passed although there will be a "big debate."

On his part, Vice President Humphrey assures the President that President Johnson and the entire American people "shall never forget, the decision that you have made on your own, your free will, in behalf of your own people to join us in the common effort of defending freedom and independence and self-determination in Vietnam."

Vice-President Humphrey arrives here Monday night in the course of a trip through Asia to drum up support for the American effort in Vietnam. He is accompanied by Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador Lloyd JVL Hand, Chief Protocol Officer; Jack J. Valenti, special presidential assistant, and Minister Richard Service.

The President's remarks to the newsmen following the conference follows:

"I have informed the Vice President of my decision to send an engineering-construction battalion to South Vietnam and that I have properly certified as urgent a bill to the Philippine Congress on this matter, appropriating a total of P35-million for about, 2,000 men an engineering-construction battalion with security troops.

"It is my feeling that it is the overwhelming opinion of our people to send this engineering-construction battalion. In fact, I feel that a majority of the people would like to send not only engineer-construction troops. However we are limited by both budgetary capability and by the request of the South Vietnamese Government

"The present Prime Minister has reiterated the request of the South Vietnamese Government for an engineer construction battalion and it is my belief that the Philippine Government right now can afford this kind of aid. But even if it would mean incurring a deficit in government spending to send this aid to South Vietnam, I will be ready to risk it.

"I feel that the House of Representatives will pass the bill very soon and that the Senate will follow suit. Of course, I know that there will be a big debate, as indeed a big debate is now going on in the Philippines, but I reiterate that a great majority of our people are for sending this aid to South Vietnam, and I am very happy to have been able to convey to the Vice President these developments in our government and in the Philippines relative to Vietnam.

"The Philippine government leaders realize the responsibility of having to maintain present security measures for our country, not only for today's generation but for future generations, and we are sending aid to South Vietnam, not only as a symbol of our belief in the cause the South Vietnamese people are fighting, the same cause which the United States is fighting for, but as a measure to strengthen the security of the Philippines. We are doing this not only under a state of hazy idealism but after a hard-headed and repeated assessments of the Philippine position in relation to Communism and other political ideologies.

"We feel that the Philippines must honor its pledges to support South Vietnam and democracy in this part of the world. We feel that if South Vietnam falls, the subversion of not only the Philippines but of Malaysia, Thailand, Laos and Cambodia will increase to such an extent that the Philippines and the other countries affected would spend a hundred times more than what they will have to spend now by sending aid similar to that I have proposed to send to South Vietnam.

“In short, I know that if today we are spending P35 million for the engineer construction battalion, we may be compelled to spend P350 million say about a billion pesos, to fight Communism in our own country if South Vietnam falls.

“I reiterate, I cannot report in this public manner the information that has come into my possession as President of the Republic of the Philippines, but I must point out the danger that subversion, poses in this country. I know and I call upon everyone in the Philippines to join me in this proposal to send the engineer construction battalion to South Vietnam.”

Vice President Humphrey’s statement follows: “Mr. President:

“I deeply appreciate, as an emissary of President Johnson and the people of the United States, the information given us this morning concerning your own country and the program of action you have in mind for the benefit of your own people.

“Speaking for the American people, we shall never forget the decision you have made on your own, of your own free will, in behalf of your own people, to join with us in the common effort of defending freedom and independence and self-determination in South Vietnam.

“This decision means a very very great deal to the American people. We look upon our friends in the Philippines not only as friends but as compatriots. In common, we stood together in peace and in war, and your brilliant and incisive leadership is one of the most reassuring developments in this period of difficulty and tension.

“I want to thank you and assure you once again of our deep appreciation.

“May I also say this to the press: that Ambassador Harriman and myself have given the President and foreign minister and other officials of the government a review of our observation in our visits to other nations. President Johnson had already communicated with President Marcos on the Honolulu conference by personal communication. It was my privilege to fill in details and give a more intimate and precise description of what transpired at that conference and, once again, I wish to call attention to the great emphasis being placed by your own people on civic work, social and economic development, which is so desperately needed in Vietnam, in many countries in Asia, as well as the rest of the world.

“I deeply respect and welcome the leadership of the Philippines and the President of this Republic, not only on his leadership on the vital issue he has placed before Congress but the idealism and practical works for building a better Asia, where Asians themselves take this leadership.

“This is a most gratifying development also and so, Mr. President, we thank you. It has been a beautiful and pleasant visit that we had and it was essentially a visit of friends, not a visit to design policy. You design your own policy in conformity with the best ability to the best interest and your national interest. I can only say we find ourselves in full agreement and we are grateful, appreciative and ever be mindful of this decision.”

Meantime, President Marcos calls for an increase in sugar production by at least 300,000 tons annually, to meet not only local needs but also the increased sugar quota allotted by the U.S.

In his speech read by PNB president Roberto Benedicto, the President warns the sugar producers on the opening day of their 13th annual congress at the Manila Hotel this day that failure to increase production will mean loss of a big opportunity to earn additional foreign exchange which the country badly needs.

On the other hand, the President states, the sugar industry will not only increase its income, but also effectively assist the country to solve serious economic problems.

The President points out that in addition to the domestic requirement of 600,000 tons, the U.S. quota has been increased from 980,000 tons to 1.24 million tons, or a minimum requirement of 1.84 million tons in annual production.

He explains that the increase in production will guarantee an additional annual foreign exchange earning of $33 million, or P165 million, up to 1971 when the U.S. Sugar Act is revised.

President Marcos warns that failure to increase production to meet the new quota will result in the permanent reduction of the succeeding year's quota and the permanent loss of a tremendous opportunity to earn additional foreign exchange.

Moreover, he states, when amendments to the U.S. Sugar Act of 1965 expires, it would be utterly difficult if not impossible to secure additional sugar quota from the United States.

The President urges the sugar producers to formulate plans and programs towards this objective as soon as possible so that the government agencies concerned can study and evaluate them with the view to providing all the assistance necessary.

He points out that the sugar industry, although one of the most potent pillars of the economy, has not kept pace with the fast growing labor force and the population explosion. As a result the industry is facing acute unemployment, milling and production problems.

He notes that the local sugar market is almost wholly controlled by middlemen in spite of the existence of numerous marketing organizations, notably the National Federation of Sugarcane Planters, Philippine Sugar Association and Philippine Producers Cooperative Marketing Association.

On the other side of the ledger, the President says, the sugar industry, compared to other agricultural enterprises, pays the highest wages, and still leads, considering that others suffer worse conditions.

"My friends," he states, "we cannot afford to be stagnant and let each one of us take care of himself. The acute problems facing us demand the utmost in our sense of responsibility and duty to our country and people. I urge all of you in the sugar industry to join this administration in its drive for national greatness and progress."

He asks the sugar producers not to undertake for the moment the complicated tasks of integrating, diversifying and industrializing the industry but to meet the immediate challenge of expanding production by at least 300,000 tons more beginning this crop year.

February 23—THE Chief Executive directs the department of public works to submit a P50-million public works bill to Congress that will primarily meet the needs of the rural areas.

The bill will embody the projects envisioned by the President to accelerate food production, including the construction and repair of irrigation systems, feeder roads, and other devices to aid the farmer and other rural workers.

In two other directives also centering on the development and well-being of rural areas and the rural population, the President asks:

1. The Presidential Assistant on Community Development to submit recommendations on the uplift of rural communities, through particular projects aimed at further improving conditions in the barrios;

2. The same agency to map out plans to put mobile hospitals in the field in order to meet the health and medical needs of rural folks;
3. The department of justice to submit a report on vacancies in the various branches of the Court of Agrarian Relations which need to be filled.

The President likewise asks the PACD that the initiative and cooperation of the PCAW should be utilized, and liaison established among machine suppliers, irrigation authorities and the agrarian workers organization.

In the morning, the President receives the members of the "Conscience Bloc" in the House of Representatives who assure him support in his decision to send an engineer-construction battalion to South Vietnam.

Then later, he meets with other members of the Congress who takes up with him problems of their respective constituents.

After attending to the congressmen until past 1 p.m. the President confers at luncheon on legislative matters with some congressional leaders, headed by Senate President Arturo Tolentino.

In the evening, the President takes time out from attending to callers to hear "Ash Wednesday" Mass with members of his family at the Palace chapel.

Following the Mass, the President receives Chairman Filemon Rodriguez of the National Economic Council, Undersecretary of Public Works Marciano Bautista and Reparations Commissioner Gregorio Abad who submits to him a draft of the proposed 10th year reparations schedule prepared jointly by their offices.

February 24.—IN a more determined effort to further tighten the anti-smuggling drive of the government, President Marcos issues several directives, including three executive orders designed to centralize responsibilities.

- 1) An Executive Order centralizing the custody and disposition of confiscated goods and the payment of rewards to informers;
- 2) An Executive Order creating the Anti-Smuggling Action Center; and
- 3) An Executive Order creating the Anti-Smuggling Fund Committee.

The Anti-Smuggling Action Center will be based in Manila, with regional offices in Cebu, Bacolod, Davao, Jolo, Legaspi and Aparri, according to the order. These offices will harness the capabilities of citizens to furnish information on smugglers and the location of smuggled goods. Based on the assessment of information received, the Center will then take action.

To compensate citizens for the risks they take in helping pinpoint smugglers, the President will have the Anti-Smuggling Fund Drive undertake activities similar to those of the Peace and Amelioration Fund Drive. Funds realized from this drive will supplement the initial release of P150,000 by Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez earmarked for rewards to informers, which will include government personnel.

The President also expects the office created under the Department of Finance to take responsibility for the receipt and disposal of confiscated contraband.

The other directives and instructions issued by the President include:

1. A directive to the department of justice to create more panels of prosecutors to help regular fiscals in the prosecution of smuggling cases as well as the assignment of more fiscals to handle smuggling cases exclusively.

2. A directive to Commissioner of Customs Jacinto Gavino to initiate seizure proceedings against cargo in the piers long stockpiled beyond normal limits.

A supposedly misdeclared shipment is spirited away from the piers recently, prompting the President to order its confiscation after it is intercepted outside the piers by authorities.

3. Instructs Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez to prosecute bureau of internal revenue men responsible for the loss of confiscated smuggled cigarettes and other goods in their custody.

He states that these men must be suspended immediately upon the filing of charges against them.

4. Orders that only inflammable materials and bulk cargo should be delivered shipside. All other imports must be unloaded at the piers.

The President says that he noticed that shipside delivery of cargo had been used by smugglers to bring in contraband.

5. Directs all intelligence agencies of the government to consolidate then lists of suspected commuters to nearby foreign ports who bring in untaxed goods so that the bureau of customs may profit from the list.

Meantime, President Marcos seeks the help of members of the Senate for the passage of administration bills in congress, particularly measures affecting the economic development of the country.

Meeting with the Senators in Malacañang, the President asks quick action on a bill amending the reparations law and a proposed P50-million public works bill.

The President wants the reparations law changed so that the bulk of the still uncollected reparations from Japan will be channelled to the government or public sector.

Under the law, the public sector gets only 40 per cent of reparations, the rest going to the private sector. The President wants this reversed or have all reparations go to the public sector.

The President observes that the utilization by the private sector of the bulk of reparations had not contributed to the economic development of the country as much as expected when the law was passed by Congress.

It is time, the President points out, that most of the remaining reparations from Japan be given to the government to start or complete urgent economic programs, particularly the rice production program.

In the morning, the President motors to Wack Wack Golf and Country Club in Mandaluyong, Rizal where he officiates at the opening of the 51st Philippine Open Golf championship by driving the first ball in the competition.

He tees-off at 6:10 a.m. as scheduled, after which he plays a foursome of nine holes with Senators Lorenzo Tañada, Dominador Aytona and Jovito Salonga, carding 2 under bogey, 43 to win the game.

Back in Malacañang after a brief rest, the President receives delegations from Bulacan and Pangasinan led by Reps. Teodulo Natividad and Cipriano Primicias, Jr., respectively; and John Billera, president of the U.S. Industries in New York who pays him his respects. Billera arrived recently in the course of a tour of his firm's subsidiaries in the Far East.

February 25.—IN a telephone conversation with Director Antonio Quejado of the forestry bureau this day, the President orders the bureau director to immediately cancel all logging permits and submit a formal report on the progress of the drive against illegal logging.

The President issues the directive upon receipt of reports that wanton cutting of timber still goes on in Bataan, with licensed concessionaires behind the activity. He orders Quejado to stop right away all logging operations in the province "and don't allow logs to get out of Bataan by road or by sea."

The Chief Executive likewise asks the bureau of forestry to coordinate with the constabulary command in Bataan in order to better enforce the ban against indiscriminate logging operations.

"Tell them that all logging operations in Bataan now are illegal because we have cancelled all logging permits of concessionaires there," the President tells Quejado.

In asking for a report from the bureau, the President wants to know what it has done to stop the illegal cutting of forest stands. The President points out that indiscriminate logging must be stopped because the country's forests are already dangerously thinned out.

Meanwhile, President Marcos states this day that he intends to invite Indonesian President Sukarno to Manila to discuss mutual problems particularly those affecting Indonesia and Malaysia.

In his prepared statement issued to the press, the President denies a report of Antara, Official Indonesian news agency, monitored in Singapore that he had already invited Sukarno to a summit meeting through Madame Supeni, deputy foreign minister, who visited Manila recently.

Commenting on the report, the President states that he viewed the idea of consultations with Indonesia on mutual problems as "always to be welcomed."

The President's statement, as released by his spokesman, follows:

"While there was no formal invitation to a summit conference in my message to President Sukarno, I view the idea of consultations on the mutual problems of the Philippines and Indonesia as always to be welcomed.

"In this spirit, therefore, in the spirit of musjawarah, I now intend to invite President Sukarno to Manila for such consultations, to discuss mutual problems, particularly those affecting Indonesia and Malaysia.

"I hope that President Sukarno will find it possible to make a visit to Manila."

The Indonesia President had previously announced that normalization of relations with Malaysia would be a violation of the principle of musjawarah (brotherly consultation), the underpinning of the Manila Declaration of 1964 agreed upon by the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia, then only Malaya.

In the morning, the President meets Philippine Ambassador Felipe Mabilangan, Sr. to Laos who arrived recently to attend the funeral services for his sister. Ambassador Mabilangan likewise transmits to the Chief Executive a message of congratulations from Prime Minister Prince Souvanna Phouma on the President's victory at last November's polls.

Then the President receives Ambassador Abraham Kidron of Israel, former Senate President Jose Avelino, Mayor Norberto Amoranto, Commissioner of National Integration Mamintal Tamano and Speaker Protempore Salipada K. Pendatun.

Ambassador Kidron pays the President a courtesy call while Mayor Amoranto formally invites the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, to be the special guests at the opening of the Quezon City Interscholastic Athletic Meet scheduled to run from April 17 to April 20, with the First Lady invited to cut the ceremonial ribbon opening the meet. Speaker Protempore Pendatun and Commissioner Tamano discuss with the President this year's projected Muslim pilgrimage to Mecca.

In the afternoon, the Chief Executive receives at tea some 500 officers and members of the Civic Assembly of Women of the Philippines, headed by Josefina Phodaca Ambrosio, president; Dr. Estefania Aldaba Lim, Medina Lacson de Leon, former Sen. Pacita Madrigal Gonzalez and Paz P. Mendez.

At the tea reception, the President announces plans to hold a general assembly of the country's leaders in various fields with a view to re-assessing and studying the problems facing the government.

"This assembly shall provide a forum for the meeting of all the minds in our society and in our country," he states, "an assembly perhaps of several hundred people who shall have the opportunity to determine, reassess and examine the present program of government and perhaps suggest plans that may be undertaken by the government."

The President appeals to the women leaders to help in this effort because, he says, "no matter how much a President or the Congress, may do, the policies, plans and programs of government will fail if they do not receive the support and aid of all the people."

Scanning the reports of the various CAWP commissions which were submitted to him, the President notes that the Filipino women has been transformed from "a source of inspiration to a source of strength and assistance."

The Chief Executive says that he will give the reports careful study, with a view to adopting many of the recommendations submitted by the women leaders.

He likewise announces to the group that he is considering appointing distinguished women to high positions in the government.

In presenting the organization's commission reports, Josefina Ambrosio, CAWP president states:

"Mr. President, we have come not to ask what the government can do for us but to ask what we can do to be of service to our people. We are concerned because we have a stake in the future of our nation."

Among the recommendations submitted to the President are:

1. Establishment of more Juvenile and Domestic Relations Courts complemented with adequate probation officers.
2. Make an appeal to keep cities safe and clean for the people, with the NBI and the police alerted to preserve the sanctity of the nation's life.
3. Amendment of the Elections Code to remedy the flaws of election proceedings, with a study of experiences in England and South East Asian countries undertaken as possible guidelines.
4. Full implementation of the law which increased from P50 to P100 the monthly pension of war widows.
5. Harness knowledgeable men and women in the rural areas in the task of improving conditions in their communities, as proposed by Dr. Frank Laubach.
6. Establishment of more nutrition pilot projects similar to that in Bayambang, Pangasinan, in accordance with public health goals.
7. Appeal directly to smugglers to halt their ruinous activities.
8. Give priority to production, distribution and food preservation in government economic projects.

Following the tea reception, the President receives Lewin Edwards, district sales supervisor in the Far East of Colliers; CB Gov. Andres Castillo, PNB president Roberto Benedicto and Rep. Pablo Roman of Bataan.

Edwards presents the President with a set of Collier's encyclopedia. With him on the call at the Palace are Eleuterio A. Baeza, Antonio Sorigo and Edmundo Mendoza.

In the evening, the President receives delegations from the Reserve Officers Legion of the Philippines, PEFTOK Veterans Associations, Great Labor Organization, all of which presented resolutions supporting the Administration's position on Philippine assistance to South Vietnam.

February 26.—THE Chief Executive spends a comparatively quiet day with his attendance, along with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the gala presentation of "Flower Drum Song" at the Philamlife auditorium as the only highlight of the day's schedule.

The gala premier of the locally staged musical is set by the First Lady, in token of gratitude to those who had helped launch the fund drive for her project—the realization of a national theater and museum. Proceeds from the presentation of "Flower Drum Song" will go to the fund for a national cultural center, a project of the First Lady.

In the morning, the President motors to Wack Wack Golf and Country Club where he plays a round of golf.

Back in Malacañang after a brief rest, the President repairs to his study working on pending state papers.

February 27.—THE President announces the deployment of army engineer-construction battalions to public works projects, in line with his policy to use military elements in economic development.

One battalion will work on the 20-kilometer Manila-North diversionary road under construction, while another battalion is involved with the extension of the Manila-South Road linking Quezon province with Camarines Norte.

These roads are part of the national highway network and have been for the most part unfinished. The utilization of the army engineer battalions is expected to advance the work on these roads substantially.

More construction battalions are expected to be assigned to other priority public works projects as soon as the plans are finalized and found feasible.

The Chief Executive states that the military engineers are well-trained for such peace-time activities, and have also the equipment and manpower to carry out these missions effectively.

Meantime, President Marcos states that he is "keeping in close touch with developments in troubled Indonesia through Ambassador Modesto Farolan, who is now in Jakarta as the special envoy of the Chief Executive.

The President, speaking through his spokesman, says that he sent Farolan to Indonesia on a special mission and that he had arrived there before the present disturbances in Jakarta which followed the ouster of Gen. Abdul H. Nasution, who was relieved as Indonesian defense minister by President Sukarno.

Since then, the President states, he has been getting up-to-the-minute reports from Farolan and the Philippine embassy in Jakarta, headed by Ambassador Nareiso Reyes. These reports confirmed the removal of Nasution, his having gone into hiding, and the demonstration against the government in the Indonesian capital.

Meanwhile, the President, in a speech read for him by Gen. Mata before the graduates of the trainee course in Fort Magsaysay at Laur, Nueva Ecija; calls for a resumption on a wider scale of citizens training for military defense as he stressed the need for preparedness in an unsettled world.

It is the duty of the government, “a duty to ourselves and to posterity,” the President says, to train the youth to be soldiers, “for their own country’s defense,” until foreign aggression has become obsolete and “wars are no longer possible or necessary.”

The President refers to the time before World War II when the nation’s leaders believed in military training for the young men, to build a national reserve of citizen soldiers. He points out that these trainees proved themselves in battle and later became the basic fighting force of the resistance which “was the most efficient national guerrilla force in World War II along with France.

Today, he states, the state of national preparedness leaves “much to be desired.” He emphasized that the Administration has now moved to sharpen preparedness through reorganization of AFP Leadership. This was necessary, he points out, in the face of aggressive forces outside the nation and the vulnerability of the country’s coastline to foreign subversion and infiltration as proven by the ease with which smugglers bring in contraband.

The mobilization of the AFP in the war against smuggling, the President observes, is in effect a move to tighten national security, for smuggling is an act of sabotage directly undermining the foundation of economic development.

To guard national security, the President cautions, it is as necessary to make international arrangements for mutual defense as to rely on Philippine defense capabilities.

In this connection, the President recalls that the nation’s arrangements with the United States and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization have mainly met the country’s needs, but it is also important to preparedness for a nation to show its willingness to fight for the cause it believes in.

That is why he states the Philippines has responded to the request for assistance from South Vietnam, not only because the national security is “clearly involved” in the outcome of the Vietnam war, but also because this nation is obliged to “stand for freedom” in the crucial Vietnam struggle.

A nation’s preparedness depends not only on superiority of military capability, he says but it can mean as well “a moral capacity to endure certain sacrifices to keep the option for liberty open to a neighboring people. This is the stake that we and all free mankind must be kept open to the people of Vietnam. The stakes are valuable enough to command our strongest response and, if necessary, our sacrifice.”

An important mission of the AFP was also underscored by the President when he stressed that his administration will develop and expand the construction aspect of the military effort in nation-building by its participation in civic action projects, such as the construction of roads, bridges and irrigation facilities.

February 28.—INTRODUCING an important innovation in the government, ” President Marcos asks Cabinet members to brief the Development Council, which is composed of himself and congressional leaders of all parties, on the accomplishments of their respective departments.

The briefing lasts the whole day in a small operations room of the Presidential Economic Staff at Arlegui street.

The President announces that the briefings will be held once a month with Cabinet members, heads of economic and social agencies and heads of government lending institutions and corporations to be asked to personally report on the achievements of their offices.

Under the new system, the Development Council submits the reporting Cabinet official to an oral examination on the facts and details of the claimed accomplishments of his office.

The President explains he called for the briefings so that the congressional leaders could scrutinize the activities of the various departments.

He likewise emphasizes that he wanted the Cabinet members to answer questions concerning the operations of their departments with documented figures.

Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrently Secretary of Agriculture, reviews forestry and logging rules, sums up the situation on illegal fishing including the use of dynamite, and notes that logging permits on Mt. Apo in Davao have been cancelled as his department took drastic steps to stop illegal logging.

Lopez also reports on infractions on NAWASA watersheds and on the investigation of alleged irregularities in the purchase of insecticides by the bureau of plant industry.

Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo, the first to report, details the main problems of the public school system, notably the lack of adequate textbooks and classrooms which are at the heart of the perennial school crisis, the need for more vocational and technical schools, and for the 'implementation of the President's policy of disassociating the public school system from partisan politics.

Romulo suggests the establishment of around 25 more vocational schools throughout the country. He proposes the absorption of the Manila Science High School, which is now under the National Science Development Board, by the University of the Philippines, which is in a better position to secure scholarship funds from abroad.

National Economic Council chairman Filemon Rodriguez reports that the main concerns of the NEC at this time are planning, standardization of statistics and the proper administration of foreign aid.

Rodriguez traces the economic stagnation as caused by, among other factors:

1. Sudden decontrol and the subsequent credit restrictions that were imposed to ward off inflation;
2. The squeeze suffered by business and industry;
3. Rampant smuggling; and
4. Over-crowding of the constricted industrial field, resulting in disastrous competition in certain areas.

Chairman Rodriguez outlines a four-year development program encompassing, among others, agriculture, mining, trade and industry and communications. He states that emphasis will be given to agriculture but that this in turn, will generate a corresponding increase in industrial operations serving agricultural needs.

Rice and Corn Administrator Osmundo Mondoñedo reports on the steps being taken by the RCA to avert an artificial rice shortage. He says that if the administration's rice program is implemented early enough, there will be no shortage this year.

Undersecretary of Public Works and Communications Marciano Bautista reports on a crash program of irrigation construction in 49 sites, costing the government some P169.5-million.

On road building, Bautista states that the public works bureau has started on the Manila North and South roads, which are in the process of improvement.

Presidential Assistant on Community Development Ernesto Maceda recommends that small developmental projects should be assigned to the PACD for implementation. He explains that his agency had completed 850 kilometers of feeder roads at a cost of P2.5-million which normally will have cost P5.6-million but was accomplished at minimum expense because labor was provided on a self-help basis.

He reports that the PACD installed irrigation systems at a cost of P1.1-million instead of the expected P3.1-million for the same reason.

Recommending a bigger budget for the PACD, Maceda points out that rural people usually get discouraged when materials for projects they are undertaking are delayed for lack of funds.

Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez reports that current indications show that the anti-smuggling campaign is gaining headway, notably because of the fact that tax collection has increased by P40 to P50-million.

Secretary Romualdez recommends, among others:

- 1) Revision of tax exemption laws which have caused losses in government revenue amounting to from P30 to P40-million annually.
- 2) Review of specific taxes with the view to increasing revenue from these sources.
- 3) Re-bracketing of income tax paying groups so as to make people who can afford, pay more; it is estimated that an increase of P50 to P60 million in revenue from these sources can be realized.

Returning to the anti-smuggling drive, Romualdez asserts that 80 per cent of the success of the intensified campaign will depend on effective intelligence work.

In the morning before proceeding to the Development Council meet, the President meets at breakfast with leaders of Congress to assess the defense posture of the Philippines in the light of political developments in Southeast Asia.

In the afternoon, the President takes time off from the meeting of the Development Council and meets at Malacañang Gov. Manuel Barretto of Zambales and Mayor James Gordon of Olongapo.

Meanwhile, President Marcos expresses confidence that “in the verdict of history President Quirino will loom large as a statesman and nation-builder.”

In a message issued on the eve of the 10th death anniversary of the late leader, the President recalls that this country was fortunate that during its difficult years after independence, it had men like Quirino at the helm of government.

President Quirino died on February 29, 1956, a leap year. In non-leap years, however, the Quirino Memorial committee commemorates his death anniversary on March 1.

In his message issued for the occasion, the President states:

“I am glad there is a new perspective on the Quirino years in Malacañang, a new understanding of the vital role he had played, highlighted by his informed appreciation of our immediate problems, by his unswerving commitment to his convictions, and at the root of his actions, by a warm human understanding of our people.”

The text of the President’s message follows:

“As we reflect today on the life and the passing of one of our Presidents, we would do well to remember that we are fortunate in that at the most perilous time of our recent history since ‘independence, we had men at the apex of our government structure ready and highly capable of preserving the continuity of leadership.

“Such a man was President Elpidio Quirino, who stepped into the sudden emptiness of the Presidency, and without breaking stride wielded the leadership that at that time was crucial to our survival as a nation, for we were then in the merest infancy of nationhood, and in fact groping for the way forward.

“I am glad that there is a new perspective on the Quirino years in Malacañang, a new understanding of the vital role he had played, highlighted by his informed appreciation of our immediate problems, by his unswerving commitment to his convictions, and at the root of his actions, by a warm human understanding of our people.

“I am confident that in the verdict of history, President Quirino will loom large as a statesman and nation-builder.”

March 1.— AFTER being briefed on the extent of squatting problem on private and government properties in both urban and rural areas, President Marcos directs Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to organize a committee to study and recommend a solution to the long standing squatter problem plaguing the country.

A special report submitted to the President reveals that in Baguio City alone, 2,500 squatters have invaded places like Quirino Hill, portions of the Bureau of Plant Industry and Forbes Park.

The report underscores the biggest stumbling block to the squatter problem in Baguio City, which is the official attitude, described as “leniency bordering on tolerance on the part of the authorities concerned.” It adds that the support “of some city officials” given to the squatters have emboldened the latter to the point that even court orders for ejectment and demolition of illegal construction have failed to oust these people who are the source of a grave social problem.

In the morning, the President together with the First Lady,—Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, lead the nation in commemorating the 10th death anniversary of former President Elpidio Quirino.

The First Couple leaves Malacañang at 7:40 a.m. for the San Antonio Church in Forbes Park where a special mass is celebrated in memory of the former Chief Executive.

The President orders a detail of honor guards under Lt. Pedro Marquez Jr., of the Presidential Guard Battalion to keep vigil at the Quirino tomb in the South Cemetery.

Back at Malacañang about 9:30 a.m., the President meets the Council of Leaders to hear the report of Ambassador Modesto Farolan on his special mission to Jakarta.

The council meeting lasts up to 1:05 p.m., forcing the President to postpone his scheduled joint meeting with the Citizen’ Action in the Philippines Against Smuggling (CAPAS) and the Presidential Anti-Smuggling Committee for 10:00 a.m. the following day.

Following less than an hour’s rest during which he had lunch, the President proceeds to the Presidential Economic Staff building on Arlegui street where he attends another meeting of the Development Council.

The Development Council started meeting the other day to assess the present state of government affairs and the projected programs of various government offices.

During the briefing, the President directs the heads of the different financing institutions of the government to coordinate policies on loans to conform with the government basic policies on economic development and to submit a report on approved loans. The President wants the” loans received by the boards of the lending institutions and his economic staff.

The President also suspends all appointments to the Nacida Bank, following the report that the bank is in dire financial straits. NEC Chairman Marcelo Balatbat slates that the bank should either be closed or revitalized with financial assistance.

The President points out that the bank “cannot be left hanging,” and therefore its problems should be studied with a view to solving them.

On tax collection, legislative leaders at the briefing observe that the increase in revenue collection as reported by the BIR and the bureau of customs are not imperative.

GSIS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario and DBP Chairman Gregorio Licaroz inform the council that the chiefs of the different lending institutions of the government had already organized a committee and in a recent meeting discussed the redemption of treasury bills within the year to help local industries, the gearing of loans to the capacity of each financing institution to give, and the establishment of priorities.

The President directed that the four primary lending agencies of the government—the DBP, PNB, SSS and GSIS—submit a list of all approved loans to date. The directive was prompted by Del Rosario's observation that the commitments of the GSIS have swelled beyond the capacity of the agency to meet. Senator Puyat has made the same observation earlier.

Del Rosario reports that the GSIS has commitments that total some P500 million to date. He states that one of the things they would like to clarify is the question of priorities and loans for private homeowners. He wanted a common policy.

Senator Gil Puyat asks whether the GSIS could discern any element of politics in certain loans and Del Rosario said that there were indeed such kind of loans. However, he adds even so, some of these loans are still bankable on the basis of collaterals.

Licaroz says that the committee agreed to formulate a way to screen loans already "filed as well as those already approved but still pending implementation.

He states that the lending institutions will coordinate in determining the viability and conditions of industries applying for loans before the same are granted, to prevent loss including loss of the opportunity to channel resources to more profitable ventures that would help in the development of the country's economy.

The President stresses that financing agencies should observe the timing and injection of capital in the economy, and that studies should be made on the effects of these loans, especially in relations to inflation.

Reporting on the Social Security System, Labor Secretary Emilio Espinosa says that the SSS has P65.2 million available for financing schemes, including refund of treasury notes.

He admits that not all the members of the SSS are paying premiums which, he said, is due to lack of field personnel to make collections.

The SSS, Espinosa points out, collects from P4 million to P10 million every month. Monthly collections should be about P14 million if all members pay according to schedule.

In granting loans to industries, Puyat suggests that this must not be limited to industries in distress, but also to deserving ones which are in a position to expand.

The Senator also states that emphasis should be given not only to small loans but also to those industries which had initial releases so that they may be able to proceed as projected.

Back at Malacañang in the afternoon, the President receives the credentials of Ambassador Gustaf Harald Edelstam, the new envoy of Sweden to the Philippines.

During the ceremony, the President observes that the Philippines and Sweden are linked by a common aspiration for peace.

“It is for this reason that I am particularly pleased to receive You Excellency at this moment when the present world situation requires that all peoples band together in a common effort to prevent the further deterioration of international order in this region,” the President states.

The Chief Executive expresses the hope that the Philippines will find in Sweden “a ready and willing partner in the achievement of our mutual desire for increased commercial and economic cooperation.”

Ambassador Edelstam is the second envoy to present his credentials to President Marcos. The first is Ambassador Marco Aurelio Lino Benitez of Argentina who presented his papers at Malacañang last Feb. 10.

In both presentation ceremonies, the President Speaks in Pilipino and uses basi, a native Ilocano beverage, as ceremonial wine in the exchange of toast with the two envoys.

Ambassador Edelstam assures the President that the Royal Swedish government is “looking forward to increasingly keen commercial and otherwise economic intercourse between our two peoples.”

He likewise conveys to the President “the sincere wishes of His Majesty the King of Sweden, my August Sovereign, for the fulfillment of your high mission, for your welfare and happiness and for the prosperity of the Philippines.”

The new Swedish diplomatic representative to this country has been in the foreign service of his government for the last 36 years. He has served in Rome, Berlin, Oslo, the Hague, Warsaw, Vienna and Istanbul. He succeeds Baron Louise de Geer who had been recalled to the home office for reassignment after completing more than three years of duty in this country.

Following the presentation ceremonies, the President administers the oath of office to former Undersecretary of Finance Placido L. Mapa, Jr. as director-general of the Presidential Economic Staff.

March 2.—MEETING for the first time in conference leaders of civic and business organizations who group themselves into (CAPAS) Citizens’ Action in the Philippines Against Smuggling, President Marcos calls on them to help ferret out government officials and personnel who are tolerating smuggling in any form so that he could take stern action against them.

The CAPAS is formed in response to the President’s appeal for active citizen participation in the anti-smuggling campaign.

At the meeting, the President assures the CAPAS that the drive against smuggling will continue under his administration for as long as smuggling exists.

The President tells the members present to call to his attention any diminution of the campaign and to inform him if the organization discovers any public officials engaged in or tolerating smuggling.

During the meeting, the CAPAS submits a list of recommendations on buttressing the campaign.

Notable among the recommendation are:

1. Creation of an anti-smuggling commission to operate on a global scale, under the agencies of the United Nations.
2. Creation of a special team to check on sidewalk vendors and other retail sellers of cigarettes, with an eye to ferreting out blue seal cigarettes or keeping them out of circulation.
3. Conduct a nationwide information and education drive, particularly in schools, on the evils of smuggling.

4. Make Jolo, Sulu a free port of entry.
5. Unremitting follow-up of goods in the bureau of customs and misdeclaration of goods.
6. Stricter measures to balk bribery.
7. Stricter issuance of diplomatic passports, often used by smugglers who succeed in getting these special papers.

The Chief Executive lauds the interest and concern shown by the private sector in the government anti-smuggling drive, saying that CAP AS can help considerably in fielding a vast information campaign, doing intelligence work, and in a person-to-person campaign to enlighten the people on the urgent need to deny themselves the use of contraband.

He states that while the progress of the anti-smuggling drive is encouraging, no substantial gains have been made in the form of increased government income.

The government drive, he points out, has not fully gone into high gear because it takes time to organize the machinery, assess the situation and determine the policies.

President Marcos discloses that the government campaign is being conducted on several levels, one of which is from the viewpoint of the national security. He stresses that this approach is based on verified reports that subversive elements are encouraging the perpetuation of smuggling.

During the meeting the President likewise:

- 1) Appoints former Secretary of National Defense Alejo Santos as government liaison officer with the CAP AS, and Col. Simeon Medalla of the CAPAS as counterpart liaison.
- 2) Approves identification cards for CAPAS members to give them access to government offices.

In this connection, he asks CAPAS members to contact police agencies, including the NBI and the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency whenever they have information to pass on to the government.

Aurelio Periquet Jr., president of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce, and CAPAS member, recommends the following measures:

- 1 Reforms in tariff policy to make existing duties and taxes more realistic and to remove the inducement or profit motive for smugglers;
- 2) Strengthening of the administrative machinery charged with the curbing of illegal trade practices and intensification of the police drive against smugglers;
- 3) More comprehensive reforms in existing economic policies with a view to making the climate for business and new investment favorable and providing more powerful incentives for productive and other desirable enterprises.

Expressing appreciation for the various recommendations, the President says he will examine them for purposes of implementation.

Among the CAPAS members present are Mrs. Concepcion Martelino of the National Federation of Women's Clubs of the Philippines, Ricardo Bonilla and Judge Antonio Quirino of Lions International, Col. Jose Barredo of Rotary Club, Roberto G. Garcia of the Philippine Association _ of National Advertisers, Buenaventura Lopez of the Kiwanis Club of Manila, Tomas B. Cabrias of the Philippine Government Employees Association, Geronimo

Cuadra of the Labor for Better Government, Macapanton Abas of the National Union of Students, UP, Jesus Perlas, Jr. of the Manila Jaycees, and Mrs. Josefina Phodaca Ambrosio of the Civic Assembly of Women of the Philippines.

Representing the public sector are Undersecretary of National Defense Manuel Syquiao, AFP Chief of Staff Ernesto Mata, PC Chief Brig. Gen. Segundo Velasco, Commodore Felix Apolinario, Undersecretary of Finance Juan Ponce Enrile, Jr., Commissioner of Customs Jacinto Gavino, BIR Commissioner Misael Vera, NICA Chief Ismael Lapuz, and former Secretary of National Defense Alejo Santos.

In the afternoon, the President and Mrs. Marcos leads high government officials, military brass and members of the diplomatic corps in welcoming Prime Minister and Mrs. Thamon Kittikachorn of Thailand.

The Thai couple, here on an official visit, arrives at the Manila International Airport exactly 5:15 p.m.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, meet Prime Minister Kittikachorn and his lady at the foot of the plane's ramp as they alighted from the jetliner which flew them in from Canberra. The Philippine Armed Forces renders military honors as 21-guns boomed in salute to the Thai Prime Minister.

President Marcos and Prime Minister Kittikachorn together troop the line of the AFP honor guard, after which the President introduces his guests to the members of the diplomatic corps and government officials participating in the welcome ceremonies at the airport.

Following the airport ceremonies, the two heads of state then boards an open convertible, while their ladies rides together in another car, as they headed a long motorcade to Malacañang. The route from the airport through Manila is thronged with cheering people. The motorcade arrives at the Palace 6:40 p.m.

Upon arrival at the Palace, Prime Minister and Mrs. Kittikachorn sign the Malacañang guest book. The Prime Minister then introduces to President and Mrs. Marcos the members of his entourage.

The hosts and honored guests spend some moments at the Palace music room, exchanging amenities while having refreshments.

Afterwards, the guests repair to the guesthouse across the Pasig River.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady tender a state dinner in honor of Premier and Madame Kittikachorn at Malacañang.

Among those present are ranking officials of the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the government and members of the diplomatic corps.

In remarks at the state dinner, President Marcos and Prime Minister Kittikachorn pledge strengthened and continuing Philippine-Thailand friendship.

The text of President Marcos remarks in an exchange of toast at the state dinner follows: Mr.- Prime Minister, my friends:

“On behalf of the Filipino people, I welcome you to my country. We are proud and deeply honored by your presence. We fervently hope that your stay in this country will be both pleasant and fruitful. Your acceptance of my invitation to visit us once again demonstrates the long and most cordial relationships between our two peoples.

“We are happy to recall the state visit in this country in July 1963, made by Their Majesties the King and Queen of Thailand. My people were captivated by their charm and their visit indeed went a long way in fostering the brotherly ties of our peoples.

“A study of Asian history shows that the Thais and Filipinos, along with other peoples of the Malay stock, have had prolonged and friendly contacts long before Western civilization set foot in Asia. Thus, a Filipino historian wrote that in 1521 Magellan landed in Mactan, one of the first foreigners he met in Cebu was a Thai trader already doing business in this country. Beginning in the 16th century, however, Western colonizers came to Asia and imposed their civilization. In due time, differences in life and practices arose among the Malay peoples. Among the Malays today, only Thailand has retained the purity of her Asian heritage because she had never been the colony of any Western power.

“Mr. Prime Minister, we are therefore proud to have you as the representative of a free, happy and independent people whom we still consider our Malay brothers.

“I consider your visit at this time doubly significant because the whole of Southeast Asia is seething in ferment and the peace not only of the region but of the whole world hangs in the balance. We are now faced with a common and ruthless enemy. And that enemy threatens not only the two countries but the free world as well. We have to be more vigilant and to adopt a firmer determination to annihilate the enemy if we are to protect the freedom, the peace and happiness of our peoples.

“I therefore take this opportunity to call upon Thailand to join the Philippines in sounding out a call for unity of all freedom-loving peoples in the common struggle against Communism. Mr. Prime Minister, may your presence With us now serve not only to strengthen the cordial relations of our country and peoples but it will inspire us to greater efforts to promote their common purposes and to contribute to the peace, property and happiness of all mankind.”

Response of Prime Minister Kittikachorn to the President’s remarks at the state dinner follows:

Mr. President, Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen:

“I thank you for your kind words of welcome. My visit to the Philippines has been made possible through your kind invitation, which it has been my privilege and honour to accept, and for which we are very grateful. I am very happy to be here in Manila, and in coming to your country, I bring to Your Excellency and to the people of the Philippines, the greetings and sincere good wishes from the people of Thailand. Allow me also, Mr. President, to take this opportunity to offer you once again our heartfelt congratulations upon your election to the highest and most honourable office in your country. Under your wise leadership and guidance, I am sure the Philippines will continue to enjoy stability and even greater progress.

“The relationship between our two countries has always been close and cordial as it has been one of long standing. Indeed, it is recorded that as early as the Sixteenth’s Century, one of our Kings sent two elephants as a gift to the Philippines, and, as Your Excellency recalled, there was a Thai trader already doing business in this country in 1521. Some fifty years ago, Thai students came to enroll in various universities here, and since then there has been a steady flow of Thai youth who have come to pursue their studies in many fields. Now, with the signing of the Convention of University Equivalences in September of last year, there will be more exchanges of students and scholars, thus creating, at is were, a two-way traffic between Educational Centres of the two countries.

“Mr. President, our two nations are bound together less by the uniformity of our ideas as by the similarity of our ideals and aspirations. As pointed out by Your Excellency, the friendly relations between our two countries, which are based on the solid foundation of our common membership in SEATO and our practical co-operation in the Economic and Cultural fields within the framework of ASA, have been further enhanced by the State Visit of Their Majesties the King and Queen of Thailand in 1963. Our participation in the collective defense arrangements clearly reflects our unshakable determination to face our common enemy, and to join with others in resisting Communist aggression and to foil Communist expansionist attempts and thus ensure our peoples the long lasting prospect of peace and tranquility. At the same time, we also seek to promote the cultural, social and economic well-being of our peoples. In the pursuit of their common goal, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand founded in 1961, the Association of Southeast Asia, which represents a first step towards joining endeavors in bringing about the economic, social and cultural advancement of our respective countries. The beginning in the right direction has been made, and now it remains for us to give a new vitality and impetus to our Association, to uphold the principles embodied in the Bangkok Declaration, and finally to build an Asian society which will reflect our traditional Asian heritage as well as the progressive and forward looking stimulus of our modern age. In this undertaking, the Thai nation is gratified to associate itself with the sister nation of the Philippines and to cooperate with it for the mutual benefits of our respective peoples.

“I now have the honour to propose a toast to the health and happiness of His Excellency the President and the First Lady, to the continued progress and prosperity of the Philippine nation and to the ever-lasting friendship between the Republic of the Philippines and Thailand.”

Following the dinner reception, the state guests are treated to a musical program which included numbers by the Bayanihan dance troupe.

March 3.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the cancellation of all pasture leases on Mount Samat in Bataan which will be preserved as a national shrine in permanent commemoration of the gallant stand of Filipino-American troops against the Japanese invasion forces in 1942.

To be named “Dambana Ng Kagitingan” (Altar of Valor), the shrine will have as its nucleus a giant steel cross on the mountain peak and a chapel at its base. The steel cross will be bare and unadorned except for a system of illumination which will make it visible for miles around, including as far as Manila.

In his desire to have the foundations of the cross laid during this year’s observance of Bataan Day on April 9, the President directs the Engineer Corps of the Armed Forces of the Philippines to prepare the plans for the memorial and the bureau of forestry to undertake reforestation work in the area.

The shrine is a personal project of the President who fought in Bataan and was among those captured by the Japanese after superior enemy strength finally overrun the defenders.

The Chief Executive limits his callers this day in order to attend to more pressing matters of state, among which is the proposed 10th Year reparations schedule.

The President discusses the schedule with Chairman Filemen Rodriguez of the National Economic Council, Public Works Secretary-designate Antonio Raquiza, Acting Secretary of Public Works and Communications Marciano Bautista, former Senator Eulogio Balao who is chief of the Reparations Mission in Tokyo, and Reparations Commissioner Gregorio Abad.

A draft of the proposed reparations schedule was submitted to the President the other week by Rodriguez, Bautista and Abad.

The President bares a plan to channel a major portion of reparations payments to government projects designed to boost agricultural productions.

In the morning, the President motors to the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club for a round of golf with visiting Thai Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman and Senators Lorenzo Tañada and Gerardo Roxas.

Meantime, the President receives Gen. Ernesto Mata, Armed Forces chief of staff, who reports that the AFP is making studies and preparations for sending an engineer-construction battalion to Vietnam in accordance with the Chief Executive's instructions.

The Armed Forces chief of staff, impresses upon the President that the AFP has never considered sending a regiment, contrary to a statement attributed to Undersecretary of Defense Alfonso Arellano.

The chief of staff states that upon instructions of the President, the AFP started studies on the preparations for the sending of a force consisting of 123 officers and 1707 men, or a total force of 1830 personnel, broken down as follows:

Headquarters and headquarters personnel: 28 officers and 110 enlisted men; engineer-construction personnel: 34 officers and 708 enlisted men; security force: 32 officers and 664 enlisted men; logistical support: 12 officers and 155 enlisted men; station hospital: 17 officers and 70 enlisted men.

The AFP chief also informs the President that in his conversation with Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano the latter denied having testified that the aid to Vietnam force is regimental-size.

March 4.—UPON learning that government offices follow different procedures on procurement of supplies and materials, the President directs the standardization of procedures in this aspect of operations by national government offices, including government-owned or controlled corporations.

The President orders Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez and OEC Chairman Constancio Castaneda to submit within two weeks a uniform system which must be implemented by government offices and corporations.

In another memorandum, the President asks Secretary Romualdez to coordinate the activities of the mayors of Manila and suburban cities and the President's Anti-Smuggling Committee "in order that our anti-smuggling drive may be prosecuted without let-up," and to submit progress reports.

Earlier, in a series of conferences he had with city executive, the President rallies them, to providing total support to the Administration's drive against smuggling.

At the same time, the President appoints Antonio Menor as general manager of the National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority. Menor, who is formerly engineering manager of the water firm, succeeds Jesus G. Perlas who was detailed as technical assistant to the President on public works.

Menor a career man has been with the firm since 1938, starting as assistant sanitary engineer. He is a graduate of the Illinois Institute of Technology where he obtained both his bachelor's and master of science degrees in civil engineering.

In the morning, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, receive Prime Minister and Madame Thanom Kittikachorn of Thailand and members of their entourage, who call at Malacañang to bid them farewell.

During their meeting, the President and the Prime Minister issue a joint communique stating their common aspirations and hopes for their countries:

"The Prime Minister of Thailand visited the Philippines from March 2 to March 4, at the invitation of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

"Meeting in the atmosphere of utmost cordiality and fraternal understanding, the President and the Prime Minister reviewed together, and exchanged views on, a number of subjects of mutual interest to them.

“Animated by a strong desire to continue and expand mutually beneficial endeavors for the advancement of the wellbeing of their peoples, the President and the Prime Minister agreed to further strengthen their collective efforts in regional cooperation through such economic and cultural cooperative organizations as the Association of Southeast Asia.

“Both emphasized the need for peace and stability in Southeast Asia and expressed the hope that closer cooperation among like-minded nations of the area would enable their countries to devote their efforts and resources to achieving greater progress and prosperity,

Following a review of the existing conditions in Southeast Asia, the President and the Prime Minister reaffirmed their common ideal of a free way of life, their common desire for peaceful settlement of international disputes, and the common aspiration of the peoples to fully enjoy the blessings of the twentieth century civilization.

In the afternoon, the First Couple motors to the Manila International Airport where they saw off Prime Minister and Madame Kittikachorn who left home following a two-day official visit here.

March 5 —MOTORING to Valenzuela, Bulacan early today, the President makes an on-the-spot survey of the progress made on the construction of the 29-kilometer Manila North Diversion road and observes at work the army engineers who have been thrown into the construction.

His visit to the construction site also marks the advent of his program to use armed forces engineering battalions in the construction of public highways.

Leaving Malacañang at 8:30 a.m., he is accompanied by Rep. Antonio Raquiza, Secretary of Public Works designate; Defense Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano, and General Ernesto Mala, AFP chief of staff.

At Canumay, Valenzuela, the President is briefed on the progress of the work and problems facing early completion of the project, by Colonel Pacifico Cabrera, chief of the AFP engineering corps.

Following the survey, the President returns direct to Malacañang where he confers with Rep. Raquiza and acting Secretary of Public Works Bautista.

At the meeting, the President orders that work on both Manila North and the Manila South Roads be done simultaneously and stepped up in order to complete them before the rainy season.

The President likewise issues the following orders:

1. Secretary of Public Works designate Raquiza, to expedite acquisition of lands for the highway, either by outright purchase through negotiations with private owners or by expropriation proceedings.
2. Undersecretary Arellano and Gen. Mata, to mobilize more heavy equipment in order that the armed forces engineer construction battalion could speed up completion of the project.
3. Both Defense and public works officials to prepare their recommendations and requests for the release of the funds needed for the project.

Following the conference, the President receives J. Howard Edmondson and Dan Kavanaugh of the Metropolitan Construction Company in the United States who inform him of their firm's readiness to engage in public works projects, including waterworks construction.

The President welcomes their plan and advises them to confer with officials of the Public Works Department and NAWASA Chairman Florencio Moreno to determine in what aspects of public works they could engage in, as well as the terms of their entry into public works construction here.

In the afternoon, the President meets Philippine Ambassador to Burma Benjamin Tirona who reports on conditions obtaining in his post. Tirona arrived recently for consultations with the home office.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady attend a reunion of the UP Law Class 1939 held at the residence of Land Registration Commissioner Antonio Noblejas.

March 6.—RE-STATING his commitment to the protection of press freedom in his speech at the traditional “Gridiron” show of the National Press Club of the Philippines, President Marcos pays high tribute to the role the Philippine press plays in the “preservation of our democracy” and vows that the commitment of his administration to press freedom “will grow deeper with time.

In his brief remarks, the President points out that as Chief Executive he was under a solemn oath to uphold the Constitution, which guarantees freedom of speech and of the press as mainstay of civil rights

“But,” the President cautions, “I seek to uphold press freedom, as President, not only because this is a constitutional mandate; I honestly believe press freedom is essential to good government.”

He likewise underscores the role of the Philippine press in the crusade for good government.

Highlights of the “Gridiron” show held at the Club’s Bulwagan Plaridel are the speech of the President, skits presented by members of the NPC and the induction by the President of the newly-elected NPC officers.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, hear mass at the Palace chapel before motoring to the NPC building for the affair.

Earlier, the President and the First Lady tender a luncheon at the Malacañang Banquet Hall in honor of visiting American astronauts Walter Schirra, Jr. and Frank Borman on whom the President confers the Philippine “for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of Legion of Honor (rank of commander), outstanding service to humanity,” and the rating of Honorary Command Pilots of the Philippine Air Force.

The First Lady pins the PAF silver wings on the American astronauts. She is assisted by Brig. Gen. Hans Menzi, senior military aide who reads the orders rating Schirra and Borman honorary PAF command Pilots. The two astronauts present to the President a framed color photograph of Gemini 6 and Gemini 7 in their historic orbital rendezvous. The President also receives a framed miniature Philippine Flag with this inscription: “This flag was carried aboard Gemini 6 when it performed man’s first space rendezvous on Dec. 14, 1965 with Gemini 7.”

March 7.—ISSUING a memorandum making it a strict requirement to have government officials’ luggages inspected by the Customs, the President revokes completely an unwritten law that exempted these officials travelling on diplomatic or special passports from customs examinations.

The memorandum order, addressed to the Secretary of Finance and the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and “all concerned,” stated that “effective immediately, all Philippine government officials leaving for, or returning from, official or unofficial trips abroad, and irrespective of whether they hold diplomatic or special passports, shall automatically open their luggage for inspection” by customs personnel.

The President points out that the order is linked to the current intensified anti smuggling drive of the government, wherein he feels government officials must “set the example.”

He opines that the public will cooperate “wholeheartedly in our anti-smuggling campaign as long as they can see that those of us who run the government are the very first ones to follow the law.”

He also stresses that there must be “strict compliance,” with his directive, and that no government official “shall be exempted.”

In the morning, the President addresses a special convocation at the University of Santo Tomas in connection with its 355th founding anniversary, thus becoming the first Philippine President since President Quezon to attend that institution's anniversary celebration.

Arriving at the university campus at 7:25 a.m. to be received by some 5,000 cheering students, the President accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, is accorded military honors by a UST ROTC honor company and then proceeds to the Santissimo Rosario Chapel to hear a faculty High Mass.

Following the Mass, the First Couple is led to the nearby auditorium where the convocation is held.

In his remarks, the President underscores the importance of two separate sectors of education, the private schools system as represented by the venerable Santo Tomas University, and vocational school training as administered by the government.

Assuring continued government sympathy and support in expanding the private schools' role in education, the President tells a special convocation at the UST, that private education is important to the country's progress and development.

The President points out that the Philippines could not have progressed as it had, had it not been for private educational institutions like the UST, which help the government provide education for the youth.

"IMAGINE a government without private universities to help it, a Philippines with a national government but without the aid of private universities," the President states.

The Chief Executive takes cognizance of the contribution of the UST by saying it is a landmark and a monument to the noble task of moulding the mind of the youth.

President Marcos states that the history of the UST could well be the history of the Philippines because the UST has been the cradle of intellectualism, producing such national heroes as Rizal and Mabini.

The President expresses confidence that the UST will continue to play a greater role in meeting the challenges of the times, particularly in supporting the execution of laws and policies of the government.

Following his address the President proclaims Tuesday (March 8) a special holiday at the UST before returning to Malacañang.

In another message to educators, read by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, the President tells the convention of vocational school superintendents that the long-standing problems of these institutions must be solved at this time when vocationally trained manpower is badly needed in the economic development of the country.

The President tells the superintendents that they have two important tasks: one to give proper recognition to the value of vocational training in the development of Philippine economy; and, two) to meet the responsibility of utilizing the resources at hand in the most efficient manner.

He explains that these two tasks are urgent because of the high unemployment rate of vocational school graduates, which indicated substandard training.

To achieve the "full potentials" of vocational education, the superintendents must play fuller roles, the President says, such that they will be able to integrate the "definition and orientation" of such schools "with the objectives of economic growth."

In this manner, he points out, the vocational schools can accomplish "more than the singular purpose of developing our human resources," by also helping in the "acceleration of social development."

In the afternoon, the President meets members of the Mutual Defense Board to assess the overall defense posture of the country.

Following the meeting, the President confers with officials of the National Economic Council, the Reparations Commission and the Department of Public Works, on the proposed 10th and 11th Year reparations schedules.

March 8.—THE Chief Executive signs the Rice and Corn Bill which provides greater incentives to rice and corn production and the necessary safeguards to protect the government and the public interests.

In another move, to give impetus to the administration's rice-sufficiency program, the President certifies to Congress a bill authorizing the Chief Executive to borrow money from the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development and other International financing institutions to finance an expanded program of irrigation development.

The President directs the Rice and Corn Administration to implement the cereal law immediately, shortly after he had signed it into law.

The new measure amends Republic Act 3452, and is primarily a price stabilization measure. It is the first bill signed into law by President Marcos and is one of the bills he had certified to the special session of Congress earlier.

In firming up rice and corn prices, the law also gives the farmer better prices for his harvest thus augmenting his production capital.

With the signing of the bill into law, the Rice and Corn Administration will now be able to purchase buffer stocks to ensure the stability of the price of rice and corn during the months when these commodities are in short supply.

Under the new law, the R.C.A. will buy a cavan weighing 46 kilos of clean and dry palay of ordinary variety "at prices to be determined by the board of administrators for the various rice-producing regions, taking into consideration the varying costs of production obtaining therein, which prices shall not be less than P16.00."

A cavan of corn weighing 56 kilos shall be bought at "prices to be determined by the board of administrators for the various corn producing regions taking into considerations the varying costs of production obtaining therein, which prices shall not be less than P13.00."

The measure signals the start of the first phase of the administration's rice and corn self-sufficiency program.

Besides fixing the floor price for the purchase of palay and corn by the R.C.A., the new law also:

1. Provides a system of payments to enable farmers tenants, growers, producers and landowners to dispose of their produce at fair prices immediately.

Under the new system the farmers depositing their palay or corn in a bonded warehouse designated by the RCA shall be issued a warehouse receipt or quedan, which may be cashed immediately at RCA designated banks.

2. Fixes the selling price of rice thus purchased by the R.C.A. at prices to be determined by the board of administrators which "shall not be less than P1.00 nor more than P1.40 per ganta and not less than P0.40 nor more than P0.80 for corn grits or P0.30 per kilo for corn grain."

3. Clarifies the existing provisions of law regulating the importation of rice by the R.C.A. either by direct government-to-government importation or through private parties.

At the same time, President Marcos orders Philippine diplomatic and consular officials to help stop technical smuggling by exercising tighter control over the pricing of imports, in a memorandum addressed to the secretary of foreign affairs.

The President underscores the need for eliminating technical smuggling, which has robbed the government of enormous revenues through undervaluation and spawned graft and corruption in the customs and consular services.

The President pledges his full support and backing of consular officials and employees who fulfill their responsibilities “faithfully and well,” which was interpreted as assurance of Malacañang’s determination to lift the terrific pressures exerted by powerful interests on consular officials, in behalf of technical smugglers.

In his memorandum, the President declares that underpricing of imports has also resulted in “unfair competition” with local products, and urged the officials concerned to stop the malpractice which he said has persisted despite the administration’s all-out drive against smuggling.

“I have been reliably informed that one of the main sources of graft and corruption in our consular offices abroad is underpricing of imported goods and that this malady still persists even with the advent of our new administration and in spite of our assurance that we will conduct our anti-smuggling drive without let-up,” the President says.

Technical smuggling, which involves mostly textile goods, has cost the government more in unpaid revenues than the smuggling cigarettes, according to Malacañang. The President’s memorandum was issued with this consideration in view, he notes.

The President’s directive urges the secretary of foreign affairs to ask Philippine consulates to stop immediately the underpricing of imports, “otherwise, I shall take drastic steps against the officials and employees concerned.”

In the morning, the President receives Vice Admiral John J. Hyland, commander of the U.S. Seventh Fleet, who pays his respects following his arrival today.

During his call on the Chief Executive, the commander of the world’s mightiest naval fleet, takes occasion to allay fears about the calls here on US nuclear-powered naval vessels.

Admiral Hyland explains that American nuclear-powered ships “are just like any other man-of-war,” they are only more modern and efficient.

“We hope our friends here will recognize that these ships are safe,” Hyland states. “They just represent a new generation of ships.”

Hyland tells the President of the stepped-up pace of Seventh Fleet operations and its increasing striking power, with the periodic augmentation of the vessels, composing the fleet. He, however, points out that while his command has been kept busy by the war in Vietnam, they are not overlooking their missions in other areas of responsibility.

Following Hyland’s call, the President receives Lord Rhodes, Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade of England, who likewise pays him a courtesy call following his arrival for a two-day stay.

During the call of Lord Rhodes, the President and the British official exchange views on economic development and the prospects of foreign investments in the country.

At the close of the meeting, the British officials expresses the hope that the President will succeed in realizing the country’s hope for industrialization, in a way that will fit into the pattern of the country’s economy.

In the afternoon, the President receives Philippine Ambassador to Israel Emilio Bejasa and the members of the “Conscience Bloc” in Congress led by Rep. Benjamin Ligot of Cagayan.

March 9.—THE President meets at breakfast with the officers and members of the Radio-TV Federation of the Philippines.

In brief remarks, the President reiterates that his administration is committed to the enhancement of the freedom of expression, saying that the power of speech is better abused than curtailed.

He, however, cautions against irresponsibility in the use of the media because, he states, if there is anything that will wreck them, it is lack of credibility.

Following the breakfast reception, the President receives the members of the board of directors of the American Chamber of Commerce, who call to pay their respects.

The organization offers its help in any undertaking of the President which could appropriately utilize the chamber's services.

The Chief Executive discusses the Administration's anti-smuggling campaign, and asks the American Business leaders for their recommendations on how to improve the services of the Bureau of Customs.

President Marcos states that the administration hopes to completely reorganize the revenue-collecting agency of the government, and that he will appreciate any recommendation that will help the government attain this objective.

In the afternoon, the President meets Ambassador Phan Dang Lom of South Vietnam.

Then, the President confer with local officials on problems affecting their respective constituents.

In the evening, the President receives the officers of the Bus Operators Association of the Philippines (BOAP) who take up with him what they called "destructive competition" in the transportation business in Manila and suburbs.

President's Week in Review: March 10-31, 1966

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

March 10.—THE President discusses the improvement of air navigational facilities in the country with Director Nilo de Guia of the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

In his meeting with the President, the CAA director proposes the amendment of the Civil Aviation Law, with a view to creating a commission that will supervise and coordinate the functions of the CAA and the Civil Aeronautics Board, for more efficiency, economy and professionalism in the civil aviation agencies of the government.

Director De Guia also petitions the return of the Balagbag airport which, he states, has been used since its turn-over to the Philippine Air Force in 1942.

At the same time, the President approves the rules recommended by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos governing the travel of Filipino citizens to Communist countries. The Department of Foreign Affairs immediately issues passports to Senator Maria Kalaw-Katigbak and her party of 13 others who are slated to leave for Rod China.

The passports of Filipino citizens authorized to travel to Communist countries or communist-controlled territories, as recommended by the Secretary of Foreign Affairs and approved by the President, will bear the following statement:

(a) "The holder of this passport has complied with all prescribed regulations governing travel to all accessible countries of the world."

(b) "This cancels the limitations stamped on page of this passport."

The Chief Executive also signs a proclamation declaring March 17 of each year as "Ramon Magsaysay Memorial Day," beginning this year.

The day, however, is not a holiday, in line with the President's policy to minimize the proclamation of special public holidays.

In his proclamation, the President notes that March 17, the date when the late President Magsaysay perished in a plane crash in 1957, "will be remembered in history as the day when the Filipino nation and the entire free world lost one of her most beloved leaders."

The President decrees that observance of the day include the flying at half-mast of all Philippine flags here and abroad, the firing of 21-gun salutes at high noon in all Philippine military areas, and the holding of 30-minute programs in all public schools and government offices in which the Magsaysay Credo shall be read and a one-minute silent prayer be said.

In proclaiming the day, the President points out that Ramon Magsaysay, in his lifetime:

1. "Devoted himself unselfishly to improving the lot of the humble and the poor of his countrymen;
2. "Earned the gratitude of the Filipino people by bridging the centuries old gap between the government and the people and making the concept of government for the people a working reality; and
3. "Strengthened the cause of freedom and liberty not only for the Filipino people but for the entire free world by his valiant and unrelenting crusade against the enemies of democracy."

In the morning, the President receives the officers of the Philippine Council of Science and Technology headed by Lucio Javier, president.

The Council officers offer the services of the Council members in the administration's economic development projects.

In the evening the Chief Executive receives Philippine Ambassador to South Vietnam Luis Moreno Salcedo, Monsignor Ignacio Cordero of Laoag City and some 60 officers and members of the Philippine Confederation of Chiefs of Police who pay him their respects following the conclusion of their five-day seminar on law enforcement, and discuss police matters with the President, especially in connection with the Administration's anti-smuggling drive.

During their call, the President orders the nations police chiefs to coordinate efforts and intensify operations against crime and syndicate, particularly the anti-smuggling campaign.

The group presents the President a resolution requesting the proclamation of a Police Week.

The President states that he will consider the resolution favorably, and will issue the proclamation as soon as the presidential adviser on police matters decides on a feasible period during the year for the observance of Police Week.

President Marcos says that one of the chief problem of the nation today is the high incidence of crime which has, in many places, restarted economic progress, for economic development, lie point- out, must be based on a stable condition of peace and order.

He recalls that in his inaugural address, he had singled out lawlessness as one of the priority considerations of the administration. He states that he is determined to stamp out crime, and will do so if every element of the communities of the nation help, and with the police in the vanguard of the drive.

He stresses, "I will pursue the drive through all of the three years and 10 months remaining of my administration,"

He tells the police chiefs that smuggling has corrupted certain government sectors, robbed the government of enormous revenues and has mocked the majesty of the law. All the more reason, he states that the police should intensify its efforts to fight smuggling, for the police are sworn to uphold the law.

Monsignor Cordero calls on the President to "share" the honor and his joy at being promoted recently to the Proto Notaria Apostolic Ad Inestar Participantium (the right to exercise the duties of a Bishop, to say Pontifical Mass, to administer Consummation, and to wear the episcopal insignia short of the Baculum, the Bishop's cane).

Meanwhile, President Marcos, according to Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, is readying a bill which will junk the pork barrel system and in its place allocate P1,500 of each barrio of the country for self-help community projects.

The Palace spokesman says that the President will soon certify the measure to Congress.

The proposed bill seeks to redeem a promise made by President Marcos during the presidential campaign that he will do away with the pork barrel system.

In eliminating the system, the President expects to eliminate as well the pernicious practices connected with pork barrel, such as the partisan nature of allocations, which often gave legislators of the ruling majority a greater portion than those in the minority.

The pork barrel system had also been characterized by the President as wasteful for the funds acquired from the pork barrel are often dissipated in other non-productive work projects.

The new method of allocation of the fund will assure every barrio in the country of at least the sum of P1,500 to finance self-help projects. In the old system, there are many deserving barrios which did not get a single centavo from the pork barrel.

In proposing the elimination of the pork barrel as such, the President hopes to enable all 33,000 barrios of the country to get an equal share of the fund.

March 11.—FLYING to the Subic Naval Base in Olongapo, Zambales, aboard a US Marine helicopter, President Marcos receives two patrol boats given by the United States for the Philippine Navy, under the Mutual Defense Pact.

The President is accompanied by ranking officials of the executive and legislative departments, including foreign affairs and defense officers.

Before the ceremonies, the President and his party are guests aboard the USS Enterprise, a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier of the Seventh Fleet, now in Subic Bay.

He expresses appreciation for the two patrol boats, which will be used primarily by the Philippine Navy in the anti-smuggling drive.

The President states: "These ships represent not only the sentiments of the United States, but actual material help in our smuggling drive, which aid is indeed needed by us, for smuggling has eroded the industrial base of our economy, has undermined the morale of the people, and corrupted officialdom."

The patrol boats, called Swiftcraft, are shallow draft aluminum hulled boats that can navigate in shallow waters, with a maximum speed of 30 miles an hour, and are equipped with the latest-radar and radio devices, a twin 50caliber machinegun mount and a complement of Armalite rifles. Each will be manned by a crew of one officer and five enlisted men.

In his brief remarks, the President also emphasizes the alliance between the two countries for mutual defense and in support of freedom. He says, "I have said before, and I repeat, the Philippines will fight wherever free men fight for freedom, and as you are now fighting in South Vietnam, so will we fight alongside you."

The President is impressed with the USS Enterprise and the capabilities of the Subic Naval Base, saying that the power-packed aircraft carrier and base have "given me confidence that the United States will help defend the territorial integrity of the Philippines."

He also points out that the world today is watching "the partnership between the United States and the Philippines" and that the "arsenal" in the base is demonstrative of the reality of the partnership, and that this partnership will live "not only in my generation, but for generations to come."

He declares: "It is my hope and prayer that this arsenal will never be needed in defense of our homeland". He adds that if the Philippines is however attacked, he is confident that the "United States will come to the aid of our country and people immediately."

Following the ceremonies, the President proceeds to the Navy Officers Conference Room where he is given a 30-minute briefing by Admiral Baer.

Admiral Baer informs the President that with the shift of the theater of operations of the Seventh Fleet from the Japan Sea to South Vietnam, the activities of the US Navy at Subic have intensified because of the proximity of the U.S. naval base to the theater of operations.

He states that there is an acute housing shortage at the base and that he has been encouraging Filipino construction firms to put up housing units in Olongapo to take care of navy personnel who cannot be accommodated at the base. He points out that with the Subic based navy personnel spending $10 million monthly, and the men of the Seventh Fleet spending $13 million, Olongapo has become a very progressive town.

Back in Malacañang shortly before noon, the President receives some members of Congress and local leaders who consult him on problems of their constituents.

In the afternoon, the President meets superintendents of vocational schools from all over the country led by Atty. Andres R. Asistin, and a delegation from the Civic Assembly of Women of the Philippines.

March 12— OBSERVING that Philippine student have increasingly become outspoken on public issues and thus can be a force in shaping public opinion, the President endorses to the Department of Education, the proposal of the Citizens Action in the Philippines Against Smuggling (CAPAS), to enlist students in mass rallies against the evils of smuggling on Bataan Day.

In a memorandum to Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo, the President asks that students of all public and private schools participate in rallies jointly with other groups, including labor, women's clubs, industrial and commercial aggregations.

The President says he agrees with the CAPAs that "on April 9, Bataan Day simultaneous mass rallies be held in all cities and towns throughout the country" at which smuggling in all its forms will be discussed and revealed as destructive to the economy and to law and order.

He opines that students, and even the younger school children, should develop civic consciousness and participate in the government war against smuggling.

The idea of enlisting student support was broached to the President by CAPAS Chairman Simeon Medalla, who suggested to the President that during Bataan Day "something positive and constructive must be done by our people to combat a nationwide malady."

In the afternoon, the President confers behind closed doors with top foreign affairs and armed forces officials on the latest developments in Southeast Asia, particularly in Indonesia.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, are honored guests at a black tie dinner tendered by the Philippine Military Academy Alumni Association, at the Philamlife social hall on United Nations Avenue.

In his brief after-dinner remarks the President lauds the armed services as a "stabilizing force in Philippine institution."

The President states that the military had on several occasions in the past the opportunity to take over the reins of government, but "that it did not do so was a tribute to its fidelity to Philippine institutions."

He also underscores the exemplary behavior of the armed forces during Philippine elections, when the services maintained the neutrality expected of them.

The President, however, deplores the tendency of some military officers to discuss in public matters that relate to the national security.

He states that if officers are compelled to discuss sensitive topics that touch on the security of the nation, they should put their views in -writing and submit their plans, ideas and recommendations to the proper authorities.

The President stresses that these matters will be studied seriously and given due consideration.

The standing policies of the government, he underscores, are continually being reassessed in relation to the shift in national and international events.

Thus, he says, the government is now studying the merits of diversionary trade in appreciation of needs of the economy, and again he points to the revised policy on travel to communist countries, which was relaxed recently.

March 13.—THE Chief Executive devotes his time going over a number of official papers that needed his immediate attention, then takes time relaxation to prime himself for an expected busy week ahead.

The President then resumes work with some Palace aides in his private study in the afternoon and part of the evening, acting on several state papers with “priority” stubs.

In the morning, the President motores to the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club for a round of golf, after finishing another week of taxing governmental business.

March 14.—EXPRESSING deep concern over the recurrent violence in the Muntinglupa prisons and stressing the need for improvements of living conditions there, the President directs the Department of Justice to devise ways of easing congestion at the national penitentiary in Muntinglupa, Rizal.

The President issues the directive in a meeting with Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee. In this connection, the President also issues a series of directives seeking:

- 1) The preparation of a dispersal plan, whereby prisoners would be transferred to other penal colonies in order to reduce, if not avoid, congestion at the Muntinglupa prisons; and
- 2) Submission of periodic reports on conditions obtaining at the national penitentiary.

At the same time, the President directs Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez to investigate the participation of Makati Maximo Estrella in the near-violence at the South Harbor two days ago, in connection with a labor dispute.

The President asks Secretary Romualdez to submit a report on the matter within 48 hours, and Mayor Estrella to submit a statement presenting his side of the affair.

In the morning, the President, receives Gov. Harold E. Hughes of Iowa, head of the 1966 Iowa Trade Mission to the Philippines.

Gov. Hughes informs the President that the Iowa Trade Mission hopes to foster trade and other economic ties between the Philippines and the state of Iowa.

The President on his part, informs Gov. Hughes that his administration is giving special emphasis to the development of agriculture to ensure food sufficiency.

He states that he had launched programs to increase rice and corn production.

Following the call of Gov. Hughes, the President discusses plans for the expansion of the Philippine Air Lines, with Benigno Toda, Jr., chairman of the PAL board.

Expansion plans include the acquisition of additional units of modern aircrafts and the construction of P30-million domestic air terminal.

Toda explains that the present domestic terminal has become too small to handle even present air traffic, and that provisions must be made for the expanding domestic air traffic which will grow bigger in the next 10 to 15 years.

In the afternoon, the President receives delegations from the Confederation of Rice and Corn Association of the Philippines and the Farmers Cooperatives in Northern Luzon.

The Confederation presents the President with a plaque of appreciation for his “vigorous rice and corn production program to insure sufficiency in food,” and “for his wisdom in giving the confederation the opportunity to participate in the formation of national policies regarding the rice and corn industry.”

March 15.—PRESIDENT Marcos meets members of the Senate on the ratification of the Philippine-Japanese treaty of amity, commerce and navigation and, after ranging over the entire treaty, decides to extend the discussions to another conference in Malacañang tentatively set for Thursday next week.

The conference is “purely consultative,” with the President and the senators exchanging views on the pros and cons relative to the provisions of the treaty.

From the talks, a general outline of the draft of official thinking on the treaty is seen emerging with three possible avenues presenting themselves for serious consideration.

One is the proposal of the President for protective legislation that will balance certain apparent inequities that might result from the treaty, pertaining to trade and commerce.

These safeguards will satisfy the objections of certain sectors who see one-sided advantages to the Japanese in the matters of immigration permanent residence and export and import privileges. It is feared (that these advantages might not be equally available to Filipinos intending to do business in Japan.

The second proposal is for the Philippines Security and Exchange Commission to give permits to Japanese businessmen to operate normally in this country. At present, Japanese business work through Filipino agents, and therefore are not liable for payment of Philippine business and other taxes. Through this method of operation, it is only Japan who profits from the taxes imposed on Japanese entrepreneurs doing business here.

The third proposal is for the Philippines to conclude only a pact of friendship and amity, with trade and navigation to be considered later. The aim of this move is to expedite normalization of relations.

Immediately after the conference on the PI-Japanese treaty, the President confers at luncheon with some NP Senators, and work on official papers in the afternoon.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, attend the traditional dinner given in their honor by Speaker Cornelio T. Villareal and members of the Lower House and their ladies, at the Manila Hotel.

March 16.—THE Chief Executive directs the Reparations Commission to include in the 10th year and 11th year schedules of reparations payments, sizeable allocations for pre-fabricated public school buildings.

The greater portion of the government share in the payments will go to the construction of irrigation systems, bridges and roads, which are deemed essential to the success of the administration's rice production program.

The directive is issued during the conference with public works and reparations officials at Malacañang.

At the same time, the President also orders Gen. Ernesto Mata, AFP chief of staff, to use confiscated logs in Bataan for the construction of prefabricated school buildings.

In his directive to Gen. Mata, he asks the armed forces and the Bureau of Forestry to coordinate efforts in procuring the logs impounded by the bureau in Moron, Bataan.

The logs were impounded by the forestry bureau following the President's order to cancel all permits for logging concessions in Bataan. These logs are believed to have been cut only recently, in violation of the order.

The President orders Gen. Mata to assign an army engineer construction battalion to prepare the logs for use in the construction of school buildings.

The Chief Executive likewise authorizes the Quezon Memorial Circle Development and Beautification Committee to conduct a national educational and fund campaign during the period from March 16 to June 17 this year.

In a proclamation released by Malacañang the President observes that the Quezon Memorial Circle in Quezon City aims to perpetuate the memory of a great leader who devoted his lifetime to the attainment of Philippine independence and the welfare of his people."

Stressing that the civic project undertaken by the committee to beautify the circle deserves the wholehearted support of all segments of the community, the President calls upon all citizens and residents of the country to assist in the drive.

In the afternoon, the President receives Major General Yitzak Rabin, chief of staff of the armed forces of Israel, who pays his respects following his arrival on four-day goodwill visit here.

During his call, Gen. Rabin presents the President with a sub-machinegun invented by the Israelites while still under the British rule, and fully illustrated history of Israel entitled "Use of the Biblical World." The Israeli General states that the historical work in four volumes is the result of a long study and research by archeologists.

In the evening, the President receives a delegation from the Philippine College of Surgeons headed by Dr. Romeo Gustilo, president. The group calls on the President to inform him that their organization is volunteering for service in South Vietnam.

The President also issues a statement relative to reports in certain sections of the press that infiltration of foreign agents into the country have increased to the extent of clandestine use of radio communications and airstrips.

The President's statement follows:

"I have no idea how these reports came about. While I am officially informed on infiltration of foreign agents, their activities are not at all widespread nor alarming.

"The proper safeguards against such infiltration have been in force at all times, and the Armed Forces have the situation well under control. The safeguards are considered sufficient for the time being and every change in the situation is being, and will be, properly met.

"I wish to particularly specify that I have made no statement on supposed clandestine radio transmitters being operated here by any foreign elements, Chinese or Indonesian communists.

"Lastly, I wish to correct the impression that the government has deferred or sought to delay the normalization of relations between this country and Malaysia, because of current developments in Indonesia, or for other extraneous considerations.

"The machinery for the restoration of normal relations with Malaysia is moving smoothly, with due consideration given to our friendly relations with other nations in this region."

Meantime, President Marcos says that the sudden death of President Ramon Magsaysay in a tragic plane crash nine years ago was grieved by the people not only as the passing of a President but also of a friend and brother.

In a message issued on the eve of Magsaysay's ninth death anniversary, the President recalls that the late Chief Executive had provided his people with new hope and determination "at a time when we needed these qualities to reaffirm our belief in our future and our destiny as a nation."

The President had previously proclaimed March 17 of every year as "Ramon Magsaysay Memorial Day," beginning this year. It is emphasized, however, the day is not a holiday in accordance with the President's policy to minimize the proclamation of special public holidays.

The text of the President's message for the occasion follows:

"The people of the Philippines need no reminder to honor the memory of the late President Ramon Magsaysay, who died nine years ago today, in a tragic accident that shocked and stunned the country.

"His death was felt by our people in a rare personal way, as though his loss was a family matter for great many Filipinos. His sudden demise was grieved not only as the passing of a President but as of a friend and brother vanished. Such was the man Magsaysay that he identified with everyone of us, giving us new hope, strength, spirit, and determination at a time when we needed these qualities to reaffirm our belief in our future and our destiny as a nation.

"We can remember him best, therefore, by reasserting the virtues that made him an exemplary man and leader, making these virtues ours as a people, in order that we may move forward once more and with greater vigor toward the noble goals he had envisioned, which were no less than, in sum, the fulfillment of the dream of greatness of our nation and race."

March 17.—MOVING swiftly in the wake of irregularities brought to his attention, President Marcos orders the complete revamp of the Philippine Constabulary Criminal Investigation Service (CIS) —relieving both the chief and deputy chief of the agency, and all of its other key officers.

The Chief Executive issues the order completely overhauling the agency during an hour-long conference with Undersecretaries of National Defense Alfonso Arellano and Manuel Syquiao and Gen. Segundo Velasco, P.O. Chief, at Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City.

The presidential action is triggered off by revelations made by Senator Alejandro Almendras in a Senate privilege speech. Going direct to Camp Aguinaldo unannounced the Chief Executive convenes defense and PC brass behind closed doors.

The President likewise orders the immediate termination of the services of six women and one male CIS special agents and investigators, and the investigation of two regular women agents and investigators. In addition, he orders the outright relief of all enlisted men working in the Vice and Narcotics Section and the suspension of all agents who have pending police cases.

The President, before motoring to Camp Aguinaldo, coolers with Sen. Almendras following his expose the other night in a privilege speech on the employment of women CIS agents of alleged questionable reputations.

Following the conference with Sen. Almendras, the President states.

"I am constrained to take instant action, not only because of the seriousness of the irregularities, but because I want the CIS which is the highest investigative body of the armed forces, to be above suspicion.

“Indeed, I want the entire armed forces to be above any suspicion, for it can do its work effectively only if it enjoys full public confidence. That is why even as Undersecretary Arellano delves deeper into the case of the CIS, I feel necessary to relieve immediately all the ranking officers of the CIS, who have command responsibility for this venality.”

During the meeting with PC top brass at Camp Aguinaldo, the President issues the following directives:

1) The immediate relief and redeployment of Col. Robustiano Javier, chief of the CIS, Lt. Col. Daniel Lantion, deputy chief; and Col. Jose de Jose, PC comptroller.

The President names Col. Felizardo Tanabe, who is now deputy commander of the first PC zone and commanding the “Tamaraw” unit, chief of the CIS in place of Javier.

2) Outright relief and redeployment of the following CIS officers: Lt. Col. Mariano Ordonez, chief, Special Operations Branch; Major Rafael Yapdiangco, chief, Police Intelligence Branch; Colonel Benjamin Santiago, chief, Investigation Branch; Captain Ramiro Aragon, chief, Personnel Branch; Capt Calicano Luansing, chief, Service Operations; and Major Eusebio Hernandez, chief, Administrative Service.

3) Relief and redeployment of all other staff members of the Vice and Narcotics Section, including all the enlisted men.

4) Suspension of all agents with pending police cases, with instructions to Undersecretaries Arellano and Syquiao and General Velasco to expedite investigation of their cases.

5) Immediate termination of the services of six women and one male special agents and investigators.

6) Investigation of two women regular agents and investigators whom the President asked to be suspended as soon as the appropriate charges are filed against them.

At the same time, the President also: revives the Consultative Council of Students, which was first conceived by the late President Magsaysay; and signs a proclamation declaring Friday (March 18) as Liberation Day on the Island of Panay, to mark the 21st anniversary of the landing of American liberation forces at Tigbauan Beach, Iloilo.

In a memorandum circular issued through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, the President states that the reactivation of the Council will involve Filipino youth more actively in the program of the administration, and likewise honor the memory of the late President (Magsaysay).

The president explains that the Council will coordinate with the government the participation of students in the anti-smuggling drive, the Vietnam civic assistance project, the rice and corn sufficiency program, community development renewal, reforestation, cottage industries, tourism development and other allied activities. The Council will also provide public information service “for better understanding by the youth of government policies.”

In the morning, the President leads the nation in honoring the memory of the late President Magsaysay on the occasion of his ninth death anniversary this day by attending the kickoff of the national fund campaign for, and ground-breaking ceremonies of, the Ramon Magsaysay Center at Plaza Militar, Malate district. The President and the First Lady, Imelda R. Marcos, also send a wreath to the tomb of the late Chief Executive at the Manila North Cemetery.

Back in Malacañang, the President receives Monico Naganoma, director of the Iwai and Company, Ltd. In Tokyo, who pays him a courtesy call.

The President spends the rest of the afternoon and the evening in the seclusion of his private study working on voluminous state papers.

Meantime, President Marcos reiterates the government stand that Philippine aid to South Vietnam is dictated only by the national interest, and not by other reasons.

The Chief Executive issues the statement in direct answer to doubts raised by some critics as to the motivations of the aid to Vietnam proposal.

The President stresses that Philippine aid to the South Vietnamese government is in the form of an engineer construction battalion "because this is the wise and proper assistance to extend, in the government's estimate."

Commenting further on the proposition that the government give the public intimate details on the proposed assistance to South Vietnam, the President points out:

"It must be emphasized that any more details given out than already made public will become a matter of intelligence information. This cannot be done for this information is classified."

March 18.—ARRIVING in Baguio City this afternoon, the President reveals he will allocate $3 million from the 10th year reparations schedule from Japan for the improvement of the water system of this city.

The Chief Executive bare this plan during a conference with Mayor Norberto de Guzman who headed city officials in welcoming the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, shortly afternoon today.

The President is here for his annual spiritual retreat at the Sunnyside Villa run by the Society of the Divine Word Fathers, near the presidential summer residence in this city.

Accompanied by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Presidential Assistant on Community Development Ernesto Maceda and other officials and their wives, the President and the First Lady board a special train at Tutuban Railroad Station early this morning.

Passing by Dagupan City about 9:30 a.m., the President is surprised to find a huge crowd waiting for his train and clamoring for a brief stopover with them. The President obliges and the train backs to the station. He and the First Lady then alight down among the people shaking hands, to the delight of the cheering throng.

Arriving at the Damortis Railroad Station in La Union about 11 a.m., the presidential party motors the rest of the way to the Pines City. The President arrives at the Guest House at 12: 35 p.m.

In the evening, the President enters the retreat house at 6 p.m. and is scheduled to stay until Sunday morning.

March 19.—THE Chief Executive orders the outright suspension of four employees of the Bureau of Internal Revenue caught smoking smuggled cigarettes at their offices.

The four BIR employees were caught red-handed by National Bureau of Investigation agents, smoking "blue-seal" cigarettes right in their offices, and subsequently found to have packages of the contraband in their possession.

The President views the acts of the four employees more reprehensible in View of their being with the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which is one of the agencies primarily concerned with the enforcement of tax and anti-smuggling laws.

The mere unexplained possession of articles subject to specific tax, the tax on which has not been paid in accordance with law, is punishable under Republic Act No. 4097.

Section 174 of the said Act provides that:

“Any person who is found in possession of articles subject to specific tax, the tax on which has not been paid in accordance with law, or any person who is found in possession of articles which are exempt from specific tax other than those the same is lawfully issued shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten times the amount of the specific tax due on the articles found but not less than two hundred pesos nor more than five thousand pesos, and by imprisonment of from four months and one day to four years and two months.

The President completes his first day at the Divine World Retreat House at the Sunnyside Villa in this city this day.

Among those with the President on spiritual retreat here are other ranking officials of the Executive and Legislative departments of the government.

He is expected to come out from the Retreat House- about noon tomorrow, in time to attend this year's graduation exercises of the Philippine Military Academy at Camp del Pilar at 3 p.m., as guest speaker.

March 20.— LEAVING the Retreat House at the Sunnyside Villa of the Divine Word Fathers at Baguio City, the President motors direct to the Mansion House to fetch the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos for the graduation rites of the PMA at Fort Del Pilar.

Upon arrival at Fort Del Pilar, the First Couple are given military honors including a 21-gun salute and a parade and review by the Philippine Military Academy cadets.

In an extemporaneous remark which lasted 20- minutes, the President declares that his decision to send troops to Vietnam is motivated by his belief that collective security was the nation's primary defense and “our only hope for survival in the region.”

The President says that the survival of nations, big or small, depended on collective security.

The proposal to send an engineer construction battalion to help in Vietnam, the President states, is part of the “overall plan for the security and defense of the Philippines.”

The Chief Executive says that the Philippines must depend on collective security for its survival. He explains that strength alone could not guarantee security days.

“More than ever, all nations, whether big or small, must have support of the great majority of humanity in order to make his ideology prevail,” the President opines.

Security, he says, meant collective effort. He adds “Anyone who turn his back on collective security is neither a realist nor an idealist.”

He discloses he will ask for a 30-percent increase in the strength of the Armed Forces of the Philippines to meet the requirements of collective defense and his plan to let the AFP engage in Civic action work.

The President warns the new batch of PMA graduates that the country's security was in danger from external aggression and subversion. He asks the cadets, who were commissioned second lieutenants in the AFP to discharge their duties with the greatest responsibility.

The Chief Executive also tells the cadets that they must not only be soldiers but also statesmen. He says soldiery was the last line of defense of the country's statesmen and diplomats.

But it is the need for more effective collective security arrangements that the President emphasized. He cautions that without an effective regional arrangement against Communism the Philippines and other Asian countries, would always be in danger.

After addressing the PMA graduates, the President and the First Lady proceed back to Mansion House where they tender a dinner for officials of both the Executive and Legislative departments who were with the Chief in spiritual retreat.

March 21.—IN an informal talk with newsmen aboard the presidential train enroute to Manila from San Fernando, La Union, the President expresses concern over the precarious condition of water supply facilities and appeals to the public to fully cooperate in conserving water.

The President discusses the National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority problems and projects, as well as problems of the Philippine National Railway and reforestation with Senator Gaudencio E. Antonino, PACD Chairman Ernesto Maceda and PNR General Manager Alfredo M. Santos.

He asks the people to “give more thought” to the conservation of water at this time of the year when water supply is expected to depress because of the summer season when rain is infrequent.

The President’s concern over the water supply ‘in the Greater Manila Area sparked by reports that the water level at NAWASA reservoirs had dipped down to about 70 meters at present. This is mainly due to the consistently rainless months since December.

He also directs the NAWASA to speed up its aqueducts construction and other projects designed to improve the water supply of Manila and environs. Among these projects are the Ipo-Bicti tunnel, the Bicti-Novaliches aqueduct, the Novaliches-Balara aqueduct, all of which the President wants completed by Oct. 1, this year.

The Chief Executive discloses that he had directed a re-study of the P35-million Marikina multi-purpose dam, with the view to converting it into a multi-complex single-purpose dam in order to make it serve as soon as possible the people of Greater Manila, as a source of water.

The dam was originally conceived to provide hydroelectric power, water supply, irrigation, and food control. The present project is to make it principally a source of water and to generate electricity from small hydro-electric plant.

Under present plans the project will be a joint undertaking of the NAWASA, Department of Public Works, and the National Power Corporation, for the NAWASA alone.

The President also discusses with:

1. PNR chairman Santos the rehabilitation of the government railway firm. He states the main problems of the rail firm are management and lack of financing. He asks Santos to expedite the P4-million loan from the Philippine National Bank, earmarked for the purchase of spare parts.
2. Sen. Antonino and Maceda of the PACD, the problem of reforestation, which he felt is urgent. He indicated that he will soon call a meeting of log exporters, particularly to take up the long export fee.
3. PACD Chief Maceda and two other officials, the coordination of plans and efforts of government agencies in the tasks of developing the rural areas, to improve the living and economic conditions of the people there.

Returning to Manila from Baguio City where he went into annual spiritual retreat, and later addressed this year’s graduates of the Philippine Military Academy in Fort Del Pilar, the President addresses the opening of the Northern Luzon Athletic Association meet at San Fernando, La Union this morning.

The President leaves Baguio City for San Fernando at 7:40 a.m. and is met at Burgos, the border town of La Union by a large delegation headed by local and school officials. Then he is escorted to the athletic field, at the head of a kilometer-long motorcade, where the opening ceremonies are held.

In the evening, the President confines himself to his study, working on state papers up to past midnight.

Meanwhile, President Marcos pays tribute to Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo as “one of the ‘imperishable names’ in Philippine history, whose leadership and devotion to the cause of the revolution produced the first modern democracy in Asia.

In a message on the eve of Aguinaldo’s 97th birth anniversary, the President states:

“Gen Emilio Aguinaldo, the first President of the Republic, is one of the imperishable names in our history. In him were reposed all the great hopes of the Revolution, and let it be said that he proved true to his trust, and thus brought forth the first’ modern democracy in Asia.

“He was a man of great conviction as well as of great heart, and he wielded leadership with a confidence and strength that arose from a total devotion to this cause, which was also the cause of the Filipino people of his time, and today.

March 22.—MOTORING to La Mesa Dam and reservoir in Novaliches for an on-the-spot assessment of the water situation, the President orders the NAWASA to mobilize all its resources in order to relieve the crisis including “drastic” measures designed to keep the water supply adequate for the needs of the Manila area and suburbs.

After viewing the depleted state of the reservoir, the President issues the following directives to the water firm:

- 1) Rush the construction of the water supply phase of the Angat multipurpose dam.
- 2) Request the United States Air Force at Clark Air Base, to lend appropriate aircraft for the task of rain-making. The US 13th air force has offered its facilities.
- 3) Activate emergency crews to seal leaks in major water mains underground, and to intensify the campaign against illegal connections.
- 4) Install more water pipes, on an emergency basis, as needed to increase the water supply, with purchase of pipes to be expedited even if public bidding must be dispensed with.
- 5) Rush completion of the water supply and distribution phases of the agency’s crash program which will assure 300 million gallons daily, again even without bidding on materials needed, in view of the crisis.

He also directed the Bureau of Forestry to intensify operations in preserving and improving watersheds.

The President shows deep concern over the water crisis which has fallen to 67, just one meter short of 66 meters, which would necessitate pumping. The reading as of this day, according to NAWASA, 69.10 meters at La Mesa Dam.

President Marcos is the first Chief Executive to conduct a personal survey of La Mesa dam, a trip compelled by the sense of urgency that he felt over the water crisis, the worst in five years.

At the same time, the President directs the various executive departments concerned with the prosecution of the relentless administration campaign against smuggling to submit to him progress reports on March 30.

In the same directive, the President asks the secretaries of foreign affairs, finance, justice and agriculture, and the undersecretaries of national defense, to meet him at 10 a.m. on April 1 to assess the success of the anti-smuggling campaign.

In their written reports, the President requires:

1. The Secretary of Foreign Affairs to report on the work done by the Philippine consular missions abroad which had been called upon to help stop technical smuggling.
2. The Secretary of Finance to prepare a report on the work done by his department, including those of the Bureau of Customs and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The President directs that the Secretary of Finance draw up a comparison of the volume of luxury goods brought into the country before and after the administration took over last Dec. 30.

The President also asks for a report on the volume of goods from Sabah, Singapore, Macao and Hongkong, which had decreased, and the volume of cigarettes which had been imported legally.

3. The secretary of Justice to report on the work of his department, together with those of the National Bureau of Investigation, Bureau of Immigration, the Solicitor General, the courts and fiscals, on the illegal entry of aliens.

4. The Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources to report on the measures adopted by him to stop overshipment, underpricing and illegal shipment of copra and logs.

5. The Undersecretaries of National Defense to report on the progress of the anti-smuggling campaign undertaken by the Philippine Constabulary and the various arms of the armed forces, including those of the different area and zone commands.

The President wants that the reports specify the steps taken to implement his earlier directives on the prosecution of the anti-smuggling campaign.

Back in Malacañang, the President receives the 27-man Japanese goodwill mission sponsored by the Philippine Society of Japan. Headed by Mamoru Nagano, society president, the Japanese mission expresses to the President the desire of the Japanese people to foster friendly ties with the Filipino people.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, tender a dinner for Ford Foundation representative and Mrs. Harry Case, who attended the launching of the fund campaign for the Ramon Magsaysay Center.

The President also receives the leaders of the Russian scientific expedition who came aboard a Soviet vessel that steamed into the South Harbor last Friday.

The Soviet visitors, who are oceanographers, informed the President that they are studying the “Kuroshio” currents in Philippine waters for the UNESCO.

March 23.—DUE to apparent confusion about bus fares—which has adversely affected regular commuters on the Manila-Quezon City routes, President Marcos asks the Public Service Commission to expedite the solution of the problems attending the hiked fares authorized recently by the agency.

In his communication to the PSC, the President strongly recommended proper action to solve the question once and for all, “in that the public interest will be fully served by public utility conveyance who are in business, in the first place, to render public service.”

The President suggests that the PSC officials meet with bus operators to thresh out the problem and thus end the present confusion on the fares to be charged by bus companies.

He also appeals to shipping companies to accommodate students and low-income groups by giving them special rates after the interisland shipping operators won increased rates from the PSC.

At the same time, the President authorizes the Philippine National Railways to proceed with the purchase of 10 diesel locomotives to bolster the motive power of the railway firm.

He gives his nod to the acquisition of additional locomotives in an effort to increase the earning capacity of the PNR which suffered losses amounting to about P8-million last year.

The 10 diesel engines will cost some $2-billion, to be guaranteed by the Development Bank of the Philippines.

Then, the President confers with members of the Council for Economic Development (CED) headed by former PIA Director-General and NEC Chairman Sixto Roxas.

The CED members inform the President that businessmen have formed the Council to:

1. Provide the private sector with an integral vehicle for the articulation of its Views on plans and policies for developing the Philippine economy;
2. Offer assistance to the government, where proper, in economic planning, policy formulation and development promotion; and
3. Seek and cultivate among the different groups of the different sectors areas of common interest that would view problems from a national perspective and go beyond the specific interest of any particular trade, business or profession, and take the necessary action in cultivating these common areas of interest.

In the morning, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, receive at breakfast visiting Argentinian Foreign Minister and Mrs. Miguel Angel Zavala Ortiz.

Following the reception, the President meets with the members of the House Committee on Appropriation to study the feasibility of submitting a supplementary budget for P74-million for the maintenance of schools and hospitals all over the country, and for the consideration of Congress.

In the afternoon, the President receives Sen. Maria Kalaw-Katigbak who had returned the other day from a 10-day trip to Red China.

During her call Sen. Katigbak shows to the President samples of Red Chinese literature in English—books, magazines, posters, and pamphlets, including five volumes of the selected works of Mao Tse Tung. The Senator from Batangas also submits to the President an English transcription of the three-and-a-half-hour conference of the Katigbak party of 11-Filipinos with Vice Premier and External Affairs Minister Chen Yi.

March 24—FOLLOWING officials controversy on the dual positions of certain elective officials—which had sparked opposing views from Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo and Commissioner Abelurdo Subido of the Civil Service Commission, the president asks the officials appointed to executive positions to choose between the two posts now hold by them.

The President decides to leave the mailers to the officials concerned in view of the position taken by majority party leaders on the inadvisability of holding these controversial positions.

In a letter addressed to the said officials, the President states: “Our party leaders” have insisted on the policy that “elective officials should not be appointed to other positions in the government, even on a part-time basis.”

He sets a limit for the officials to make a choice, emphasizing that if no answer is received by him within that period, he will infer that the elective official concerned “would rather remain in the position to which you were duly elected by the people.”

At the same time, President Marcos certifies to Congress the necessity of immediate enactment of bills seeking to allocate P1,500 to each of the 33,000 barrios for self-help public improvement community projects.

The Chief Executive certifies the bills to boost his program to help improve living conditions in rural communities. These bills certified by the President are House Bill No. 1618, and Senate Bill No. 134, authored by Rep. Magnolia Antonino and Senator Gaudencio E. Antonino, respectively.

The measure, among others, provides that such aid shall be spent within 120 days after its receipt, and that within 30 days after such expenditure, the barrio council shall render an accounting and accomplishment report to the auditor general, furnishing copies to the President, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, and the municipal mayor.

In the morning, the President meets anew with members of the Senate on the Philippine-Japanese treaty of amity, commerce and navigation.

At the meeting, the President and members of the senate agrees to legislate safeguards against possible Japanese dominance of the local economy before taking final decision on the ratification of the Philippine-Japan treaty of amity, commerce and navigation.

On this basis, the President certifies to Congress five of the proposed bills. The bills, the enactment of which is also earlier recommended by the panel that negotiated the treaty, had been filed in the House of Representatives by former Speaker Jose B. Laurel Jr., House Minority Floor Leader, and the head of the panel that negotiated the treaty.

The five measures are:

1. An act amending certain provisions of the immigration law to facilitate the entry into the country of international traders and investors.
2. An act prescribing permanent residence and reciprocity as conditions to qualify foreign nationals to practice their profession or vocation in the Philippines.
3. An act limiting ownership of capital stocks of banking institutions to Filipino citizens and providing certain requirements for foreign banks here.
4. An act amending certain provisions of the tariff and customs code so as to empower the President to impose import quotas and other restrictions to protect domestic industries from serious injury.
5. An act regulating the registration and licensing of corporations or firms controlled by aliens doing business or engaging in economic activity in the Philippines.

The President at the same time, directs the Secretaries of Foreign Affairs, Commerce and Industry, and Justice to study steps that can be taken to further normalize the relations between the Philippines and Japan pending ratification of the treaty.

In the afternoon, the President receives David M. Kennedy and Joel Smith, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the Continental Illinois National Bank; and K. M. Modi, honorary consul general of the Philippines in Bombay, who paid their respects to the Chief Executive.

The banking officials are in town to visit their correspondent bank here, while Consul Modi and his wife are on a tour of Southeast Asia.

The President also receives officials of the Philippine-Chinese Society who requested the President to proclaim 1966 a Philippine-China Friendship Year.

In this connection, the President issues a proclamation declaring the remainder of the year 1966 from March 25, as Philippine-China Friendship Year. He issues the proclamation to promote "close and harmonious social and cultural relations between the Philippines and the Republic of China."

In his proclamation, the President notes the long historical association between the Philippines and China.

Because of cultural and economic ties, the peoples of both countries had enjoyed through the centuries a long standing friendship, the President observes.

In the evening, the Chief Executive confers with NAWASA General Manager Antonio Menor who also submitted to the President a report on steps taken by the water firm to conserve water.

During the conference, the President orders the NAWASA to take steps to relieve the light water situation as he issues the following directive:

1. Follow up immediately the U.S. Embassy offer to lend water-truck from American military bases in the Philippines.
2. Take advantage of the offers made by various business and industrial firms of the use of their water-trucks and other vehicles and facilities for distributing water.
3. Begin pumping water immediately into the reservoirs serving the Greater Manila area.

NAWASA General Manager Menor reports to the President on the following measures taken so far by the water firm in meeting the emergency:

1. Provision for the repair of leaks within 24 hours of detection.
2. Organization of commando teams to detect leaks, coordinate repairs, and report on illegal connections.
3. Solicitation of assistance and cooperation from city and municipal mayors, the harnessing of school officials to help in the drive against waste, along with market masters, fire chiefs, municipal public services and health departments.
4. Made representations for the closing of public swimming pool owners to stop the use of these facilities.
5. Appealed to all citizens to observe economy in the use of water, including in watering lawns and gardens, the immediate repair of leaks in house connections and office building system.
6. Put to maximum use the 64 artesian wells in the greater Manila area, and asked the owners of private wells to open them to the public.
7. Made arrangements for the cooperation effort of the Philippine and US air forces in making artificial rain when conditions warrant.

March 25.—TO forestall a serious denudation of our forest areas and to conserve our valuable timber resources, President Marcos orders the cancellation of all logging concessions within military reservations and in the EDCOR areas.

The President issues the directive in a memorandum to Director Antonio Quejado of the Bureau of Forestry, through the Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

In his order, the President wants Director Quejado to submit to him in a weeks time a list of logging permits canceled according to his instructions.

At the same time, the President takes now steps to preserve watersheds and forest stands as he orders new measures against illegal loggers and kaingeros who have depleted forest reserves and contributed to the water shortage now felt in Manila.

Focusing his attention on watersheds, the President dares Undersecretary of National Defense Manuel Syquiao and Gen. Ernesto Mata AFP chief to:

1. Stop kaingeros from further denuding the NAWASA water, beds in Angat, Bulacan.
2. Seize all illegally cut logs from this area and turn them over to the armed forces for use in the construction of pre-fabricated schoolhouses; and
3. Clear the watershed area of all squatters and prosecute them.

The President points out that the acute water shortage now being felt in Manila and environs is partly the result of the thinned-out watershed in Angat. He has previously observed that the country's depleted forest stands would endanger water supply and cause great floods if not sooner rehabilitated by the government.

In the morning immediately after a breakfast conference with defense reporters at the Malacañang state Banquet hall, the President discusses the creation of seven more engineering construction battalions to undertake missions in civic action projects with Undersecretaries of Defense Alfonso Arellano and Manuel Syquiao, Gen. Pelagio Cruz, former chief of the Reparations Mission to Tokyo; and Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco. The President then meets with the members of the Rice and Corn Coordinating Council on the progress of the food self-sufficiency program.

During the meeting, the President receives favorable reports on the initial phases of the rice and corn production program and at the same time acts on problems facing the program.

Tackling the problems of credit, irrigation and facilities, the President issues the following directives:

To meet the urgent need for irrigation facilities, the National Irrigation Administration is instructed to advance to the Presidential Assistant on Community Development P500,000 from its AID funds to finance communal irrigation projects.

Ernesto Maceda, Presidential Assistant on Community Development, said these communal irrigation projects would be more effective at this stage, while the main irrigation projects are being completed.

2. To meet the cost of the big irrigation construction program, estimated at more than P700 million, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez are instructed to study means to finance the program.
3. To expedite construction, Secretary Romualdez is also instructed to look into the contracts for this job, with an eye to effecting better management and the establishment of a standard procedure for the processing of contracts.

4. To fix priorities, National Irrigation Administrator Tomas de Guzman is instructed to pinpoint irrigation projects needing more immediate attention.

5. To facilitate the use of irrigation pumps by small farmers, the Irrigation Service Unit is instructed to sell its pumps at reduced prices and ease up amortization requirements. The PACD is directed to receive applications and the Irrigation Service Unit to conduct surveys.

6. To control rat infestation in Mindanao and Central Luzon, Dean Dioscoro Umali of the U.P. college of agriculture and Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Manuel Collantes are instructed to follow up assistance offers from the West German and Japanese embassies in the eradication of the rodents.

In the afternoon, the Chief Executive meets labor leaders of the Philippine National Railways who call on him to air the gripes that triggered the strike of the Yard Crow Union headed by Sergio de Leon.

At the meeting, the President authorizes the Development Bank of the Philippines to guarantee a total P14,812,220 foreign credit accommodations to the PNR needed to enable it to embark immediately on its rehabilitation and improvement program, which the President deems essential in the face of the PNR's urgent problems.

Following the meeting, the strikers agree to return to work after the President made arrangements whereby they will be paid their salaries in the amount of P175,000 today, with the rest to be given on Monday.

March 26.— AS reports of rampant cattle-rustling in many areas reaches him, the President directs the armed forces to deploy battalion combat teams if the constabulary needs them for a more effective campaign against cattle-rustling.

The President's directive is embodied in a memorandum he dispatches to Defense Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano.

Cattle-rustling is not only a pernicious crime, the President states, but "it also affects to a considerable extent our program of bringing about rice self-sufficiency in the country."

The constabulary should be augmented by AFP battalion combat teams if needed to cope with the situation, the President says.

In the morning, the President motors to the De La Salle College campus in Green Hills, Mandaluyong, where he attended the investiture of his eight-year-old son, Ferdinand Jr., as a Cub Scout.

Back in Malacañang, the President works on urgent state papers preparatory to leaving for Tacloban City.

In the afternoon, the Chief Executive motors to the Nichols Air Base where he boards the presidential Fokker plane for Tacloban City.

The President arrives Tacloban City at 4:15 p.m. to join in the celebration of "Imelda Day" at the former St. Paul's College in this city.

From the airport, the President proceeds direct to Tolosa, the hometown of the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

March 27.—IN Tacloban City, President Marcos states he welcomes the projected congressional probe of reports that communist agents were behind recent public demonstrations.

The President says that the Executive Office, however, has been undertaking its own investigation of this possible tie-up and that the investigations were still going on.

The Chief Executive points out that although there may have been additional infiltration by foreign agents into the Philippines, there was no cause for alarm as these agents are under constant surveillance by the Government.

Following his conference this morning, with Col. Vicente Raval and PC provincial officials headed by Col. Dominador de los Reyes, the President sits down with local officials to thresh out their problems.

Then, the President joins the people of Leyte particularly-the officials, members of the faculty and the student body of St. Paul's College, in celebrating Imelda Day.

The St Paul College had set apart the day to honor the First Lady as the Leyte educational institution's "most distinguished alumna."

In the evening, the First Couple graces the alumna homecoming affair.

March 28— GIVING the rehabilitation and improvement of the country's irrigation system high priority in public works—because of the prime importance it has in the intensified rice self-sufficiency program, the President issues a memorandum to the Secretary of Public Works and Communications, the Presidential Assistant on Community Development, and the Reparations Commission chairman defining the new policies on the irrigation systems in the country, which, he says will take effect immediately.

The new policies set by the President follow:

1. The National Irrigation Administration shall give first priority to the repair and maintenance of existing irrigation systems, presently servicing 330,000 hectares, which provide irrigation water the whole year round.
2. Irrigation systems which presently irrigate 350,000 hectares only during the rainy season shall be repaired and or reconstructed, to insure that irrigation water is available the whole year round. This shall be second priority.
3. The third priority shall be the completion of irrigation system (a) already started by the present administration, and (hi those initialed by the previous administration but which are now in a state of abandonment.
4. In accordance with the above priorities, the Secretary of Public Works and Communications will submit the revised irrigation program within one week from receipt of the order.
5. Effective April 1, 1966, irrigation fees charged in irrigation systems which provide water throughout the year shall be increased from the current P12 to P60 per hectare.
6. The National Irrigation Administration is directed to reduce its overhead, compatible with economy and efficiency, and insure that its personnel perform their assigned duties and responsibilities and are not assigned elsewhere.
7. The Presidential Assistant on Community Development shall concentrate on the construction of small irrigation units covering less than 1,000 hectares. These units shall be installed in areas where they could have the greatest impact, particularly in places where rice can be heavily produced.
8. For this purpose, there shall be a working coordination between the PACD and the Irrigation Service Units of the Department of Public Works and Communications in the utilization of available ISU pumps.
9. The ISU shall hasten the technical feasibility surveys of areas indicated by the PACD, and
10. PACD may distribute the ISU pumps to the rice farmers even at a lose, at prices compatible with those of locally manufactured pumps.

At the same time, the President orders the closure of nine sawmills, eight of them in Bulacan and one in Dagupan City and the suspension of operations of another for violation of forestry rules and regulations.

The President issues the orders not only to prevent illegal logging but to save Philippine forest preserves and watersheds from complete denudation.

In the morning, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, leave Tacloban City for Manila aboard the Presidential Fokker plane at 9:30 a.m., arriving Malacañang 11:45 a.m.

Back in Malacañang, the President resumes his Palace activities after a weekend trip to Tacloban City where he joins the First Lady who had flown to Leyte on her first homecoming since the last November elections.

In the afternoon, the Chief Executive is inducted as honorary president of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines in ceremonies, held at the Palace Heroes Hall.

In a brief remark during the ceremonies the President points out that the most valuable natural resources of the country are its human resources and that the scouting movement plays a vital role in preventing these resources for future leadership and endowing them with the heroic spirit.

President Marcos is the third head of state to be a boy scout, the others being King Bhumibol of Thailand and King Constantine of Greece. The late President Kennedy was also a boy scout.

Following the ceremonies, the President administer the oath of office to the three officers of the newly-created Anti-Smuggling Action Center (ASAC).

Gen. Pelagio Cruz (ret.), chairman; Brig. Gen. Manuel T. Flores (ret.), vice chairman and chief action officer for the disposal of confiscated smuggled goods; and Col. Uldarico Bacalagon, secretary.

In the evening, the President confers with NAWASA General Manager Antonio Menor, who reports to him on what appears to be the first successful rain-making operations.

In his report to the President, General Manager Menor states that:

1. Over the weekend over 130 leaks in waterpipes in Manila and environs had been repaired.
2. The big leak in the 54-inch main along Magsaysay Avenue had been isolated and controlled.
3. Nine wells had been repaired since last week, and functioning at full capacity.
4. Five purifiers returned by the armed forces are being installed at various water points in Manila and the suburbs.
5. Fire departments of Manila, Quezon City and Caloocan City have been helped in the distribution of water, although better coordination is needed.
6. Pumping at La Mesa Dam continues, with the expectation that the La Mesa Dam supply will last to June 28, delivering 150 million gallons a day from all sources even without rain.
7. Final arrangements are being made for the loan of US air force planes from Clark Field for immediate seeding when conditions are favorable to rainmaking.

March 29.—TO add more power to the Administration's intensified food production rural development programs, President Marcos orders the liberalization of loans and other credit facilities to rice and corn farmers.

In line with the President's efforts to get off the ground his massive rice and corn and rural government programs, various financial institutions of the government moved to widen credit for the farmers, with the following recent moves:

1. Central Bank Gov. Andres Castillo has mobilized resources of the bank to broaden limitations of loans from the Central Bank, and in the process generate about P200 million for loans to rice and corn farmers.
2. The Development Bank of the Philippines set aside P25 million for long-term loans to farmers, with an amortization period of from five to ten years.
3. The Budget Commission, on orders from the President, will release P1.5 million to the bureau of lands for the survey and subdivision of some 140,000 hectares of public lands which will then be apportioned to rice and corn farmers at from four to five hectares each.
4. Director of the Bureau of Lands Nicanor Jorge has readied for distribution to the rice and corn farmers 2,000 titles to public lands, and is set to distribute a total of 40,000 lands and titles by the end of this year.

At the same time, the President takes official notice of two recent incidents involving the Philippine National Railways which have further damaged the prestige of the government rail firm, and asks the PNR management to explain immediately the circumstances behind them.

The President directs PNR General Manager Alfredo M. Santos to report to him on the background and details of the two cases, one involving three young sisters who were molested by drunk-; on a northbound train and a school boy whose legs were run over by a train in Manila.

The Chief Executive, in his directive to the PNR manager, asks that immediate steps be taken to prevent similar incidents occurring on any of the passenger trains of the government rail firm. The President likewise observes that much still has to be done to improve the railway service, both in providing comfort and security to passengers.

In the morning, the President meets the commission on the revision of the code, and its research staff.

At the meeting, the President, in his brief remarks emphasizes the need to update the administrative code so as to provide for administrative machinery more responsive to the demands of modern government and the requirements of national development program.

He recalls that as a congressman, he had already undertaken studies with an eye to proposing the overhaul of the government machinery to give it maximum economy of operation, added efficiency and effectiveness.

The President states he had to give up the project after three terms in the lower house because he realized the enormity of the task which was too much for one man.

He expresses gratification that the work is now being done by talented men, all experts in their respective fields. He adds that the task is monumental one and that future generations of Filipinos would be thankful for the updating of the code.

The group expects to finish its work by December in time for submission to the next regular session of congress.

Then, the President is presented with a silver and brass teapot belonging to the late Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo and acquired by an American sergeant following the surrender of the revolutionary general to the American forces during the Filipino-American War.

The priceless museum piece is turned over to the President by Charles Burrows of California whose father, Sgt. Pinion F. Burrows, came with the Nebraska volunteers to the Philippines in 1808.

Following the call of Burrows, the President receives a delegation representing the Farmers and Laborers Union of Anno, Tarlac who submitted a copy of their petition for expropriation of their respective farm lots.

In the afternoon, the President receives Mrs. Waller II. Glynn, president of the American Legion Auxiliary who arrives earlier for a six-day visit here. She is on a counselling tour of American Legion units around the world.

March 30.—THE Chief Executive orders the Budget Commission to release P3 million to help the bureau of lands implement administration program of distributing public lands to farmers in conjunction with the food self-sufficiency program.

The program envisions the distribution of some 40,000 lots to as many farming families by the end of the year. Part of the funds will be used for the survey and subdivision of some 10,000 hectares of public lands, which will then be allocated in lots from four to five hectares to rice and corn farmers.

Various financial institutions of the government like the Development Bank of the Philippines have also joined the project by liberalizing loans to rice and corn farmers, upon orders of the President.

This new policy on loans and other credit facilities, the Central Bank estimates will need about P200 million cash outlay. The DBP also has set aside 125 million for long-term loans, from five to ten years, to farmers.

In the interim, the President certifies to Congress House Bill No. 1250 setting aside P100 million for the National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority as counterpart fund to the $20.2 million loans of the agency from the World Bank.

The measure which was filed by Rep. Joaquin R. Roces is certified by the President as part of the administration effort to upgrade the water firm and thus eliminate once and for all the recurrent water crisis felt in Manila and nearby communities.

The funds to be made available by the passage of the bill is to be used by the NAWASA to complete its projects which will improve the water and sewerage facilities of Greater Manila.

In the afternoon, the President receives officers of the Radio-TV Federation of the Philippines and the Pan Pacific Surgical Association of the Philippines.

Led by Manuel Lagunsad, chairman, and Leon O. Ty, president, the Radio-TV federation requests for the proclamation of a radio-TV week.

March 31.—MEETING for the second time members of the Development Council, the President assesses the program of the various government projects to discuss means of solving the problems facing them.

During the day-long meeting of the Development Council at the offices of the Presidential Economic Staff on Arlegui, the President hands down the following directives, which squarely meet some of the urgent problems of the food production effort and other economic development projects:

1. The immediate release of P222, 000 for financing the better seed program to ensure availability of improved seeds, when is vital to the success of the rice sufficiency program.
2. Poised a revamp of the bureau of plant industry office directly charged with the development of better seeds.
3. Certified a bill to Congress authorizing the President to borrow some $72 million from the World Bank for the irrigation systems program.

4. Created the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council which will coordinate the implementation of the food production program.

5. Directed Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas and Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras to coordinate with the PACD, Agricultural Credit Administration and the Commission on Agricultural Productivity on informing farmers of the availability of credit for their food production activities as well as disseminating other information on all other phases of the food production program, including fertilizers and better farming techniques.

The President and congressional leaders, who are members of the Development Council, hear reports on the accomplishments and problems of the various executive departments, with focus on the food self-sufficiency program.

Back in Malacañang at 6:15 p.m., the President receives a group of American Tobacco businessmen. The businessmen is accompanied to the Palace by Ralph Nubia who is trying to interest them in the purchase of Philippine Virginia tobacco which has accumulated up to 110 million kilos and has to be disposed of.

In the evening, the Chief Executive confers on the 11th year reparations schedule from Japan with the commissioners of the Reparations Commission led by Chairman Gregorio Abad.

Then the President receives the officials of the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation headed by Chairman Ildefonso Cinco who explains the management side in the labor dispute at the government housing firm.

Meantime, President Marcos proclaims Saturday (April 2), this year, as "Francisco Balagtas Day" throughout the Philippines in commemoration of the birth anniversary of the Prince of Filipino poets.

In proclaiming Balagtas Day, the President points out that it is "fitting and proper to render homage to the great Filipino poet."

Balagtas is the author of Florante at Laura, generally considered an unsurpassed lyrical masterpiece in Pilipino.

Official Week in Review: June 16 — June 30, 1966

June 16.—AFTER considering “the overwhelming reasons of national security, as well as existing government policies in relation to freedom of communications and dissemination of information,” the President decides to place under full government control the operations of the Philippine station of the global satellite communications system.

The President communicates this decision to the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, advising him at the same time to call off all the bids on the project, which was tentatively proposed for private construction and operation.

In taking over the Comsat (Communication Satellite) project, the President specifies that the government will pay the fee of $750,000 for membership in the International Consortium for Satellite Telecommunications (INTELSTAT).

He proposes that this sum be collected from contributions of entities who would use the facilities provided by Comsat.

The President also indicates that he might utilize the reparations for establishing the ground facilities of the project, which he states will “ultimately be paid for by the persons and entities” benefiting from the system.

He directs Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos to ask the committee which he heads, named earlier by the President to take charge of the project, to proceed with the preparations for establishing the Comsat station here in accordance with his decision. The members of the committee are Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez and Chairman Filemon Rodriguez of the National Economic Council.

The President had initiated action on Comsat as early as January this year, stressing the advantages of the communications system which will link the Philippines with 48 countries.

At the same time, the President orders the outright deportation of two Chinese nationals, Chua Liam alias Johnny Chua and Johnny Chua, Jr., who had been found guilty of smuggling activities by the deportation board.

The President direct Brig. Gen. Segundo Velasco, chief of the Philippine Constabulary, and the bureau of immigration to immediately implement his order to expel the two men as undesirable aliens.

Chief Prosecutor Florentino Flor had charged the two Chinese nationals before the deportation board with illegal possession of some 275 cases of untaxed Union cigarettes valued at P137,500, which the government asserted were smuggled into the country. The blue seal cigarettes were found by elements of the Philippine Constabulary in a bodega owned by the Chuas located in barrio Parobatia, Libmanan, Camarines Sur.

President Marcos also directs Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to investigate the smuggling of foreign-bred race horses into the country, and to take drastic administrative action against officials and employees of the Games and Amusement Board responsible.

In his directives to Secretary Salas, the President deplores the smuggling of Australian race horses, made possible by connivance of customs and bureau of animal industry personnel, and passed off as native horses in local races.

The President stresses that the practice has succeeded because of the toleration by the Games and Amusement Board.

Under the law, only the native horses are authorized to run in the races. The harm in this racket, the President states, is that the imported horses are consistent winners and the horse racing fans therefore are victimized. It has likewise resulted in the decline of the once thriving horse-breeding industry in Batangas.

In the morning, the President meets with Chinese rice experts who arrived recently to conduct demonstrations on improved rice production to farmers in Central Luzon.

The seven-man Chinese team, led by Dr. T. H. Shen, chairman of the Joint Commission on Rural Reconstruction in Taipeh, are here under the technical assistance program between the Philippines and Nationalist China. Vice President Fernando Lopez, who visited Taipeh recently, paved the way for early arrival of the Chinese rice production experts.

In the afternoon, the President confers with RCA Chairman Osmundo Mondoñedo and Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Manuel Collantes in connection with the administration plan to import rice and corn.

Meanwhile, the President takes time out to swear in Senior Board Member Verulo Boiser as acting vice-governor of Davao to take the place of former Vice-Governor Paciano Bangoy. Bangoy became governor following the appointment of former Gov. Vicente Duterte as Secretary of General Services.

To succeed Boiser, Mayor Ramon de los Cientos of Bansalan, Davao, is also sworn in by the President.

June 17.—IN a conference with top military officials, President Marcos receives documented confirmation of the Huk affiliations of the five persons killed by operatives of the Philippine Constabulary in Tarlac last June 13.

Undersecretary of National Defense Alfonso Arellano tells the President that the armed forces of the Philippine Constabulary have “overwhelming evidence” showing that the five men whom the PC patrol fought were Huks or Huk sympathizers.

The conference is called by the President to discuss by the dissident problem and to receive the report on skirmish which Tarlac officials sought to be investigated.

During the meeting, the President direct the armed forces and to put into effect and intensify the civic action program which is an integral part of the anti-dissident campaign. The President specially directs the military authorities to coordinate this phase of their campaign with PACD chief Ernesto Maceda, who has been designated as coordinator of the drive, dubbed “Operations Central Luzon.”

The President orders the creation of civilian advisory boards, which are expected to fill a key role of the anti-huk campaign in Nueva Ecija, Pampanga, Tarlac, and Bulacan.

At the same time, the President receives a report from the National Bureau of Investigation of the apprehension in Zamboanga City last night of two persons in possession of prohibited narcotics.

The drug consist of two bottles of morphine containing 250 grams each and could be sold for P500, 000. Arrested by NBI and Air Force Agents, according to Acting NBI Director Serafino Fausto, were Mrs. Charito Santos y Sanchez and Narciso Apostol y Patriarca.

The Chief Executive also directs two Mt. Province officials and three bureau directors to explain within two weeks the reasons for their failure to move aliens out of public lands within the Mt. Data National Park and Central Cordillera Forest reservations.

The President, in his directive, states that Executive Order No. 180 issued by the late President Magsaysay in 1956 gave aliens up to June 30 of that year to vacate or move out of the park and forest reservations in Mt. Province.

The order likewise establishes conditions for the release of some of these areas to actual occupants who are Filipino nationals.

He orders the Chairman of the Mt. Province Development Authority, the provincial fiscal of Mt. Province and the directors of the bureau of lands, forestry and soils to immediately take steps for the ejection of aliens who have managed to occupy public lands 10 years after they had been ordered to vacate the areas.

In the afternoon, the President receive L. H. Markuson, resident representative of the UNICEF and Oliver B. Johnston, executive vice-president of the Walt Disney, Co.

Markuson discusses with the Chief Executive the progress of UNICEF activities here. While Johnston who is visiting Walt Disney offices in Asia and Europe, called to pay his respects. With him is George R. Sherman.

Then, the President administers the oath of office to Chief Justice Roberto Concepcion, whose appointment was confirmed by the Commission on Appointments two days ago.

Justice Concepcion was nominated Chief Justice by President Marcos June 4 to succeed former Chief Justice Cesar Bengzon who retired May 29.

June 18.—DEVOTING most of the day to working on bills, President Marcos meets the midnight deadline set by law for him to act on some 250 measures passed by the Sixth Congress during its first regular session.

The 30-day statutory period which started upon the adjournment of the regular session last month ends this day.

The President is assisted by a committee headed by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas with department undersecretaries as members.

At the same time, the President names Senate President Arturo M. Tolentino adviser to the Philippine panel to the joint Philippine United-States Commission to discuss pending claims of Filipino veterans against the United States.

He also designates Sen. Alejandro Almendras member of the panel, headed by former Senator Eulogio Balao, one-time secretary of national defense. The talks on the pending claims are slated to start in Manila on July 5. Members of the American panel headed by Gen. George H. Decker, are expected here July 4.

Sen. Tolentino will serve as adviser to the panel, together with Speaker Cornelio T. Villareal.

The first meeting of the commission will be held in Manila upon the request of the President, who had underscored the difficulty of transporting documents supporting the claims of Washington.

The Filipino war veterans' claim represents the unpaid balances the US still owes them by virtue of laws and proclamation promulgated and issued by the US government relative to compensations and benefits for Filipino soldiers who fought with the US troops during the last world war.

At 11 a.m., the President takes time out from his work to confer with several senators who called at the Palace to consult him on bills pending in Congress during the special session.

Among the legislators received separately by the President are Senators Rodolfo Ganzon and Gaudencio Antonino and Reps. Floro S. Crisologo of Ilocos Sur and Antonio V. Raquiza of Ilocos Norte.

The President likewise had consultations over the telephone with other solons including Senators Jose Roy and Manuel P. Manahan.

Meantime, the President Marcos calls upon the people to "keep faith with the great men of our land" in a message issued on the eve of the birth anniversary of Dr. Jose Rizal.

The President points out the decline in the morality of the people as evidence by the upsurge of criminality in the country and graft and corruption in public and private sectors.

“We may not find the true path again to unity, strength and virtue if we fail to keep faith with the great men of our land, men like Dr. Rizal whose birth more than a hundred years ago gave to our race the finest example of a patriot and hero,” he warns.

The President’s message for the occasion follows:

The birthday today of Dr. Jose Rizal will possibly pass quietly, as it had done in years past, for we no longer really feel very deeply for our heroes, not even our national hero. If we did, we will be more dedicated people, more conscious of our responsibilities, and altogether prepared to meet the challenge of our times, even if it meant great personal sacrifice.

“The decline in the morals of our people, the upsurge of crime in our country, the apathy and fear that grip us, so much so that many of us will not even seek justice against criminals, and the graft and corruption in public and private sectors, all underline the moral crisis of our times.

“We may not find the true path again to unity, strength, and virtue if we fail to keep faith with the great men of our land, men like Dr. Rizal, whose birth more than a hundred years ago gave to our race the finest example of a patriot and hero.”

June 19.—LEAVING Malacañang at 5:15 a.m. for the Philippine Air force Base operations at Nichols Airbase where he took off for Poro Point, San Fernando, La Union, the President returns to historic Bessang Pass to unveil a memorial set up by a grateful nation for the fallen soldiers of the famous USAFIP-NL, and to pay tribute to his comrades in arms.

From Poro Point, the President together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children, Imee, Irene, and Bongbong, and some cabinet officials motor to Bessang Pass, east of Cervantes along the Ilocos Sur-Mountain Province boundary. Also with the President in the long and tortuous trip to the historic mountain trail 5,000 feet above sea level are members of the USAFIP-NL.

Bessang Pass is a narrow breach in the Cordillera Mountain Range where the Filipino guerillas of World War II turned the tide of war against the Japanese Imperial Forces. The decisive battle eventually led to the defeat of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita and the surrender of the Japanese occupation forces.

President Marcos was one of the men who fought in the now famous battle. He held the rank of major at the time his heroic participation in the battle won him his second Silver Medal.

During the brief ceremony atop the Cordillera Mountain, President Marcos likewise confers decorations on 13 heroes of the Bessang Pass campaign.

Among the awardees are three newsmen, namely: Amante E. Bigornia of the Daily Bulletin and David Borje of the Evening News, who were decorated with Gold Cross Medals, and Manuel Abad Gaerlan of the Philippines Herald who was conferred the Military Merit Medal.

The President arrives at Bessang Pass 12:30 p.m., after a three-hour trip from Tagudin, to unveil the marker of the fallen heroes of Bessang Pass.

On the memorial were inscribed the following words:

“The battle of Bessang Pass began with the assault on the Japanese line at Bitalag, Tagudin, Ilocos Sur, by the United States Armed Forces in the Philippines, Northern Luzon USAFIP 8 January 1945, followed by the seizure of the enemy stronghold along Highway 4 and the Japanese defenders of the province 14 June 1945.”

On the steel marker are listed the names of the casualties of the hard-fought battle which led to the liberation of Central Luzon and the end of the Japanese occupation.

In his brief remarks, the President states that Bessang Pass was a battle similar to Bataan, but in reverse.

He obviously refers to the fact that while the Filipino soldiers in Bataan put up a valiant defense, particularly in their last stand on Mt. Samat, the Filipino soldiers at Bessang Pass made a bold assault on the Japanese Imperial forces holding out there, and won.

The President stresses proudly the fact that it was the Filipino soldiers themselves who liberated Northern Luzon. He states that Northern Luzon was the only Filipino territory freed from Japanese occupations by Filipino troops.

From Bessang Pass, the President motors back to Tagudin, arriving there at 3 p.m. The President takes his lunch at the residence of Capt. Emilio Narcisi, now PC provincial commander of Ilocos Sur.

After meeting a large delegation which greeted him at the provincial commander's residence, the President motors to the USAFIP-NL base hospital site in Tagudin where he paid further honors to the heroes of Bessang Pass.

The President lays a wreath at site of the wartime base hospital and addresses the crowd which had gathered there.

Later in the afternoon, the President proceeds to Camp Spencer, in Darigayos Point, where he also offers similar tribute to his comrades in arms.

With the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the President unveils a plaque at the camp.

From there, the President motors back to Poro Point, San Fernando, La Union, arriving there late in the evening.

June 20.—FROM San Fernando, La Union, the President boards the “Queen Air,” a private plane, for Basa Airbase in Pampanga where he formally accepts 17 aircrafts given to the Philippines by the United States under the military assistance pact.

The President, who was returning from the commemorative ceremonies held the other day at Bessang Pass, arrives at Basa Airbase at 10 a.m.

Although Basa airbase is a major command of the Philippine Air Force, this is the time in 17 years that a visit was made by the President of the Republic to the base. The last President to visit this airbase was President Quirino, in 1949.

The aircraft turned in include nine F-5 jet fighters, two UH-34D helicopters and six U-17A light planes. US Ambassador William McCormick Blair, Jr. makes the presentation, while the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, christens the aircraft.

In his extemporaneous acceptance speech, the President declares that the turnover of the planes was symbolic of the strengthened partnership between the Philippines and the United States, “based on freedom, aimed at freedom, and utilizing the weapons of freedom.” He adds that it was a replenishment of the reservoir of goodwill between the two countries.

The aircraft represent the determination of the Philippines to remain free, Ambassador Blair states in his presentation speech, and the “continuing commitment of the United states to guarantee that the Philippines, like the United States, be allowed to live in freedom.”

The nine F-5’s have brought the 6th Fighter Squadron of the PAF to full strength. The UH-34D is described as versatile aircraft, which will give the PAF increased capability for airlift missions of personnel or supplies, during times of disaster or other emergencies. It can be used to reach remote areas with no means of transportation.

The U-17A is a light plane type, designed to give more mobility to the country’s ground forces and naval arm, in surveillance missions or actual operations needing the services of these planes.

After the rites, the President takes off for Manila, arriving at the Nichols Airbase at 12:30 p.m.

In the evening, the President receives Ambassador Harumi Takeuchi of Japan who makes a courtesy call.

Following the courtesy call, the President confers with Reparations Commissioner Gregorio Abad, Chairman Filemon Rodriguez of the National Economic Council and Public Works Undersecretary Marciano Bautista on the procurement of heavy equipment through reparations, badly needed for road construction projects.

June 21.—THIS day being one of his busiest day, President Marcos nevertheless finds time for a farewell chat with some key Filipino Ambassadors who called at Malacañang before leaving for their posts abroad.

Among the envoys are Ambassador Romeo Busuego who was assigned to Kuala Lumpur, Ambassador Juan Dionisio who is relieving Ambassador Busuego in Karachi, Ambassador Mauro Calingo for Bangkok and Ambassador Benito Bautista.

The President likewise receives Ambassador Trinidad Legarda who reported on her trip to Saigon where she turned over to the South Vietnamese government Philippine donations raised from private contributions under “Operation Pakikisama” of the President.

Mrs. Legarda informs the President that the Philippine donations had bolstered the morale of the Vietnamese people and at the same time enhanced prestige of this country. According to her, the donations also created the impression that the Philippine is not satellite of any nation.

Following the call of Mrs. Legarda, the President meets with Congressional leaders with whom he discusses the necessity of calling Congress to another special session.

Then, the President receives Sir Malcolm Frazer, Australian Minister of the army, who called to pay his respects. He is accompanied by Ambassador Francis H. Stuart.

At noon, the President motors to Manila Hotel where he addresses the 12th annual convention of the Bus Operators Association of the Philippines (BOAP).

In his extemporaneous speech before the BOAP, the President reveals the massive road construction program of the administration, totaling P600 million worth of concrete roads and highways.

He reveals the plan to give the transportation men a “bird’s eye-view” of the public works program of his administration.

The intention of the government to sell the Philippine National Railways is also brought out, when the President invited the transport tycoons to buy the rail lines, by way of answering the complaints against the stiff competition offered by the PNR bus lines against private land transport.

As outlined by the President, the road building crash program, to be undertaken in the next three years, will cement 2,667 kilometers of major trunk roads, pave 1,600 kilometers of secondary roads with high-type asphalt, replace 60,000 lineal meters of temporary bridges with permanent concrete-and-steel spans, and construct 1,500 kilometers of development roads for virgin areas relative to the intensified agricultural production.

The President declares that the P600-million has already been set aside, and has been allocated to underwrite the three phases of the program.

He states that the first year will have and P118-million allocation, P58-million of which will come from the special highways fund. He says that the government cannot allocate more because of the restrictions imposed by law, which requires that only 50 per cent of the total fund available be spent on road building and the other half to finance the maintenance of the roads.

Talking about the special highway funds, the President tells the bus operators that the amount collected from them and oil companies which make up this fund has reached P200-million a year for some years now. He adds that funds from the special fund could have cemented all of the country's main trunk roads long ago, but in the past four years only 70 kilometers of these roads have been cemented.

That is why, he states, the administration is trying to make up for lost time. He declares that this program benefits not only the bus companies but also farmers, industrialists and the public at large.

The Chief Executive likewise bares that he is reorganizing the Public Works Department to cope with the program, which in its first phase has 700 kilometers of roads to be built more than 17,000 lineal meters of bridges.

The target for the second year is 967 kilometers of concrete roads and 22, 359 lineal meters of permanent bridges. The sum set aside for this phase is P166-million. The third year will aim for 1,000 kilometers of concrete road and 20,000 lineal meters of permanent bridges, with a total of P162-million set aside for it.

In offering the sale of the government railway firm, the President explains that he was dissatisfied with the present condition of the company, and points to the high cost of overhead, particularly in salaries which he said exceeded the usual 35 per cent dictated by sound business practices.

On the problem of crowding in the land transportation field, the President says that he has been assured by the Public Service Commission that it will issue no more certificates to applicants in these saturated areas.

Back in Malacañang, the President receives Arnold Wychodil, managing director of Mercedes Benz, who arrived recently in the course of an inspection of Mercedes Benz subsidiaries in Asian countries.

Following the call, the President inducts into office Filomeno Kintanar as associate public service commissioner and Gaudencio Beduya as member of the board of governors of the Development Bank of the Philippines.

June 22.—TO break the long-standing mail jam in Manila post office, President Marcos strongly urges the outright up-grading of postal service in a directive to the Executive Secretary and the Commissioner of the Budget to study reorganization of the bureau.

The Chief Executive's directive is triggered off by the still unremedied mail backlog despite several injection of funds into the service, precisely to bolster service personnel needed to cope with the tide of mail coming to Manila.

He instructs Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas and Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to conduct a management survey of the bureau of posts to determine the causes of the mail jam and to pinpoint responsibility for the delayed delivery of mail.

The President declares, “notwithstanding our repeated releases of funds for additional clerical assistance in the bureau of posts, a serious mail jam continues, resulting in numerous complaints from the public.”

Besides the survey, the President asks the two officials to recommend “specific and workable remedies” to the problem, and to make a report to him in one month.

Aside from the regular budget of the Bureau of Posts amounting to more than P23.5 million for the current fiscal year, it is reported, the Budget Commission has released since January several sums for the wages of “casuals” and for payment of overtime services, as follows:

Feb. 2, 1966	Wages of casuals	P200,000.00
	Overtime Services	50,000.00
Mar. 25, 1966	Wages of casuals	300,000.00
	Supplies	100,000.00
May 23, 1966	Wages of casuals	275,000.00

A total of P295,000 was released in three months since the beginning of the year aimed at breaking the mail jam, but so far no results have been seen, it is declared, causing the issuance of the President’s orders for what might be described as a move toward a shake-up of the postal bureau. These sums are in addition to the regular outlays of the bureau.

At the same time, President Marcos orders the immediate cancellation of permits to timber concessionaires operating in Cordon, Isabela to prevent the possible destruction of important watersheds in the area.

The President issues the order to the director of forestry after receiving report of wanton logging in the area, which has threatened the watersheds there.

Included in the order is the cancellation of the permits of four sawmills in the adjacent town of Diffun, Nueva Vizcaya, if it is established that these mills have received most of their logs from the said watersheds.

The watersheds specified shore up the Ilot, Kama and Lucban rivers, which the President described as “all important,” but the continued logging operations in the area might result in the possible destruction of these forest stands, as the President points out.

The administration has previously launched a program to preserve the country’s forests, including national parks and watersheds which are deemed essential to agriculture and in preventing floods.

In this connection the President had in the past ordered the cancellation of other logging permits, which had been abused by operators in that they had indiscriminately thinned out forests or encroached into forest reservations.

He further asks the director of forestry to submit a report within one month on the implementation of the Malacañang directives.

The Chief Executive also proclaims Friday, June 24, as “Araw ng Maynila” in commemoration of the 395th anniversary of the founding of the city.

In proclaiming the day, the President declares “it is fitting that the people of Manila be given ample opportunity to commemorate the occasion with appropriate ceremonies.”

In the morning, the President receives the officials of the Social Security System with whom he discusses the System’s capability to grant educational loans to SSS members.

At the meeting, the President directs the SSS to speed up approval of educational loans to make sure that the members of the System could make use of them when schools open in July.

The SSS had earmarked P30-million for educational loans. Under the arrangement a member of the system could borrow the equivalent of his one-month salary. The loan will be payable in one year without interest.

He calls the SSS officials to a conference in Malacañang to discuss this loan and other matters.

The processing of the loans , on a stepped-up basis, was started the other day at the SSS offices with Assistant Executive Secretary Flores Bayot representing the President.

The mass processing of the loans in undertaken in consonance with the desire of President Marcos to extend immediate assistance to SSS members for present needs. Some 1.5 million private workers are members of the system.

Acting SSS administrator Reynaldo Gregorio informs the President that about 10,000 applications for educational loans have already been received at the SSS as of yesterday. The bulk of applications consists of amounts ranging between P150 and P250.

In the afternoon, the President confers the award of the Philippine Legion of Honor, rank of commander, on Rear Admiral Jack L. Monroe, years of tour of duty in this country.

Following the award ceremonies, the President administers the oaths.

Among those inducted are:

1. Atilano R. Cinco, former governor of Leyte as administrator of the Philippine Veterans Administration and member of the board of directors of the Philippine Veterans Bank;
2. Mariano Noriel as first deputy administrator of the PVA;
3. Jose Cadiao of Antique as associate public service commissioner;
4. Dr. Godofredo Reyes, former governor of Ilocos Sur, as member of the board for medical examiners;
5. Jose M. Rodrigo as third assistant provincial fiscal, Cresencio Navi Busto as municipal judge of Baco and Cesario M. Cueto as municipal judge of Naujan, all of Mindoro Oriental; and
6. Miss Leonor E. Pablo as acting chairman, and Miss Evelina Pangalangan, Miss Petra R. de Joya and Mrs. Leonora S. de Guzman as members of the board of examiners for social workers.

In the evening, the President presides over an emergency meeting of members of the Peace and Order Council, the mayors and chiefs of police and intelligence agencies to assess the peace and order situation in the Greater Manila area.

At the meeting the President directs the Secretary of Justice to inquire deeper into financial standing of bonding firms which provide bail for persons arrested by the police, in other move to strengthen the anti-crime drive.

Following the conference of police and other officials, the President seeks to seal off another breach in the operation of law enforcement by hardening the base for the grant of bail, which today professional criminals find very easy to secure through fly-by-night bonding companies.

In his directive to the department of justice, the President points out that certain insurance firms backing up the bonding companies have been found to have questionable financial resources.

The President acts after being informed by police agencies that hardened criminals find it too easy to procure bail, and when these same felons are freed they often merely disappear and have to be re-arrested. Meanwhile, the bonding companies concerned fail to pay the forfeited bond because of non-existent funds.

Not so long ago, the President had ordered a similar inquiry into certain insurance firms dealing in surety bonds, in the light of the experience of the customs service, wherein forfeited bonds warehoused imports were not paid, also due to the inadequate finances of the surety companies.

June 23.—THE Chief Executive directs Ernesto Maceda, chief of the Presidential Arm on Community Development and chairman of Operations Central Luzon, to report on the specific roles of the various agencies participating in the program to better the social and economic conditions in the areas concerned.

In his directive to Maceda, the President asks him to specify the activities of each agency over a three-month period, a six-month period, and a full year.

He also tells Maceda and all the heads of the participating agencies “to make their presence felt in the area and to deploy all available personnel and funds in the project area so that the people could feel the immediate impact of the operations.”

Specific towns pinpointed as target areas are San Luis, Arayat and Magalang and city of Angeles in Pampanga, Bamban, Capas and Concepcion in Tarlac, and Talavera Aliaga, Zaragoza and Gapan in Nueva Ecija.

Meanwhile, the President issues a proclamation declaring Friday, June 24, a special holiday in Manila.

The President earlier had proclaimed the day as “Araw ng Maynila” in commemoration of the 359th anniversary of the City’s founding.

In the morning, the President meets with the Philippine panel which will discuss with its American counterpart the pending claims of Filipino veterans of World War II against the United States government.

In the afternoon, the President receives a 600-man delegation from the Philippine Public School Teachers Association headed by its president, Florencio Barrera, division superintendent of Davao City.

During their call, members of the PPSTA delegation whose four-day 23rd annual representative assembly opened at Quezon City this morning, witnessed the re-enactment by the President of the signing into law of Senate Bill No. 65 (H. B. No. 6801) otherwise known as the Magna Charta for public school teachers.

The bill is one of some 200 bills signed by the President the other week.

As a token of their appreciation and gratitude for the approval of the bill, the teachers had resolved to voluntarily waive in the meantime some of the rights granted them under the new law.

Among the provisions of the measure, which the teachers waived for the meantime are:

1. Their right to a one-year study leave with pay equivalent to 60 per cent of their salary after seven years of service.

This privilege is granted in addition to the existing leave privileges, and once implemented would mean an additional outlay of at least P200 million annually.

The teachers agree with the President that because of the huge expenses that would go into other essential services and the rural development program the government can afford these additional expenditures at this time.

2. Their right to automatic civil service eligibility after ten years of continuous service.
3. Their right to additional compensation for services in excess of six hours of actual classroom teaching, hardship allowances, cost of living allowances and automatic retirement promotion.

Under Section 14 of the bill of the teachers shall not be required to render more than five hours of actual classroom teaching a day and when required to render more than five hours of service they shall be paid additional compensation equivalent to their regular pay plus 25 per cent.

The teachers are also granted for a living allowance, a special hardship allowance of at least 25 per cent of their monthly salary and a one-range salary increase upon retirement.

4. Their right to be credited with services rendered in private teaching institutions for purposes of promotion and retirement.
5. Their right against transfer without their consent from one station to another.

June 24.—In a more determined effort to remove possible causes of criminality, President Marcos turns his attention on mass communications and entertainment media by ordering the board of censors to be “more judicious and rigid” in screening movies and depicting crime and glorifying sex.

The Chief Executive likewise wants the censors board to check on the quality of radio and television program.

“In view of the resurgence criminality, which may due to the improper influence of motion pictures and other media of entertainment and communication, you are hereby directed to be more judicious and rigid in the appreciation of moving pictures depicting crimes and glorifying sex,” the President orders.

In another memorandum to the Peace and Order Council, the President asks that the problem posed by the comic magazines, which had also been severely criticized for their tendency to play up crime and sex stories, be studied.

He requests the Council to set up a study group for this purpose, and to conduct continuous studies on the crime problem. The President asks that these studies, with the recommendations of the Council, be submitted to him periodically.

At the same time, the President orders and investigation of certain members of the armed forces in Cotabato who allegedly failed to assist farmers pleading for their assistance in the face of threats to their lives from lawless elements in the province.

Irrked by the reports of the farmers, the President orders:

1. The arrest and prosecution of all persons, who allegedly fired at the members of the Golden Plains Farmers Association occupying disputed lands in Rajah Buayan City. These persons were identified as followers of Conrado Alcantara, a prominent businessman and landowner in Cotabato.
2. The arrest of Alcantara, himself, if it could be established that he had ordered the firing at the members of the farmers’ association.

3. The confiscation of the arms of the persons who had fired at the farmers. The orders of the President are immediately delayed to Col. Wilfrido Estrada, P.C. provincial commander; and Col. Wenceslao Ellosa, BCT commander.

According to reports received by the President from the leaders of the farmers, the armed forces men, “refused them assistance” when men, identified to be followers of Alcantara, are firing at them.

The report also states that the farmers’ houses are being demolished or burned by the followers of Alcantara.

In the morning, the President boards an air force helicopter and inspects a number of government projects and checks on their progress.

He visits the Armed Forces pre-fabricated school-building plant in Montalban, Rizal, the Pulong Duhat and the Tabang portions of the 29-kilometer long Manila North diversion road in Bulacan. He views the extent of construction being undertaken at the Guadalupe Bridge, which is being widened to accommodate the heavier flow of traffic along the Epifanio de los Santos Avenue.

President Marcos is cited for his services to the Filipino people, his dedication to the cause of freedom, for his courage in war, and for his vigorous support of legislation to promote the economic and social well-being of the people.

Director Jesus Perpiñan of the Bureau of Private Schools, KR Supreme Commander, presents the decoration of the Chief Executive.

In his speech before the Knights of Rizal, the President declares that the present generation of Filipinos had the capacity and capability to live up to the tradition of greatness set by the national hero, Dr. Jose Rizal.

The President dismisses criticisms that the present generation of Filipinos was a “lost generation and a generation that did not respect its noble tradition.”

“I am confident that these critics are wrong, that this generation of Filipinos can be trusted, that whatever failures we have had in the past can be regained.”

He explains that Rizal remained a symbol that unites the Filipinos and like the national hero, some young men, when the necessity arises, would be willing to offer their lives and honor.

The President calls for vigilance in guarding the freedom enjoyed by Filipinos, saying it was the dream of Rizal. He warns that freedom must be won every day.

“Freedom is never a gift, freedom is not a legacy transmitted to every succeeding generation. Rather it could be lost by indifference,” he states.

He adds: Freedom is a trust fund which must be replenished in every undertaking if it should be handed over to the following generations.”

The Chief Executive explains that the self-denial of Rizal was one source of his greatness. The self-denial according to the President, was best exemplified by the national hero’s forsaking of a good life to protect a great cause – the freedom of the Filipinos.

“Every ideal he has taught the Filipino people must strike everyone because Rizal is not only a hero of the revolution but a hero of all time,” the President avers.

“Let us analyze his ideals and seek to determine in our own time if we could approximate the standard he had set for himself,” the President says.

June 25.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the cancellation of the contract for the construction of the Guadalupe Bridge, and instructs Undersecretary of Public Works Marciano Bautista to take over the project within 24-hours and finish it in sixty days.

The President issues the directives following a helicopter survey of the highways complex in the Greater Manila Area. The President is accompanied by Rep. Antonio Raquiza and Undersecretary Bautista of Public Works, and Defense Undersecretary Manuel B. Syquiao.

He notes the heavy traffic jam along Epifanio de los Santos Highway caused by the bottleneck of the unfinished Guadalupe Bridge.

Under the contract, the private contractor is supposed to complete the bridge last June 19, but to date only 60% has been finished, allegedly because of lack of men and equipment.

The President also deplores the slow pace of the work on the Nagtahan bridge and the Manila City Hall underpass along Taft Avenue. He directs Secretary Bautista to also study the possibility of cancelling the covering contract of these projects and take over the job.

To further ease the flow of traffic in Manila, the President likewise directs Secretary Bautista, Chairman Filemon Rodriguez of the National Economic Council, and Reparations Commissioner Gregorio Abad to undertake the construction of the following projects, with reparations financing:

- 1.) Two elevated express highways crossing the Pasig from South Manila to Quezon and Caloocan Cities.
- 2.) Conversion of esteros into streets, instead of utilizing them only for parking space.
- 3.) Clover leaf interchanges on vital intersections on E. de los Santos from the Balintawak Monument in Caloocan to Pasay in the South.

These three projects are proposed by Secretary designate Raquiza to the President.

The President observes that no amount of fancy street devices or traffic juggling would solve the traffic problem in the area, because Manila, unlike most modern cities in the world which are served by a network of wide boulevards, has scarcity of broad thoroughfares.

He observes further that Manila is one of the big cities of the world saddled with too many cars which has further compounded the traffic problem.

At the same time, the President extends formal recognition to the Republic of Singapore in a message sent to President Yusuf Bin Ishak of Singapore.

The recognition of Singapore completes normalization of Philippine relations with Southeast Asia's newest states, Malaysia and Singapore, which the President had sought from the start of his administration in an effort to stabilize this country's ties with other free nations in this part of the world.

In his message to the Singapore chief executive, the President hopes for the continued “cordial and friendly relationship” between two countries, and conveyed the Filipino people's gratification over the establishment of the new republic.

It may be recalled that President Marcos had vigorously pursued efforts to restore amity between Malaysia and Indonesia, now a reality, while expediting Philippine reestablishment of diplomatic ties with Malaysia which was formally restored last June.

It remained for the Philippines to recognize Singapore to completely normalize relations with Southeast Asian countries who hold common cause with this country.

Singapore was originally a semi-autonomous state by virtue of an Act of the British Parliament passed in 1958. She had full powers to manage her internal affairs but external affairs and defense remained in the hands of the British government. On Sept. 16, 1963, the Federation of Malaysia was formed with Singapore as one of the member states.

However, on August 9, 1965, Singapore, led by Premier Lee Kuan Yew, seceded from the Federation and became a Republic, with Yew as prime minister. From that time on to the formal recognition today, the Philippines and Singapore had no diplomatic ties.

In the morning, the President confers with Col. Osmondo Mondoñedo, RCA administrator, who had just returned from Thailand.

Mondoñedo reports on the results of his mission. He was sent to Thailand in connection with the Philippines' plan to import rice.

The Chief Executive devotes the rest of the day and evening working on official state papers in the seclusion of his study.

June 26.—PRESIDENT Marcos directs the immediate implementation of a deportation order against two aliens for having extorted money from Chinese businessmen in different parts of the country.

The President issues the directive upon representations made by Ambassador Han Lih-wu, envoy of the Republic of China to the Philippines, and officials of the Federation of Chinese Chambers of Commerce.

Ordered deported are Lu Ka Ik alias Felix Lu and Cheng Tian Lin alias Thomas Cheng Tian Lin. They were found to have extorted from Chinese businessmen a total of P240,000 in Davao City, P16,000 in Zamboanga City and P18,000 in Jolo, Sulu.

The President orders Commissioner of Immigration Samuel F. Reyes to deport the aliens on the first available plane to Taiwan or China.

In the morning, the President boards a helicopter to Camp Olivas, San Fernando, Pampanga where he discusses with provincial and municipal executives, military zone and provincial commanders the Huk problem and the various programs of the administration designed to check the resurgence of activities of dissidents in Central Luzon.

The President leaves Malacañang 8:30 a.m. accompanied by Defense Undersecretaries Alfonso Arellano and Manuel B. Syquiao, Ernesto Maceda, presidential assistant on community development, Health Secretary Paulino Garcia and Brig. Gen. Segundo Velasco, and arrives 30 minutes later in San Fernando.

Right after receiving the honors, the President is closeted with top defense officials, who gives him a briefing on the extent of Huk activity and the over-all peace and order situation in Central Luzon.

The President spends three hours in frank discussions with governor, other provincial and municipal mayors from Tarlac, Nueva Ecija, Pampanga and Bulacan, on the Huk activities as well as the problem of cattle rusting.

Following the discussion, the President inducts the officers of the Pampanga Mayors' League.

Then after the induction rites, the President returns to Malacañang arriving there at 3:30 p.m.

In the evening, the President hears mass with members of his family at the Palace chapel.

June 27.—THE President suspends the issuance of licenses to new insurance companies as he ordered tighter control of insurance operations in the face of irregularities in bail bonds which have contributed to the encouragement of crime.

The directives are relayed to the insurance commissioner, who was also required to investigate the bail bonding operations of insurance firms, with a view to cancelling the licenses of those firms unable to meet their obligations.

The President takes this step in an attempt to stop the malpractice of insurance companies with scarce financial resources who indiscriminately put up bail for large sums, then fail to settle up when those bailed out disappear. The practice has been extremely costly to the government in defaulted payments.

His attention is called to this laxity in government supervision of insurance companies, during the recent anti-crime conference in Malacañang. This revelation followed closely the reports that millions of pesos were lost to the government in customs surety bonds, when insurance companies guaranteeing the bonds pleaded insolvency.

A parallel is pointed out in the bail bond operations for persons charged with felonies, where insurance companies are quick to put up bail, thus liberating criminals from police custody. Then when the bail is forfeited by the disappearance of the persons charged, or because of violations of the bail regulations, the insurance companies involved cannot make good the bonds.

He instructs the insurance commissioner that he should supervise more strictly the operations of insurance companies, with emphasis on curbing shady bail bond practices.

At the same time, the President orders armed forces authorities to immediately implement his order to screen the personnel of the Philippine Constabulary to improve the quality of the force.

The President directs that the screening of the PC soldiers in the Central Luzon area be given top priority, pointing out that any abuses or misconduct on their part would adversely affect the civic action programs of the administration for the region.

The Chief Executive's order for the screening of the constabulary soldiers is a reiteration of a directive, issued earlier by him for the weeding out of undesirable elements in police agencies, both national and local, to bolster the peace and order drive.

In reiterating the order, the President states:

"Any injustice committed now by any soldier can be blown up into a big cause for lack of confidence, not only in the armed forces, but in the government."

"Hence, the armed forces should screen its personnel immediately and remove those who should be removed," the President says.

With barely two weeks before the opening of school, the President reviews the progress made so far in the prefabricated school building program.

He confers with Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco on the matter of financing the program. After meeting the budget commissioner this morning the President orders the release of P1.5 million to hasten the construction of the units earmarked for distribution this school year.

In the afternoon, the President receives another honorary doctorate degree this time from the Philippine Women's University.

He is likewise the principal speaker at the rites inaugurating Helen Z. Benitez as President of the Philippine Women's University.

In his extemporaneous speech, the President calls on the centers of thought, the universities, to help bring to fulfillment the revolution of great expectation which he said is manifested in the nation today.

"It is only in the universities," the President avers, "that there can be an objective appraisal of the problems of the nation," and it is only through scholarship that there can be a serious study made of these problems free of partisan influence.

He declares that the PWU is in a position of leadership, because it is a center of learning for Filipino women, and "women are soul and heart of a nation."

The nation, therefore, he stresses, looks to the PWU for the soul of the Filipino race, not only because it is a Women's university but because of its achievements in molding Filipino women and its tradition of leadership in national affairs.

"We are determined as a nation," the Chief Executive points out, "to correct the mistakes and abuses of the past," and to prove true to the expectations of the leaders who went before, "those who had hoped that the generations following them will seek to attain national objectives with the power of God had given them."

On the challenge of the PWU president for the nation to create an academic consortium, the President states that such a movement is now shaping up with a base of 300 men and women from the academic community, at the University of the Philippines.

June 28.—TAKING note of continuing reports of overloading – and in consideration of numerous incidents in the past where overloaded vessels floundered or sank causing the death of passengers and crewmen, President Marcos takes a crackdown on overloading of passengers by interisland vessels with a strong directive to the commissioner of customs and the Philippine Navy command to prosecute government personnel involved in this irregularity and to cancel the licenses of overloaded vessels.

Long considered as one of the black marks against local shipping, the overloading of coastwise vessels has been the target of public criticism over the years. But the connivance between customs personnel and shipping operators has made possible the continuance of the practice.

In his directive, the President mentions the fact that his collusion has become so brazen that it is often conducted openly. Such an incident, in the port of Catbalogan City is pointed out by the President, wherein many people witnessed customs officials bargaining with shippers on the amount of the bribe.

In view of this, the President instructs the customs commissioner to "exercise the strictest supervision to prevent the overloading of interisland vessels." He requires the customs chief to "insure that customs employees involved in this venality are immediately suspended and administratively or criminally charged."

His instructions to the navy is to make a headcount of passengers leaving or entering ports, in Manila and elsewhere, and recommend the cancellation of licenses of vessels violating the regulations against overloading.

At the same time, the President gives the go-signal for the department of national defense to proceed with the recruitment of additional men for the Philippine Constabulary and the armed Forces Engineer Corps.

Under the plan, the present strength of the PC, about 16,000 men and officers, will be increased by some 1,000 men. According to military estimates, the constabulary command has to have at least 25,000 men to effectively cope with its mission of maintaining peace and order.

The President spends the whole day and night working on state papers in the seclusion of his study.

June 29.—DECLARING that “deportees must be made to feel that they cannot defy Philippine laws at will,” President Marcos orders the detention of Ang Cho Kio and directs the Department of Justice to look into the possibility of making the alien deportee serve the mandatory portion of his prison term, after which he should be immediately deported.

Ang Cho Kio was sentenced to life imprisonment for the slaying of the co-pilot and purser of a Philippine Air Lines plane which he hijacked and tried to bring to Red China in 1952, arrive in Manila last Sunday under the assumed name of Ang Ming Huy.

The Chinese was pardoned by the then President Garcia in 1959 on the condition that he should never return to the Philippines. His presence here broke such condition. He was nabbed by immigration authorities in a hotel in Parañaque, Rizal and is now under detention by the bureau of immigration on Engineer Island.

Ang claimed another identity, saying he was a businessman on his way to the United States. He was scheduled to leave by plane this morning but had stayed over following up a petition for the extension on his stay to 14 days.

He made headlines in 1952 when he shot and killed Capt. Pedro Perlas and Eduardo Diego, co-pilot and purser, respectively, of the PAL plane. The plane was intercepted by Nationalist planes and forced to land on Quemoy where Ang was nabbed and turned over to the Philippine Government. He was tried for murder, attempted homicide, coercion and illegal possession of firearms and sentenced to life imprisonment.

However, in 1959, after serving over six years of his term, he was granted by then President Garcia on condition that he be deported to China and that he was never to return to the Philippines.

The President flies in the morning to Tacloban City to join the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who went to that city as guest of honor at the provincial kick-off ceremony for the “Alay Kay Magsaysay.”

He leaves Manila at 8:30 a.m. and arrives there at 10:15, or 15 minutes after the arrival of the First Lady. He is met at the airport by the First Lady at the head of large welcoming delegation of her province mates.

At 11:30 a.m., the President officiates at the inauguration of the House of Refreshments at the city’s children’s playground. Then he addresses the executive seminar for barrio captains which were being held at Tacloban.

In his brief remarks to the barrio captains the President appeals for their support in the tremendous job of nation building. He states the help of the rural leaders was essential, pointing out that nation building must draw support from the rural community and leadership.

“Without your support and cooperation,” he says, “the national leadership cannot hope to succeed.”

He concludes that it is necessary for the nation to remember the greatness of its heroes.

From there, he motors to Tolosa, Leyte, the hometown of the First Lady. He arrives there after a 45-minutes motor ride.

June 30.—IN Tolosa, Leyte, the President focuses his attention on the problems of the fishing industry and in the process orders the National Bureau of Investigation to probe the illegal sale of chloride to dynamite fishermen.

The Chief Executive directs the NBI to ascertain the extent of the illegal trade in the chemical, the quantity of the supply, and its uses.

He likewise orders Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee to prepare an order to be issued by the President regulating the possession and the sale of the chemical to fishermen who can convert it into explosive for dynamite fishing purposes.

In his directive, the President orders Col. Vicente Raval, Third PC zone commander, to hold the chemical which was earlier impounded, although Cebu City Judge Maambun had ordered its release. He says the government will appeal the decision of the city court.

Raval is also ordered by the President to hold the release of 325 big barrels of potassium chloride belonging to a Chinese businessman identified as Joaquin Ventura, pending verification of the ownership and the case of the chemicals.

At the same time, the President issues a proclamation declaring Friday, July 1, as a special public holiday in the provinces of Cotabato, Lanao del Sur, Lanao del Norte and Sulu, and the cities of Basilan, Cotabato, Ilagan and Marawi.

The Chief Executive proclaims the special holiday in connection with the Muslim feast of Mauleed-en-Nabi, an important Muslim feast.

He states he would like to give Muslim Filipinos ample opportunity to observe the feast day with appropriate ceremonies.

Muslim officials and employees, both of the national and local governments, stationed in provinces other than those mentioned in the proclamation will be exempted from their duties this feast day which will be considered a holiday insofar as they are concerned.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

August 16.—THE Chief Executive tackles a variety of state matters ranging from the urgent need to complete National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority projects to head off another water shortage in Greater Manila next summer, to the promotion of local science and technology.

In the morning, the President discusses with Rep. Andres Cosalan of Mt. Province the implementation of Republic Act No. 4695, enacted during the regular session of the Sixth Congress, which divides Mt. Province into four provinces.

He orders Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to prepare the appointments of officials proposed for the new provinces of Benguet, Ifugao and Kalinga-Apayao.

Then the President meets members of the House of committee on appropriations who discussed with him the proposed supplementary budget totaling more than ₱100-million for schools, hospitals, and rural health centers.

In the afternoon, the President receives NAWASA general Manager Antonio Menor who reported on the problems of the firm in its efforts to avoid a repetition of the acute water shortage which hit Manila and suburbs last summer.

He authorizes the firm to procure the pipes needed to complete the projects through negotiated sales, in view of the injunctions that have delayed procurement of these materials through public bidding.

He also directs the state water firm to purchase directly its requirements through reparations, after proper representations and agreements between the Philippines and Japan.

During their talks, the President instructs the NAWASA that "henceforth, you shall blacklist, in all government contracts, any contractor who has unreasonably delayed the execution of NAWASA projects financed by loans from the World Bank through such tactics as injunctions designed to harass or misrepresentations made before courts of law."

The state water firm's projects have been suspended since November, 1964, because of various delaying tactics of disgruntled contractors or of the mismanagement of the loans obtained for the purpose by the past administration.

August 17.—TAKING steps to solve the problem of police abuses on the nation's highways which have victimized truck drivers and other motorists, President Marcos orders the disbandment of police officers and special agents working without compensation.

In calling for the dissolution of all "special policemen" the President points out that the actual order disbanding these functionaries was issued as far back as April 13, 1960, when Malacañang issued a provincial circular to all provincial, city and municipal executives to this effect.

The Chief Executive in his present directive declares that the "present and past, performances" of these peace officers "leave much to be desired."

He underlines the many indiscretions committed by the said special law enforcement officers, including exploitation by politicians, local vested interests, and on their own initiative involvement with cases of mulcting, extortion and abuse of authority.

He orders the Philippine Constabulary to arrest within 30 days after receipt of his order all such personnel still in harness and confiscate their firearms and prosecute them for "usurpation of authority, illegal possession of firearms" or other violations of the law.

At the same time, the President gives new impetus to the current campaign against corruption in public office, this time focusing on the Rice and Corn Administration, which he ordered to weed out undesirable employees.

In his memorandum to RCA Administrator Osmundo Mondoñedo, the President also specifies the trimming down of RCA personnel to the minimum, in line with the administration policy of fiscal restraint.

He orders Mondoñedo to screen the officials and employees of the RCA and weed out” all those involved in irregularities.

The President issues the order following reports of various venalities committed by certain personnel of the rice and corn agency, some of which date years back.

He added that it was high time the RCA, which plays a crucial role in public welfare, should be rid of the incompetents, the corrupt, and those who utilize their office for selfish ends.

The President spends the whole day closeted in his study working on official papers.

August 18.—PRESIDENT Marcos calls for the listing of all naturalized Filipinos and aliens found guilty of violating Philippine laws, with a view to initiating deportation proceedings against them. In several directives, the President orders:

1. The Internal Revenue and Customs commissioners to submit within 15 days to the Commissioner of Immigration the names of all aliens and naturalized Filipinos guilty of tax evasion, along with the records of the cases filed against them.
2. The Director of Forestry to submit to the Commissioner of Immigration within 15 days, the names of aliens and naturalized Filipinos guilty of illegal logging, unlawful exportation of logs, and other violations of forestry laws and regulations, along with the records of these cases.
3. The Deportation Board to immediately initiate deportation proceedings against these individuals upon receipt of the records of violations and decisions.
4. The Bureau of Immigration to take “a more active, positive and decisive action in these and similar matters.”

The President issues the directives in the light of the Supreme Court decision divesting Ernesto Ting and Francisco Co Keng, both naturalized Filipinos, of Philippine citizenship for infractions of the country’s laws.

At the same time, the President further tightens effective control of watercraft plying Philippine waters by setting the rules and regulations to govern the design, speed, color and identification of these vessels.

He seeks better control of domestic watercraft also in connection with the anti-smuggling drive, following instances where boats used by smugglers were observed to have copied the color and silhouette of Philippine naval units.

The President also orders the arrest and deportation of O Liam alias Pio Chua, a Chinese national, as an undesirable alien on recommendation of the Deportation Board headed by Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee.

It is found out that Liam violated the condition set by the Deportation Board by reporting once on May 31, 1965, and since then failing to appear before the National Bureau of Investigation.

President Marcos again gives priority this day to legislative matter as he closely followed developments in Congress, currently on its third special session, as it considered various Administration measures held vital to the welfare and growth of the country. In order to attend to this task, the President receives only a few callers.

In the morning, Frank Sobieralski, managing director for operations of the Electric Bond and Share Company of New York, who arrived in Manila recently to survey investment possibilities in this country, calls on the President to pay his respects.

Accompanied by Rep. Antonio V. Raquiza of Ilocos Norte and Jesus T. Quiambao, local representative of the New York firm, Sobieralski informs the President that his company has set aside some $300-million for investments abroad.

The President tells Sobieralski to feel free to call on any government agency or official for any assistance or information he may require in the course of his survey tour of the country.

In the afternoon, the President confers with Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrently Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and Undersecretary Dioscoro Umali. The two officials report on their recent trip to Central Luzon to check on the progress of the administration's development program in the area.

Vice President Lopez reports to the President that all representatives of various government agencies engaged in the implementation of the program to improve social conditions in the region have made appreciable gains in their assigned tasks.

Meanwhile, President Marcos leads the nation in paying tribute to President Quezon.

In a message issued on the eve of President Manuel L. Quezon's 88th birth anniversary, the President calls on the people to keep faith with the ideals and principles set by President Quezon, which he said point the way to national greatness.

He notes that Quezon opened "new frontiers of government action" by establishing for all times the "Filipino commitment to freedom and nationalism," and the fiery leader of the Philippine Commonwealth initiated government reforms at the grass roots, which today still guide the programs of the national government.

August 19.—AFTER persistent representations from various sectors— including senators and congressmen, the President orders the weeding out of corrupt employees in the Rice and Corn Administration who were involved in any irregularities, including electioneering for any political party in the last elections.

President Marcos calls for this further action in addition to the charges already filed by the RCA against employees found to have illegal profits from fictitious purchase of cereal estimated in the amount of ₱50-million.

The President also sets the minimum charge of ten centavos for the transmission of complaints and grievances of citizens to the Land Authority governor, in connection with the implementation of the land reform program.

The minimum charge of ten centavos will apply to wires or other telegraphic services sent through or rendered by the bureau of telecommunications.

He declares that because of the importance of the land reform program, and due to the "manifold problems" that may be encountered in implementing it, it was essential for the proper authorities to pay the closest attention to any complaints or grievances from the public.

The benefits from the program, he adds, can only be fully realized if the government sector diligently attended to all the complexities involved.

Taking a breather from the daily stream of palace callers and official conferences, the President confines himself to his study where he worked on state papers, and went over preparations for the state visit to the United States and Japan.

In the morning, he starts his paperwork after playing a round of golf at the Malacañang Park.

In the afternoon, the President receives Ramon Nolan of the Sugar Quota Administration, who just returned from the U.S. Nolan reports to the President on his trip.

August 20.—THE Chief Executive submit a list of the sons of prominent families facing criminal charges to the Department of Justice with specific instructions to take a direct hand in prosecuting the cases.

The list contains some 20 names, and was furnished by Brig. Gen. Ricardo Papa, chief of police of Manila, at the request of the President.

The President orders the Department of Justice to pursue the cases with an eye to a speedy conclusion of each, even to the extent of dismissing or prosecuting in turn police officers or other government functionaries responsible for obstructing the course of justice.

In his directive, the President states that “I am certain many other similar cases all over the country involving sons of prominent families have been suspiciously dismissed, or are pending in court” under the same cloud of doubt.

He tells the Justice Department that “I cannot overemphasize to you the necessity for the speedy disposition of these cases, if only to prove to the people that under this administration, equality before the law is not an empty constitutional precept of our democracy.”

The President focuses his attention on official reports submitted to him by the different departments and agencies of the government, and other pressing matters.

Among such reports are those from the Department of National Defense on the Huk situation; from Secretary Ernesto Maceda of the Presidential Arm for Community Development on the Central Luzon Civic action program; and from Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez on the anti-smuggling campaign.

The President spends the rest of the day at work in the seclusion of his study.

In the evening, the President attends the sixth biennial convention of the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce at the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club in Mandaluyong, Rizal.

In his address, the President declares that the administration will be guided by fairness and justice in dealing with all citizens of the country and foreign nationals.

He at the same time warns, that he will not hesitate to deport or strip any Chinese found violating Philippine Laws.

The President recalls that he had ordered the deportation board to initiate deportation proceedings against Chinese tax evaders and those violating forestry laws and regulations.

He reveals that he observed that all of the reports he had received concerning trade, commerce and smuggling violations as well as of those regarding exploitation of natural resources, show that Chinese are among the offenders.

He appeals to the Chinese community here to cooperate in the enforcement of laws, in respecting the laws of the land, in the prosecution of government drives against crime and smuggling.

August 21.—THE President indicates that he will press for the prosecution of all parties responsible for mismanagement of projects under foreign loans, even as he took steps to expedite completion of said projects.

Taking note of reports that the World Bank and the Export-Import Bank were dissatisfied with the work on projects, and would withhold the unreleased balances of said loans because of this, the President:

1. Orders the director of the Civil Aeronautics Administration (CAA) to pinpoint responsibility for the failure to utilize as prescribed the $5.6 million loan extended by the Export-Import Bank in 1962 for the installation of navigational aids;
2. Asks the Secretary of Public Works to submit the names of parties responsible for the poor utilization of seven dredges obtained through World Bank loans.

The unsatisfactory use of the navigational aids and dredges was among the instances cited by the international financing institution to the technical panel the President had sent to the United States to explore possibilities for additional foreign financing of the country's development program. The panel had been told that the equipment for navigational facilities had never been installed although delivered long ago, while seven big dredging machines are now in a state of deterioration for lack of use.

As a result of this negligence, the President says, the World Bank has expressed to the Philippine government reluctance to recommend further loans to this country.

Another case cited by the Export-Import Bank was the construction of Piers 5 and 15 at the South Harbour, programmed to be completed in 1962 and 1963.

At the same time, the President instructs the bureau of forestry to do the scaling of logs for exports itself, averring that the past practice of allowing exporters to scale the logs was irregular.

The President disputes the validity of the excuse given by the bureau of forestry, to the effect that lack of bureau personnel had made it necessary to harness log exporters' scalers to do the job themselves.

It is held that loggers who scale their own logs have been under-scaling their exports for many years now, as borne out by discrepancies in revenue.

The President states that personnel unwilling to work in the provinces as scalers should be replaced immediately with people amenable to the assignment.

The President spend a relatively quiet day this day working most of the time on official papers in his private study.

In the morning, the President receives Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo, who took up with him the proposed Philippine Health Science Center in Diliman, Quezon City. Secretary Romulo is the only caller received by the President.

As envisioned by Secretary Romulo, the Center will unite in one complex on the Diliman campus in Quezon City the U.P. colleges of medicine, pharmacy and dentistry, nursing and other schools giving courses in allied professions, including a 500-bed teaching hospital.

The plan calls for a P50 million appropriation over a period of five years, at P10 million a year.

August 22.—THE President orders a general revamp of offices closely linked to the implementation of the administration's development program, notably the bureaus and agencies under the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

In addition, the President directs that all officials and employees found to have been negligent in the implementation of projects under foreign loans, as well as in the utilization of equipment procured under these loans, should be immediately suspended, and the offices concerned also reorganized.

The revamp is ordered to make the agencies and offices concerned more effective in implementing the development program of the administration. Among the entities initially affected are the National Irrigation Administration, the bureau of public works, and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The reforms envisioned are designed to upgrade the efficiency of the administrative machinery of the program, to make it more responsive to the needs of each projects.

President Marcos confers with top officials on pressing government matters, and receives ranking foreign dignitaries who came on formal calls, while attending to both routine and special matters in the usual crowded way of the Presidency.

In the morning, the President meets with Commerce Undersecretary Fernando Campos regarding the Philippine participation in the World Fair to be held in Bangkok from November 17 to December 10, this year.

In the afternoon, the President receives U.S. Ambassador William McCormick Blair, Jr. Ambassador Blair returns from a four-week tour abroad a few days ago.

In the evening, the President meets with top brass of the Department of National Defense and various military services for a regular briefing on current matters involving these organizations.

August 23.—MEETING some members of his cabinet to assess the H-fever threat, and the progress of various development programs the President orders the release of P100,000 from the contingent funds to meet emergency needs of public hospitals in meeting the increasing incidence of the disease.

During the meeting, the President directs Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia to prepare a hospital development program with an eye to encouraging specially the private sector to participate in a long-range program for a more extensive health program.

To support the program, the President asks Reparations Chairman Gregorio Abad to include in the 11th year reparations schedule $2 million worth of hospital equipment, with special attention given to requirements of provincial and other rural hospitals. This equipment will include mobile-laboratories to serve rural communities.

Following the meeting, the President receives the credentials of the Malaysian ambassador to the Philippines, H. E. Tan Sri Abdul Hamid Bin Haji Jumat.

During the presentation rites, the President invites the Federation of Malaysia to “pick up the threads of their common heritage and resume the close intercourse (with the Philippines) which marked the reign of their ancient datus, rajahs and sultans.”

Saying that the “goals of our two countries transcend common ethnic origins to find realization in wider regional collaboration,” the President declares that “this is the most significant historical event of our times—the metamorphosis of Asian nationalism into Asian regionalism.”

The Philippines and Malaysia resumed their diplomatic relations last June 3, after almost three years of diplomatic break since the formation of the Federation of Malaysia from the original states of Malaya, Singapore, and the North Borneo state of Sabah to which the Philippines has territorial claim.

In his statement, the Malaysian envoy notes “with deep satisfaction the achievements resulting from the close working relations between our two countries and with our sister country, Thailand, in the economic, cultural and social fields.”

Ambassador Abdul Hamid adds that these factors contribute to the “growing awareness among Southeast Asian countries of the value and importance of regional cooperation.”

In the afternoon, the President visits the San Lazaro Hospital on Tayuman, Sta. Cruz, Manila to check on mounting cases of H-fever, and conditions in the hospital.

In the course of his visit, the President issue the following directives and instructions to Secretary of Health Garcia:

1. To request the SEATO for the loan of an expert on H-fever.
2. To instruct all government hospitals and doctors to pay special attention to suspect H-fever cases and intensify the educational and information campaign on the prevention of the disease. He specifies that this drive be undertaken immediately, and spread as widely as possible.

He also asks all medical practitioners in the country, and professional groups, to rally to the government effort to check the spread of H-fever.

Meantime, the President invites local business leaders to join in the effort to tap available foreign capital for investment in the Philippines.

The President states that the administration was ready to provide incentives for the entry of foreign investment capital in the Philippines.

He urges local businessmen “to communicate directly with possible foreign investors and invite them to invest in appropriate projects in the Philippines.”

He asks the businessmen to join a group of business leaders constituted by the President, which is scheduled to leave for the United States, Europe and Japan to contact possible investors.

Among the incentives held out by the President are the following:

1. Remittance of profit at the free rate of exchange.
2. Entry of technical, managerial personnel who may remain until Filipino citizens are ready to take over.
3. Amortization of capital.

He likewise bares that he was establishing an investment center directly within his office in order to cut red tape and enable him to act on investment offers with dispatch.

August 24.—WITH the trimming down of the powers of the Presidential Agency on Reforms and Government Operations (PARGO) to investigations of purely anti-graft cases, President Marcos directs the agency to turn over immediately cases outside of this area to other government agencies with proper jurisdiction over them.

President Marcos also asks the PARGO to expedite the disposition of cases it is authorized to investigate, saying that further delay would be bad for the public service.

In his directive, the President specifies that the PARGO should turn over the following cases to the bureau of customs: Gonzalo Sy Trading, the Goodwill Valley Industrial Garments Manufacturing, the Carlos Lim, and the Valley Industries Co., Inc. These cases are to be turned over to the customs bureau, since they involve violations of tariff and customs laws.

The case of Chua Tak Tiok will be turned over to the National Bureau of Investigation, and that of the Pepsi Cola Bottling Company to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the President further orders.

In its latest report, the PARGO declares that it has been proving into 48 cases. These are the cases the President asked the agency to finish as soon as possible, in order that the public service will not suffer further from the stigma that these instances of graft and corruption have brought on it.

He issues the directive so that the presidential investigating arm will not run the risk of public suspicion while at the same time giving it more opportunity to delve deeper into irregularities and malfeasance in government.

At the same time, the President orders the bureau of immigration to inquire fully into reports of irregularities in the documentation of deceased aliens, and to deal properly with any immigration personnel involved in the case.

The President takes note of the practice of certain foreigners temporarily residing here to hide the deaths of compatriots and instead substitute illegal entrants for those already deceased, to avail of identification papers and other requirements.

He raps the bureau of immigration for not sooner delving deeper into this venality, when the practice has been “common knowledge” for a long time.

The President adds that a sensitive office such as the immigration bureau should remove personnel who lend themselves to chicanery, in the same way that the government desires to “get rid of undesirable aliens.”

Specially noted by the President is the “very low incidence of deaths of aliens in the country, particularly among Chinese nationals.”

This had led to the conclusion that foreigners without proper papers take the place of demised compatriots, in order that they may get the proper documentation for staying on in this country.

President Marcos likewise issue two proclamations declaring a special public holiday in the towns of Noveleta, Cavite and San Juan, Rizal to commemorate” the 70th year of these towns’ uprising against the Spanish government.

The proclamations, numbered 90 and 91, declare respectively August 31 a special public holiday in Noveleta, and August 29 a special public holiday in San Juan.

In issuing the twin proclamations, the President notes that it was on August 31 that the people of Noveleta “rose in revolt against Spanish domination” 70 years ago; while August 29 marks “the 70th anniversary of the Battle of Pinaglabanan, an important event in our struggle for freedom” which he added is of special significance to the residents of San Juan where the battle took place.

The Chief Executive limits his activities this day to private conferences with, close aides, on some urgent problems.

The few people who meets the President included Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, and Presidential Assistant Jaime Ferrer.

In the afternoon at the Pangarap guesthouse, the President receive Roberto Villanueva and Washington Sycip who informed the Chief Executive that they will soon leave to attend a business conference in Honolulu. They are among those asked by the President to go to either the United States, Japan or Europe to sound out foreign investors interested in investing in the Philippines especially in the economic development projects.

August 25.—IN view of the pressing need to improve the peace and order situation in the country, the President instructs the chief of the Philippine Constabulary to restrict the activities of the Criminal Investigation Service to the anti-crime and peace and order drives of the government.

He asks Brig. Gen. Segundo Velasco, PC chief, to channel the energies of the CIS purely to the solution of crimes, in order “to enhance peace and order.”

In this connection, the President notes that the CIS has been investigating businessmen and private firms, which he said is extraneous to its prescribed duties. He stresses that the investigative arm of the constabulary would be of greater service if it concentrated on furthering the campaign against crime and criminals.

The President's directive is in line with his desire to increase the efficiency and effectivity of various investigative offices of the government by confining them to the specific tasks they have been charged to do.

At the same time, the President, upon being informed of a bumper corn harvest in Mindanao, directs the Budget Commission to release P4-million to the Rice and Corn Administration to finance the agency's purchase of the cereal.

RCA Administrator Osmundo Mondoñedo reports to the President that production of corn in Mindanao, particularly in Cotabato, was bigger than expected, causing the corn price to slide below P13 per cavan. He adds that despite the activities of 16 mobile buying teams in Mindanao, the RCA could not purchase all the corn crops offered by farmers in the area.

The release of P4-million to the RCA will provide sufficient funds for the unexpectedly expanded buying program of the RCA in Mindanao, because of the bumper crop in corn.

The President orders the RCA to step up its buying operations.

The approaching departure of President Marcos for the United States on the scheduled state visit has caused him to give practically more and more time to the consideration of the various problems he can take up with Washington D. C. leaders, as evidenced by his closed-door sessions this day with separate officials.

One of the officials he had a long consultation with is Col. Nilo de Guia, chief of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, on the needs and problems of the agency, specifically in its efforts to improve and modernize local airport facilities.

The CAA has long been considered by the President for rehabilitation and improvement, and the discussions held with De Guia are aimed at ascertaining its immediate needs towards this much desired updating and upgrading of facilities.

In the same way, the President, as in the last few days, meet such other officials as could be accommodated into his usually full schedule, to similarly discuss individual problems of their offices, with a view to assessing the opportunities for getting firsthand information in the United States as to what can be produced there to help expedite the improvement of these agencies for greater effectiveness.

Otherwise, the Chief Executive this day has his full quota of state matters to consider and act on, notably in three areas of government concern; the anti-crime drive, food production and supply, and the anti-smuggling campaign.

August 26.—PRESIDENT Marcos relates his requirement that consular invoices must first be presented before imported goods are released by the bureau of customs.

The Chief Executive accedes to the request of the Association of Customs Brokers, led by Pedro C. Sales, to allow the filing of bank guarantees for the release of goods from other ports pending submission of the consular invoices.

The requirement on consular invoices was imposed last month as part of the measures to curb technical smuggling.

Sales, in his letter to the President, states that while the customs brokers association believes the President's earlier order to be essential, it requested a reconsideration insofar as importations coming from the United States, European countries and Japan are concerned, on the following grounds:

1. Consular invoices are very much delayed in transmission because of the inability of our consulate abroad to issue the same with dispatch. Importations coming from Japan require two or three weeks waiting period from the date of the shipment's arrival in Manila before release because of the delayed consular invoices.

2. Delay in delivery of mails

3. It has been the practice in the past, sanctioned by law, to allow the filing of entry, even without the consular invoice, upon posting of a bond of guarantee the submittal of the invoice and to pay the corresponding surcharges in case of failure to do so.

The President acts favorably on the brokers' request after Customs Commissioner Jacinto Gavino endorsed it, saying that the proposal would prevent serious congestion at the piers, which in turn would result in decreased customs revenue.

Commissioner Gavino recommends that importers and their brokers be allowed to file bank guarantees in favor of the Customs bureau in an amount not exceeding 50 per cent of the duties and taxes due on the importations, as securities for the submission of the invoices later.

At the same time, the President issues a proclamation declaring Tuesday, August 30, a special public holiday in Bulacan province.

The President issues the proclamation in order to afford the people of the province an opportunity to celebrate the 116th anniversary of the birth of Marcelo H. del Pilar with appropriate ceremonies.

Del Pilar, the Filipino hero and patriot, who went under the pen name "Plaridel" in his fight for reforms in the Philippines during the Spanish regime, was born in Bulacan, Bulacan, on August 30, 1850.

In the morning, the President gives priority to legislative matters, and meet with some members of Congress on measures still awaiting action by both Houses in the current special session (third).

Following his meeting with some congressmen, the President discusses the preparation of the 11th year schedule of reparations from Japan with Reparations Chairman Gregorio Abad.

August 27.—THE Chief Executive orders the court-martial of five non-commissioned constabulary officers escorting Lino Bocalan at the time the latter descended on a control point in Panamitan, Kawit Cavite two weeks ago with other armed men.

Ordered to stand army trial are T/Sgt. Teodoro Mendoz, T/Sgt. Daniel Salamanca, Cpl. Ermelo Sotto, and Cpl. Ramon Corpuz. The Pfc a retired armed forces soldier is identified as MP Sgt. Cipriano Marasigan.

Investigation conducted by the Department of Justice and the Philippine Constabulary, upon instruction of the President, discloses that on the afternoon of August 14, Pfc. Rolando Memita was manning the control point in barrio Panamitan when a car owned by a sister of Bocalan, Mrs. Lucia Bocalan Calixto, came along.

The PC trooper stopped the car and requested Bocalan's sister to submit for inspection a bundle she was holding and to open the rear compartment of the car also for inspection which was a routine procedure at the check point.

In reply to Memita's request, the woman lambasted the trooper, which made him call up the 137th headquarters and request for an investigator.

Not long after, five cars bearing Bocalan and some armed men arrived. Bocalan inquired into the incident between his sister and the PC soldier.

Investigation further disclosed that the armed men with Bocalan advanced menacingly on Pfc. Memita, who backed up and brought his carbine at ready position to defend himself.

In their report to the President Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee and PC Chief Brig. Gen. Segundo Velasco said the conduct of Bocalan and his henchmen “demonstrated a scandalous show of force to assault or intimidate a sentry on duty.”

At the same time, the President orders the relief of Lt. Cesar Nazareno, commander of the 90th P. C. company in Pagadian, Zamboanga del Sur, for selling smuggled cigarettes in violation of existing regulations.

The President also orders the filing of court-martial charges against Nazareno.

Lt. Nazareno was reported to have been selling smuggled blue seal cigarettes seized by his unit.

The President spends most of his time in his private study browsing over a pile of state papers brought to him by aides for action.

August 28.—THE President dismisses a provincial fiscal and an assistant provincial fiscal on grounds of dishonesty, misconduct, and dereliction of duty while prosecuting a smuggling case.

Ordered dismissed are Fiscal Juan Salazar and Assistant Fiscal Eliezer Tengco, both of Laguna.

The charges against the two fiscal arises from the loss of 7,600 cartons of confiscated blue seal cigarettes, which were held as evidence in a smuggling case.

At the same time, the President directs the chief of the Philippine Constabulary to place under PC control immediately the provincial jail of Zamboanga del Sur and investigate the warden for allowing prisoners to build fishpond for private parties.

The President asks that the PC probe the warden at once, identified in the report only as Capt. Dalina, with an eye to administrative charges or possible criminal prosecution.

In other directives issued this day, the President directs Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to:

1. Study the feasibility of exempting embroidery workers, particularly those who do piece work, from coming under the minimum wage law;
2. Prod the Department of Foreign Affairs into expediting negotiations with Malaysia for cooperation in the anti-smuggling drive so that Philippine Navy patrol boats may operate in North Borneo waters;
3. Ask Presidential Assistant Jose Nable on Housing to study slum problems in Manila and suburbs;
4. Inform farmers in General Santos, Cotabato, through the Agricultural Productivity Commission, not to sell their lands because of the banana project to be set up in that area which will be beneficial to them;
5. Study through the Presidential Economic Staff the proposed acquisition of real estate by the land bank, recommend to the secretary of finance reactivation of the position of customs attache; and study the bill declaring certain municipalities created by executive orders as duly constituted municipalities.

The President devotes the rest of the day going over preparations for his forthcoming state visit to the United States and Japan.

August 29.—PRESIDENT Marcos seeks to harness the country's ambassadors abroad to the effort of tapping all possible sources for loans to finance the administration's development program.

The President discusses the projects with Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

The President likewise receives the preliminary report of Secretary Ramos on his recent trip to Indonesia, during which he conveyed the greetings of President Sukarno and Prime Minister Suharto of Indonesia.

Ramos informs the President of the proposed plan for the disposition of the $28 million education fund, created out of the balance of $37 million paid out by the United States government in war claim to the Philippines.

The President instructs Ramos to utilize the services of Filipino envoys abroad in searching out all possible sources of loans in Europe and the Americas as well as other investment-rich countries, to supplement other efforts now being organized by the administration to obtain financing for the nation's economic development program.

In the evening, the President attends the inauguration and blessing of the Marcelo Wire Rod Mill as special guest and speaker.

In his extemporaneous remarks during the inauguration ceremonies of the P50 million wire rod mill plant, the President states that "not too long from now, the Philippines will be able to catch up" with other countries in industrial development.

He says he is proud of the present generations, which includes the Marcelo industrialists in whose efforts to extend their industrial enterprises, the country has seen not only self-reliance and coincidence in their skills and abilities but also in the country's future.

The new mill will be turning out 72,000 metric tons of steel wire rod annually, while increasing the capacity of the plant to an output of 100,000 metric tons a year.

August 30.—TO clarify conflicting reports on the presence of five constabulary personnel with the Bocalan group which had an altercation with a sentry in Cavite, President Marcos calls a conference of ranking officials of the defense department and the armed forces.

The upshot of the conference is the decision of the President to continue with the court martial proceedings against the five PC personnel.

The President specifies that he had not ordered any intelligence mission for the five troopers to undertake, nor was he aware of any such mission.

He also discloses that soon after the report of the presence of the five men with the group led by Lino Bocalan, he had ordered the five PC men to be interrogated. He asks that the interrogation be continued.

He had called the conference following various reports in the press and elsewhere, which did not agree on why the five PC men now facing court martial were identified as among the armed men Bocalan led to the sentry post in Kawit, Cavite checkpoint

Some reports states that the five PC men were on an intelligence mission, to infiltrate the Bocalan organization. Other reports states that the five were working for a congressman. who is investigating smuggling activities in Cavite.

At the same time, the President asks the Secretary of Foreign Affairs to require Philippine consulates abroad to validate consular invoices of importations to the Philippines, only after the data declared therein had been previously authenticated by an impartial and reputable entity in the places of origin.

Among these entities are chambers of commerce or trade or business associations which offer price verification services at nominal or no cost to exporters.

In the afternoon, the President conferred with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas and Commissioner Blas Ople of the Social Security System, regarding problems in their respective offices.

Meanwhile, President Marcos pays tribute to the late President Ramon Magsaysay for giving the nation a new faith in itself "at a time when it seemed to have lost confidence in its capacity and will" to fight evil.

In a message issued on the eve of the 59th birth anniversary of the late Chief Executive, the President states that Ramon Magsaysay "took over the reins of leadership with such vigor and freshness of vision that were galvanized to action."

But most of all, the President points out, the late Chief Executive reawakened in the Filipino people a concern for the common man and a sense of mission in "correcting old injustices and wrongs done to him."

"As long as we keep faith with his vision and his hope for our country," the President states, "we will not honor his memory but, in a real way, bring to fruition the tasks that he began so well."

President Marcos likewise extolls the hero, Marcelo H. del Pilar, saying that very few Filipinos had given as much as he had to the cause of freedom and nationalism.

In a message issued on the 116th birth anniversary of the hero, the President says that Del Pilar "gladly suffered imprisonment, exile and starvation so that his brethren might awake to a regime of law, justice and liberty."

The President had previously proclaimed this day, August 30, a special holiday in Ilocos to give the people of the home province an opportunity to celebrate the day with appropriate ceremonies. The President's message for the occasion follows:

"In the pantheon of Filipino heroes, Marcelo H. del Pilar occupies a central place.

"Very few have given as much as he had to the cause of Filipino freedom and nationalism. He gladly suffered imprisonment, exile and starvation so that his brethren might awake to a regime of law, justice and liberty.

"He fought tyranny, superstition, injustice with his implacable mind and pen. Not once, in his long and hazardous career as journalist and pamphleteer, did he compromise his beliefs. So firm was he in his convictions that even his enemies on his death, were moved to say: . . . Marcelo H. del Pilar as a propagandist is doubtless the greatest produced by the Tagalog race.

"On this occasion, it is most appropriate for our journalists to turn their thoughts to Del Pilar and to measure their tasks and commitments by his canons.

"The dimensions of Del Pilar's achievement should be points of reference of contemporary Philippine journalism."

August 31.—CALLING attention to reports in the Manila press indicating that certain officials had been exerting undue influence in the allocation of reparations goods, President Marcos orders the suspension of the procurement of tractors through reparations and directs Reparations Chairman Gregorio Abad to conduct an investigation into alleged irregularities in their procurement.

The President orders Chairman Abad to conduct the investigation and to suspend the procurement of tractors of the 120 and 180 horse power type in the face of an alleged controversy between two pressure groups vying for the award of the reparations items.

He also directs Undersecretary of Public Works Marciano Bautista to return to Manila at once to shed light on the reported irregularities. Bautista has been in Tokyo following up procurement of public works equipment under reparations.

“To avoid further suspicion, return to Manila immediately with latest report on your conversations with the Japanese government pertaining to Japanese loans,” the President writes in a cable to Bautista.

The President tells Chairman Abad to withhold any awards for the purchase of tractors under reparations until the department of Public Works has indicated how the tractors would be used, and thus justify their purchase under reparations.

The purchase of the equipment had been opposed especially by the Agricultural Productivity Commission, which held that they were too large and heavy to allow passage in some of the bridges.

At the same time, the President issues a proclamation declaring Friday, September 2, this year, a special public holiday in Guinobatan, Albay.

The day marks the 101st birth anniversary of General Simeon Ola y Arboleda, one of the last Filipinos to surrender during the Filipino-American war.

The Chief Executive proclaims the special holiday in Guinobatan upon the request of the towns-people who wanted to celebrate the birthday of their distinguished townmate with appropriate ceremonies.

In the morning, the President briskly receive several callers, notably United States Ambassador William M. Blair, Jr., Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, and the board of governors of the Development Bank of the Philippines headed by Chairman Gregorio Licaros.

After discussing the DBP problems, the President ask the governors to make a study of the sectors of development where foreign investments could be of greatest use to benefit the country.

Following his meeting with the DBP officials, the Chief Executive has lunch with Michael Keon, regional adviser on information for Asia and the Far East of the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) and other officials of the UN body.

The FAO officials is here to pave the way for the coming visit here early next month of FAO Director-General Binay Ranjan Sen.

In the evening, the President presents the 9th Ramon Magsaysay Awards to four recipients at ceremonies held at the Philam Life auditorium on United Nations Avenue.

The four Asians, who received their awards from the President are:

1. Dr. Phon Sangsingkeo of Thailand, for government service;
2. Shirmati Kamaladevi Chattopadhyay of India, for community leadership;
3. Jim Yong-Ki of Korea, for public service; and
4. Phonangkeoh Phanareth and C. Hart Schaaf in behalf of the Committee for Coordination of Investigation of the Lower Mekong Basin and cooperating entities, for international understanding.

President's Week in Review: September 1-15, 1966

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

September 1.—PRESIDENT Marcos certifies the strike called by the National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority (NAWASA) Supervisors' Association to the Court of Industrial Relations.

The certification, as signed by the President, is a continuing one, covering all other strikes in the future based on the same points of disagreement between the striking NAWASA union and the management, and citing the same causes.

The Chief Executive states that it is imperative that the labor dispute in the NAWASA be resolved immediately such that the water agency's operations are not disrupted.

Acting Chairman-General Manager Antonio Menor of the NAWASA reports to the President that the strike was called by around 500 supervisors early this day, and that it afflicted rank and file personnel as well who chose not to cross the picket lines.

The supervisors have demanded salary increases proportionate to the increases given last November to eight NAWASA officials by the previous NAWASA board. Menor states that while he considers the demand justified, the agency could not afford it at present.

In his report to the President, Menor also says he has told the striking supervisors that when the NAWASA improvement program is completed and the agency has increased its income, possibly by January, 1958, their demands will be met. If granted, the supervisors' demands would entail an additional annual outlay of P600,000 for salaries, which, if the rank and file were to claim the same adjusted increases, would add up to P4 million annually, Menor adds.

At the same time, the President signs into law House Bill No. 8791, providing greater benefits for the 1.5 million members of the Social Security System.

In the morning, the President has at the top his schedule a breakfast with David Rockefeller, a house guest at the Palace, who came here to represent the Rockefeller Foundation in the Ramon Magsaysay Awards ceremonies.

Following the breakfast, the President confers with Secretaries Eduardo Romualdez, Juan Ponce Enrile, and with Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff, with whom he discussed various financial and economic matters.

During the conference, the President also names Enrile as acting insurance commissioner, vice commissioner Francisco Mandanas.

The President takes the step as an initial move to prevent further losses to the government.

The President instructs Enrile to immediately reorganize the insurance commission. With the aim of enhancing its efficiency, specifically ordering him to inquire into the financial status of bonding and surety firms.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, give a formal dinner in honor of the recipients of the 1966 Ramon Magsaysay Memorial Awards.

September 2.—CLAMPING a ban on travel to the United States or Japan by government officials who appear to want to take advantage of the Presidential state visits to these two countries, President Marcos tells them to stay home and do their work.

The Chief Executive shuts the lid on travel by government officials to these two countries, in a memorandum issued to cabinet members, which specified that only those few officials needed on the state visits are authorized to leave the country.

Other officials planning trips to the US and Japan, under any guise, and even on their own expense, are told by the President to remain at their desks.

He declares that those officials not needed by him on the state visits have enough problems and work to do at home to even think of making unnecessary trips abroad.

At the same time, the President directs the Department of Finance to inquire into the operations of two Chinese owned corporations which have reportedly misused imports of raw materials resulting in the loss of substantial revenues to the government.

The President orders the investigation after receiving reports that the Superior Products Corporation and the Goodwill Steel Corporations had defrauded the government of taxes and revenues by selling their imported steel wire rods to other firms manufacturing steel products.

The two companies are allowed to import raw materials for their two factories, which produce galvanized wire. However, reports reaching the President showed that the Superior Production Corporation is not operating, and that both have been selling outright their raw materials to other firms manufacturing nails.

The President declares that these illegal operations have cost the government millions of pesos, much of which was the result of the loss of the 40 per cent differential allowed for raw materials importations.

President Marcos likewise designates a new administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration, with a mission to improve and speed up electrical facilities in the barrios and other localities.

Named as the new REA head is Rizalino E. Lopez, farmer and engineer of Moncada, Tarlac. Also designated is Leonardo Coloso, as acting REA deputy administrator.

The President instructs Lopez to expedite the installation of electric power and other electrical services in rural communities, which is necessary to the rural development program.

In the morning, the President receives several callers at his study. Among those who saw the President are Public Works Undersecretary Marciano Bautista, staff members of the Weekly Nation Magazine and members of the Tamaraw Toastmasters Club headed by former Ambassador Mauro Beradi.

Secretary Bautista, who arrived the other night from Tokyo, reports to the President on his mission to Japan to procure through reparations, machinery and other equipment for the administration's rural development and public works program.

The "Toastmasters" informs the Chief Executive that one of its members Alberto Cacnio, has won the first prize in the International Overseas taped speech contest of the Toastmasters International held in San Diego, California recently. The contest is participated in by representatives from 3,600 clubs in 48 countries.

In the evening, the President receives the officers and men of the Philcon III and congratulated them for their splendid performance while on the humanitarian mission to South Vietnam.

The 32-Man contingent composed of doctors, engineers, nurses and other technicians is needed by Capt. Dominador Seva and is the third batch of returnees after their one-year stint in that embattled country.

September 3.—INITIATING the revamp of the National Irrigation Administration, President Marcos orders the detailing of Administrator Tomas de Guzman with the Department of Agriculture and designates Alfredo L. Juinio as acting NIA administrator.

The transfer of de Guzman is the first step in the new attempt to revitalize the NIA to make it a more effective arm of the government in the implementation of the development program.

The reorganization plans for the agency include changes that would affect the engineers in the project level.

The directive to revamp the NIA was spurred by the failure of the agency to make use of foreign loans. It was also discovered that some of the irrigation projects and equipment had been neglected.

In initiating the revamp of the NIA, the President declares, “in view of the critical attitude of the World Bank as a result of the manner in which loans for the improvement of irrigation systems had been utilized by the NIA, it becomes urgent that a qualified administrator be appointed to head the agency.”

The National Irrigation Administration is the first agency to be ordered reorganized. Others ordered reorganized immediately were the bureau of public works and the civil aeronautics administration.

Juinio is a special assistant to U.P. President Carlos P. Romulo, on campus development in the U.P. He is known for his integrity and excellent record as civil and structural engineer. He is a product of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Class 1947, and past president of the Philippine Association of Civil Engineers.

At the same time, the President doubles the subsistence allowance of enlisted men in the armed forces engaged in the campaign against smuggling and the Huk resurgence in Central Luzon.

In directing Gen. Ernesto Mata, armed forces chief of staff, to increase the allowances of these enlisted men, the President states the government should give recognition in terms of compensation for the difficulties and the risks faced by these men. Those engaged in the anti-smuggling campaign and the campaign against the Huks risk their lives everyday, he adds.

The order of the President raising by another peso the daily subsistence allowance of enlisted men will benefit some 20,000 members of the Philippine Constabulary and the regular army.

In the morning, the President receives Monsignor Mariano Gaviola, who called on the Chief Executive preparatory to his departure for Germany to secure aid for the Catholic Charities.

Following the call of Msgr. Gaviola, the President received David Rockefeller and Alfred Wentworth, president and vice president, respectively, of the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York.

Rockefeller and Wentworth called on the First Couple to say goodbye before returning to New York. Rockefeller came to the Philippines to represent the Rockefeller Brothers at the 9th annual presentation of the Ramon Magsaysay Awards, which were presented last August 31, the 59th birth anniversary of President Magsaysay.

September 4.—IN an appeal to textile manufacturers and dealers, the President urges them to help the government in bringing down the price of textiles, which has purportedly increased considerably.

The President, in his appeal, points out that now that the local textile industry has recovered from the adverse effects of the economic policies of the past administration it was their turn to help the government in helping maintain prices at reasonable levels.

His appeal is accompanied by a warning that he is ready to adopt measures to lower prices, if the appeal was not heeded.

He states the government is ready to take more drastic measures to bring down prices including importation of textile through the NAMARCO.

At the same time, the President orders the investigation into an alleged scheme of certain public officials to “milk” Lino Bocalan and the alleged employment of men identified with Bocalan as agents by the Civil Affairs Office of the Department of National Defense.

The President issues the order to Undersecretary of Defense Alfonso Arellano. His directive is spurred by a letter of Cavite Gov. Delfin Montano claiming that “there was a protection racket scheme masterminded by Rep. Floro Crisologo and a certain Roque Ablan to milk Lino Bocalan” by using the President’s name.

Gov. Montano’s letter to the President is an off-shot of an expose made in the halls of Congress during a Congressional Committee hearing by Rep. Crisologo exposing the alleged involvement of armed forces men and other people in smuggling activities.

The President spends the whole day working in the seclusion of his study on official papers, including the appointments of officials bypassed in the last special session of Congress.

September 5.—TO step up the drive against smuggling and its attendant problem of criminality and lawlessness through the Courts, the President approves the nomination for ad interim appointments of 31 new municipal judges and two clerks of court.

The President, in speeding up the assignment of judges, seeks to hasten the resolution of criminal cases that have clogged the nation’s courts for a long time.

At the same time, the Chief Executive serves warning on smugglers that the government’s intensified anti-smuggling campaign will continue without let-up during his absence from the country.

He serves the warning following reports that smugglers plan to resume or intensify their operations during his forthcoming state visits to the U.S. and Japan.

It was gathered that big-time smugglers already had started offering considerable sums of money to certain ranking armed forces and police officers, in consideration for special favors during the President’s absence from the country, particularly in landing contraband.

Asking all those engaged in the campaign not to relax their vigilance the President in his memorandum, declares: “Smuggling almost ruined our economy, corrupted the morals of our people and sapped the vitality of the nation during the past administration that it is our bounden duty to carry on with the task against all odds.”

President Marcos likewise instructs Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to take steps to cancel the lease of the Bureau of Forestry building in Binondo, Manila by the Philippine Progress, Incorporated.

The lease, entered into between the Bureau of Building and the Real Property Management and the Philippine Progress, was held as in contravention of Republic Act No; 4187. R.A. 4187 authorized the sale of the land with all the improvements therein owned by the national government.

The law provides that the proceeds of the sale of the property will be used for the construction of a building or buildings to accommodate the Offices of the Bureau of Forestry in Diliman, Quezon City.

The President receives a limited number of official callers to devote more time to the study of the nation’s primary problems.

The President is closeted the whole day in his study working on state papers.

September 6.—IN order to harness its considerable capabilities in the current anti-dissident, anti-smuggling and anti-crime campaigns, President Marcos directs the Undersecretary of Defense to reactivate the Peace and Amelioration Fund Commission (PAFC).

The Chief Executive instructs Undersecretary of Defense Alfonso Arellano to reconstitute the PAFC, moribund since two years ago, and utilize its machinery and the fund it can generate to intensify the government drives against crime and smuggling in particular, and the anti-dissident drive as well.

He seeks the reactivation of the PAFC in an effort to draw every effective element into the government drive aimed at restoring peace and order and preparing the ground for the massive development of the economy.

It is recalled that the PAFC in the years it was active helped substantially in prosecuting the campaigns against Huks, the drive to recover loose firearms, and against the then incipient but growing menace of smuggling.

The commission was originally created in 1954 to raise additional funds through voluntary contributions in meeting the threat of Huk dissidence and subversion.

In 1962, the PAFC was abolished by Executive Order No. 11, when regularly appropriated funds became available, then recreated in 1964. But it had been inactive since.

The President considers the reactivation of the PAFC as essential today because of the strain the government feels in its finances, as a result of the depletion of the public treasury in the past four years.

At the same time, the President issues an administrative order defining in clear-cut terms the government policy on foreign investments to dissipate the confusion and conflict, and to serve as guideline for all government offices and agencies.

Based on the constitutional provisions on foreign investments, the President's order was issued in the face of the "need to attract foreign investments to augment domestic resources required to hasten the progress of economic development.

The President's order stresses that all investors in the Philippines will be assured of basic rights and guarantees provided in the Constitution.

He directs the Central Bank and the National Economic Council to assume the responsibility of protecting these rights, among which are:

1. Repatriation of investment in whole or part, upon liquidation of the investment;
2. Remittance of earnings from the investment;
3. Remittance of such sums needed to pay the interest or principal of foreign loans;
4. Remittance of money to service foreign obligations arising from contracts of transfer of license or other processes of manufacturing and technical or managerial services.

The order also delineates the preferred areas for foreign investments to develop, namely:

Commercial and agricultural crops, livestock, marine products, mining, wood processing, food manufacturing, pulp and paper products, chemicals, non-metallic mineral products, basic metals, non-electrical machinery, electrical machinery, transport equipment, transportation, public improvement projects such as public works construction, storage.

President Marcos also orders the cancellation of the licenses of 120 retailers of the Rice and Corn Administration caught blackmarketing RCA rice.

The President's order is transmitted in a memorandum to Commerce Secretary Marcelo Balatbat and to Chairman and General Manager Osmundo Mondoñedo of the RCA.

Licenses to engage in the retail business issued by the Bureau of Commerce to those caught are immediately cancelled.

The President declares that merchants caught illegally trading in rice will be dealt with severely.

The Chief Executive spends the whole day working on state papers in the seclusion of his private study.

September 7.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the speedy resolution of deportation cases involving two Chinese nationals for violations of Philippine laws.

The Chief Executive's order is based on a report of Secretary Bartolome Cabangbang of the Presidential Agency for Reforms and Government Operations (PARGO).

Tagged for deportation are Lao Pin Chiu and John Lao, owners and managers of the Kanebo Laboratories on Times street, Quezon City. The firm was "caught in the act manufacturing cosmetic without proper permit from the government authorities."

The duo are also charged with "deceiving or defrauding the public by giving the goods (they manufacture) the appearance of articles manufactured by another manufacturer."

During the search conducted by PARGO agents at the Kanebo Laboratories premises last June 12, it was found out that the plant was owned and managed by Chiu, with his son, John, and Lourdes Marcelo, a Filipino and daughter-in-law of Chiu, acting as officials of the firm. The laboratory is registered in Lourdes' name.

At the same time, the President directs the Philippine Constabulary to conduct its own search for the light plane which has been missing with four men aboard since August 27 and believed to have ditched somewhere along the coast of Ilocos Sur.

He had previously appealed to the people in the Ilocos provinces to extend all possible assistance to the search parties now combing the area where the missing plane was said to have crashed. The appeal was tape-recorded and broadcast by local radio stations in the region.

The President is kept busy by state papers, problems that reached his desk, and the usual quota of callers. Notable among his callers are:

Japanese Ambassador Harumi Takeuchi, who discusses the details of the coming state visit of the President to Tokyo, which will follow the state visit to the U.S. at around the end of this month.

Dr. Binay Ranjan Sen, director-general of the Food and Agriculture Organization, who is visiting here at the invitation of the government.

Dr. Sen had long scheduled a visit to this country, in connection with the food production program of the administration and the overall intensified agricultural development program, which the President had given equal emphasis with the industrial development program.

Between callers and meetings with officials, the President stays close to his desk in his study, working on government papers and other official business.

Meantime, President Marcos felicitated the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization on its 12th anniversary, saying that the organization has amply fulfilled its role in providing a deterrent to communist aggression and in extending the efforts to develop the Asian region.

The Chief Executive congratulates the members of SEATO for their continuing support of the organization, which he states fully deserves the trust and confidence of the free peoples of Asia.

He notes that since the establishment of SEATO, there has been a marked feeling of stability in the region, a sense of security among small nations, which he said is shared by even those who are not signatories to the treaty.

The President points out that the activities of SEATO in the area of peaceful pursuits have largely escaped the notice of the world, but he stressed that these activities have been considerable and invaluable in the pull of Asian nations toward greater understanding of each other corporation, and in the development of their countries.

He states that as long as the members of SEATO continue to work together in harmony and unity, the organization will grow stronger and more effective not only as a deterrent to aggression but as a true force for peace and progress.

September 8.—STARTING the day with a breakfast conference with Dr. B.R. Sen, director-general of the Food and Agriculture Organization, President Marcos takes up with Dr. Sen the agricultural food problems in the area and plans to convert the Philippines into a FAO project for the Far East.

Dr. Sen is here on a three-day visit as official guest of the Philippine government.

The Chief Executive receives very few callers this day, spending most of the day clearing his desk of all important matters prior to his departure for Washington on Sept. 12, and in consultation with his aides, among them:

1. Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, who takes up with him problems of the department, including the appointment of judges, some of which appointments were bypassed by Congress during its last session.
2. Gen. Eulogio Balao, who briefs the President on the status of the Philippine veterans' claims now before the Joint US-RP Veterans Commission.
3. Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, with whom the President takes up pending administrative matters.

At the same time, the President signs into law five bills passed by Congress during its third special session. The bills were brought to the Palace by Col. Moises Buhain, aide to Speaker Cornelio T. Villareal.

The bills signed this day are:

1. H. No. 6951 now Republic Act No. 4864 creating the Police Commission to improve the nation's police system.
2. H. No. 1 which becomes Republic Act No. 4860 authorizing the President to incur or guarantee foreign debts not exceeding $1-billion (US) in behalf of the Republic, for economic development purposes.
3. H. No. 12 now Republic Act No. 4861 which amends R.A. 1000 so as to authorize the President to issue bonds not exceeding P2-billion to finance public works and self-liquidating projects for economic development.
4. H. No. 2035 amending Section 1 of R. A. 2686 which became Republic Act No. 4862 authorizing the President to negotiate for increases in the Philippines subscription to the capital stock of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and to its quota in the International Monetary Fund, such subscription and such quota not to exceed $175-million (US).

4. H. No. 7351 which became Republic Act No. 4863 appropriating P100,000 to cover all expenses for the holding of the Asian Ministers of Labor Conference in Manila.

In the afternoon, the President receives P.K. Macker and Manuel A. Gaerlan, publisher and editor, respectively, of the Philippines Herald, and Manila Times columnist Max Soliven.

Meanwhile, the President signs a proclamation declaring Friday, Sept. 9, a special public holiday in Cebu province and in the Cities of Cebu, Danao, Lapu-lapu and Toledo.

Sept. 9 marks the birth anniversary of the late President Sergio Osmeña, Sr., second President of the Commonwealth whom President Marcos described as a “patriot, statesmen and staunch advocate of nationalism and Philippine Independence.”

September 9.—PRESIDENT Marcos remands to the Presidential Agency for Reforms and Government Operations (PARGO) six cases it had started, directing it to close one case and to pursue the investigation of the ourit others in collaboration with other government agencies involved.

The President also assigns the remaining seven of the original 48 cases submitted by PARGO to government agencies which have jurisdiction over the matters being investigated.

The bulk of PARGO cases were reassigned earlier to other government agencies which would proceed with the investigation or prosecution of the same.

In the morning, the President receives student leaders from the University of the Philippines who earlier led a demonstration at the Palace grounds to protest certain government policies.

In his brief talks with the student leaders, the President explains the nature of his visit to the United States.

In the afternoon, the President together with Dr. B.R. Sen, director-general of the FAO, meets representatives of the news media at a press conference.

During the conference, the President discloses he had signed an executive order that would declare a national emergency if hoarders and profiteers continued to manipulate the prices of rice.

The President notes that since he issued the warning on hoarding and profiteering last Monday, there had been a noticeable downtrend in the prices of the staple.

At the conference, the President also warns of the existence of a “security gap” in Asia due to a “militant and intransigent Red China.” He states Asian nations alone or collectively could not stand against Communist China. At the moment, he adds, only the American presence in the region could counter this “security gap.”

September 10.—THE Chief Executive reviews with members of his cabinet the problems of state that need his attention, prior to his departure for the state Visits to the United States and Japan on Monday.

He and his cabinet members go over the agricultural development program in general and the rice situation in particular, with emphasis laid on the progress of the Central Luzon Development Program in connection with socio-economic projects being pursued under this special body.

The President takes note of the school building program which to date has added some 69 new schools in that region, while the bureau of public works has built 37 other schools.

He tells the cabinet that he wanted the school building program accelerated, and instructs Undersecretary of Public Works Marciano Bautista to expedite follow-up of the procurement under the reparations program of 10 per-fabricating plants.

Other matters taken up at the cabinet meeting are progress reports on various projects and programs of the government, such as the anti-smuggling drive, the anti-crime drive, irrigation and public works projects, and others.

At the meeting, the President also defines the areas of responsibility of the Vice President, the Executive Secretary, and appointed Undersecretary of Defense Alfonso Arellano acting defense secretary in the Chief Executive's absence. He likewise appoints Vitaliano Bernardino Undersecretary of education for administration, raising him from his present post as director of public schools.

Meantime, President Marcos calls upon the Filipino people "to unite with the Armed Forces in meeting the dangers within us—those who will despoil us of our independence and liberty, whether directly or indirectly, overtly or by proxy."

The President sounds the call as he receives the Armed Forces' pledge of loyalty during a parade and review at Camp Aguinaldo, a traditional honor bestowed by the Armed Forces on the Commander-in-Chief on the eve of the President's birthday.

In an extemporaneous remarks prefaced in Filipino, the President emphasizes the heroic tradition and glories of the nation's armed forces.

This tradition, he states, goes back to the time when our forefathers first landed on these islands that came to be known as the Philippines, after fleeing the tyranny of the Madjapahit Empire.

These forebears of the Filipinos sought to create a new nation, the President states, based on freedom, This objective has not changed since, he adds.

He recounts how these early Filipinos lived in freedom, which was endowed with Arabic, Hindu and Chinese civilizations. The Filipino race developed in this oriental foundation, he says, and was later to adopt the civilization of the West.

The President notes that of Asian and African nations, the Philippines was the first to stage an anti-colonial revolution. But winning political emancipation is easier than winning economic emancipation, he continues.

Touching on the Philippine Civic Action Group, the main body of which will leave the next day for South Vietnam, the President declares that the group is not going on a hostile mission. They will go to Vietnam to bring the fruits of peace where there has been war, extend friendship where there was anger, and reestablish the conditions of freedom where these have been disturbed, the President explains.

September 11.—ON the occasion of his 49th birth anniversary, President Marcos extends executive clemency to a total of 73 prisoners.

Of those granted clemency, 18 are conditional pardons, 45 commutations of sentences, nine absolute pardons and one special absolute pardon.

In the morning, the President observes his 49th birthday by hearing an early morning Mass with members of his family.

Following the mass, the President entertains close friends and relatives at breakfast held at the Heroes' Hall.

After breakfast, the President motors to Fort Bonifacio where, as Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces, he personally sends off the PHILCAG team leaving for Vietnam. He also personally handed to Brig. Gen. Gaudencio Tobias, PHILCAG commander, the unit colors.

In brief, emotion-choked remarks, the President likewise gives the PHILCAG team its mission orders: "You shall not fire any shot in anger but rather ourit you shall utilize your weapons only in the protection of your own lives and succor the sick and the wounded of body and spirit."

He orders "Rehabilitate that ravaged land. Rebuild the homes and schoolhouses, reconstruct the roads and the bridges so that those aggrieved and oppressed people may know ultimately and at last that the greater portion of humanity, especially their Asian brothers, condole with them."

He exhorts the PHILCAG men to uphold their colors at all times for "it bears the traditions of your forebears."

He concludes his remarks saying "If these colors should go from your hands, let it fall from hands that have no more life in them and if you should fall and your men fall with you, fall with honor."

Back at the Palace about 11:30 a.m., the President joins the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, in receiving his thousands of well-wishers on his birthday.

He receives callers up to 1 p.m.

In the afternoon, the President administer the oath of office to Defense Undersecretary Alfonso Arellano as acting secretary of defense, and to seven colonels in the armed forces as brigadier generals.

The new one-star generals are Salvador Piccio, Reynaldo Mendoza, Ruben Maglaya, Emmanuel Casabar, Vicente R. Raval, Isauro Sison and Vicente Javier.

September 12.—IN line with a resolution adopted by the United Nations General Assembly, upon recommendation of the Economic and Social Council, the President signs a proclamation declaring 1967 as "International Travel Year" and creates a committee to undertake preparations for its observance.

In signing the proclamation, the President notes that the Travel Year's purpose is "to impress upon the people of the world the contribution of international tourism in enriching the mind, and ourit breeding tolerance towards other people through a direct knowledge of their way of life and their problems."

He also states that this observance will help our people understand better the meaning of the universal declaration of the rights of man with particular reference to "the freedom to travel, the right to rest and leisure, and the right to participate in the cultural life and in the benefits of human progress."

Suitable preparations and appropriate observance of the Travel Year will be undertaken by a government committee with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas as chairman, and the commissioner on tourism as executive vice-chairman.

When the UN adopted the resolution declaring 1967 as International Travel Year, it was its purpose, among others, "to make government aware of their responsibilities in the field of international tourism as well as for the realization of tourism's importance."

The Philippines was one of the twelve countries which sponsored the UN resolution.

At the same time, the President signs an executive order creating a presidential management task force to coordinate foreign-financed projects.

This move is made to insure the speedy and proper implementation of foreign-financed projects in order that available resources could be utilized to the optimum, specific targets met, and inter-agency cooperation enhanced.

In signing the order, the President states that the present organizational structures of the government requires an appropriate body to facilitate and coordinate the implementation and execution of these projects.

The new body, with Deputy Director-General (for operations) Apolinario Orosa of the Presidential Economic Staff as ex officio Presidential Action Officer to head the task force, shall have the following powers and functions:

1. To evaluate actual performance of each project, identify problem areas and their causes, and recommend appropriate measures. For this purpose, the task force has been authorized to—

a) conduct field inspections to ascertain the actual status of projects;

b) examine and/or secure directly from entities concerned financial statements, books of accounts and other pertinent records; and

c) establish a reporting system and require the implementing agencies to submit periodic accomplishment reports.

2. To coordinate and facilitate inter-agency participation required in project implementation, including funding and logistical support.

3. To establish and maintain direct liaison between the Philippine government and consultative organizations concerned with multi-lateral financing arrangements.

4. To submit regular fortnightly reports to the President on the progress of projects indicating the degree of completion of each project in relation to the established targets, reasons for delays in implementation and specific remedial steps to include disciplinary measures where necessary.

5. To follow up directives issued by the President to implementing agencies.

6. To perform such other related duties and functions as the President may from time to time direct.

The President's order empowered the task force to call upon any department, bureau, office or agency of the government for such assistance as it may require in the discharge of its functions.

All such government instrumentalities are directed to cooperate with and assist the task force in effecting the prompt and successful accomplishment of its assigned duties.

The task force head is also authorized to designate such assistants as may be necessary to constitute the Presidential Management Task Force.

In the afternoon, President and Mrs. Marcos enplane at 4:25 for the state visit to the United States, upon the invitation of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The First Couple boards a Philippine Air Lines jetliner, PI C-801, which will take them on the first leg of the trip to Honolulu.

With them are Ambassador Benjamin Romualdez, the President's special envoy to Washington, US Ambassador William McCormick Blair, Jr. and Brig. Gen. Hans Menzi, senior military aide.

The President's party leaves Malacañang in a long motorcade a little past 3 p.m. and moves at a moderate clip along the route to the Manila International Airport, arriving there 4 p.m.

Crowds of people lined the route despite the inclement weather. An equally unexpectedly big crowd also jammed the airport premises, including the open decks of the MIA building and the airport finger.

Before his departure, the President issues the following statements:

"I am leaving today, more than eight months after I have assumed the Presidency, on a state visit to the United States.

"I have chosen this time to make this foreign journey because I believe we already succeeded in checking the many crises which faced the nation eight months ago and we are now well on the road to recovery and stable growth. Any crises that may develop in my absence can be attended to promptly and effectively. We have made adequate arrangements to meet any contingency that may arise during my absence.

"I, therefore, expect the ship of state to run smoothly during my absence.

"In the United States, I look forward to an opportunity to discuss with our American friends, especially President Johnson, some common problems which vitally affect our present and future relations and which are of great relevance to our efforts to develop and strengthen ourselves.

"The first problem of any nation in Asia today under the shadow of Asian communism is national security. I go to the United States, a country with which we are bound by treaty and other foreign agreements in matters of security, to clarify points of differences between our two countries and which can only be decided on the presidential level.

"At the same time, we must reinstate our international credit standing which has been impaired by previous performance. I need not reiterate that the situation requires the assurance of no less than a head of the state himself that reforms are being undertaken to prevent the mismanagement and misuse of these foreign loans. This is necessary in order to reestablish the faith of the international lending institutions in our government.

"I wish to remind our people that past performances compelled these international lending institutions to withhold release of the balances of loans already granted our government.

It is now necessary, therefore, for us to face this monumental task of reestablishing confidence in our capacity to administer foreign loans. Towards this end, I have initiated reforms in our administrative set-up to make our government offices more effective agencies in the utilization of foreign loans. I have also adopted adequate measures, among which is the policy of fiscal restraint, to improve the government's fiscal posture.

"I will also go to Japan, for whatever we may say, Japan is the leading industrial country in our region and is becoming the principal market for many of our products."

September 13.—ARRIVING in Honolulu 8:31 a.m. HST (1831 GMT), President Marcos, making his first visit to the United States since his election, is greeted by an enthusiastic reception by Philippine nationals and Hawaiian officials.

Upon his arrival, the President is officially greeted by Hawaii Gov. John Burns and Philippine Consul General Trinidad Alconcel. He briefly watches a hula dance and was draped with Hawaiian leis.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, spends about 12 minutes walking along the wire fence shaking hands with the large crowd who were on hand to welcome them.

From the airport, the President proceeds to Fort Derussy where he boards a helicopter for Camp H.M. Smith, headquarters of the US commander in Chief in the Pacific, Admiral U.S. Grant Sharp. He receives a full briefing on American commitments in Asia.

The briefing lasts about an hour. It was attended by Admiral Sharp and each of his senior military commanders in the Pacific, representing the navy, air force, army and marines.

Rising up at 3 a.m., the President and the First Lady motor to the airport where they board the U.S. Air Force presidential jet to take them direct to Andrews Air Force Base, Maryland to begin a state visit in Washington, D.C.

Touching down at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland aboard a special US Air Force jet 9:30 p.m. (0130 GMT), 10:30 a.m. Manila time, President Marcos starts his state visit and formal talks with United States President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Upon their arrival, President Marcos and his party are welcomed by a large group of US citizens and officials led by William P. Bundy, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern Affairs.

The Chief Executive states in a broad smile to Bundy and the welcoming group "I am very happy to be here."

"My primary objectives is to reaffirm the ties of affinity and partnership between our two countries," he declares.

A military guard of honor places a cordon of troops around the big silver-and-blue jet transport which carried the seal of the President of the Republic of the Philippines.

As he greet with warm handshakes and hearty smiles the crowd of welcomers, the President exclaims with pleasure when he saw Gen. Russel W. Volckmann of Morrison, Illinois: Army Capt. Donald Jamison of Pruma Valley, California, and Col. John Blackburn, a regimental commander of guerrillas under Volckmann.

The three Americans had fought in Northern Luzon with Marcos against the Japanese.

Also at the airport are Filipino student groups who crowded the air base to wish their President "Mabuhay."

The welcome rites at the airport turns into an informal but cordial affair, although protocol required the President to say nothing before his formal welcome at the White House Wednesday with a 21-gun salute.

From the Airbase, the President and the First Lady are escorted to the Blair House, official guest house for visiting dignitaries, where they are staying for the duration of the three-day visit to Washington.

September 14.—ABOARD the presidential limousine from the Blair House, the presidential guest mansion, President Marcos crosses Pennsylvania Avenue for the White House to mark the official start of his state visit to Washington.

Arriving at the White House a few minutes later, the President accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, is received by United States President and Mrs. Johnson, including U.S. officials and members of the Diplomatic Corps.

After ruffles and flourishes were sounded, a contingent of the U.S. army band plays the national anthems of the two countries.

Right after exchange of pleasantries the President and the First Lady accompanied by the President and Mrs. Johnson heads a parade of welcome through Washington; East on Hamilton Place to 15th Street; South on 15th Street to Constitution Avenue to 9th Street, North on 9th to Pennsylvania Avenue.

Then the motorcade joins the military escort, Northwest on Pennsylvania Avenue to 14th Street, North on 14th Street to New York Avenue to Pennsylvania Avenue, West on Pennsylvania Avenue, terminating at Blair House.

At the Blair House, the President is presented the key to the city of Washington by Walter N. Tobriner, president of the board of Commissioners.

After the presentation rites, the President attends a luncheon reception given his honor by Secretary of State Dean Rusk at the Benjamin Franklin room, Department of State.

In the afternoon, the President places wreaths at the tomb of the unknown soldier, the grave of the late President John F. Kennedy, and at the grave of the late Gen. Jonathan Wainwright at the Arlington National Cemetery.

From the cemetery, the President returns back to the Blair House.

Then after a short rest, the President goes to the White House where he confers with President Johnson privately for an hour-and-a half in the historic East room.

After the private talks, the President hurriedly dashes back to the Blair House to change clothes for the state dinner.

Back in a few minutes at the White House in time for the state dinner with the First Lady, the President is greeted by President and Mrs. Johnson together with some 180 guests, with roast sirloin of beef featured on the menu. Tables are set both in the state dining room and the blue room with chinaware from the administration of Presidents Harrison, Wilson, Roosevelt and Truman and the White House vermeil and minuet silver flatware.

At the toast, U.S. President Johnson speaks warmly of President Marcos as the “captain of a great country,” a great hero and an example “to all nations that economic and social, progress can be achieved without abandoning individual freedom.”

Glancing toward President Marcos, President Johnson states, “so we are not only friends, we are brothers.” Noting that Washington has been undergoing a summer-long drought, Johnson tells President Marcos, “you have also brought rain and that endears you to us greatly.”

Johnson declares, “we know that what your nation has, it has earned— and what you work for . . . you are ready to defend.”

President Johnson says that last Sunday, the Filipino leader’s 49th birthday, 2,000 Philippine troops went to Vietnam to take their place beside Australian, Korean, New Zealand, U.S. and South Vietnamese soldiers.

“I think I can understand your own feelings about this. As commander-in-chiefs, you and I know that it is never easy to commit men to battle. But we know that if a leader is to pass along to the next generation the treasury of liberty—he must do what must be done,” Johnson notes.

The U.S. Chief Executive tells President Marcos, “more than anyone here today, Mr. President, you know the price of freedom. You were wounded five times in its cause, you survive the Bataan Death March, and for two years led a force of guerrillas with legendary courage. You carry two silver stars. And you wear the Distinguished Service Cross—one of the highest rewards a grateful United States can give its heroes.

“Our people take pride in the independence and progress of the Philippines. Your nation of island belongs to those who champion freedom and labor unselfishly for it.”

President Johnson adds, “from the ruins of war you have built economy which gives your people great hopes and you are an example to all nations that economic and social progress can be achieved without abandoning individual freedom.”

In his reply, President Marcos offers the U.S. President the Philippines “intimate knowledge of Asia” and expressed hopes his two week visit would “deepen the understanding that exists between our two peoples.”

“What can the President of a small nation once the colony* of the United States have to say to the President of the most powerful nation in the world?” President Marcos asks.

“To your strength of body, we offer a fierce resolution of spirit for we have had to survive only on our fortitude. To the questions that perplex America, we come to offer our intimate knowledge of Asia, we offer our study of its mind and heart.”

The Philippines, Chief Executive states that today in Asia the ideals of the U.S. and the Philippines had shared in seven decades of warm relationship were under a severe test.

“We are asked anew whether the principles of freedom, equality and human dignity have the strength to prevail and endure in the face of continuous assaults by inimical forces,” the President notes.

He optimistically reveals that it was his hope “that on this as on other important matters of common interest we shall have an opportunity for a full exchange of view.

September 15.—PRESIDENT Marcos starts the day with an early morning breakfast with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey of the United States.

During the breakfast, the President and the Vice President discuss matters of varied subject of interest to both of them.

The President also receive William Gaud, administrator of the Agency for International Development; and Undersecretary Leroy Collins of Commerce who paid courtesy calls on him.

Following the calls, the President addresses a joint Session of Congress.

In his address, the President takes up the Philippine veterans fight for benefits due them saying that “far too many Filipinos have long ago lost faith in your sense of fairness.”

The President’s 32-page address conveys three messages to the American people touching on Americans role in Asia and the world situation.

He starts his address after a prolonged ovation following his introduction by House Speaker John McCormack.

“There are rumblings among my people. Far too many of them including some of our intellectual leaders, have long ago lost faith in your sense of fairness.

Without necessary heeding the importunings of our communist enemies, they are harsh critics and have given up hope of American justice.”

“Many years are past. Time should have muted the tone of confidence and the tyranny of circumstances should have eroded the memory but still today, I say to you as I have said to my people: ‘America does not forget. America will not fail us.’”

President Marcos, voicing out the Filipino peoples demand for rightful benefits due Filipino veterans of World War II, spells out what he quoted as widespread sentiment on the claims issue:

“And it is paradoxically that after the Second World War we have had to endure American ridicule for our claims to equal rights under the veterans law of this country.

“We are unprepared for the rebuffs that we received but even less prepared for the hostility in the attitudes of some of your executive officials who have had to deal with us.

“Our former common enemy, Japan, had been patient and understanding. From you, our allies, we expected nothing less. But we did not get it.”

In his prepared address entitled “An Asian message to America—Trustee of Civilization,” President Marcos tells the U.S. Congress:

“So upon the invitation of your great President, I have come to you with leave of my people.

“When I sought their counsel, they told me—Go with our misgivings for we know only too well the Americans’ disdain for state visitors who go to their ideals and global objectives but with their palms and hands stretched out for aid.

“Do not beg for alms or aid for we do not solicit charity.

“But tell them loyalty is not for sale. There is no price tag for faith except justice.

On the Vietnam war, he says: “Our object must be to hold the line in Vietnam and, at least, to roll back communist power behind the 17th parallel.”

“This being achieved, we shall have provided a necessary basis for joint action among the Southeast Asian nations themselves in order to ensure their collective security,” he states.

“When this has been done, American military power could draw to existing bases in the outlying island and archipelagos: Japan, Okinawa, Taiwan and the Philippines.

“Together with the U.S. Seventh Fleet, this line of defense of the Asian mainland could be rendered completely impregnable while offering needed support to any mainland nation that may be threatened by communist power.

President Marcos declares “I personally know for a fact that the American presence in Vietnam provided—though quite unintentionally—encouragement and support to those who successfully resisted the attempted communist takeover in Indonesia.”

“It is certain that the U.S. Seventh Fleet in the China Sea as well as American airpower in the area rendered inoperative the so-called Peking-Jakarta Axis’ which the Indonesian communist party might otherwise have invoked in the extremity of its disastrous debacle in Java,” the President points out.

Following the address, the President is honored by Vice President and Mrs. Hubert Humphrey with a luncheon reception at Anderson House, 2118 Massachusetts Avenue, Northwest.

Back at the Blair house, the President receive Orville I. Freeman, Secretary of Agriculture, and Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara who paid him a courtesy call.

In the evening, the President and President Johnson hold their final meeting at the White House.

They confer for more than two hours.

After the meeting, a joint communique is issued with both leaders reaffirming the close ties between their countries.

The text of the joint communique follows:

1. At the invitation of President Johnson, President Marcos made a state visit to Washington D.C. September 14 to 16, 1966. This afforded an opportunity for the two Presidents to engage in the friendly and fraternal talks which have become traditional between the two countries.
2. President Johnson and President Marcos had a frank and cordial exchange of views on international developments of common significance as well as the cooperative arrangements which give substance to Philippine-American relations.
3. President Marcos set forth his vision of the Philippine future. He described the many frontiers that mankind faces—in space and in the ocean depths, on the farm and in the laboratory, in economic development in expanding the capabilities of the young. He expressed his determination to move his country forward across these frontiers, with the exertion of Philippine energy and initiative and with the cooperation of friendly nations, especially the United States.
4. Scientific cooperation.—Both Presidents recognize the need of promoting cooperation in areas of science and technology and the mutual exchange of information and scientific knowledge for peaceful purpose. Such cooperation will furnish incentives to public and private resources initiative of both countries in enhancing and cultivating scientific and technological endeavors as a fundamental basis of a mutually beneficial relationship on science and technology.
5. Specifically, the two Presidents discussed recent developments in space technology. President Marcos expressed his desire to encourage greater training of Philippine scientists and engineers in the peaceful applications of such technology, and President Johnson undertook to offer appropriate fellowship for this purpose in U.S. institutions.

The considerable economic loss suffered annually in the Far East from typhoons was discussed by the two Presidents, who agreed that the regional initiatives undertaken by ECAFE and WHO to improve technical capabilities for typhoon damage control deserved full support. President Johnson offered the services of a United States meteorological team to develop a joint program of typhoon damage control in the Philippine area in concert with regional planning, and President Marcos agreed to the desirability of such a program.

Finally, the two Presidents noted the cooperative programs already started between the Philippine National Science Development Board and the U.S. National Academy of Sciences, and agreed that these programs should be expanded so that private and public research efforts can be applied to the advance of knowledge about growing food on the land and in the sea in the tropics. The two Presidents noted the expanded efforts now under way by the U.S. Government in the field of oceanography, in which it was agreed that the Philippines would participate fully.

6. Economic development.—One of the principal matters dealt with was the vigorous approach of the new Philippine Government to the problem of economic development. President Marcos re-emphasized his four-year development program to raise the living standards of the Philippine people, along lines already made public and discussed over many months. President Johnson was particularly encouraged to note the emphasis which President Marcos placed on improving the lot of the rural people through increased agricultural productivity, better income and meaningful land reform.

7. To support President Marcos' program of economic development and progress, the United States assistance program will be substantially increased during the coming year. This expanded effort will give priority to President Marcos' rural development and rice productivity program, including loans for irrigation projects and grants for other aspects of this program.

The two Presidents agreed to begin immediate negotiations for sales of agricultural commodities under a liberal credit arrangement over the next year, the proceeds of such sales to be used to support projects or programs to be agreed upon in such fields as irrigation, drainage and flood control, land reform, feeder roads, agricultural credit and farmer's cooperatives. The United States Government will also provide support for programs and projects to be agreed upon in agricultural research, training and productivity, and pest and disease control, cadastral survey and land classification.

Extensive discussions are now in progress on these programs and projects. In addition, a new self-help program is being launched pursuant to the Food-For-Peace Program under which food will be provided as a grant to allow payment of wages in kind to rural workers engaged in local improvement projects, and a grant of feed grains will be made to stimulate the establishment and growth of livestock cooperatives.

U.S. assistance will also include a stepped-up malaria eradication campaign and planning for rural electrification, air traffic control and an integrated telecommunications network. The United States is prepared to extend credit to finance engineering feasibility studies to help develop other new projects for external financing.

8. Further economic matters.—The two Presidents noted that their representatives are continuing to identify, on an urgent basis, additional ways in which the United States can be helpful in assisting President Marcos' initiatives in agricultural, industrial, and other fields. Both Presidents recognized that the size of the task to be done requires the active participation of all interested governments and international institutions.

It was also recognized that the success of the renewed Philippine efforts depends to a great extent on raising the level of internal savings, both public and private.

9. The two Presidents recognized that orderly economic development required the full organization and utilization of available management talent. President Marcos described the measures he had taken to systematize economic development planning and indicated he would welcome additional United States technical assistance in this field. President Johnson agreed to make available a technical advisory team composed of both governmental and private experts for this purpose.

10. Recognizing that external assistance mobilized through the major international lending institutions would speed economic development in the Philippines, the two Presidents agreed on the desirability of closer consultations among all countries and international agencies having an interest in helping the Philippines. President Johnson assured President Marcos of full American support for a Philippine initiative along these lines, and of active American cooperation in such an effort. Pending completion of multilateral arrangements, the U.S. will provide assistance to the Philippines under a bilateral program.

11. As regards means for ensuring the fruitful participation of foreign private investors in Philippine development, the two Presidents emphasized the importance to the Philippines of a favorable investment climate to attract and hold foreign private capital. As a further means of stimulating new private capital flows to the Philippines, the Presidents were pleased to announce that an exchange of notes had taken place providing for an augmentation of the coverage provided under the current investment guaranty agreement between the two countries.

12. Future Economic Relations. The two Presidents agreed that an expansion of trade between the Philippines and the United States would also contribute to the development and stability of both countries. They agreed that there should be an early beginning of inter-governmental discussions on the concepts underlying a new instrument to replace the Laurel-Langley trade agreement after its scheduled expiration in 1974. Inter-governmental discussions should be conducted through a Joint Preparatory Committee to be set up before June 30, 1967. Both Presidents recognized the necessity of providing an adequate framework after 1974 for a fair and equitable treatment of new and existing investments, as well as for the expansion of trade opportunities between the two countries. The two Presidents agreed that the extension of parity rights under Article 6 of the Agreement would not be sought.

13. Offshore Procurement. The two Presidents agreed that the Philippines should participate on a full and equitable basis in supplying U.S. offshore procurement needs in Vietnam.

14. Mutual Security. Both Presidents recognized the strategic role which the Philippines plays in the network of allied defenses and agreed to strengthen their mutual defense capabilities. Both Presidents recognized that such defense construction projects as are presently under way and may be required in the future contribute to this end. President Marcos informed President Johnson of recent indications of resurgence of subversive activities, especially in Central Luzon. President Johnson pledged the continued assistance of the United States in the concerted drive of the Marcos administration to improve the well-being of the people and strengthen its capabilities for internal defense.

15. The two Presidents reviewed the current requirements of the Philippine Armed Forces for external assistance. In accordance with President Marcos' program to expand the army's civic action capability, President Johnson was pleased to inform him that the United States would within this fiscal year provide equipment for five engineer construction battalions to be engaged in civic action projects contributing to internal security, and would consider furnishing equipment for five more such battalions in the next fiscal year. President Johnson also informed President Marcos that delivery of a destroyer escort for the Philippine Navy was anticipated next year. The two Presidents agreed to keep the U.S. military assistance program under continuing review in order to ensure that the material and training supplied to the Philippine armed forces were kept appropriate to the changing requirements and missions of these forces.

16. The two Presidents pledged themselves to strengthen the unity of the two countries in meeting any threat to their security. In this regard, they noted the continuing importance of the mutual defense treaty between the Philippines and the United States in maintaining the security of both countries. President Johnson reiterated to President Marcos the policy of the United States regarding mutual defense as stated by him and by past U.S. administrations to the Philippine government since 1954.

17. The two Presidents noted that in the forthcoming Rusk-Ramos agreement, the U.S. accepts President Marcos' proposal to reduce the term of the military bases agreement from 99 to 25 years. The two Presidents reaffirmed that the bases are necessary for both countries for their mutual defense, and were gratified with the progress being made in the negotiation and resolution of various issues related to the bases agreement in the spirit of harmony, friendship and mutual accommodation. They agreed that the base negotiations should be continued with a view to the earliest possible resolution of remaining issues in the spirit of good will and cooperation which has characterized these negotiations to date.

18. The two Presidents noted the benefits to be gained if countries can share and profit from their common experiences in meeting communist infiltration and subversion in all its forms in Southeast Asia. In this connection, the accomplishments of SEATO and of individual countries were discussed as well as means by which the Philippines and the United States might make an added contribution to this significant work. The two Presidents concluded that the usefulness of a center in the Philippines which might serve as a focal point for this work should be explored and proper actions pursued.

19. Veterans.—The two Presidents noted that as a result of the recommendations of the Joint Commission which they appointed earlier this year, legislation to provide increased benefits to Philippine Veterans, their widows, orphans and other dependents has been introduced in the U.S. Congress. President Johnson assured President Marcos of his full support of these measures and expressed his strong hope that they would be enacted in the near future.

20. President Marcos put up the case of the Philippine veterans. President Johnson explained the problems and limitations from the standpoint of the United States. The two Presidents agreed that their representatives would discuss the means of restoring wartime pay to those recognized Philippine guerrillas who did not previously receive it and of compensating certain members of the Philippine Army for erroneous deductions of advanced salary from their wartime pay.

21. The two Presidents also agreed to adopt procedures which would minimize the adverse impact which additional payments to Philippine veterans might have on the U.S. balance of payments.

22. Special Fund for Education.—The two Presidents agreed to put to effective and creative use the special fund for education available from, and pursuant to the U.S. war damage appropriations for the Philippines. They directed the joint panels established last spring to accelerate discussions already under way on project proposals, and concurred in the rapid implementation of projects as they are mutually agreed.

23. Developments in Asia.—President Marcos discussed his efforts in concert with other Asian countries to bring about an all-Asian political forum to which can be referred any crisis in Asia, like the Viet Nam conflict, for settlement by conciliation or other peaceful means. President Marcos also stressed his country's recognition of Malaysia and Singapore and the acknowledgment by Asian countries of the Philippines role in helping pave the way toward the solution of the Indonesian and Malaysian question. President Johnson reiterated his support for an Asian conference to settle the Vietnam war and reaffirmed to President Marcos that so far as the United States is concerned it is prepared for unconditional discussions or negotiations in any appropriate forum. in an effort to bring peace to Southeast Asia. President Johnson reaffirmed that the basic U.S. purpose in Asia is to support the national aspirations of Asian peoples: the United States is ready to continue helping other nations which seeks its assistance in improving the welfare of their peoples and in strengthening themselves against aggression.

24. The two Presidents conducted a frank and searching review of the problems of international security in the Pacific area in general, and in Southeast Asia in particular. They were in complete agreement that the principal threat to peace and security in the region was the communist war of aggression and subversion being waged against the government and people of South Vietnam. President Johnson expressed his deep admiration as well as that of the American people for the action recently taken by the Philippines to send a civic action group of 2,000 men to assist the Vietnamese in resisting aggression and rebuilding their country.

25. The two Presidents reviewed events of the past few years which demonstrated the substantial progress being made in Asia toward regional cooperation. President Marcos noted, in particular the recent meeting of the foreign ministers of Asia and the Pacific in Seoul, and the meeting of the foreign ministers from the Philippines Thailand and Malaysia in Bangkok within the framework of the Association of Southeast Asia. The two Presidents noted that the establishment of the Asian Development Bank, with its headquarters in Manila, was a specific example of what imaginative statesmanship by Asian countries working together could accomplish. President Johnson welcomed the evidence of expanding cooperation in Asia and reiterated the willingness of the United States to assist and support cooperative programs for the economic and social developments of the region.

26. Mutual objectives.—Both Presidents agreed that the close personal relationship established between them during the visit will further strengthen the deep friendship and partnership which bind their two countries. President Marcos expressed his profound appreciation for the warm welcome and hospitality shown him and his party by President Johnson and the American people. The two Presidents recalled with pride the historic association of their two peoples who, once more, are standing side by side in the defense of liberty. They affirmed that their partnership reflects their long-standing and common dedication to the promotion of human rights and freedom.

In the evening, President and Mrs. Marcos give a reception in honor of President and Mrs. Johnson of the United States at the Regency room. Shoreham Hotel.

Also invited at the reception in honor of the American First Couple are U.S. officials and members of the diplomatic corps.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

February 1.—THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE again devotes a good part of his time to state affairs. He receives key officials who briefed him on current urgent matters, notably on the progress of the budget preparations, appointments to vacant posts in the judiciary, and public health problems.

Although still under the strict supervision of his doctors, the President exhibits growing vitality in the course of the day.

In separate conversations with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia and Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, the President discusses problems that needed his immediate attention.

He scrutinizes the present status of the judiciary with Undersecretary Teehankee and Secretary Salas, particularly as it pertained to the appointment of judges to fill the still existing vacancies.

Steadily gaining in energy, the President takes every opportunity to do some walking.

February 2.—PRESIDENT Marcos meets with heads of executive agencies concerned with the implementation of the rural development program.

He discusses with them the status of government programs particularly those pertaining to rural community development, with emphasis on the program for the construction and rehabilitation of irrigation systems.

At the meeting, the President also instructs Director General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff, overall coordinator of economic projects, to follow closely the pace of the work, such that the program will adhere to schedule.

In the morning, the President's mother, Mrs. Josefa Edralin Marcos, receives several callers on behalf of the President while he was undergoing, his daily medical check-up. Among the visitors she received are former US Senator and Mrs. David van Alstyne, Jr., Mrs. Mary Webster, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cham Say.

In the afternoon, the President receives Mayor Neal S. Blansdell of Honolulu and his assistant, Victor K. Gireon.

The Chief Executive is allowed to devote more time to official business and receive more visitors as he continued to improve physically.

February 3.—TO pinch off the illegal sales of PX (post exchange) goods in military bases, President Marcos orders the deployment of Anti-Smuggling Action Center (ASAC) personnel to help bureau of customs agents.

The President's move is in accordance with recommendations of the Department of Foreign Affairs, based on the recent agreement between the Philippines and the US to cooperate in eliminating the flow of PX goods to the black market or sale to persons not exempt from taxes.

The problem of PX goods falling into the hands of black marketeers or non-tax exempt persons was elevated by the Philippine foreign office to the US embassy, after the government launched its intensified drive against smuggling.

In consequent discussions by the two governments of the problem; the US agreed to promulgate base regulations against unauthorized sale of PX goods. It further conceded that the Philippines has the right to tax all PX goods sold to non-tax exempt persons.

The ASAC men are specifically instructed to work in coordination with bureau of customs men, who have already set up offices at the military bases.

At the same time, the President formally sets aside two parcels of government land in Pasay City for the Asian Development Bank and the United Nations Organization.

The lots, described as the private domain of the government, are given to the ADB and the UN agencies by R.A. 2006, enacted last June. The measure authorizes the President to turn over to the said agencies the two lots aggregating 12,200 square meters. They are located on Roberts street and Roxas boulevard, Pasay.

The reserved lands are two contiguous lots: No. 408, consisting of 4,900 square meters; and lot No. 409, consisting of 7,300 square meters. Statistics are based on the Pasay city cadastral survey.

In the morning, the President meets leaders of Congress led by Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr. and Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer.

The congressmen calls on the President at 8:00 a.m., a few hours after the election of Jose Laurel. They report on the outcome of the House session last night, which saw a change of leadership in the chamber.

Right after meeting with the congressional leaders, the President resumes work on pending official matters. He has been confined at the Veterans Memorial Hospital because of an operation for an inflamed gall bladder. The doctors had been allowing him gradually to devote more time to work, and to receive visitors, as he continued to regain strength.

The President also works on state papers brought to him by his assistants.

In the afternoon, the President meets a bigger group of congressmen with whom he discussed problems facing Congress. He asks the congressmen to take the initiative in pushing through vital administration measures.

February 4.— ALLOWED by his physicians to devote more time to attend to official business, President Marcos sets up an improvised desk and office at the Veterans Memorial Hospital in Quezon City.

He meets several groups of government officials, during which he discussed current government problems and took action on urgent matters brought to him for decision.

In the morning, the President confers with his fiscal advisers and certain other members of the cabinet on the national budget, to put it into final shape for submission to Congress next Tuesday, February 7.

The talks centers on the finalization of proposals pertaining to the bigger items on the budget, which are concentrated on economic development, social development, national defense and the maintenance of peace and order.

Among those present are Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez, Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Education Secretary Carlos P. Romulo, Development Bank of the Philippines Chariman Gregorio Licaros, Chairman Constancio Castafieda of the Office of the Economic Coordination, Presidential Arm on Community Development head Ernesto Maceda, Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff, Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata, and Gen. Victor Osias AFP Chief of Staff.

In the afternoon, the President works on official papers brought to him by his aides. In the process, the President issues a directive to Lt. Gen. Pelagio Cruz (ret.), chief of the Anti-Smuggling Action Center, to pinpoint the sources of the "blue seal" cigarettes which are still being peddled in Manila and suburban cities and towns.

He wants Gen. Cruz to ascertain exactly where these sources are so that Steps can be taken to seal off these sources and break up the syndicates still trading in the untaxed goods.

The President at the same time dispatches wires to all members of the Nationalist Party national directorate appealing for “sobriety and coolness” and for a suspension of any further moves to widen the rift between certain elements of the party.

In his wire to the NP national body, the President pledges to continue working to unite and strengthen the Nacionalista Party in the face of the developments in Congress which had appeared to realign some members of the majority party.

He request all NP leaders and members of the directorate to refrain from issuing any further statements and press releases, or drawing up any resolutions that would increase the discord “sown by our political enemies”

Meanwhile, President Marcos declares that the Philippine press should work as a dynamic partner of government and the people in nation building and in the defense of Filipino freedom” if it must “prove true to itself.”

He expresses this view in a message issued from his suite at the Veterans Memorial Hospital where he is still recuperating from an operation, in connection with the celebration of Press Week, which starts Monday. ‘

The Chief Executive, in Proclamation No. 8 last year, set the second week of February every year as Press Week, “for a fuller appreciation and keener realization of the vital role of the press in safeguarding individual rights and promoting national welfare.”

In his message, the President points out that the Philippine press has had a long tradition of freedom, and a fine record of response to the challenge of the times.

He declares that it is as much in recognition of the adherence of the press to this tradition as the fact that the press is a bridge of information and enlightenment between the government and the people” that Press Week is being celebrated.

The President’s message for the occasion follows:

“The Philippine press has had a long tradition of freedom. Even in those times of social and political repression, when the first outlines of a truly Filipino press were emerging, in a time of unrest and revolution, our press was miraculously free, valiantly responsive to the challenge of its time.

“This tradition has carried on to the present, and it is as much this close and unbroken adherence to this tradition of freedom and responsibility that we celebrate during Press Week, as the fact that the press has served as a bridge of information and enlightenment between the government and the people, between current history and the people.

“Today, the press must also be a dynamic partner in the building of our nation and in the defense of the other freedoms we cherish if it must fulfill its leading role in national affairs and prove true to itself.”

February 5.—SWIFTLY moving to prop up the plywood and veneer industry which had shown a sharp decline in the volume of exports in the past several months, President Marcos directs Foreign Affairs Secretary Narciso Ramos to start immediately discussions with the U.S. on greater Philippine participation in plywood and veneer trade in South Vietnam and other countries where there are U.S. bases.

In a memorandum to Secretary Ramos, Secretary of Commerce Marcelo Balatbat, Reparations Commission Chairman Gregorio Abad and Development Rank Chairman Gregorio Licaros, the President declares “it is imperative that the local plywood and veneer industry be assisted in its predicament.”

The President also directs Secretaries Ramos and Balatbat to take steps to find new markets for local plywood and veneer in Asia and Europe.

In the morning, the President receives some visitors who conveyed to him their wishes for his speedy recovery.

Then the President confers with Director of Forestry Antonio Quejado on proposed legislation for the conservation of forest resources, and the release of fishpond areas in order to boost fish production.

The President likewise receives Roberto Benedicto, president of the Philippine National Bank.

In the evening, the President together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos and their children hears mass at the Veterans Memorial Hospital chapel.

Meantime, President Marcos laudes the Catholic hierarchy and laity for launching a nationwide congress for rural development, saying that nothing shorts of the concerned effects of the government and all constructive forces of the community can hope to fully implement the program for rural development.

In a speech read by Vice President Fernando Lopez at the opening of Basal Congress at the Philamlife auditorium, the President also warns against the, "insidious danger" posed by the hungry millions of Asians.

"Our democratic institutions are on trial," the President points out, "they may not have a second chance to prove and to sustain themselves. It is history that sets an early deadline for our effort."

He says that "no one, not even the U.S. Seventh Fleet, can insulate US from the insidious danger lapping at all the Asian shores except our own mighty will for progress and freedom."

In the end, he declares, "our salvation lies within us, in the flexibility of mind and strength of purpose that we can bring to the task of development"

The President says that this grave danger did not come from communist subversion or from the Huk resurgence, but basically from the potentially explosive social conditions in our midst, the gross imbalance in the distribution of income and wealth in the Philippines."

Citing statistics compiled by the Joint Legislative-Executive Tax Commission, the President points out that:

Of the P7,004, billion income of 4.8 million house-holds, 42.2 percent went to 10 percent of the population while the remaining 57.8 percent was divided among the 90 percent. He said that only one percent of the family households belong to the upper income group with an average income of P20,p00 a year.

At the lower extreme, he said, 83.1 percent of the households belong to the low income group with an income of P836 per year, or P69.70 per month per family of five members.

According, to him, only 15.8 percent belong to the middle income group with an average income of P3,551 per year, while roughly 70 percent, constituting the rural households are at the bottom, earning between P300 and P400 a year.

"A country of 33 million with one of the highest birth rates in the world, and only 1.1 percent enjoying an income of P20,000 or more a year, while close to 70 percent has to survive on an income of P400 or less, is literally living on top of a social volcano that can erupt any day, even without the benefit of communist proddings," he warns.

Faced by such a situation, he states the country has no time to lose but must mobilize without delay all its resources, attack the social problems at the source, and launch a broad program of rural economic development.

But, he stresses, nothing short of the concerted efforts of government and all the constructive forces of the community, especially the churches, school and civic and religious organizations can bring about the full implementation of such far-reaching and fundamental objective as those set up by the land reform code to establish owner-cultivatorship and economic family-sized farms, as the bases of Philippine agriculture, and the diversion of landlord capital from agriculture to industrial development.”

The, President pledges the full support and cooperation of the government to the congress in carrying out its program of action. For he says, the Congress would be helping solve the serious problems to make the epoch of the present crisis an epic of hope and of social development.

He expresses the hope that the resolutions and programs of action of the Congress will not remain mere “voices in the desert” but will become living forces of renewal and transformation in the social and economic life of the land.

February 6.—PRESIDENT Marcos follows this day on an almost normal schedule of official activities. His schedule grows in: proportions, consonant with his ever improving physical condition.

Still confined at the Veterans Memorial Hospital in Quezon City on doctors orders, the President however has been allowed to work, and he took advantage of this by setting up an improvised office, and beefing up his schedule of conferences and consultations.

The President receives as well several unofficial visitors, including Look magazine foreign editor Robert Moskin, who called for an interview.

In the morning, the President receives Speaker Jose B. Laurel; Jr. with whom he discusses the legislative measures relating to the pending Philippine-Japan treaty on friendship, navigation and commerce.

Following the meeting with Speaker Laurel, the President receives a number of well wishers in his suite at the VMH.

In the afternoon, the President confers with Land Authority Gov. Conrado Estrella, Agriculture Under-Secretary Dioscoro Umali, ACA Administrator Vicente Valley and Wesley Haraldson, chief of the US-Agency for International Development here.

They discuss the AID-assisted project to support the Presidents rice production program. This project involves the distribution of farmers’ “Do it yourself” kits, which contain information on how to plant 2,000 square meters, or one-fifth of a hectare, to produce about 30 cavans of palay in only some 120 days.

At the same time, the President instructs Foreign Affairs Secretary Narciso Ramos to make certain that only one vessel is used to ferry Muslim pilgrims to Mecca.

He sets this policy to preclude any repetition of the fiascos in the past involving the pilgrims, which brought extreme hardships to the passengers and complications for the government.

Commissioner Mamintal Tamano of the National Integration Commission had earlier recommended to the President that only one vessel should be chartered for the trip. The CNI head states that one vessel will serve the purpose.

The President likewise directs the National Power Corporation to Continue providing electric power for Baguio City.

The NPC had earlier set 12 noon this day as the deadline for the Pines City to settle its more than P3 million obligation to the agency. Failure to do so will mean a power cut-off, the NPC says.

According to the NPC records, the City of Baguio has back accounts amounting to P2,514,426.30. It owes the NPC P609,716.60 for the year 1966 alone. The city debt amounts to a total of P3,124,142.90.

February 7.—DUE to his continued progress toward full recovery after a gall bladder operation January 24, President Marcos is allowed a full schedule of callers and official activities by his physicians.

The President's activities this day is capped by his submission of the budget message to Congress, which embodies proposed government expenditures for fiscal year 1967-1968, totalling P2.688 billion to cover government operations and development expenditures.

He proposes a general fund appropriation of P2.13 billion.

In his budget message, the President estimates the income of the government for the same period at P2.754 billion which means a surplus in all funds of P66 million. The expected surplus in the general fund is estimated at P30 million.

The budget registers an increase of P334 million from last year's budget, which increase however will be principally spent on the broad economic and social development programs of the administration.

Expenditures on the social development programs will go to education, health, labor, and welfare projects, amounting to some P1.016 billion, or an increase of P149 million over fiscal year 1967, which required only a total of 867 million. This area of government concern has the biggest increase in expenditure.

The allocation for economic development projects, which includes development of agriculture and natural resources, commerce and industry, transportation and communication, and other capital outlays totals P826 million. It shows an increase of P72 million over fiscal year 1967, which only carried P754 million.

Other major outlays go to national defense, which has an increase of P33.2 million. The planned seven additional engineer battalions and civic action centers will get an outlay of P12.9 million from the defense appropriation.

In his message, the President says that the increase in the budget request was demanded by the need for expansion of business and industry, and for the increasing requirements by a growing population for better facilities and public services.

The President points out that in preparing the budget, the administration has given priority to the following broad courses of action:

1. The improvement of capital and expansion of food production, which require a higher level of expenditure;
2. The expansion of services for social development;
3. The improvement of the revenue service, to increase general fund resources;
4. The use of borrowed funds for capital expenditures; and
5. To provide adequate funds for servicing public debts.

The outlay for general administrative expenses totals P197 million, which is P35 million more than the allocation for the current year, which was P164 million.

Most of the increase in this area of government expenditures will go to general salary adjustments of government employees, and additional personnel and facilities for the bureau of internal revenue, bureau of customs, bureau of prisons, and the General Auditing Office.

For the repayment of the public debt, the budget provides P58 million more than the previous outlay, which amount will come from the general fund.

The bond fund has also been increased to meet bigger capital expenditures for buildings, port facilities, river control, waterworks, artesian wells, irrigation, electrification, and the operations of the Land Bank.

Among government departments, the education department has the biggest outlay with P716.1 million, or 26.6 percent of the total budget. This represents an increase of P76.7 million over the current fiscal year's outlay.

Next in line is the department of public works and communications, with an allocation of P547.2 million, or an increase of P58.5 million. The department of national defense comes next, with an outlay of P394.4 million, or an increase of P46.5 million.

The various agencies under the office of the President ranks fourth with an outlay of P194.1 million, registering an increase of P18.8 million. Among these offices are the P.A.C.D. National Economic Council and Philippine Veterans Administration which are under Malacañang for administrative purposes.

The executive office itself did not get any increase in outlay in the new budget.

The increases are earmarked for rural projects such as multipurpose centers and prefabricated schoolhouses.

The government operating expenses under the general fund total P1 959 billion, or P250 million more than those of the present year which amount to P1.709 billion. From all funds, operating expenditures for the next fiscal year will total P2.217 billion, or an increase of P252 million over the current year's outlay of P1.965 billion.

Capital outlays amount to P470.9 million or P81.5 million more than those for the current year, amounting to P389.4 million.

Total revenue estimate for the next fiscal year is set at P2,754 billion. This is P383 million more than the P2.371 billion expected for this year.

General fund receipts excluding borrowings total P2,163 billion, or P328 million more than this year's estimate of P1.835 billion.

Of the expected increase in income, P170 million is to come from the BIR and P140 million from the bureau of customs.

The general fund income will come mostly from such tax sources as license and business taxes, income taxes, import taxes and excise taxes.

The President is well inside the deadline for the submission of the proposed budget, when he sent it to Congress shortly after six o'clock this afternoon,

He has till midnight tonight to submit the proposed government outlay for the incoming fiscal year pursuant to the provision of the Constitution. The Constitution requires that the President submit the budget within 15 days after the opening of Congress.

The Chief Executive signs the budget message in his temporary office at his suite at the Veterans Memorial Hospital.

In the evening, the President receives a group of 15 veterans led by Undersecretary of National Defense Manuel Syquiao, who reported on the progress of the work on the Mt. Samat national shrine in Bataan.

Meanwhile, the President issues a proclamation declaring Wednesday (Feb. 8), a special public holiday in Tiaong, Quezon, and Lipa City.

The President proclaims this day a holiday to afford the residents of the town of Tiaong and Lipa City an opportunity to celebrate with appropriate ceremonies the 77th birth anniversary of the late Claro M. Recto, who counted these two places as his native home.

February 8.—PRESIDENT Marcos directs Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata to expedite the equipping of the seven engineer construction battalions earmarked for civic action and development missions.

He specifies that the AFP engineer battalions should be ready to work by April this year, and that they should be deployed in the Visayas and Mindanao.

Defense Secretary Mata is also instructed by the President to step up the drive against crime and other forms of lawlessness, in order to sooner stabilize further peace and order condition ail over the country.

[Unreadable] to the defense secretary that if necessary the highly rated Tabak Division should be thrown into the civic action program to assist directly constabulary elements engaged in the peace and order campaign [unreadable] the social and economic development projects. He states that this area of [unreadable] for the DND is an important as the peace and order drive.

The President particularly refers to the installation of artesian wells in the [unreadable] areas. He underlines the importance of completing as many of these projects as possible in the face of the approaching summer season.

He notes that in many communities the supply of water is often depleted during the hot months. He states that the artesian wells planned for the rural areas will help not only in keeping water supply steady, but also in ensuring the potability of drinking water.

In the afternoon, the President temporarily checks out of his Veterans Memorial Hospital suite to play host along with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos at cocktails in Malacañang given in honor of the surviving members of the Philippines Constitutional convention.

The President's physicians readily permitted the President to officiate at the affair in the face of his almost complete recovery.

He leaves the VMH at 4: 30 p.m. accompanied by the First Lady, arriving at Palace 20 minutes later.

During the affair, the President is presented by Agripino P. Escareal, the Samar delegate to the constitutional convention, with an 18-volume account of the constitutional convention. The President declares that the books are "uncontradicted repository" of the true records of the proceedings leading to the adoption of tile Constitution.

All through the affair, which was also attended by Vice President Fernando Lopez, the President exhibits his newly regained nerve and vitality.

He motors back to the VMH early in the evening, where he is expected to stay till the end of the week or at most up to early next week.

Meanwhile, the President calls for a new discipline, based on mature and responsible appreciation of the demands of self-government, in approaching national goals, saying that otherwise "we end up undermining our confidence in ourselves and ultimately in our Constitution."

Speaking on the "crisis in understanding" arising from the notion that the Constitution is an ineffective abstraction when viewed against the "harsh world of economics and social realities," the President warns that indifference and ignorance might result in a "constitutional crisis" as well.

The President emphasizes this theme in a speech delivered by Vice President Fernando Lopez at a luncheon today tendered by the Philippine Lawyers Association and the Philippine Constitution Association, to mark Constitution Day today.

The tendency of the people to regard the Constitution as a mysterious document, the President says, has weakened the concept that the fundamental law "engages all of us, from the humblest citizen to the highest magistrate, in the severe discipline of self-government."

The President particularly points to the misunderstanding about the "burdens of government and how to bear them," narrowing it further to the controversy over the economic goals of the nation and how to achieve them.

He states that although there seemed to be a general agreement on the fundamentals embodied in the Constitution, primarily those that pertain to democratic principles which apply to the means of attaining the common economic goal, which is development, there appears to be no real consensus on the democratic means of achieving this.

Rather, he says, the actual contention, as reflected on the platform and the press, exposes the "superficial character of this agreement." On the surface there seems to be agreement on economic development as the primary goal of the nation, with the government providing the initiatives. Implied therefore is the limitation of contention or dialogue to the policies, or methods of achieving this goal.

For example, he states, after the nation surmounted the crisis of the immediate past, discordant voices averred it was not enough as a beginning, that nothing had been accomplished.

The President declares that surmounting a crisis does not confer automatic prosperity. He asserts that progress entails sacrifice. He deplores the attitude of detractors who demand quick satisfactions, as though the resources of government were limitless.

"If a hundred miles of roads have been built," he stresses, unreasoning voices harp on "the nine hundred miles that have not been constructed; if a dozen bridges have been erected, there are a score more that have not been built."

The effect of such an attitude towards achievement, the President, declares, is to arouse extreme expectations from the people, in the false belief that democratic government is endowed with infinite powers.

This poor quality of dissent, he says, poses the danger of disaffecting the masses and softening them for those who promise "rice in exchange of their freedom," but the loss of freedom, he said, means the loss of everything.

He stresses that national goals cannot be swiftly achieved without regimenting the people, adding that "we do not aspire, and will never aspire, for a development that comes out of the barrel of a gun."

The President says, "Let us contend and disagree among ourselves but let us improve the terms of our contention."

There is a need, he declares, for informed dialogue and knowledgeable dissent. This is the only way out of the crisis in understanding. Otherwise, he points out, the public will soon regard discussion as mere talk, and demand for just any kind of action.

Opinion leaders, he notes, should recognize their obligation to be informed, candid, and responsible. They should “realize the dangers of simplification, for while this may serve immediate political ends, it can compromise our national future.”

The Constitution, he states, has proved invulnerable thus far to tyrants, but it might prove vulnerable to fantasy, on which the language of political and economic controversy more and more relies.

“If we feel deeply for our Constitution,” he says, “we must begin a new dialogue, a dialogue that does justice to the wisdom of our forbears and the intelligence of our people.”

This should be the initial amendment to the Constitution, he avers, and quoting the late Senator Claro Recto stated the best amendment is the “amendment of our lives,” the amendment of attitudes, outlook, actions, and the “realization that we are free men, and the resolution to live and act as free men.”

He says that the people should remind themselves that the Constitution makes “all of us, in varying degrees, stewards of the state.”

Official Week in Review: February 9 — February 22, 1967

February 9.—TURNING his sights toward the conservation of the marine resources of the country, President Marcos issues an executive order designed to minimize and ultimately eradicate blast fishing.

In his directive, the President puts more teeth to the drive against dynamite fishing by providing stiffer penalties for violations of the rules and regulations, which were also sharpened, to govern control and supervision of the importation, sale and possession of chemicals used as ingredients in the manufacture of explosives.

The President only recently has issued directives to the Chief of the Constabulary, and the directors of the bureaus of mines and forestry, calling for stricter measures in the issuance of licenses for the purchase and transport of explosives by mining companies or timber concessionaries.

The new executive order, which amended Executive Order No. 9 dated Feb. 1, 1954, covers all chemicals used in the manufacture of explosives, particularly potassium chlorate and nitrates of ammonium, potassium and sodium.

The directive provides that any person or entity desiring to import, possess or sell any of the specified chemicals must first apply with the Chief of Constabulary, stating the purpose for which the license or permit is requested and such other information as may be requested by the PC chief pertinent to the request.

It is only upon approval by the PC chief, that the Firearms and Explosives Office may issue the license or permit applied for.

Only persons or entities issued permits to purchase certain quantities of any of these chemicals by the licensing office will be allowed to purchase from authorized importers or dealers.

In view of this, all importers, dealers and end-users of these chemicals will have to secure the necessary license within three months from the issuance of the executive order which will take effect 15 days following its publication in the Official Gazette.

Violation of any of the provisions of the executive order, including the rules and regulations that may be issued relative to its implementation, will be sufficient cause for the cancellation of the license and confiscation of all chemicals in questions. In addition a fine of not less than three months nor more than two years, will be imposed, at the discretion of the court.

At the same time, the President directs Public Highways Commissioner Baltazar Aquino to immediately begin the cementing of provincial highway between Calbayog City and Catarman a main artery of Catbalogan, following reports of damage which had rendered it impassable.

The bad condition of the road has isolated the northern towns of Samar from the rest of the province.

The President also instructs Commissioner Aquino to call for public bidding at once of the cementing of the provincial highway. He notes that the project should have been started earlier to forestall further deterioration.

President Marcos spends most of his day attending to state affairs brought to his attention by various government officials.

In the evening, the President receives newsmen covering Malacañang, who paid him a social call.

During the brief talk with newspapermen at his temporary office at the Veterans Memorial Hospital, the President says he would put the coalition (NP, LP, PPP) to a test by asking for its support for his appropriation bill, the investment incentives bills and the bills reforming the tax structure.

He likewise bares he would start conferring with Nacionalista senators tomorrow on his legislative program and on the possible need for a re-organization in the Senate.

On the criticisms of his budget proposals in the Senate and the House, the President expresses surprise. In fact, he confides, his budget proposal was one of the lowest in the government's history as far as funds for actual administrative operation were concerned. He declares the total expenditure increased only because the administration was paying off debts incurred by previous administrations.

He explains that because of increased income, his administration will be able to pay off previous public debts.

The President also declares he was recovering speedily and was anxious to get out of the hospital so that he could resume a full working schedule at Malacañang. He states he felt he could play 36 holes of golf and was becoming restless in the hospital.

Meantime, President Marcos reveals that the civic action program of the Philippine Navy will be expanded in the next few months, in a speech delivered by Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata at the ceremonies marking the 28th anniversary of the naval arm of the country.

He tells the navy officers and personnel present at the program that it was his desire that "more ships and personnel in the navy be enlisted for a massive civic action program which will embrace vital social services, from community improvement to health and education projects."

The President hails the navy for its initiative in fighting hunger, unemployment, ignorance in various parts of the country, where, he said, "civilian development efforts have not penetrated."

The present efforts in this area of social amelioration will be unified, states utilizing the "best available and most dedicated men from the schools, community welfare agencies, health services and the armed forces.

"This national partnership in peace," the President points out, "is the key to that reformation which we have long hoped to achieve."

This unification of efforts, he says, is not only possible, but must be organized and used immediately.

February 10.—PRESIDENT Marcos lifts a Malacañang order suspending the grant of industrial and commercial loans by the Social Security System.

The President instructs the SSS, through Administration Gilberto Teodoro, to reopen the industrial and commercial loan operation of the system, after he was informed that the financing agency is now in a position to extend these loans.

The commercial and industrial loan operations of the SSS were suspended last year, when the agency undertook a review of the loans granted by the previous administration. The review was made by the Development Bank of the Philippines.

The Chief Executive restores the lending operations to commercial and industrial enterprises, in recognition of the need for supporting financially those efforts in this area designed to move forward economic development.

At the same time, the President issues a proclamation extending Philippine-China Friendship Year which expired last December 31, to June 24 this year.

Under Proclamation, No. 23, issued last March 24, the remainder of the year 1966 beginning last March 25 was designated Philippine-China Friendship Year by the President.

In his proclamation, the President creates a committee to coordinate government participation in the activities designed to achieve fully the objective of the proclamation.

The Chief Executive also clears the way for the implementation of two forestry projects, one, expanding the culture of softwoods and the other, and widening research on quick growing timber species.

In his proclamation, the President sets aside 23, 398 hectares of timberlands in Agusan for the establishment of a gubas tree plantation, and another 5,418 hectares in Negros Oriental as a Bureau of Forestry-Siliman University experimental and educational forest reserve.

The joint project, Director Antonio Quejado of the bureau of forestry says, will conduct studies on the stabilization of forestland squatters, the cultivation of quick growing species, and other research projects on forests and forest products.

President Marcos starts the day early in the morning pursuing state papers and receiving callers at his temporary office at the Veterans Memorial Hospital.

The President's first visitors are Tristan E. Beplat and John H. Andren, senior vice president and executive vice president, respectively, of the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company of New York, who came to pay their respects.

During the brief meeting, the President and the New York Bankers discusses informally economic and financial matters in general, and local public works projects in particular.

February 11.—FULLY recovered after 19-days of confinement following the removal of his inflamed ball bladder last January 24, President Marcos checks out the Veterans Memorial Hospital.

On his discharge from the hospital, his doctors certifies that he was "completely recovered." The President leaves the hospital at 5 p.m., accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

Before he left the hospital, the President receives all those of the VMH staff who had attended to him during his operation and recuperation.

The Chief Executive arrives in Malacañang well rested although he had worked as usual in the morning. He is received exuberantly by his children.

Later, he resumes working on state papers in his private study.

Meanwhile, the President proclaims 1967 as Economic census Year.

The last economic census was taken in 1962.

In his proclamation, the President states that "it is utmost urgency that another economic census be conducted in order to have a picture of the country's current economic situation."

The census will cover economic activities such as logging, mining and quarrying, manufacturing, construction, utilities, commerce, transportation, storage and communication and services such as government and education.

The President also orders the investigation of the irregular transactions of the immediate past management of the Home Financing Commission, which was recently uncovered during the regular audit of the firm's books.

He names a committee to investigate two specific transactions which the HFC auditor claimed were illegal.

They are:

1. The sum of P150, 000 in HFC funds which appear to be unaccounted for, being represented only by a certified acceptance of the Overseas Bank of Manila, which on its face value is of doubtful validity;
2. The investment of P659, 218.59 of HFC corporate funds, which is not authorized by the provisions of section 15 or R.A 1557, or the Home Financing Act.

Named to the investigating committee are Emilio Gancayco of the Department of Justice, chairman; and Alipio Calmacio of the Presidential Economic Staff and Marcelino Yumol of the General Auditing Office as members.

The irregularities are first detected by the HFC auditor in the course of the current audit of the firm's books. He brought this to the attention of the acting HFC chairman, Alejandro Melchor, who after examination of the housing agency's records recommended to the President an investigation of the matter.

In his recommendation, Melchor states that it appears the past HFC management had improperly used its authority, or had abused its powers.

The investment is found to be irregular because:

1. It was not authorized by the provisions of Section 15 of R.A. 1557. Otherwise known as the Home Financing Act;
2. The said acceptances were renewed without pre-audit in contravention of Circular 510 of the GAO, dated May 27, 1965, which restored the pre-audit system, and without prior approval of the Central Bank as required by CB Circular 220.
3. That the renewed acceptances were made payable to bearer, thus extinguishing the identity of the funds as that of the HFC.

February 12.—THE Chief Executive orders the Land Transportation Commission and the National Bureau of Investigation to probe and break up the syndicate within the LTC issuing irregular drivers licenses.

He takes the measure after receiving a report from the Department of Justice that 70, 000 drivers licenses and Traffic Violation Receipts have been "abandoned" by the violators in the courts of Manila alone.

This act, the Presidents states, is proof of the irregular issuance of licenses by certain LTC officials and employees, for it means erring drivers can easily secure new licenses to replace those confiscated by police and LTC agents.

In his directive, the President instructs Romeo Edu, LTC commissioner, to secure a copy of the list of abandoned licenses and TVRs (Traffic Violation Receipts) from the department of justice and check the names there against those newly issued by the LTC.

He then asks the LTC chief to pinpoint the culprits within the agency responsible for the irregular issuance of drivers licenses and take "stern disciplinary measures against them, including dismissal from the service if warranted."

He also instructs Commissioner Edu to study the feasibility of removing from the police the authority to confiscate drivers licenses. Instead, traffic policemen may only issue TVRs.

In the morning, the President accompanied by his three children strolls around the park.

The President spends most of his first day out of the hospital at the Malacañang Park where he relaxed with members of his family.

He returns to Malacañang the other day.

February 13.—IN the face of the continued smuggling of rice from southern ports to nearby countries, President Marcos directs the Rice and Corn Administration to take steps in improving the marketing facilities for the cereal in Mindanao, as well as other parts of the country.

The President takes the measure following a report from Lt. Gen. Pelagio Cruz (ret.), chairman of the Anti-Smuggling Action Center, that the smuggling of rice from Mindanao to ports abroad continues despite strict surveillance and countermeasures.

The report adds that there is also continued activity in the smuggling of copra from Indonesian ports to Mindanao and other southern ports.

To further discourage such activities, the President order:

1. The RCA to buy rice at competitive prices in order to stop the activities of speculators and rice hoarders.
2. The Department of National Defense to intensify naval patrols and provide air cover if possible, to better detect the movements of vessels used by smugglers.
3. The Department of Foreign Affairs to implement strictly the border-crossing agreement with Indonesia, with a view to shortening the validity period for border-crossing cards, from 30 days to ten days.

The ASAC report bares that smuggling of copra, notably from Celebes, amounts to about 55, 000 to 60, 000 tons annually. On the other hand, the rice being shipped out surreptitiously from Mindanao amounts to about 200 sacks a month.

At the same time, the President takes steps to head off any serious problems in rice by initiating new moves against rice hoarders and the speed up of the delivery of the cereal imported by the Rice and Corn Administration.

He likewise orders steps taken to assure the supply of fertilizers and irrigation water for the coming planting season.

In this connection, the President:

1. Creates an action committee composed of Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez, chairman; commerce and Industry Secretary Marcelo Balatbat and RCA Administrator Osmundo Mondoñedo as members, to tackle the problem of rice hoarding.

He instructs the committee to seal rice bodegas if necessary, if ascertained as sheltering hoarded rice, and to file a writ of distraint and levy, as well as to bring criminal action against illegal combines and monopolies which usually operate in restraint of trade in rice.

2. Orders the RCA to affect the earlier delivery of rice imports. The RCA chief states in this connection that the cereal purchased from Burma is expected here in the first week of March.

3. Directs the importation of fertilizers to be expedited as well. He names a committee to take care of the public bidding for the fertilizers, with Director General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff as Chairman; Gov. Vicente Valley of the Agricultural Credit Administration and a representative of the General Auditing Office as members.

He also creates an awards committee, composed of the finance secretary as chairman, Agricultural Undersecretary Dioscoro Umali and a representative of the GAO as members.

The President likewise moves to have the prices of fertilizers in Japan lowered, instructing Ambassador Jose Laurel III in Tokyo to follow up the representations already started to this end.

President Marcos also orders the closure of all drug stores found stocking and selling fake medicines, as the government moved to protect the public from the harm caused by these illegal products.

He issues the order to Dr. Luzonica Pesigan, Food and Drug Administration, following the submittal of a full report to him on these spurious medicines, which includes bogus anti-biotics. The report says these drugs are being sold in some drug stores in Manila and the suburbs.

The report also reveals that a wide assortment of fake drugs apprehended in raids on suspected establishments were all imitations, made out of such materials as starch, dyes and binders. These spurious medicines are being passed off as samples to gullible buyers and sold to unscrupulous drug store owners.

In the afternoon, the President motors to the South Harbor where he officiated at a simple ceremony, which marked the completion of the concreting of Pier 15. This is the first “outside” activity the President had since returning to Malacañang from the Veterans Memorial Hospital for an operation of an inflamed gall bladder.

Following tradition, the President throws in some coins into the concrete mixture poured into the last small uncemented portion of the pier floor.

At the pier, the President also discusses briefly with finance and public works officials, led by Secretary Eduardo Romualdez and Secretary Antonio Raquiza, the other proposed improvements in the South Harbor.

February 14.—THE President is back in full stride attending to state affairs and the usual quota of visitors, as though he had never been away from Malacañang.

Occupying an important part of his time is the discussion of legislative measures designed to support the administration program, with emphasis on economic development.

He discusses at length with Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff and Presidential Legislative Assistant Ariel Bocobo, on the bills proposed for enactment by Congress.

Included among the high priority measures are the investment incentive bill, the bills amending the tariff and customs codes, and the internal revenue code.

At 11 a.m., the President briefly leaves the conference to officiate at a simple ceremony in his study, at which he conferred on Monsignor Joseph J. Harnett of the American Catholic Relief Services the Presidential award of the Golden Heart.

Msgr. Harnett is cited for his “inspired leadership and dedicated humanism” as Far East Director of the CRS, US Catholic Conference of Bishops.

Meanwhile, the President instructs the National Marketing Corporation to hold its proposed importation of meat products and study the offer of the Delta Manufacturing Corporation to supply all the requirements of the marketing agency.

The NAMARCO is set to import some P9 million worth of canned sardines and meat products this year, after it had ascertained that local food producers did not have the capability to supply these goods in sufficient quantity to meet national requirements.

The Delta Manufacturing Corporation however disputes this assessment Francisco Ortigas, Jr., president and chairman of the board of the firm, declares in a letter to NAMARCO with canned meat products at prices competitive with those listed by foreign manufacturers.

The President, who was furnished a copy of Ortigas' letter, directs the NAMARCO head, through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, to look into the offer of Delta to supply the marketing agency its needs in meat products at prices lower than foreign products, or on the same level.

At the same, the President also orders Public Works Secretary Antonio Raquiza to immediately utilize the 1,500 drums of asphalt in Tagbilaran, Bohol to pave national roads in the province.

The P75,000 worth of asphalt, stored at the Tagbilaran airport since 1957, has not been used by the past administration. It was originally ordered to pave the 1,200-meter Bohol airport runway.

The asphalt stockpile has not been used because there had been no appropriations set aside for the labor and other materials necessary, such as sand and gravel, for the runway improvement.

February 15.—PRESIDENT Marcos instructs the Presidential Arm Community Development to procure the services of more Japanese agricultural and ceramics experts following reports of the favorable results of the work here of the members of the Japan Overseas Cooperation Volunteers.

The President states that the request for more Japanese volunteers will be readily accommodated by the Japanese government, since this is one of the areas of cooperation taken up during the President's state visit to Japan last October.

He declares that four more rice experts could be utilized in the Mountain Province and in the Cagayan Valley, where rice production is being expanded.

For the same reason, the President says that two more ceramics experts and another two vegetable experts can be absorbed to good advantage in the Mountain Province. He observes that the growing vegetable producing industry in that province would benefit from the services of experienced Japanese, who in their homeland have made vegetable farming a major enterprise.

The Junior volunteers of the JOCV, which is an equivalent of the US Peace Corps Volunteers, have undertaken to instruct, demonstrates and direct programs here on sericulture, or the production of raw silk from silkworm cocoons; on forest development, management and conservation, and on the cultivation of Japanese green tea and Ceylonese black tea. These volunteers appear to have made great progress in imparting their skills to Filipinos.

The President, after working on a full schedule of official business and visitors, breaks off at noon to felicitate his mother, Mrs. Josefa Edralin Marcos, on her 74th birth anniversary.

Accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the President motors to Calixto Dyco street in Paco where his mother resides. The First Couple present the celebrant with a gold wrist as their birthday gift.

Back in Malacañang in the afternoon, the President crosses the Pasig river for the "Pangarap" guesthouse at Malacañang Park, where he worked on state papers.

February 16.—President Marcos devotes his full time working on official papers, notably administration bills to be forwarded to Congress for enactment.

He works the whole day at the "Pangarap" guesthouse in Malacañang Park with this assistants and receives only a few callers.

Among those who saw the President are Robert Philips of the American Legion, and the Philippine participants in the air rifle tournament during the Fifth Asian Games in Bangkok last December.

During the call of the Philippine participants in the recently concluded Fifth Asian Games, the President is presented with an air rifle used by Lt. Leopoldo Ang in the air rifle event, a performance which won a bronze medal for the Philippine team.

At the same time, the President extends the fund campaign period of the Philippine Mental Health Association this year to February 28.

In extending the fund drive, the President declares that the association needed additional time to enable it to realize its campaign goal.

He has originally authorized the MHA to conduct a fund drive from October 15 to December 31 to last year.

February 17.—MEETING his cabinet officials for the second time this year, President Marcos lays firm emphasis on broadening government assistance to local producers of prime commodities and basic products directly boosting economic development.

During the meeting, the President stresses the advisability of providing government help to local canned food manufacturers and assessing their ability to supply the National Marketing Corporation (NAMARCO) all its needs.

The Chief Executive emphasizes the need for simplifying and expediting contracts by cutting red tape and decentralizing authority in the finalization of such agreements.

Notable among the other subjects taken up at the meeting are the government's recent moves to flush out the rice hoarders and other hidden rice stocks.

The President voices concern for local manufacturers in connection with the projected importation of canned food products by the NAMARCO, which was discussed during the meeting.

He declares that as much as possible the marketing agency should patronize local canned foods instead of importing such commodities.

As an initial step in this direction, the President asks Secretary Balatbat to meet with local manufacturers of canned goods and determine their capabilities for supplying the NAMARCO all of its requirements in these commodities.

Switching to another area of concern, the President takes up the problem of government contracts, particularly those relating to public works projects. The President notes that some projects had been delayed because of the delay in approval of contracts.

The President points out that there is need to re-evaluate this process, with a view to promulgating new rules that would expedite approval of contracts. One reason he gives for the needless delay is the inflexible centralization of authority.

He explains that present regulations require that contracts in the amount of P500,000 or more, and even those in the amount of P100,000, still must be forwarded to Malacañang for final approval. He suggests that department heads concerned may be given the authority to give final approval.

Toward this end, the President instructs the cabinet member to submit their recommendations on the problem, designed to simplify and streamline the process of drawing up contracts.

The President likewise expresses dissatisfaction with the present trend of prices charged against the government in the procurement of supplies and other needs. He tells Secretary Vicente Duterte of general services to study the price quotations of all the materials and supplies the government often purchases and find the solution to the problem of scaled-up prices.

He avers that the government is being charged by suppliers prices 25 percent higher than the average price quotations on the same commodities.

Following the meeting, the President meets Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, chief of the Philippine Constabulary, who reported on the latest developments in the peace and order drive.

The President also orders Gen. Yan to prepare a military decoration and commendation for a PC trooper, Sgt. Corsino Destajo, who singlehandedly battled six smugglers in Talaga, Argao, Cebu several days ago, capturing their kumpit which was full of smuggled goods.

In the course of the day, the President inducts the new officers of the Newspaperwomen's Society, led by Miss Guillermina Mendoza of the Manila Times, president.

Meantime, President Marcos certifies to Congress the reorganization bill, one of the administration's most urgent legislative proposals.

In his formal communication transmitting the bill, the President also invites the attention of Congress to eight bills previously submitted, but which are still pending enactment.

The bills submitted by the President to Congress during its last session but still pending enactment, are:

1. An act amending several provisions of the reparations law, to give all remaining reapartions to the government, in the Senate, for second reading.
2. An act creating circuit criminal courts to relieve clogged court dockets approved in the Senate, awaiting second reading on the House.
3. An act providing for additional prosecutors in the department of Justice, approved in the Senate, pending in the House.
4. An act further amending Commonwealth act 120 and R.A. 2641 and R.A. 3043, regarding the capital stock of the National Power Corporation, pending in the House.
5. An act creating a Philippine Coast Guard, pending in the House, awaiting report of Senate Committee on National Defense.
6. An act to sell the Welfareville property in Mandaluyong, Rizal, approved in the Senate, pending in the House.
7. An Act creating the provinces of Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur, and Davao Oriental, pending Senate third reading.
8. An act requiring judges of court to summarily try criminal cases with tourists or other foreigners as offended parties, pending second reading in the Senate.

February 18.—PRESIDENT Marcos for the first time since he returned to Malacañang from the hospital goes out to speak, as guest of honor, before the Municipal Judges League of the Philippines, at the closing session of its two-day convention at the Manila Hotel.

The President has a prepared speech, but he left the reading of the speech to Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee. Instead, he briefly addresses the assemblage, leaving immediately thereafter.

In his remarks delivered extemporaneously before his main speech, the President also takes the occasion to stress administration policies aimed at stabilizing the whole range of consumer prices, particularly in prime commodities. He says that in the past year, from the beginning of his term, the administration has focused on firming up the finances of the government, which in turn was aimed at maintaining the strength of the peso.

Once the peso is devalued, he declares, the whole structure of prices will collapse, the people will have less to buy with their diminished peso, and there will be runaway prices.

He tells the judges that this year, the administration will start a nationwide building program to widen the nation's economic foundations and strengthen them, with basic public works projects, including better roads, bridges, more schoolhouses, and other constructions to deepen the nation's infrastructure.

In his prepared speech read by Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, the President urges the judges to assure that justice is not delayed, which he said is the primary duty of these officials.

He reveals that he had instructed the department of Justices to study how the judicial process can be speeded up. He states he has taken steps to invigorate the judicial arms of government, including the reduction of red tape and the improvement of the quality of personnel.

He tells the judges that they can perform a great service in the campaign against crime by taking the lead "in the moral regeneration of your youth socially desirable goals."

He concludes by requesting the judges not to be influenced by outside pressures, to do their jobs with the highest integrity, for "when the people lose their faith in the judicial process system, they also lose their confidence in their government."

Back in Malacañang, the President confers with Highways Commissioner Baltazar Aquino on the status of highway construction projects, as well as of those projects to be undertaken soon by the government.

In the afternoon, the President crosses the Pasig River to the "Pangarap" guesthouse at Malacañang Park, where he discussed at luncheon with Undersecretary Teehankee and Solicitor General Antonio Barredo proposed legislations concerning the justice department and the judiciary.

Meanwhile, the President in a message to the members of the Confederation of Filipino Veterans, asks all veterans "to do their duties as citizens even as they had done nobly their duty as soldiers."

In his message read by Press Secretary Jose D. Asperas, on the opening of the annual convention of the organization, at the Rizal provincial capitol in Pasig, the President declares that "there is always a mission for old soldiers to accomplish, whether it is in working for better government, or defending the freedoms they fought and sacrificed for in war."

He adds however that the Filipino veterans in general have been "largely forgotten." It was in recognition of this, he states, that he had set out to help the veterans, "not in receiving recognition and honor, but also to find themselves."

He expresses the hope that the veterans will "continue the quest for their proper place in the scheme of things today, as well as to record more achievements in the public interest."

February 19.—TO speed up completion of important road projects in the city, President Marcos directs the Department of Public Works and the Public Highways Commission to extend all assistance to the City of Manila.

He orders these agencies of the national government to lend to the city road-building equipment and materials which may be needed to speed up work especially in the main city roads.

The Chief Executive has been receiving complaints from businessmen, who claimed that business in the city has been at a virtual standstill since the closure of certain roads in the city to vehicular traffic because of work on the Quezon boulevard-Claro M. Recto overpass and on Taft Avenue.

In the morning, the President confers with Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Public Highways Commissioner Baltazar Aquino. He is briefed by Commissioner Sy-Changco on the status of the proposed budget which the President submitted to Congress last February 7.

February 20.—PRESIDENT Marcos calls for the drastic acceleration of the public works construction program, and ordered the immediate release of P20 million of the P92 million earlier authorize for public projects to finance the immediate requirements of the program.

He tells the public works and other officials concerned with the program at a conference that special ways must be found to remedy delays in projects, including delays in the awarding of contracts and the release of funds.

The President likewise directs that work should be started immediately on the Agno river bridge, in the Mangatarem-Urbiztondo section of the national highways, with a target for completion six months from now.

In the morning, the President discusses administration bills in conference at the “Pangarap” guesthouse with Speaker Jose Laurel, Jr., Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, and Reps. Marcelino Veloso, Leonardo Perez and Floro Crisologo.

Before lunch time, the President briefly takes up financial matter with Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez.

In the afternoon, the President meets with Palace assistants on various administration matters, and for the rest of the afternoon till early in the evening worked on state papers.

February 21.—THE Chief Executive in a lively meeting with leaders of the Evangelical Churches, hails them for their individual and collective efforts to improve community life and conditions in the rural areas.

He tells those present that their work would reap more success if they coordinated their efforts with other church leaders, such as to widen the impact and success of their program designed to enhance economic and social development.

Following the meeting with the group, the President next receives Rice and Corn Administrator Osmundo Mondoñedo, who reported on the results of his rice-procurement mission abroad.

Mondoñedo, who arrived the other night, informs the President that rice shipments from Burma and Thailand will arrive in the first and second weeks of March, and additional weekly shipments will come thereafter.

In the afternoon, the President receives at the “Pangarap” guesthouse Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC Chief, and Col. Felizardo Tanabe, chief of the PC Criminal intelligence service, who reported on developments in the investigation of the murder of Mayor James Gordon of Olongapo City.

February 22.—PRESIDENT Marcos suspends Gov. Jose E. Villarama of Bulacan after special investigator Dr. Gaudencio Garcia, found the provincial executive guilty of dishonesty, grave misconduct and oppression.

Dr. Garcia recommended the dismissal from office of the Bulacan governor, but this was considered too severe for the offenses and the President imposes instead a six-month suspension.

The case comes in the wake of charges brought against Gov. Villarama by the provincial board of Bulacan.

On the charge of dishonesty, Dr. Garcia's findings establishes that:

1. Gov. Villarama transferred provincial trust funds from the Philippine National Bank of the Philippines Commercial and Industrial Bank, which had filed estafa charges against the governor with the Manila fiscal's office, a case involving P182,165.98.
2. The Bulacan governor received P40,000 from the PCIB as a donation to the province, but which later was used to build a canteen, without however public bidding or the participation of the provincial board.
3. The respondent further was found to have used portions of 621 confiscated logs for political purposes, without the consent of the provincial board nor any accounting to the provincial treasurer.
4. The same irregularities were found in the governor's establishment of a hollow blocks factory. In the building and operation of the factory he disregarded the provincial board and the provincial treasurer, and also used the products for political advantage.

On the charge of oppression, Dr. Garcia notes that:

1. Gov. Villarama locked the provincial board's session hall when he was not present or not disposed to attend meetings; that during sessions he refused to recognize motions although properly presented, thus preventing the board from fulfilling its legislative function.
2. He delayed the signing of vouchers for gasoline allowances presented by board members.

On the charge of grave misconduct, Dr. Garcia establishes that:

1. The governor refused to turn over 24 dump trucks to the highway district engineer's office, and violated General Auditing Office rules on government vehicle markings by having his name inscribed on the trucks.
2. He disregarded the Supreme Court decision declaring valid and legal the actions of just three board members in regular session, by continuing to pay the salaries of employees whose positions were abolished by the board. He further failed to honor board resolutions turning over the dump trucks to the highway district engineer's office and suspending public works projects which had not been started at the time.
3. The respondent abused his powers and discretion by discriminating against officials along party lines, when he suspended and charged administratively NP Mayor Bienvenido Castillo of Pulilan for involvement in a fight, while with-holding the same charges against LP Mayor Roberto Chico of Baliwag, who had been charged through the provincial fiscal's office with malversation of public funds.

In the morning, the President confers with his financial advisers, with whom he discussed the funding of public works projects, particularly road and bridges construction job.

Following the conference, the President next meets the officials of the National Shipyards and Steel Corporation headed by Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata, the acting chairman, and Brig. Gen. Dominador Garcia (ret), general manager.

The NASSCO officials briefs the President on the status of the government's firm, its activities, and the problems confronting it today. Gen. Garcia also submits a plan for the transfer of NASSCO facilities from Engineer Island to a bigger site in the North Harbor area.

In the afternoon, the President motors to the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources office in Diliman, Quezon City, where he was guest of honor and speaker at the department's 50th anniversary celebration.

During the program, which lasted till early evening, the President also presents awards to the four outstanding farmers of the year, and 15 outstanding officials and employees of the DANR.

Likewise awarded is Robert Chandler, director of the International Rice Research Institute, for the development of selected rice seeds, notably the IR-8 or "miracle" rice seeds, as well as for the propagation of progressive farm practices, among other citations.

In his speech, the President stresses the urgency of conserving the country's natural resources, as he sounded a call for national participation in a massive campaign to attain this objective.

He reveals that the principal cause of the destructive natural disasters the country has experienced in the past few years was the wanton destruction of forests.

The administration, the President declares has already started a vigorous program of conservation, particularly in guarding national forests and parks against mindless destruction.

President's Week in Review: February 23 - March 4, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

February 23.—NOTING that the rice trade is still largely controlled by foreign or naturalized Filipino elements, President Marcos, asks for the full cooperation of the big rice traders in bringing down the prices of the cereal.

The President bluntly tells officials of the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce, at a brief meeting in Malacañang, that the artificial increase in rice prices were due to the manipulation and smuggling of the cereal supply.

He reveals that reports reaching him place smuggled rice, specially from Mindanao, at 100,000 to 120,000 cavans a month. He stresses that because of the serious depletion of the supply through these activities, the government will be forced if necessary to close warehouses and search ships,

He urges the officials of the federation to help the government stabilize rice prices through unstinted cooperation in the implementation of rice policies.

If the present trend of rice prices does not change for the better, the President warns, he would "be compelled to import as much rice as possible and dump it on the market."

At the same time, President Marcos grants a last minute: reprieve to Emeterio Orzame, sentenced to die for murder tomorrow in the electric chair. The President's reprieve gives the death row convict a new lease on life up to March 30, 1967.

The reprieve is given to afford the board of pardons and parole to further scrutinize the records of the case, in connection with the convicts' plea for executive clemency Orzame was sentenced by the court of first instance of Nueva Ecija to die for the slaying of Juan Dulay, in a decision handed down. Sept. 30, 1960.

The court found him guilty of murder after establishing beyond reason able doubt that the killing of Dulay was attended by premeditation, with the aggravating circumstances of treachery and unnecessary cruelty.

Early in the morning, the President officiates at the formal opening of the 1967 Philippine Golf Club Championship tournament at the Wack Wack Golf Club.

The President also receive Colonels Salvador Villa and Nicanor Jimenez, chairman and general manager, respectively, of the Philippine National Railways, who called to inform the President on the activities of the firm, including acquisition of new facilities, such as the five locomotives, set to arrive from France.

In the afternoon, the President confers with Secretary Alfonso Calalang of the National Economic Council, on matters affecting the administration's economic programs.

February 24.—PRESIDENT Marcos names Fiscal Lucio Badoria of Olongapo City as overall coordinator of all activities of police agencies involved in the investigation and prosecution of persons responsible for the murder of Mayor James Gordon.

Even as the President issued the order, he receives report from Capt. Tomas Diaz of the PC, who is acting officer-in-charge of the Olongapo City police, that the main suspects in the case, besides the confessed triggerman, have been already arrested.

The Chief Executive had earlier directed the National Bureau of Investigation, the PC and the Olongapo City Police Department to coordinate fully their efforts, in order to expedite the solution of the murder case.

Capt Diaz also reports to file President that criticisms against the PC in connection with the investigation was properly coordinated from the start by Fiscal Badoria.

At the same time, the President takes steps to seat Southeast Asia in the Interim Committee of the International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium (Intelsat) as he instructed Ambassador Benjamin Romualdez to work for the pooling of shares of Southeast Asian members.

The President receives report from Deputy Director-General Apolinario Orosa, chairman and general manager of the Philippine Communications Satellite Corporation (Philcomsat).

The Interim Committee acts as the ruling body of Intelsat, with the United States Communications Satellite Corporation (Comsat) as manager.

The Intelsat constitution provides that any member or group of members with an aggregate of 1.5 percent share in the Consortium is entitled to a seat in the Interim Committee.

In his report to the President, Orosa states that the affairs of Intelsat are being decided mostly by European countries and that Southeast Asia is not represented in the Interim Committee, although the members from the region hold an aggregate of 2.85 percent of the total Philcomsat shares. This is more than the requirement for one seat but less than that required for two seats in the ruling body.

The Philippines, which holds a half percent share in Intelsat, has the biggest holding among the SEA countries, and on this basis is seeking a seat in the committee. The other members approached to pool their shares in support of the Philippines bid, include New Zealand, which holds .45 percent; Taipei, .1 percent; Thailand, .25 percent; Singapore, .10 percent ; and Indonesia, .30. percent. Counting the Philippines, these nations hold an aggregate 1.70 percent of Intelsat shares.

In the morning, the President receives A. Levin, a personal representative of the President of Zambia, who called to deliver a message from the Zambian head of government.

Following the call of Levin, the President receive next the leaders of the local banking community led by Col. Ernesto Rufino (ret.), chair man of the fund drive committee for the national shrines projects.

During the call of the local banking community, Jose Fernandez, president of the Far East Bank and Trust Company and chairman of the campaign subcommittee on banks, turns over to the President P218,000 as donation of the banks to the shrine projects. The amount overshoots the banking sector's quota by P18, 000.

In the afternoon, the President confers with government leaders from the Bicol region, and discussed with them the ways of speeding up the program on highways, feeder roads, irrigation and water control systems constructions.

After the conference, the President also receive Administrator Ramon Nolan of the Sugar Quota Administration and sugar industry leaders. Carlos. Ledesma and Alfredo Montelibano on the means to improve the country's sugar production.

The sugar leaders also discuss with the President such safeguards as might be necessary for the industry, following the termination of the Laurel-Langley Agreement in 1974, which is expected to directly affect the country's sugar exports.

Meanwhile, President Marcos underscores the need for quality in the opposition, stating that at present the critics of the administration lend to be superficial and too often motivated by partisan aims.

Addressing the convention of Rotary Clubs of Luzon, Mindoro and Palawan in Baguio City in a speech read by Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez, the President likens the Rotary spirit of “open-hearted and self-discipline” to the democratic virtue of self-criticism.

He points out that a democratic nation’s capacity for self-criticism is the same as the capacity for self-correction. He asserts that “democracy requires candor as its indispensable climate.”

It is unfortunate however, he declares, that the opposition has often succumbed to the temptation of blaming the government for “age-old conditions, thus excusing the effort required to look deeper” into the problems they deplore.

The President avers that “an opposition program based merely on the downgrading of public officials, in the hope of being allowed to replace them, cannot speak well of our society as a whole.”

He declares that if the party in power must be expected to perform well, on pain or criticism, “the same obligation must be presumed of the opposition parties in the exercise of their function as an alternative administration and fiscalizing body.”

On the other hand, the President notes, “the quality of dissent is the highest complement the dissenters can pay themselves.”

However, the President observes that “some of the opposition spokesmen. have shown themselves more partial to black propaganda, than to responsible criticism.”

This attitude, he says, is “taking the path of least resistance.” He declares that it is in effect “an abdication of the moral obligation of the opposition party to fiscalize the administration through responsible criticism.”

He maintains that the “cheap and irresponsible methods of propaganda” used by the opposition “debases the level of democratic dialogue and does irreparable harm to our democratic development.”

Black propaganda, he notes, “which relies not on evidence but on gossip, is inimical to the development of a climate of open-hearted candor and free inquiry indispensable to the health and vigor of a democratic society.”

The President asserts that his policy is “a policy of candor.” In a democracy, he emphasizes, “there is no alternative to a policy of candor.” Except where national interest intervenes, he states, “a democratic government must have nothing to hide.”

February 25.—THE Chief Executive announces that the Philippines has received offers from Belgium and Japan for the construction and installation of the Bataan Thermal Plant.

A $12 million loan-application for this project is now under consideration by the World Bank. Final action on the application now only await completion of minor requirements.

The Bataan Thermal Plant is one of the major power projects included in President Marcos’ development program. It will supplement the power supplied by the National Power Corporation’s hydro-electric plants, and is primarily aimed at maintaining the peak power supply for the Bataan area during the dry season when hydro-electric power production drops.

Development of the plant will be done in three stages. Each stage calls for the installation of a 75 megawatt (million-watt) unit. When completed, it will have a total capacity of 225 MW, one-fourth of the present power capacity of Luzon power plants which is 900 MW.

President Marcos spends most of his time working on state papers. He receives only one group of callers, American high school students from Olongapo, Zambales.

In the morning, the President concentrates on state papers brought to him by his assistants.

Towards noon, the President crosses the Pasig back to the Palace, where he receives a group of students from the George Dewey High School in Subic, Olongapo.

After exchanging impressions with the students, the President returns to the "Pangarap" guesthouse for lunch. He takes a brief rest later in the afternoon, and then resumed his paperwork till evening.

February 26.—PRESIDENT Marcos directs Administrator Osmundo Mondoñedo of the Rice and Corn Administration to adopt additional measures to further improve the system of distribution of RCA rice.

Through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, the President instructs Mondoñedo to study the feasibility of distributing rice through the Social Security System and the Government Service Insurance System. Under the plan, these two agencies will take charge respectively of distributing rice to workers and employees in industrial and commercial firms, and government offices.

A plan for private industrial and business concerns to import rice for distribution to their workers and employees had also been approved.

He instructs Mondoñedo to start working on a more effective rice distribution system to ensure a stable supply of the cereal in all areas.

Right after an early morning breakfast, the President spends some time at the desk working on state papers.

In the afternoon, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, accompanied by their children, motors to the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club to watch the concluding games of this year's Open Golf Championship tournament.

The award rites starts at 5 p.m. The ceremonies also affords the President an opportunity to congratulate the winners in the tournament.

February 27.—MOVING swiftly to ease the tension in Olongapo City, President Marcos relieves the two Constabulary units assigned there, following representations by Mrs. Amelia Gordon, widow of murdered City Mayor James Gordon, and other leaders of Olongapo.

In a directive to Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC Chief, the President orders the immediate reassignment of the two PC units in Olongapo, one under the command of Capt. Tomas Diaz and the other under Capt. Teodoro Garcia.

The relief order covers the two officers and all the men under them.

At the same time, the President moves to decentralize executive power by issuing through Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas a memorandum circular directing all government lending institutions to approve loan applications filed with them.

The circular supersedes previous circulars stating that loans exceeding P500, 000 should be coursed through Malacañang for review and/or approval.

Affected in the order are more than 30 applications for loans, earmarked for industrial, commercial and agricultural projects, totalling about P200 million.

The directive also specifies that officials observe strictly the guideline-; and priorities established by the Monetary Board and the National Economic Council, in considering and approving loans applied for in government financing institutions.

In the morning, the President starts his day with an early meeting with Commissioner Baltazar Aquino of the Public Highways at the “Pangarap” guesthouse.

He gets a fill-in from Commissioner Aquino on the procurement of public works equipment and on the progress of work on projects

The President asks the highways commissioner to do everything within this bureau’s resources to help speed up completion of the projects for the general good.

Then, he goes to the briefing room at the executive building where, together with Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrent Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and other officials, he was briefed on the progress of the rehabilitation and construction of irrigation systems and the work on the Manila North diversion road.

Administrator Alfredo Juinio of the National Irrigation Administration reports during the briefing that the NIA has added in 1966 about 25,000 hectares of irrigable area, with the initial completion of several projects out of a total of 68 irrigation systems under programs to be installed in 11 provinces.

February 28.—PRESSING on the sugar industry the need for exerting special efforts to realize its full potentials, President Marcos emphasizes that the industry is important to the economic development and stabilization of the nation.

He stresses that the industry must revitalize itself to meet the expanded quota from U.S., keep its status as a pillar of the economy, maintain its dollar earnings, and help in the food production program.

He warns however that the administration will not give special privileges to the sugar industry at the expense of other industries. He declares that the administration has never favored the so-called sugar bloc over and above the national interest.

On the other hand, he pledges all possible assistance to the sugar industry for its needed expansion of facilities, modernization of structure and methods, and increase in production.

He deplores the fact that the sugar industry had failed to respond to the request of the government to submit its recommendations on the assistance it needed, and on its views relative to the forthcoming negotiations with the U.S. on a new trade treaty to replace the Laurel-Langley agreement with emphasis on the requirements of the sugar industry.

He points out that the goals set for the industry are not unattainable. He states that all the government asked was that the industry produce more sugar, at least 300,000 tons more a year to meet both local and foreign demand.

He asks that ‘in expanding, the sugar industry should also consider producing crops other than sugar, to meet the demands of the growing population for more food. The sugar planters must “join in the national effort to produce more food,” he says, “by using part of their capital and land to raise rice.” and other food crops, as well as livestock.

President Marcos likewise proclaims Thursday (March 2) as a special public holiday in Cabatuan, Iloilo. The day marks the 76th birth anniversary of the late Tomas Confesor, statesman and outstanding resistance leader during the last world war.

In proclaiming the special holiday, the President states that the people of Cabatuan should be afforded an opportunity to celebrate the birth anniversary of one of their prominent sons with appropriate ceremonies.

Meantime, the Chief Executive urges total public support for the “voluntary tax compliance drive” launched by the bureau of internal revenue. “File your income tax returns promptly,” he asks taxpayers.

In his message, the President reminds the people of the great role taxes pay in the rehabilitation and progress of the country.

“We need money to build schools, bridges and roads; to pay decent salaries and wages to our policemen, teachers, nurses and other civil servants; to open up and finance new projects which will create new jobs for our jobless,” the President points out.

“The taxes you pay will support this administration in carrying out many of its social and economic projects aimed at improving not only the national economy but also the welfare of the laboring classes,” he adds.

The “voluntary tax compliance drive” launched by Commissioner Misael P. Vera urges those required to file income tax returns to do so “without waiting for the time when eventually the BIR will bear down on the non-filers with heavy penalties for voluntary tax evasion.”

The President, in his message, expresses faith in the patriotism and capability of the people, saying that at this stage of their national life, the people have become fully aware of their responsibilities as members of a “growing, moving society.”

March 1.—PRESIDENT Marcos meets his financial and economic advisers at breakfast to assess the financing plans for the various development projects.

He has made it a point to meet this groups regularly to keep himself posted on the financing and economic standing of his different developmental projects.

Following the conference, the President sits down with other officials in another important conference, to inquire into the progress of projects of their respective offices.

Then, the President receive Secretary Ernesto Mata and Undersecretary Manuel B. Syquiao of National Defense who reported to the Chief Executive on the status of the construction on Mount Samat to convert this historic place into a national shrine.

Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee and Solicitor General Antonio Barredo discusses with the President the principal concerns of their respective offices.

In the afternoon, the President receives Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC chief, who reported on his part, the recent activities of his command, with emphasis on the peace and order situation of the country in general, and Olongapo City in particular.

The President also receives Colonel Godofredo Magallanes, outgoing chief of police of Olongapo City, who submitted his report in anticipation of the turnover of Olongapo’s police department to the newly designated chief, J. P. Roxas, Jr.

Roxas, prior to his designation, is a ranking official of the National Bureau of Investigation.

March 2.—MEETING members of the League of Provincial Governor and City Mayors at a conference at the Palace, President Marcos informs them that he was in favor of decentralization of powers and that he would sign the decentralization bill passed by Congress if serious doubts concerning its constitutionality and practicability were resolved in favor of approval of the measure.

The President, at the same time, asks the provincial and city executives to submit to him their arguments in favor or against the bill, to help guide him in making a decision on whether to approve or veto the bill.

In this connection, he likewise instructs Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, the UP. Law Center and the Presidential Economic Staff to lead and coordinate the various studies being made on the measure.

The governors and city mayors, who had just closed their annual convention in Manila, meet with the President at Malacañang to discuss problems affecting the country and their constituencies.

The Chief Executive also brings up the question of rice importation before the League by asking the opinion of the members on the possibility of the government importing rice from sources other than those utilized in the past, particularly Hongkong and Singapore.

The league members expresses no objection to the importation of rice from whatever sources, abroad if only to assure a stable supply of cheaper rice.

Earlier in the day, the President meets at breakfast the new officers of the Business Writers Association of the Philippines (BWAP) led by Liberato Marinas of the Philippines Herald.

After breakfast, the President inducts into office the new officers of the BWAP.

Next, the President confers briefly with acting National Bureau of Investigation Director Serafin Fausto, National Police Commissioner Jose Lukban and NBI Regional Director Ponciano Fernando, to discuss peace and order matters.

March 3—FOLLOWING the expose of a woman executive of an animal feed firm of an alleged extortion attempt of two directors and one former director of the National Marketing Corporation, the President directs Dr. Gaudencio Garcia, chairman of the Crime Commission, to pursue the probe on them and to file criminal charges against them, if warranted.

The woman executive, Mrs. Nelia Gonzales, executive vice-president of A-1 feeds, names the directors during a joint Senate (Blue Ribbon and Government Enterprises) committee hearing the other day.

The same directors had earlier been investigated by Dr. Garcia on orders of President Marcos, who was then acting in response to complaint made directly to him.

On the strength of the findings of Dr. Garcia during the earlier investigation, the President did not reappoint Mardonio Estella, one of the Namarco directors named by Mrs. Gonzales at the Senate hearing. However, there is no evidence to show any responsibility of the other officials for the charges.

Dr. Garcia can not then pursue the investigation because Mrs. Gonzales declined to testify or unless shielded by immunity.

At the same time, the President tells Col. Godofredo Magallanes to vacate his post as acting chief of police of Olongapo City and turn it over to J. P. Roxas, Jr who was designated acting chief of police of the city two days ago.

The President in the interim, directs Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC chief to take steps to install Roxas as acting chief of police of Olongapo vice Magallanes.

Col. Magallanes was designated acting chief of police of the city last August 17, 1966.

Trip relief of Magallanes as acting chief of police of that city is part of an effort to ease up tension in that city. His relief follows that of the two P.C. units assigned in Olongapo.

In the afternoon, the President receives William P. Bundy, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asian affairs, who called on him to pay his respects.

The U.S. state department official arrives early this afternoon to preside over a conference in Baguio City of American ambassadors in Asia. The meeting of the ambassadors start the next day.

After the call of Secretary Bundy, the President receives A.S.I. Ahmad, [unreadable] vice-president of the Meadow Brock National Bank of New York.

Ahmad is leaving the next day following a two-week long business visit here.

While receiving callers at his study, the President also joins the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda Ft. Marcos, at the Music room in welcoming the Miss Universe of 1965. Apasra Hongsakula of Thailand, here on a mission to raise funds for a charitable institution.

Meanwhile. President Marcos seeks the early enactment of Congress of electoral reforms as he certified the bill of Sen. Lorenzo Tañada providing for a shorter period of election campaign.

The President also directs Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee to draft a bill reducing the election expenses that may be allowed any candidate in accordance with his message to Congress on the State-of-the Nation last year.

Another electoral reform that he proposes is a law granting the Commission “the power to issue injunctions against any candidate, under pain of cancellation of Ms name from the list of candidates, for violating the limitation of expenditure and the period of campaign.”

The proposed law limits the expenses of any candidate to four times the annual salary for the position to which lie aspires.

At present, as provided by Section 48 of the Revised Election Code, embodied in Republic Act No. 180 as amended, the allowable expenses of a candidate should not exceed the equivalent of one-year salary of the position aspired for.

The bill of Sen. Tañada seeks to limit the period of campaign of four months and two months, respectively, for those seeking election to national or provincial office.

March 4.—HAVING failed in its mission to stabilize prices and had become a constant object of suspicion because of reported cases of rampant corruption, President Marcos decides to abolish the National Marketing Corporation (NAMARCO).

At the same time, the President creates a committee to take the legal measure towards the abolition of the 12-year old marketing firm created in 1955 under Republic Act No. 1345. Named to the committee are Justice Secretary Jose Yulo, Secretary of Commerce and industry Marcel Balatbat and Administrator Constancio Castañeda of the Office of the Economic Coordinator.

The President instructs Namarco General Manager Juvenal Almendras to cooperate with the committee, making available to it all the Namarco books and other records which the committee may need in its work. Almendras is also asks to submit to the committee the list of assets and liabilities, as well as all existing contracts of the corporation.

While the Department of Justice is instructed by the President to assess the evidence against any Namarco director, official, or employee responsible for or involved in any irregularity and to file criminal charges against them.

Secretary Yulo is instructed to make use of all available evidence in carrying out the presidential directive.

In deciding to abolish the state marketing firm, the President notes that the Namarco has failed in its primary mission to stabilize prices and to help Filipino retailers and businessmen gain greater participation in the procurement and distribution of goods.

He avers that the firm was no longer in a position to finance its operations, being heavily indebted with the Philippine National Bank.

He declares that he was particularly disturbed by the fact that the Namarco has been the constant object of suspicion because of reported cases of corruption.

The Namarco has an authorized capitalization of P20 million

In the morning, the President meets Nacionalista senators led by Senate President Gil J. Puyat and Minority Floor Leader Arturo Tolentino to discuss a number of subjects, including administrative bills pending in Congress and the Soviet invitation for Filipino trade and cultural groups.

Right after the meeting with the senators, the President returns to his study where he took up some aspects of the budget with Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco.

In the evening, the President receives American Ambassador to the United Nations Arthur Goldberg who called at Malacañang to pay his respects.

Ambassador Goldberg arrives earlier in the afternoon, in the course of a tour of Southeast Asian countries. He will attend the conference of American ambassadors in Asia which opened in Baguio city this morning.

President's Week in Review: March 7-13, 1967

March 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was guest speaker at the 32nd anniversary of the North Harbor of Manila in the morning, and in the afternoon, met with the participants in the Stanford Research Institute's Manila meeting.

He worked on state papers most of his time today.

In his study, the President:

1. Approved the granting of a temporary permit to Alitalia Airlines to operate in Manila, in line with the "open skies policy" of the administration towards foreign airlines.

2. Issued three proclamations:

- a) Setting aside some 70 hectares from the reservations which established the Central Mindanao University in Maramag, Bukidnon, and reserving it for landing purposes. The area reserved will be under the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

- b) Reserving for low-cost housing purposes two parcels of land of the private domain of the government situated in Talisay and Minglanilla, Cebu province, with an aggregate area of 197 hectares. The reserved site will be under the administration of the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation.

- c) Defining the proposed market site reservation in the Toril townsite residential subdivision in Davao City, with an area of about 13, 837 square meters.

In the afternoon, at Malacañang, the President had an informal conference with about 150 participants in the Stanford Research Institute's Manila meeting, composed of business executives in industrial and financial organizations from some 22 countries in Southeast Asia and elsewhere.

The delegates were led by Roberto Villanueva, president of the Trans-Philippine Investment Corporation and general chairman of the meeting; and Dr. Weldon B. Gibson, president of SRI-International.

President and Mrs. Marcos also honored the SRI delegates with cocktails at Malacañang in the evening.

March 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned early in the evening from trip to Capiz and Aklan after a full day's visit with the people of Roxas City, Kalibo and Barrio Esperanza of the town of Pontevedra in Capiz.

Accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda E. Marcos, the President received a rousing welcome and was engulfed by enthusiastic crowd from the time he touched down at the Roxas City airport throughout his trip to Barrio Esperanza, where the province's Federation of Associations of Barrio Councils honored him and the First Lady with a barrio fiesta.

The welcome given the President and First Lady was specially heartwarming for the couple because the region is considered as home grounds of Sen. Gerardo Roxas, LP president; and Rep. Cornelio Villareal, also a top opposition leader.

The President's plane landed at Roxas City at about 8:30 a.m. Besides the First Lady, those in the presidential party included Sen. Alejandro Almendras, PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Rep. Rafael Legaspi, Executive Assistant Jaime Ferrer, and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave.

On hand to meet the President and the First Lady were Gov. Cornelio Villareal, Jr., Assistant Executive Secretary Flores Bayot, his wife Vice-Gov. Carolina N. Bayot, City Mayor Lorenzo Arnaldo, Former Rep. Carmen Dinglasan Consing, and other provincial and municipal officials. But what overwhelmed the President and Mrs. Marcos was the huge crowd at the airport, which swelled as the presidential party moved out of the airport and into the streets of the city. Observers said that no President before him was so cheered by so many people. Many of those in the crowd bore placards saying "thank you" for the administration's many rural and development projects in the region.

At one point, buoyed by the unprecedented welcome, the President walked almost one kilometer just shaking hands with eager citizens.

The crowds lined virtually the whole 30 km. route from Roxas City to Barrio Esperanza, where the barrio fiesta for the President and the First Lady was held. Many people from other towns and barrios had converged on the small community.

The main ceremony at Esperanza was the inauguration of a multi-purpose pavement, at which the President and the First Lady officiated.

It was about 12:30 p.m. when the President finally was able to sit down with provincial, municipal, and barrio officials, and discussed the projects now being implemented in the region, as well as other primary problems of the local governments.

From Barrio Esperanza, the President and the First Lady moved to Kalibo, Aklan, where the First Couple once more were received by crowds who sought to shake their hands. The President had time enough to meet local officials, as well as provincial leaders before he had to enplane for Manila.

Heading the crowd that welcomed the President were Gov. and Mrs. Jose B. Legaspi.

Before leaving Malacañang this morning, the President formally invited the Liberal Party, through Sen. Gerardo Roxas, LP president, to select a representative of the opposition who will sit in the board of supervisors of the Pan Philippine Highway project.

In a letter to Sen. Roxas, the President extended the government's invitation to the opposition for an LP representative in the supervisory board which will oversee the implementation of the highway fund. The Japanese government has agreed to an initial $30 million loan in aid to the project.

Meanwhile, in a message issued on the eve of Jose P. Laurel's 78th birth anniversary, the President paid tribute to the late senator as a man "with a high concept of the destiny of the Filipino people, which he saw as one which only the people themselves could shape with their hands, mind and spirit."

March 9—

PRESIDENT AND MRS. MARCOS honored at a Malacañang luncheon today Mr. and Mrs. George Woods, who came to the Philippines to participate in the recently concluded Manila meeting of the Stanford Research Institute.

Mr. Woods is a former president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, also known as the World Bank.

Present at the Malacañang luncheon were Central Bank Gov. Alfonso Calalang, DBF Chairman Gregario Licaros, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, PNB Executive Vice President Eusebio Villatuya, Undersecretary of Finance Roman Cruz, Jr., Sixto Roxas III, Washington Sycip and Gov. Delfin N. Montano of Cavite.

Most of the time, the President worked on urgent state papers.

He went over the records of the charges against Judge Jose M. Guray of Luna, La Union, and Assistant City Fiscal Ricardo Escueta of Quezon City.

Judge Jose M. Guray of Luna, La Union was ordered fined forfeiting his one month pay after being found guilty of dereliction of duty; and Assistant City Fiscal Ricardo P. Escueta, was suspended for six months.

He was found guilty of serious dereliction of duty and grave abuse of authority.

The President also ordered the transfer of P5 million of the government income from reparations payments from Japan to the Rural Electrification Administration to enable the agency to complete its on-going projects.

He likewise ordered all government offices to stop the importation of motor vehicles, and that vehicular requirements of government offices should be procured from local assemblers. He directed however that no purchase of vehicles shall be passed in audit unless accompanied by evidence of payments of the corresponding duties and taxes due on said vehicles.

The President issued two proclamations: the first, authorizing the Philippine Badminton Association, Inc., to conduct a national fund campaign from March 1 to August 31, 1969; and the second, authorizing the Quezon Memorial Circle Development and Beautification Committee to conduct a national educational and fund campaign from March 15 to September 15 this year.

PRESIDENT MARCOS flew to Romblon this morning where he conferred with local officials and checked on the progress of a number of development projects undertaken in that province.

Accompanied by Sen. Alejandro Almendras, the President took off from the base operations at Nichols Air Base for Romblon shortly before 8 a.m. He landed at Tugdan airport in the municipality of Alcantara, where a Te Deum was sung in his honor.

While in Alcantara the President was shown the new Rizal monument at the town plaza donated by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, in connection with her beautification projects.

Huge cheering crowds welcomed the President at the airport and in all places he visited during his four-hour stay in the province. They were all profuse in expressing their gratitude for the many completed public works projects in the province such as schoolhouses, roads, and bridges.

In brief remarks the President called on the people of the province to increase their participation in the country's development, stressing that the nation's growth would itself accelerate the economic development of their region.

At the conference held in Barrio Punta, Looc, on Tablas Island, the President received progress reports from mayors, councilors and barrio captains who had converged on that biggest island of the province to meet with him.

Gov. Jovencio Q. Mayor informed the President that a three-span reinforced concrete bridge connecting Odiongan with other towns of Tablas Island had just been completed.

The completion of the permanent bridge, Mayor said, was significant because Odiongan is the commercial center on the Island.

Some mayors were particularly thankful for the installation of irrigation pumps which they said, had saved Romblon from an acute rice shortage because of the long dry spell.

The President met with the local officials at the farmhouse of Rep. Jose Moreno in Barrio Punta, some 12 kilometers from the Tugdan airport. The President left Tablas Island at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon for Manila.

On board the plane on the way to Romblon and then on the return trip to Manila, the President worked on official papers.

In Malacañang later in the afternoon, the President signed the communication submitting to the Commission on Appointment's for confirmation the nomination of 107 newly appointed officials, headed by Supreme Court Associate Justices Claudio Teehankee and Antonio Barredo and seven members of the Cabinet.

The members of the Cabinet are Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz, Secretary of Health Amadeo H. Cruz, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, Secretary of General Services Salih Ututalum, and National Economic Council Chairman Marcelo S. Balatbat.

March 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS stated that the need to better overall conditions in Asia is in effect "an Asian emergency" which must be met by (1) filling up the long-time inadequacies, and (2) counteracting the pressures from unabated population growth.

In a speech at the first luncheon meeting this year of the Mandaluyong chamber of Commerce and Industry at the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club, the President said that the Asian emergency is how to improve present living conditions while also "laying the foundations for the comfort and security of our children years from now." (See pp. 2580-2584 for full text of the President's speech.)

Among his other activities were a conference with UST student leaders, an awards ceremony, an induction ceremony, and the usual meeting with callers and scheduled visitors.

In the morning, the President conferred the Presidential Merit Medal on Ian Pringle Bruce, outgoing president of the Shell firms in the Philip pines, for his lasting contributions toward the acceleration of the Filipinization of the Shell management and of share-holding in Shell firms here.

The awards ceremony, held at the President's study, was witnessed by the honoree's wife; Lucio Mazzei, the incoming chief of Shell in the Philip pines; PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., and Defense Undersecretary Alejandro Melchor.

The President conferred with the officials of the Bureau of Posts, headed by Postmaster General Enrico Palomar, with Public Works Undersecretary Manuel B. Syquiao also present. The President gave orders during the meeting for the early sweeping revamp of the postal bureau, to eliminate the chronic inefficiency and to end once and for all irregularities committed by corrupt personnel.

Next, the President received a group of student leaders from the University of Santo Tomas who sought his help in liberalizing alleged onerous stricture issued by the Cooperatives Administration Office, which the students said prejudiced student interest. One of these is the rule prohibiting students less than 21 years old from becoming cooperative members. The President assured the students, led by Tita Datu, that he will look into the early solution of their problems.

The President also inducted this morning the newly appointed members of the Joint Local Government Reform Commission, as created under RA 5185, or the Decentralization Law.

The Commission will conduct continuing studies on the appropriate role of local governments as autonomous agencies, and prepare a local government code.

The oath taking was attended by members of Congress led by Senate President Gil J. Puyat and other executive officials.

Those inducted were Assistant Executive Secretary Flores Bayot, Gov. [unreadable] Rodriguez of Rizal and Melquiades Gamboa, Sr., representing the executive department; Senator Emmanuel Pelaez, Reps. Lamberto [unreadable] Artemio Mate, and Melanio Singson, representing the legislative department. The Senate representatives, Senators Leonardo Perez and Benigno Aquino, Jr., were absent from the induction ceremony.

The President also received a number of provincial delegations, among which were those from Nueva Ecija led by Reps. Angel Concepcion and Leopoldo Diaz and Mayor Amado Espino of Cabanatuan City: and from Bohol led by Gov. Lino Chatto.

The President then motored at about noontime to a luncheon meeting of the Mandaluvong Chamber of Commerce and Industry, held at the Wack Wack Social Hall. The President was fetched from Malacañang by Eugenio Puyat, chamber president.

In concentrating on some urgent state business late in the afternoon, the President:

1. Ordered the Budget Commission to release funds for Mindanao road projects and for the University of the Philippines' Law Center in connection with its studies of the Constitution.

The President ordered the release in response to the representations of the officials concerned, and in line with the priorities set for this year's development projects. The Mindanao construction projects have been given the go-ahead for early completion.

2. Directed the labor secretary and the legislative secretary to coordinate in finalizing the draft of legislative proposals aimed at meeting the serious problems faced by labor and peasant elements in the country.

3. Approved the air services agreement entered into between the Philippines and the United Arab Republic, in line with the "open skies" policy of the administration, which is based on reciprocity in the way of privileges.

March 12—

THE USUAL HARD day's stint of the Presidency was lightened somewhat when President Marcos was apprised of two salutary developments: (1) the establishment of a loan fund for poor but deserving students and (2) the development of a new drug to cure schistosomiasis or snail fever.

The President was apprised of the new drug during the visit, of an executive of Winthrop-Stearns, and was a witness to the signing of the agreement between the government and a local bank to establish the loan project.

For the rest of the day, the President was involved with urgent state matters and his regular schedule of callers.

Calling on the President to pay his respect in the morning was David .M. Corcoran, president of Winthrop-Stearns who was accompanied by his wife. Corcoran informed the President that his firm has perfected a drug called "hycanthone," which has proven to be effective against snail fever in Africa and South America. He added that further research will be made by his company in the Philippines to determine the particular strain which causes the fever here.

Others accompanying Corcoran were A.L. Burridge, regional director and vice president of Winthrop-Stearns; and Ernesto A Perez, corporate public affairs officer of the same firm.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos were witnesses at the ceremony in Malacañang, which concluded the memorandum agreement between the Department of Social Welfare and the Philippine Commercial and Industrial Bank on the establishment of a direct student loan project. The project is an extension of the First Lady's integrated social welfare program.

In coping with state business, the President:

1. Approved the draft agreement between the Federal Republic of Germany and the Philippines on the establishment here of a pilot training project for reforestation and erosion control, to which the Philippines will contribute $475,000, including the land value of the project sites.
2. Approved the recommendation of Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrent secretary of agriculture and natural resources, and other officials of the DANR, to grant a grace period up to June 30 1970 to loggers operating within the Ambuklao-Binga watersheds before they should move out.
3. Instructed Secretary of General Services Salih Ututalum to proceed with the sale, in accordance with the proper procedures, of the national government cottages in Baguio City.

The President's other visitors were:

1. Braulio Criste and his family.
2. Officials of the municipality of Tacurong, Cotabato, led by Mayor Jose Escribano, who sought national government aid in constructing the Banga River Irrigation project, to serve the towns of Tacurong, Buluan, Norala, and Sultan sa Barenjis.
3. Ludovico Dellosa, president of the Barrio Captains League of the province of Camarines Sur.
4. Senators Magnolia Antonino, Leonardo Perez, and Helena Benitez; and Reps. Constancio Maglana, Jose Fornier, Lorenzo Sarmiento, Andres Cosalan, Ernesto Bascon, Fernando Pajarillo, Tereso Dumon, Jose Moreno, and Luis Hora.

March 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took up such wide-ranging matters as low-cost housing, the role of rural radio broadcasters in economic development, and ways of producing steel at nominal cost, during a regular workday that also included inductions and a full schedule of callers.

In the morning, the President met with a group representing the Rural Broadcasters Council, to thresh out with them problems in connection with the dissemination of information to farmers relative to increasing agricultural production.

The group was accompanied by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas and Assistant Secretary for Radio-TV-Movies Roberto M. Garcia.

The RBC officials and members present at the conference included Ramiro Alvarez, chairman; and Ben Amancio Nelmidia, Alice Aquino, Amparo Tayag, Willie Delgado, P. Rey Pacheco, Sofronio Larcia, Willie Llobrera, Silvestre Paulino, Jose Espinosa, Romeo Rivera, and David Corcega, members. Nicolas Fernandez of the PNB, RBC adviser, was also present.

The President next discussed plans for the Naga City housing project. A P4.5 million operation to develop a 31.8 hectare site. General Manager Sebastian B. Santiago of the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation briefed the President on the project.

Notable among other meetings was the President's conference with officials of the NASSCO on the details of the steel-making operations of its J. Panganiban (Camarines Norte) Smelting Plant, which calls for utilization of local materials, Present at the meeting were NASSCO Chairman Angel Limjoco, Jr., General Manager David Ines; and Board Directors Manuel Salientea and Venancio Duque.

The President, in-between callers and conferences, inducted:

1. Dr. Igmidio Bondoc as member of the Central Luzon Study Commission; and
2. The officers of the Federation of Southern Tagalog Farmers Association; namely: Antonio Sieteriales, president; Leocadio Obiar, Ernesto Martinez and Perpetuo Laurito, vice presidents for Batangas, Laguna, and Cavite, respectively; Manuel Alviar, secretary; Ramon Pedriña, treasurer; Alejandro Almanzar, auditor; Ben S. Manas, PRO; and 12 directors.

In one of the directives issued in the afternoon, the President asked Police Commissioner Crispino de Castro to further intensify police training even as he was informed that 534 regular policemen are now undergoing such training, in line with the crash program designed to upgrade and professionalize police agencies in the country.

Gen. De Castro said that aside from the regular police trainees, the POLCOM now conducts a refresher for security guards of the Bureau of Posts and of the Bureau of Public Highways.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

March 12.—IN response to an appeal from the Horse Breeders and Owners, Inc., President Marcos directs General Manager Nereo Andolong of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office to probe into the alleged participation of blue-seal horses in local horse races, and designated former Solicitor General Edilberto Barot as special presidential investigator.

His move to look into the anomalies attending horse races is spurred by an appeal from Pedro M. Berberabe, president of the Horse Breeders and Owners, who alleged that in the grand derby race to be sponsored by the Philippine Tuberculosis Society on March 26, "out of the 29 horses entered in the race, no less than ten are smuggled 'blue seal' horses."

In his directive, the President asks Barot to conduct the probe immediately and to complete it not later than May.

Manager Andolong is instructed to extend to Barot all facilities of his office in conducting an impartial probe. He is also asks to make available to the investigator the National Bureau of Investigation agents detailed with the PCSO.

At the same time, the President asks all parties with proof of irregularities in any public works contracts to come forward with them, declaring that charges and insinuations of irregularity, many times unfounded, had seriously delayed the prosecution of the public works program.

He declares that he would act with utmost dispatch on all complaints of irregularities supported by evidence, possibly within 24 hours.

The Chief Executive cautions, however, against irresponsible accusations designed merely to malign or harass, inasmuch as these can only create an atmosphere of fear among public officials and thus render them incapable of making positive decisions and taking speedy action on pending jobs.

In this connection, the President also:

1. Appeals to suppliers of public works equipment or contractors for public works to refrain from employing the services of influence peddlers or middlemen or seeking the intervention of politicians. He asks them to present their offers, assuring them that these will be better entertained without political or other pressure.
2. Advises public officials not to entertain any influence peddlers or middlemen and counselled them to view unsupported charges or insinuations of irregularity as the ordinary hazards of a public office, and should not deter them from proceeding with what in their conviction was proper, moral and legal.
3. Expresses determination to implement the public works program, declaring that all contracts would be awarded this year, and that he himself was ready to view charges or insinuations of irregularity as among the risks which a leader must face.

In a separate move, the President dispatches a wire to Councilor Remigio Tierro of Olongapo advising him to desist from assuming the post of vice mayor in the absence of a formal appointment.

He sends the wire upon receipt of information that Tierro has assumed the office of vice mayor of Olongapo City. Tierro took his oath without benefit of an appointment from the President last March 9. Tierro reportedly claims the post by right of succession.

The post of vice-mayor became vacant with the assumption of the post of mayor by Vice-Mayor Jaime Guevarra upon the death of former Mayor James Gordon.

In the afternoon, the President, with his three children motors to the Manila Polo Club in Makati where they witnessed a match between a Philippine team and a group of Malaysian polo players led by His Highness, Tengku Mahkota of Pahang.

March 13.—TO develop and coordinate a national sports development program aimed at elevating the standards of local athletics, President Marcos creates the Presidential Committee on Sports.

He constitutes the committee on the recommendations embodied in the special report submitted to him by Education Secretary Carlos P. Romulo.

The Chief Executive has earlier ordered Secretary Romulo to inquire into the status of Philippine Amateur sports and to provide remedies to the decline of this country in international sports competitions.

The committee is directed to buckle down immediately to the task at hand, which is to “bring our promising young athletes up to high international standards so that they could perform creditably for the country.”

The President also instructs the committee to submit to him its first report on their activities within one month.

In his report to the President, Secretary Romulo points out that lack of facilities, the ebb in sports consciousness, poor methods, and wrong attitudes on the part of athletes themselves have contributed to the decline of Philippine sports.

Romulo suggests a possible revamp of the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation, particularly in membership, and the allocation of funds to the 19 affiliated national sports associations. He declares that a commission type of administration could replace the PAAF, but because of “the threat of proliferation,” he suggested that a committee can meanwhile function in this regard.

Saying that a long-range, broad-range program would be more feasible in improving local sports, Secretary Romulo opts however for a crash program in the face of “public impatience.”

The newly created committee does not supersede the PAAF, and the latter is in fact represented in the body, in recognition of the important part it will play in the overall task.

In the morning, the President receives officials of the League of City Judges, who paid a courtesy call on him following the end of their three-day long convention in Manila.

In his brief remarks, the President enjoins city judges to place in proper perspective the true image of the judiciary by dissipating the fears of the citizenry that “judges can be bought.”

He urges them to “work out a plan to remove this image of justice in our country.”

Adding that most people tend to discount anything good about public-administrators but would believe any ugly rumor concerning them he told the judges that this is the psychology of “our people which we shall have the change.”

He concludes, “so I appeal to you to please correct any wrong impressions of the public, and strengthen the weak parts of our legacy. This is part of the burden that you must bear with me.”

Then he receive at his study two groups of foreign visitors. The first is led by Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel, who is on a goodwill visit here and guest of the Philippine government.

The other group is headed by Ambassador and Mrs. Viljo Ahokas of Finland, who called on the President. The couple have been here for three weeks to promote Philippine-Finland relations, and they will return in their official residence in Tokyo the next day.

Later upon the invitation of the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the President takes time out from receiving callers, to listen to the Vienna Boys' Choir, who sang a few selections at the Music Room.

Right after the performance by the Vienna Boys Choir, the President goes to the reception hall where he officiated at induction ceremonies. He first swears in Luis A. Lopez as acting chairman-general manager of the Mindanao Development Authority.

In another ceremony, the President inducts the new officers of the Philippine Chamber of Wood Industries led by Jose C. Puyat, the chamber president.

In the afternoon, the President attends the distribution of "miracle rice" seeds to members of women's clubs at the Heroes' hall, which was sponsored by the First Lady. He gives a short address during the affair.

In his short remarks, the President underscores the role Filipino woman hood should play in the government effort to increase rice production, which is to use their power, talents and influence in mobilizing the people to engage in planting rice.

"If the women of the Philippines can make it fashionable to plant rice, then the leaders in society, not the frivolous society but our existing society, should make it fashionable," he says.

The Chief Executive tells the women not to be taken in by the efforts of some quarters to belittle their participation in the campaign, saying that these criticisms are to be expected in any kind of crusade or movement.

March 14.—PRESIDENT Marcos suspends the negotiations for the purchase of $31 million worth of heavy road construction equipment from the United States by the Department of Public Works.

He takes the measure to make sure that there was no anomaly in the projected purchase as charged by certain quarters.

The purchase of the equipment has been approved by the Cabinet last December 30 after it was authorized by the auditor general, the executive secretary and the secretary of justice who concurred with the secretary of public works and the commissioner of public highways in finding the awardee firms the most advantageous to the government.

The purchase has been assailed by Rep. Ramon Felipe in a statement last Saturday. He charged that there had been an anomaly in the projected purchase.

Rep. Felipe dinged that the Philippine National Bank had opened 20 letters of credit with an aggregate face value of $31 million in the name of "wildcat" financing company capitalized only at $50,000.

At the same time, the President directs Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo to coordinate with the Department of Labor in developing vocational education in public schools.

He instructs Secretary Romulo to introduce innovations in the school system that would vitalize vocational training, to the end that in the next few years the country could count on a pool of skilled workers to take over industrial jobs.

The primary consideration enunciated by the President relative to his order is to prepare as many high school student as possible for useful occupations, which will give them at least a living wage when they quit school.

In the morning, the President starts his activities with a conference at the “Pangarap” guesthouse with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Assistant Executive Secretary Flores Bayot, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Alfredo Montelibano, president of the Chamber of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Crossing the Pasig at 10 a.m. to Malacañang, the President first meet with the officers of the Press Photographers of the Philippines, who he inducted into office.

Following the induction rites, the President receives Ambassador Pham Dang Lam of South Vietnam who called on the President to deliver a message from his home government.

Then, the President receive Miss Barbara Canto and Stephen Lee Fleckinger who led the group of American students, who were accompanied by Rep. Floro Crisologo to Malacañang.

Former Chief Justice Cesar Bengzon pays a farewell call prior to his departure the next day for the Hague to assume his post as member of the International Court of Justice.

March 15.—THE Chief Executive orders the closure of 53 drugstores all over the country found to be dealing in fake drugs.

He reach the decision following submission of reports of the Food and Drug Administration and the National Bureau of Investigation, the two government agencies which conducted investigations into the sale of fake drugs.

According to these reports. 53 drugstores out of 127 in peeled were found with evidence of trafficking in fake drugs.

The President orders Mrs. Luzonica Pesigan, FDA Administrator, to close the drugstores, if possible within the next 24 hours.

He also instructs Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release sufficient funds to the FDA so that it could intensify its drive against manufacturers and dealers of fake drugs.

In the morning, the President sits at breakfast with newspaper publishers and editors.

Following breakfast with newspaper publishers and editors, the President confers with his financial advisers on the allocation of available funds for priority projects of the administration, notably road-building, school building construction, and the rice production program.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, attends the traditional Gridiron and dinner at the National Press Club. Amante Bigornia, NPC president, fetched the First Couple from Malacañang.

March 16.—DECLARING that the task of restoring the people’s faith in democratic institutions and the government itself is crucial, President Marcos exhorts the members of the judiciary to act decisively in elevating the standards of the administration of justice.

He makes the exhortation in an address at the convention of district judges and judges of the courts of first instance.

The Chief Executive states that court delays and maladministration of justice have corroded the people’s faith in their democratic institutions.

Calling for a candid self-analysis, the President specifies five factors which have caused delay and denial of justice. They are:

1. The misuse of due process and the abuse of legal technicalities.
2. Political intervention in court cases.
3. The litigation explosion in the country today.
4. The dilatory tactics of lawyers.
5. The neglect and laxity of judges.

Discussing the first, the President declares that due process “occupies a high and inviolate place in our system of law,” but that it has been abused by invoking technicalities that, rather than speed up the dispensation of justice, “impede and frustrate it.”

On the second, he states that politicians intercede in court cases as a matter of practical politics, but in so doing they contribute to “the failure of justice.”

It is the judges’ duty, he explains, to resist all political and other outside pressures. He pledges his support to all judges who denounce and fight these pressures.

He points out, “I cannot and will not tolerate or condone the commission of gross miscarriages of justice, which cannot but undermine the people’s faith in the impartial administration of justice.”

On the third, the President says that the proliferation of court cases today may be viewed as a sign of growth of political maturity. On the other hand, he continues, it may also indicate a propensity to resort to needless litigation, an abuse of the right to go to Court,”

On the dilatory tactic of lawyers, the President shares the view of legal luminaries that the lawyer who resorts to dilatory tactics beyond the reasonable demands of due process is in fact obstructing justice.

Saying that he was heartened by every report of “triumphant justice,” citing the recent speedy decisions on smuggling cases, the President states that “every effort you make to speed up decisions, especially on crime and smuggling cases, is a meaningful contribution to the task of making democracy work, on which the ultimate security of our Republic lies.”

At the same time, the President calls on the veterans now in government service to “rescue our people all over again during the trying days of this crisis facing our Republic” as they did during the war.

He voices this challenge when he addresses the opening of the two-day third annual convention of the Government Employees World War Veterans League at the GSIS auditorium.

The President declares that if in the past we raised the flag of faith in ourselves, faith in our people and faith in our capability to meet all the problems that may be thrown before us.”

He has faith in the veterans, the President declares, because he was tried and found true in combat, and would therefore stand his ground against all odds and temptations in his job today.

President Marcos also names Dean Cesar Virata of the UP College of Business Administration as deputy director for investment of the Presidential Economic Staff.

The investment center is established by the President to cut red tape and enable him to act on investment offers from abroad with dispatch.

Dean Virata, who holds a master’s degree in business administration from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, until his appointment is with management service division of the Sycip, Gorres, Velayo and Company.

In the morning, the President meets the members of the French Economic Mission in the Far East, led by Emmanuel Mayolle, vice chairman of the Federation of French Industries (Conseil National du Patronat Francais).

The French mission, here to assess the prospect for industrial investment, relayed to the President the group's offer to finance the proposed construction of a new runway for the Manila International Airport.

At 10 a.m., the President is fetched from Malacañang by Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido and Chief Prosecutor Emilio Gancayco, national commander of the Government Employees World War Veterans League, to bring him to the GSIS auditorium where the President addressed the opening of the two-day long third anniversary national convention of the GEWWVL.

In the afternoon, the President relaxes in a game of golf at Malacañang Park with Gen. Robert Campbell, vice president and managing director of Newsweek.

Match 17.—PRESIDENT Marcos launches the distribution of new pre-fabricated schoolhouses as he personally dispatched a convoy of army trucks loaded with components of prefabricated schoolhouses, earmarked for some five provinces urgently in need of them.

After seeing off the trucks loaded with the prefab units, the President motors to the Manila Hotel, with Roberto Tulio, president of the Confederation of Filipino Rice and Corn Association. He is guest speaker at the opening of the two-day sixth annual convention of the confederation.

In his speech, the President asks the private sector engaged in rice and corn product on, milling and distribution to direct their efforts, in coordination with the government to giving maximum benefits to consumers.

He appeals to them "as Filipinos first, rather than merchants and traders; as patriots first rather than businessman, in and behalf of our people and the generations to come."

The President also asks them to "convert the conflict between the private sector and government into an area of goodwill and cooperation with the end in view of raising surplus quantities for export in the next few years.

During the rites, the President is awarded a plaque by the confederation "in grateful appreciation of his sincere and determined crusade for self-sufficiency and stability in the rice and corn."

From the Manila Hotel, the President returns to Malacañang and inducted into office Fulgencio Buenaflor as municipal Mayor of Kalamansig, Cotabato.

At 11 a.m., together with the First Lady. Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children, the President takes the whole hiarh of the presidential car to lead a motorcade which symbolically opened to traffic the new 16 Kilometer stretch of the modern, concrete eight-lane Manila North Diversion road.

The new stretch of road is part of the 30 kilometer segment being constructed by the army engineers, in coordination with the Department of Public Works. This will connect with the McArthur highway at Barrio Tabang, Guiguinto, Bulacan.

Started in March last year, the P30 million project, which includes major bridges and underpass, is on a schedule timed to end next September.

The President drives up to the Philippine National Railway station in Balagtas (formerly Bigaa) Bulacan, where he and his party boarded the PNR presidential coach for La Union.

At Damortis, the President's party transfers to cars for the rest of the trip to Baguio City. At the main city check point, the party was met by a delegation of city officials led by Mayor Norberto de Guzman, who escorted the First Couple to the Mansion House, arriving there 5 p.m.

In the evening, the President checks in for his annual spiritual retreat at the Mirador Hill retreat house of the Dominican Fathers.

Meanwhile, President Marcos issues a proclamation declaring March 25, as a special public holiday.

March 25 is sandwiched between Good Friday and Sunday and therefore may be declared as a special public holiday without prejudice to the public interest, the President notes.

Proclamation of the special holiday, which is traditional, will likewise give the people a chance to have an uninterrupted weekend observance of the Holy Week.

March 18.—IN Baguio City, President Marcos spends the whole day in meditation and prayers at the retreat house on Mt. Mirador.

He checks in at the retreat house run by the Dominican Fathers at 8:30 o'clock last night.

The Chief Executive is expected to check out of the retreat, house sometime the next day in time to be guest of honor and speaker at the graduation exercises of the current crop of cadets of the Philippine Military Academy.

The President is also scheduled to confer with officials of this city and of Mountain Province on pressing local problems.

President's Week in Review: March 26 - April 1, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

March 26.—PRESIDENT Marcos returns to Malacañang early in the evening from Baguio City where he and his family spent the Holy Week holidays.

The President motors to the Pines City Friday, March 17, primarily to go into his annual spiritual retreat at the retreat house run by the Dominican Fathers on Mirador Hill.

The Chief Executive, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children, leaves the Mansion House shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon, arriving in Malacañang in the evening.

While still at Baguio, the President confers early in the morning with leaders of the newly-created mountain provinces on problems affecting their respective regions.

After breakfast, the President and the First Lady watches their children and their friends go on a hunt for the Easter egg at the amphitheater ground behind the Mansion House.

He then confers with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas and went over papers of prisoners forwarded to him by the board of pardon and parole.

The President also meets Chairman Gregorio Abad and Commissioners Feliciano Ocampo and Anacleto C. Mangaser of the Reparations Commission who reported on the progress of procurement through reparations of fertilizers, water pumps and other materials needed for rice production.

Abad informs the President that the first shipment of 16,000 tons of the 51,000 tons of fertilizers being procured through reparations are due in Manila by the middle of next month.

After the series of conferences which lasted till past noon, the President takes lunch, and after a brief rest motored Manilaward with his family for Malacañang.

March 27.—AT a luncheon meeting at Malacañang, President Marcos and the Foreign Policy Council declines the invitation of the Malaysian government to send observers to the forthcoming polls in Sabah (North Borneo) to elect members of the legislature and to vote on its status with Malaysia.

The President and the members of the Council decides to decline the invitation, on the ground that the coming polls on both matters were a purely internal affair.

The referendum on Sabah's status in Malaysia is in accordance with an understanding between Malaysia and Indonesia, to which the Philippines was not a signatory. This understanding is viewed by the President and the Council as, itself, an internal affair of Malaysia.

Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos is instructed by the President and the Council to summon the Malaysian ambassador the next day to inform him of their decision.

In the morning, the President is guest speaker at the opening of the five-day 20th national convention of the Provincial, City and Municipal Treasurers and Assessors Association at the VIP building at Roxas boulevard.

In his speech, the President pledges the "creative use" of the taxes collected from the people, to advance the progress and economic stability of the nation.

He calls on the members of the association to intensify their efforts in collecting the funds due the government, so that the work of development can continue and broaden.

Stating that the present goal of the administration is to build a firm and broad foundation for continued progress, he points out that this must have been the same goal of other administrations. Then he asks, "why have they failed?"

The reasons are many and complex, he declares, but the main reason is the lack of physical underpinnings, or a strong foundation on which to build. "These underpinnings," he states, "my administration proposes to build."

March 28.—THE President orders a crackdown on illegal radio stations operating clandestinely, even as he formed a committee to update what he regarded as obsolete radio laws.

He acts to dismantle and penalize illegal radio operations in the country, after receiving reports indicating that some 18 radio transreceivers, 11 of them apparently without license, were found operating in areas along the eastern coast of Luzon, a region normally lightly supervised by police agencies.

The President points out that if these operations have prospered in this region, there must be illegal activities of the same nature going on in other areas of the country.

According to reports naturalized Filipinos of Asian origin own these transreceivers, which are said to be capable of communicating with other stations in Southeast Asian countries. The power output of the transreceivers mentioned are rated as high as 300 to 500 watts.

The President also asks the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency and the Radio Control Office to coordinate in tracking down these illegal radio stations, and impose the full penalties for violations of the country's radio laws.

Noting that the existing radio laws are of pre-World War II vintage, and now obsolete in the light of the tremendous advances in electronics and communications, the President asks that the said laws be situated with an eye to updating them to meet present needs.

At the same time, the President commutes to life imprisonment the death penalty imposed on three condemned convicts and upheld a resolution of the board of pardons and parole which chose not to disturb the death penalty for three convicts as affirmed by the Supreme Court.

In the first case, the President acts on the recommendation of the board of pardons and parole to commute to life imprisonment the death penalty meted out to Florentino Cabada, Aquilino Aguilar and Esteban Pacudan, who have been scheduled to be executed on March 30.

In the second case, the President decides to uphold a resolution of the board of pardons and parole which stated that "it sees no reason to disturb the decision of the lower appellate courts" to impose the supreme penalty on Balbal Sigayan, Bautil Pedro and Emereterio Orzame.

President Marcos concentrates on urgent administrative matters relative to rice, notably warehousing problems and irrigation, and on tobacco and nickel mining activities.

He summons officials involved with these matters to Malacañang and discussed at length the problems facing them, and received the officials' reports on the progress of the activities of the agencies concerned.

Among those called in by the President are Col. Osmundo Mondoñedo, chairman and general manager of the Rice and Corn Administration; Federico Moreno, officer-in-charge of the Philippine Virginia Tobacco Administration, Antonio Arrizabal, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff; and Esteban Ocampo, administrator of the Irrigation Service Unit.

The President discusses with Mondoñedo the project to improve warehousing facilities in rice-producing areas. Moreno, who is also the board secretary of the PVTA, reports on the present status of tobacco stocks and the agency's plans for the disposal of these commodities.

While Arrizabal, who is the technical consultant of the Surigao Nickel Development Board, reports to the President on the current status of the offers made by private entrepreneurs to explore the possibility of exploiting these minerals. He has been assigned by the President precisely to make studies of all the offers.

March 29.—IN line with his desire to “upgrade the government’s capacity for providing justice to every citizen,” President Marcos dismisses three municipal judges who had been found guilty in administrative cases involving dishonesty, dereliction of duty, and gross ignorance of the law.

Ordered dismissed in separate administrative orders are Municipal Judges Fernando B. Fuentes, Jr., of Nunungan, Lanao del Norte; Crispin N. Menchavez of Santa Fe, Cebu; and Vicente M. Salumbides of Tagkawayan, Quezon.

The administrative case against Judge Fuentes of Nunungan, Lanao del Norte, arose from a complaint of one Jose Holmas, whose son had died in a traffic accident involving a jeep owned by one Lucio Matalam. The complainant charged Fuentes with dishonesty arising out of his acts as a practising lawyer.

According to the record of the case, Judge Fuentes received from the owner of the jeep the amount of P1,300 as payment to Holmas for the settlement of the latter’s claim for damages. Holmas complained that the amount was misappropriated by the respondent.

The administrative case against Judge Menchavez is for ignorance of the law and for dishonesty arising from his actuations in connection with a criminal case in his court.

The records show that Jesus Fariolan, Melanio Almocera and German Batiancila were charged on October 18, 1963 before Menchavez’s court for illegal fishing with the use of dynamite. It was clear, according to the investigations, that the judge had no jurisdiction over the case, since it involved punishment beyond his authority to mete out. However, the judge not only took cognizance of the case but sentenced the accused to six months imprisonment each and having thus convicted them, obtained custody of them and made use of their personal services in his farm and piggery.

The administrative case against Judge Salumbides arose out of a charge of neglect and dereliction of duty. According to the record of the case, the respondent conducted the preliminary investigation of Criminal Case No. 1535 of his court charging one Feliciano Balais of qualified seduction. After the termination of the investigation, however, Judge Salumbides failed or refused to transmit the records to the court of first instance of Quezon province, as required by law, despite repeated requests by the counsel for the complainant over a long period.

At the same time, the President issues an executive order fixing a five-hour half-session workday for all government employees during the period April 15 to May 30, this year.

He shortens the period for the half-day summer sessions, which was traditionally observed from April 1 to June 15, because of the urgent demands on the public service for pushing top priority administrative projects for ward.

The office hours set by the directive begins at seven-thirty o’clock in the morning and lasts through to twelve-thirty in the afternoon, Monday through Friday. In the observance of the half-day sessions, the order states, the five hour office schedule shall not, in any case, be further reduced.

In his directive, the President makes it clear that half-day session in the government offices will be observed in such a way that it will not impair the public interest, adding that there is need for dedication “especially at this time when we are strengthening the foundations of a sound and efficient public service.”

The President requires that at least one-half of the personnel in any government office, including corporations owned or controlled by the government, should be on duty in the afternoon, so as not to prejudice action on important matters.

The President's order does not apply to public offices in the City of Baguio, whether national, provincial or municipal. The order does not, among others, cover government offices and employees engaged in field work.

The Chief Executive spends the whole day working on state papers in his study room.

President Marcos creates a committee to receive all views, both for or against, on the Decentralization Bill, and collate them for the guidance of the President in assessing the merits of the measure before taking final action on it.

The President names the following to the committee:

Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, chairman; Secretary Constancio Castañeda, who heads the Office of Economic Coordination; Secretary Ernesto Maceda of the PACD. Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, and Undersecretary of Agriculture Dioscoro Umali, members.

In his instructions, the President directs the committee to transmit to all those interested, including members of the League of Provincial and City Mayors, and members of Congress, all the studies and comments on the bill now in the possession of the executive office.

He also asks the committee to invite written comments on the views already expressed in the studies made, and if necessary to meet all interested parties and get their opinions of the measure. He indicated that he would be available to anybody who might wish to discuss the bill with him.

The President gives the committee up to April 15 to submit to him its assessment of all the views it can gather and collate.

The committee created during a cabinet meeting this day, which is especially called to discuss more thoroughly the provisions of the bill recently passed by Congress.

The President seeks the widest possible appraisal of the bill, through solicited comments in order that he may have a broad basis for guidance in his personal assessment of the measure.

Among others, Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo, who submitted a written comment, and expresses his views on the bill during the cabinet meeting, said that the quality of education may be adversely affected by the provision apportioning national revenues to provincial governments.

He points out that the "country is so varied economically" that it was necessary for the national government to manage finances for budgetary flexibility.

"Unless the national government retains the ability to allocate finances for education among the various school divisions," Secretary Romulo says, "and for various types and levels of education critically needed for development, financial autonomy for the provinces might only lead to differences of educational adequacy in different regions."

In sum, the secretary of education stresses that poor provinces "might see their poor schools become even less satisfactory, and the contrasts in educational opportunities might become sharper than they are now."

Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia also advances several objections to the bill, which he saw as impractical, insofar as it relates to the health department.

He states that the transfer of rural health work from the jurisdiction of the department to the local governments will mean grave problems in technical efficiency, coordination of programs and implementation of policy, the formulation of which is retained by the department.

Secretary Garcia says that the transfer of jurisdiction will result in a total lack of technical supervision because “the imperative nature of the arrangement will make the authority impotent.”

Comprehensive studies had been made on the bill by the U.P. Law Center and the department of finance, both of which have already been made public.

Other offices which had submitted studies on the bill included the bureau of internal revenue, the Agricultural Productivity Commission, Bureau of Public Highways and department of public works and communications.

The Center finds constitutional defects in the bill, including violation of the uniformity of succession, the principle of separation of powers, nullification of the power of the President to exercise general supervision on local government, cuts the presidential power to control implementation of national policies, denies equal protection of laws, and impairs the power of the President to appoint, and the authority of the Commission on Appointments to confirm such appointments.

On grounds of policy, the Center states that the bill “provides for subsidy and not autonomy to local governments.”

The department of finance, in its separate study, says that the bill will further fragment the limited fund available for economic development, thus setting back the national program.

The finance department also cites the fact that the bill returns to the local governments responsibility for fundamental services which they have not been able to meet adequately in the past. Thus it was that Congress gave this responsibility to the national government.

These services include agricultural and health services, which local governments were glad to relinquish to the national government’s charge.

March 30.—PRESIDENT Marcos suspends two municipal judges found guilty of administrative charges brought against them, and denies the petition of a former municipal judge for reinstatement after having been separated from the service for negligence and inefficiency.

Ordered suspended by the President are:

1. Judge Alfredo P. Cabasaan of the municipal court of Basey, Samar, for six months without pay, after being found culpable for grave abuse of authority, dereliction of duty, and ignorance of the law.
2. Judge Alfredo C. Mabbayan of the municipal court of Roxas, Isabel a for three months, after being found culpable for gross negligence and dereliction of duty.

In the third case, former judge Rodolfo S. Azanza filed a petition for reinstatement after being separated hum the judiciary while acting as judge of the municipal court of Mandaon, Masbate. Azanza had asked for the reconsideration of the order dismissing him, alleging that the punishment was “too severe” for the offenses committed.

The President, after a careful study of the case, denies the request for reconsideration, stating that the respondent’s negligence and poor performance as Judge did not entitle him to be returned to the service.

He, however, modified the penalty in that Azanza's separation "shall be without prejudice" to his being paid whatever benefits he may be entitled to under the law. This consideration is given the former judge for his long service in the government.

Judge Cabasaan was charged by Paulino Encallado of violating Rule 126 of the Rules of Court, when the judge accused Encallado of grave oral defamation in his own court, issued a warrant of arrest, and caused him to be detained in the municipal jail for eight days.

The district judge who investigated the case found judge Cabasaan guilty of grave abuse of authority. Judge Cabasaan is found guilty of:

1. Dereliction of duty when he refused to accept in his court a complaint for homicide filed by Diego Odenanda, against Federico Lancanan, brother of the Basey town mayor, even after the provincial fiscal urged the judge to give due course to the complaint.
2. Ignorance of the law when Judge Cabasaan ordered the arrest of Conrado Cabonsan for vagrancy, when the latter appeared to be a college graduate and a citizen of good standing. The judge was also found to have shown his ignorance of the law when he issued a warrant for the arrest of Cabonsan. In cases where the penalty is only arresto menor or a fine of not more than P200, no warrant of arrest need be issued, unless the dependent is a recidivist, fugitive from justice, or charged with physical injuries, or neither resides in the place where the violation of the law occurred nor has any known residence.

In the case of Judge Mabbayan, which was also investigated by a district judge, the following facts are established.

The judge was found guilty of gross negligence and dereliction of duty when he allowed his cadastral clerk, Felix B. Bulan, to prepare the decisions in certain cadastral proceedings, then signed the papers without conducting actual hearings on the cases.

The result was the erroneous adjudication of the lots, including the award of a lot to Bulan, himself, and another claimant. The awards were found by the investigators as irregular.

The President says that as cadastral judge, the respondent had exclusive responsibility for making the adjudications and his failure to do so constituted gross negligence in the performance of his duty.

Both judges are warned that repetition of the same offenses will be dealt with more severely.

In the morning, the President receives Ambassador Librado Cayco, the newly named Philippine ambassador to Mexico, who paid a farewell call on the President. Ambassador Cayco leaves the next day for his new assignment.

Consul General Simeon Roxas, who is also leaving for his new assignment in Hongkong, is instructed by the President "to look into the reported underpricing of goods listed in consular invoices there."

The Danish diplomat, charge d'Affaires H.A. Djurhuus, bade the President good-bye on the eve of his departure for Denmark after completing three-years of duty here.

The Chief Executive, in the course of the day, also receives Alexander Ligas, a retired American soldier who has established residence here. He presents to the President his proposal to produce small types of windmills which he says are suitable for rural areas where it could pump water to irrigate farms with an area of about five hectares.

He also meets farmers from San Jose, Occidental Mindoro, who petitioned that they be allowed to continue as leasees of P.N.B. lots in their province. The President assures the farmers that their petition will be given serious consideration.

March 31.—FOLLOWING a hectic schedule, President Marcos hold a number of meetings before and after fulfilling a speaking engagement with the Government Prosecutors' League of the Philippines.

Earliest to see the President is Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata, who briefed him at the "Pangarap" guesthouse on the progress of the development work in the Fort Bonifacio military reservation.

Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas and Secretary Ernesto Maceda of the Presidential Arm on Community Development also sees the President at the "Pangarap" guesthouse for consultations, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Marcelo Balatbat also calls connection with his forthcoming trip abroad.

Secretary Balatbat is leaving Sunday for Tokyo to head a Philippine delegation to the two-week ministerial ECAFE conference which starts April 3. The President gives him final instructions concerning his mission.

At exactly 10:40 a-m., the President accompanied by Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehakee motors to the Ateneo University on Padre Faura, where he addresses members of the Government Prosecutors League of the Philippines now in Manila for their sixth annual convention.

In his address, the President exhorts government prosecutors to re double their efforts in expediting the disposition of cases to the end that public confidence in the processes of the law will be further strengthened.

He outlines to the fiscals three steps by which they could speed up the administration of penal laws:

1. Cut down to the minimum the period of preliminary investigation, possibly by dispensing with technicalities.
2. Coordinate with the judge or the clerk of court in calendaring criminal cases for hearing, suggesting that if possible the trial should be uninterrupted till its conclusion.
3. Oppose consistently any moves by the defense to drag out investigations or trials through dilatory tactics, and oppose motions for postponements on unwarranted or flimsy excuses.

The President stresses that there is need for improving the machinery of justice because of the weakening of moral fabric by grave crises experienced by the people in the past, as brought on by World War II, the rise of communist dissidence, the severity of the years of want and suppression under economic austerity and controls.

He says that if not checked, the resulting "outburst of license," would lead further deterioration of the moral climate of the country, and might eventually erupt into widespread disorder and anarchy.

He enjoins the fiscals, "who stand in the very frontlines of justice," to do their utmost in firming up an orderly society "through the faithful and dedicated application and enforcement of the laws of the land."

He states that "competence, integrity and efficiency" are the specific virtues required of every fiscal in discharging the duties inherent in the position.

"A fiscal may be a master of law," he says, "but without integrity and zeal in the performance of his work, he will be more of a liability than an asset to the administration of justice."

He particularly deplores the slow judicial processes, which he said have shaken "the faith of the people in our judicial system."

The fact of clogged dockets, he points out, shows there is something wrong "not necessarily in the system, but with the men behind it."

He notes that of the 42,375 cases filed with fiscals in 1966, some 22,594 (which includes complaints filed prior to 1966) are pending investigation, and those pending trial number 33,079.

He adds, however, that of the cases filed by fiscals in the same year in various courts, 8,762 resulted in convictions, with only 940 getting only acquittals. This he states, and the records showing headway in the anti-smuggling drive, are heartening. Again, he notes that of 1,408 smuggling cases, there were 100 convictions.

He cautions, however, that “by no means, have we fully attained our objective in the war we have waged on smuggling and other forms of criminality.” He then urges the fiscals to push harder if we are to restore complete peace and order and conquer criminality.”

He cites such alarming incidents as the recent murder of a judge while the man was in church, and he reports that he had asked the department of justice and all law enforcement agencies “to spare no efforts to bring the killers to justice for this despicable affront to God and our very institutions.”

He tells prosecutors to resist every pressure to corrupt or impede the processes of justice, and he assured them full presidential support in the proper performance of their duties.

He says that they should not abuse their powers and discretionary prerogatives, and to beware of being used as tools of corruption or as vehicles for revenge.

Concluding, he tells the fiscals that “on the whole, yours has been a satisfactory performance” in the past year. “But this is not enough,” he states, emphasizing that “nothing but optimum performance is called for in the crucial times we live in.”

He declares, “I am confident that you can stand up to the challenge of the times, and that, put to any test, your zeal, your courage and your patriotism will not be found wanting.”

Back at Malacañang shortly before noon, the President receives Ambassador William McCormick Blair, Jr. who pays a call.

Following the call, the President then meets separately Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC chief, Sebastian Ugarte, publisher of the Philippines Herald; a group composed of Sen. Dominador Aytona, Rep. Fernando Veloso of Samar, former Sen. Decoroso Rosales and Fernando Jacinto.

Between callers, the President administers the oath of office to Federico Garcia and Gavino Rañoa as acting chief of the Manila Fire Department and acting assistant city engineer of Manila respectively.

After his callers had left, the President stays until mid-afternoon at his study where he went over official papers and communications.

Meanwhile, President Marcos orders visa requirements of the foreign affairs department waived for all veterans and members of their families coming to the Philippines for the observance of the 25th anniversary of the fall of Bataan and Corregidor.

The Chief Executive directs Foreign Affairs Secretary Narciso Ramos to instruct all missions in the United States and Canada, as well as in other countries where veterans are residents, to extend every assistance in expediting the processing of the travel papers of those who desire to come to the Philippines for the anniversary.

He also instructs the bureau of immigration to relax its rules in accommodation of the veterans and their families and the bureau of customs to do the same in order that the entry of these visitors will be facilitated.

The veterans from overseas and their families are expected to participate in the ceremonies and other activities commemorating the fall of the last two great bastions of the Fil-American forces defending the Philippines during the early part of World War II. Bataan fell on April 9, 1942, followed shortly by Corregidor's capitulation.

The measure taken by the President to facilitate the entry of the veterans into the country is in keeping not only with Filipino hospitality, but a way of honoring these veterans who had participated in the defense of the Philippines.

April 1.—ACTING on the findings of probers and the recommendations of the Department of Justice, President Marcos dismisses the municipal judges of Panganiban, Catanduanes and Clark Field, Pampanga after they had been found guilty of administrative charges filed against them.

Removed from office are Horacio T. Aquino, municipal judge of Panganiban, Catanduanes and Eloy David, municipal judge of Clark Field, Pampanga.

Investigation conducted by a district judge finds Judge Aquino guilty of grave misconduct and habitual drunkenness.

Judge David is found by investigators guilty of gross incompetence and ignorance of the elementary rules of court procedure, and a lack of "concern for the due administration of justice."

Probers find Judge Aquino guilty of insulting guests at a party by Dr. Alfredo Canoy at the Viga Emergency Hospital dining hall while the judge was drunk, after which the respondent destroyed two glass windows of a hospital ambulance.

Judge Aquino is also found guilty on a charge filed by Francisco Talion, which alleged that the judge, again drunk, embraced and kissed the complainant's wife while she was awaiting medical examination at the same hospital.

The same judge was previously suspended, in 1960, for misconduct, also while under the influence of liquor.

In the case of Judge David, the investigators established that he was remiss in his duties, in connection with the preparation of the case against the men who held up the NCO Club at the Clark Field air base, and kidnapped two women dependents as hostages in making their escape.

According to the findings, Judge David, who conducted the preliminary investigation of the three men arrested, on the strength of a warrant he issued betrayed gross incompetence and ignorance of judicial procedure when he:

1. Failed to transmit the papers on the case to the court of first instance of Pampanga, after the transfer of the hearing of the case to that court;
2. Dismissed the case against the three men arrested for lack of evidence, despite the fact that two of the men had admitted culpability for the robbery and kidnapping, and that there had been no proper hearing then as yet.

In the face of these failures, the investigation recommends suspension of the judge. But the department of Justice, after reviewing the charges and the findings, views the matter as too serious for mere suspension. The department recommends dismissal of Judge David.

The President therefore takes action on the basis of the justice department's recommendations, saying that the judge is "the type of official that emboldens criminal elements and undermines the people's faith in the administration of justice."

At the same time, the President extends the tour of duty of four brigadier generals and nine colonels, who were set to retire this day following 30 years of service in the armed forces of the Philippines.

Retained in the service indefinitely in their present ranks “for the good of the service” are Brig. Gen. Manuel T. Yan, Chief of the Philippine Constabulary; Brig. Gen. Cesar B. Jimenez, deputy chief of staff; Commodore Pastor G. Viado of the Philippine Navy; Brig. Gen. Antonio R. Romeo, commander of the third military area; and the following full Colonels: Paterno V. Oppus, commanding officer of the fourth PC zone; Marte N. Iglesias, commanding officer of the AFP supply center; Fidel T. Reyes, commanding officer of the Basa Air Base; Ramon Fernandez, Jr., Jose Ma. Sanson, Francisco N. Punzalan, Benedicto A. Alejo, Leonardo T. Miciano and Cecilio C. Leoncio,

With the exception of Oppus and Alejo, who belong to the field artillery branch of the AFP, the rest of the colonels are with the Philippine Air Force.

In the morning, the President receives a group of officials of the Gulf Oil Corporation of the United States. The group calls on the President at the end of their brief visit here, to pay their respects to the President. They are set to depart for Korea the next day.

Following the call of the Gulf Oil officials, the President and the First Lady accompanied by Teodoro F. Valencia motors to Fort Santiago to examine the progress of the restoration of the national shrine.

In the afternoon, the President again leaves Malacañang, this time for Tanay, Rizal, where he was principal speaker at the inauguration of the Philippine ground station, linking this country to the international satellite communications system.

In his speech, the President hails the triumph of Filipino resourcefulness and ingenuity,” as he cited the extraordinary achievement of the Philippine Communications Satellite Corporation (Philcomsat) in setting up the interim ground station here in one-fifth the time it normally takes.

He declares that although the component of the station were manufactured in the United States, “the initiative and direction” of Philcomsat established the station here in one and a half months instead of the four or five it takes to set it up.

He likewise stresses that the achievement of Philcomsat in raising the worth of the entity, from a P55, 000 corporation at the start to the P20 million organization is today. He states that it is cause for national pride for the Philcomsat and its sister organization, the Philippine Overseas Telephone Communications Corporation (POTC), are 100 per cent Filipino companies.

The President points out that this fact vindicates the efforts to organize a purely Filipino operation, against which pessimists objected, and critics railed.

He at the same time reveals that the government will integrate the nation’s telecommunications facilities under one organization, saying that it was necessary for “we are probably the only nation in the world, outside of the United States, that does not have full control of our telecommunications facilities.”

He explains that for reasons of efficiency, economy and public interest, the telecommunications needs of such agencies as the CAA, the weather bureau, the National Civil Defense Administration, the AFP, and of the general public, should be served by one integrated network.

The worldwide network, which will utilize a space satellite positioned over the Pacific Ocean, is in implementation of the United Nations resolution binding more than 50 countries under a cooperative program of global communications.

Philippine participation is under the supervision of Philcomsat, which operate, under the National Science Development Board. Actual management and operation of the Philippine Station has been awarded to POTC, a private firm.

The temporary ground station will be replaced with a permanent one to be located near the interim station, possibly within 11 months.

Official Week in Review: April 2 – April 10, 1967

April 2.—PRESIDENT Marcos leaves for Laoag City to participate in two special events: the inauguration of the Marcos Hall of Justice, named after his father, former assemblyman Mariano Marcos; and the opening of the Bureau of Public Schools Interscholastic athletic meet where he was guest speaker.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrives at the local airport at 9:20 o'clock in the morning where a huge crowd led by Ilocos Norte Gov. Jose Evangelista was on hand to welcome them.

Military honors, including a 21-gun salute, are rendered the President, after which the President and the First Lady proceed to the St. William's Cathedral where a low mass was said by Monsignor Basilio V. Fortuna, now more than 70 years old and retired as a bishop a few years ago.

Mons. Fortuna was the parish priest of Laoag during the incarceration at the municipal jail here while awaiting trial some 30 years ago.

Following the Mass, the First Couple attends the inauguration of the Marcos Hall of Justice, with the President delivering the principal speech.

After the President's speech, the First Lady unveils the marker and cuts the ceremonial ribbon of the restored detention cell where the President was confined some three decades ago.

The cell is complete with a gas lamp, a bed and a bookshelf containing law books. It was while confined in the cell that the President prepared for the bar examination, as well as for the defense of his case before the Supreme Court.

On the marker was inscribed the following:

"In this cell, the sixth President of the Philippines, Ferdinand E. Marcos, spent a brief but grim period of his life. As a young law graduate he was held here in 1939, unjustly convicted of murder.

"Secure and serene in the knowledge that he was innocent of the charge against him, he reviewed for the bar examinations and prepared his own defense before the Supreme Court where his appeal was soon to be heard. His faith in himself, his unshaken belief in the triumph of justice were affirmed, first, by his acquittal by the Supreme Court and, second, by his passing of the bar as toptotcher.

"In marking this cell as a historical place, it might also be remembered that here, perhaps, the President reached the crossroad in his life. From the soul-searing experience within its confines, he went on to become a hero in war and a dedicated national leader in peace, finally receiving full justification of his life from the Divine Providence and his people when he was elected President of the Philippines in 1965."

After the rites, the President and the First Lady also officiates at the inauguration of the local branch of the Veterans Bank of the Philippines, with the President making the first deposit in the amount of P1,000.

From the bank, the President proceeds to the local compound of the Department of public works where he turn over materials for 50 Marcos-type school buildings allocated to Ilocos Norte.

In the afternoon, the President formally opens the 1967 Public Schools Interscholastic Athletic Association Meet.

In his brief remarks, the President calls on sports authorities and athletes "to propagate the doctrine that sports are not diversions for the idle, but activities necessary for both individual growth and national development."

He also urge the recapturing of the tradition of "the whole man" with a sound mind in a sound body.

The President calls attention to the decline in sports consciousness among the people. One sad thing about it, he said, is that our athletes do not regard international contests in terms of national honor.

They join athletic delegations not to win honors for their country but for their own selfish interests, such as to travel, to go sight-seeing and to shop, he says.

The President says he was fully supporting the revival of sports development, by revitalizing the physical education courses in the schools, as well as the setting up of a coach development program.

Recently, the President received from Secretary Carlos P. Romulo of Education a comprehensive report on the country's sports and athletic programs. He had asked Secretary Romulo to make studies following the debacle which met Filipino delegates in the Asian games in Bangkok last year.

April 3.—THE Chief Executive returns to Malacañang 7 a.m. after a two-day long inspection trip of public works projects in the Northern provinces, during which he found mass support for the administration's projects, particularly road construction and the prefabricated schoolhouses building programs.

The President tours points in Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur and Pangasinan to see for himself the progress in public works constructions and to turn over additional units to local officials of prefab school buildings.

Everywhere the President goes he took pains to talk directly to the people, from whom he received reports of their problems and complaints, notably in the distribution of RCA rice, which the people said was faulty.

He also discovers popular endorsement of the plan to distribute government rice through public schoolteachers. Many of the people he talks to in various municipalities suggests as well that barrio officials be harnessed in the distribution of RCA rice.

In the course of the trip, the President accepts the affiliation to the Nacionalista Party of provincial and municipal officials formerly associated with the Liberal Party.

The President turns over 50 prefab schoolhouses to Ilocos Norte officials, 50 units to Ilocos Sur, and 25 to La Union, all of which are additional units to those already received earlier; 50 units are also turned over to Pangasinan officials.

The President, who was accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, on the trip, is received enthusiastically by huge crowds everywhere along the route he took.

At the rallies he attended in San Fernando, Vigan and Dagupan, the crowds are the biggest seen recently, and the President and the First Lady are virtually engulfed by the surging waves of handshakers and well-wishers. In Vigan, where the First Couple attended mass at the cathedral the crowd is observed to be phenomenal.

Upon arrival in San Fernando, La Union, the President's party is greeted by a large turnout of townspeople and local officials led by Rep Magnolia Antonino.

Huge crowds in Pangasinan also receive the President and First Lady including at the Lingayen airport, in Dagupan and in Binmaley. The President inspects irrigation projects in the province, and in San Fabian he is once more swamped by a lively crowd of welcomers.

In pangasinan, the President and his party is welcomed by Gov. Francisco Duque, Rep. Aguedo Agbayani and Land Authority Governor Conrado Estrella.

The San Fabian irrigation project is one of the biggest development constructions in Pangasinan, designed to irrigate a large area of farmlands. The total cost of the project is estimated at P3.5 million.

The President also inspects the highways in the Ilocos provinces he visited, which are being cemented by the public works construction teams. The progress of the work is noted with satisfaction by the President.

April 4.—PRESIDENT Marcos transmits to the Senate for ratification the Convention between the Philippines and Sweden, which seeks to eliminate double taxation and prevent evasion of taxes on income and capital, among nationals of both countries affected by the two countries' tax laws.

The convention, now under consideration, is signed in Manila April 12 last year by Foreign Affairs Secretary Narciso Ramos and Ambassador Gustaf Harald Edilstam, in behalf of their respective governments.

The convention covers agreements as well on such areas of mutual enterprise as business projects, ships and aircraft, dividends, interests, royalties, independent personal services, employment income, public entertainers, cultural visitors, teachers and researchers, students and business apprentices, tax credit, exchange of information, consultation, and taxpayers' claims.

In general, the Convention gives assurance to nationals of the contracting states that no double taxation on the same income will be imposed in one or the other contracting states, if this has already been paid in one of the states concerned.

The agreement will also help each contracting state to prevent tax evasion through a free exchange of information. It is seen that the arrangement will encourage the flow of investments into the Philippines.

At the same time, the President declares the period April 9 to April 15, this year, and the week within which April 13, falls every year thereafter, as Inventors Week.

He issues the proclamation in consonance with the Constitutional mandate that "the state shall foster scientific research and inventions," and in pursuance of which Republic Act No. 3850, otherwise known as the "Philippine Inventors Incentives Act," was signed into law on April 13, 1964.

In issuing the proclamation, the President stresses that it is but fitting and proper that Filipino inventors be given recognition and encouragement "to induce them to use their God-given creative talents for the benefit of our country and people."

In his message to the Filipino Inventors Society, Inc., which is spearheading the celebration of the week with an exhibition of local inventions, the President points out that a nation is often recognized through the "creative achievements" of its people.

"It is particularly true with inventors, who do not only innovate but often pioneer," he states.

The President expresses the hope that with the incentive given under R.A. 3850, those who have the talent to create new devices and products useful to people "will strive to use this talent to contribute to the early development of our country, to the end that our people will have a better life."

He calls on all government agencies and offices, as well as on the business sector, to extend every possible assistance and cooperation in making the celebration of Inventors Week a success.

The Chief Executive also sets aside in Proclamation No. 192, 50 hectares belonging to Fort Bonifacio in Rizal for the site of the Veterans Center, which will house many services for veterans and their dependent.

The center will house the facilities for the rehabilitation of incapacitated veterans, medicine services, and vocational training.

The President has set a policy of assistance to veterans, in recognition of their services to the nation.

In this connection, he also directs a reassessment of the laws, executive orders and policies on veterans, to update them and gear them to a closer accommodation of the vital needs of veterans, such as channeling benefits only to needy ex-servicemen, and providing more scholarships.

The proposed center was originally envisioned as a place for providing medicare, rehabilitation and vocational training, but the President enlarge its scope to provide as well space for other activities of the many veterans organization in the country.

In the morning, the President receives Ambassador Johann Karl von Stechow, who pays a farewell call. He plans to leave for home on March 18, following completion of his three-year tour of duty here.

Then, the President receives close relatives of the late Judge Carlos Valdez, who was murdered last week in the Tacurong (Cotabato) parish church while receiving communion, saw the President, who expresses his condolences to the family for their loss.

April 5.—THE President holds a series of conferences topped by a meeting with his Cabinet which lasted from 12:30 to 3 p.m.

He first meets with the officials of the police commission and the constabulary, with whom he discuss the progress of the drive against criminality.

The Chief Executive also receives an official report from Major Angelito B. Cruz, chief of the criminal investigation service of the first PC zone, on the investigation of the killing of Geronimo Asto, a tenant from Central Luzon last February.

In this connection, the President orders the PC and the justice department to give all out prosecution for the tenants affected by the killing of Asto, and to commence prosecution in court of those responsible for the crime.

He at the same time, receives the report of Col. Jose Lukban, member of the Police Commission, that the anti-carnapping drive has already broken up the carnap gangs so that the PC and the police forces could now take over from the Police Commission team.

Col. Lukban recommends the disbandment of the POLCOM anti-carnap team. He also informs the President that the drive has resulted in the prosecution of 51 persons.

At 12:30 p.m., the President joins the members of his Cabinet led by Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrently secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

He meets his cabinet on various programs of the government, notably public works, rice production and distribution of RCA rice, irrigation and the purchase of fertilizers and irrigation pumps.

At the meeting Secretary of Public Works and Communications Antonio Raquiza and Commissioner Baltazar Aquino of Public Highways give their explanation surrounding the controversial purchase of public works equipment worth $29 million by the bureau of public highways

After going over the report and listening to further testimonies of Sec. Raquiza and Commissioner Aquino, the Cabinet confirms the findings of the three-man committee composed of Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee and Auditor General Ismael Mathay.

In its report, the committee recommends that the contracts for the purchase of the equipment should be “left undisturbed” as there was no proof of any “overriding consideration or vitiating factors” that would justify cancellation of contracts.

In its inquiry into the contracts the three-man committee also establishes the following:

1. That the offer of Continental Ore Corporation was the “lowest and most advantageous,” pointing out that the financing scheme offered by the awardee was the “best available.” Specifically, the report said the prices offered on the equipment were lower than those of the other offerors, with the interest charged on the unpaid cost of the equipment as also the lowest, at 6.5 percent.
2. That the department of public works and the bureau of public highways conducted a thorough canvass of suppliers, thus giving every opportunity to all firms interested to present their offers, before entering into any contracts. This, the report said, was equivalent to conducting a public bidding.
3. That the interested parties were given every opportunity to submit their offers and were even advised to improve them in instances where the bureau of public highways considered that their terms and conditions could be further scaled down to meet government requirements.
4. That direct or negotiated purchase made without public bidding within the conditions of Executive Order 298, series of 1940, as amended, have invariably been recognized as valid, and in fact adopted in cases of urgent public need, and in other cases advantageous to the government.

Cited in the report are several cases in the past, under both the Garcia and Macapagal administrations, when direct acquisition of government equipment were made, through negotiated purchases, under the same deferred or amortization plans, in consideration of the urgency of the need for the equipment.

5. That all intervening parties had categorically said under oath that no kickbacks or commissions or gifts were given or will be given to any official or third parties.
6. That the committee received no evidence or discovered any evidence to show that the transaction was attended by immorality or impropriety.
7. That the equipment were bought at certified factory list prices, and letters of credit were opened directly in favor of the manufactures, thus precluding the possibility of overpricing of the equipment.

In their statements in answer to questions from members of the Cabinet, Secretary Raquiza and Commissioner Aquino:

1. Assures the President and the members of the Cabinet that no official or third person received any “kickback” in the transaction;
2. Assures the President and members of the Cabinet that while no public bidding was held, the department and bureau of public highways conducted a canvass of suppliers of the equipment needed and gave all parties interested ample time to present their offers and to improve them afterward.
3. Reaffirms that the offer of Continental Ore, Inc. was the “lowest” and the “most advantageous” to the government. They stress that the equipment were purchased at the factory list prices; the firm charged only 6.5% interest on the cost of the equipment which were to be procured on a deferred payment plan; and the expenses for freight and insurance were to be spread out over a five-year period, instead of the usual payment on delivery.
4. Informs the Cabinet that there exists a considerable lag in the procurement of public works equipment, with the $29 million purchase filling up only 33 percent of present requirements. Other sources of public works equipments are the reparations, the US, through pledged assistance to the armed forces in the equipping of engineering construction battalions, and outright cash purchases.
5. Assures the Cabinet that there was legal authority for the purchase of the equipment under a deferred payment plan under Republic Acts 917, 1435, 4860, 4861 and public works appropriation laws.

Aquino reveals the payment may be made from the Highways Special Funds. In case of fund deficiencies, the equipment may be paid from foreign borrowings under authority of Republic Act 4860 or from the sale of bonds under Republic Act 4861.

6. Cites the following advantages of purchasing the equipment from Allis Chalmers. Huber Corporation and General Motors Corporation:

a. That under the deferred payment plan offered by these corporations and the Continental Ore Corporation, only 6.5 percent interest would be charged on the cost of the equipment:

b. That the cost of freight and insurance would likewise be paid on a deferred payment plan of five years, unlike the other offers which made these charges immediately payable;

c. That the procedure followed by the government enabled it to standardize its equipment.

d. That public bidding had unduly delayed, if not crippled public works projects in the past, citing as examples the procurement of asphalt in 1963, water pipes by NAWASA also in 1963 and other equipment under Reparations, all of which up to the present are still pending.

e. That the price of the equipment was the lowest, with prices of certain items comparing favorably with those under Reparations.

The intervening parties mentioned in the report, consisting of persons both from the public and private sectors, all categorically declared, under oath, that no kickbacks, commissions or gifts were given or will be given in connection with the purchase.

Sworn statements are made by Jarvey R. Katz, Southeast Asia manager of Continental Ore, Jose N. Pineda, general manager of Continental Ore (Philippines), James S. Moir, vice president and general manager of Honiron (Philippines) Inc. and Secretary Raquiza and Commissioner Aquino.

Secretary Raquiza states that he had voluntarily submitted to making a sworn statement, although it was against his belief that an official who had done his best should suffer such indignity.

He declares that "I have not received and will not receive, directly or indirectly, any gift, commission or any other benefit from any source in connection with this transaction."

He affirms that "there was no political interference whatsoever in the purchase and negotiation."

Commissioner Aquino swears that he too did not receive any gift, commission or other benefits from the purchase, and that he, like Secretary Raquiza, objected to being made to make a deposition on the negotiations particularly because "all my actions and decisions on this matter were moved by no other consideration than the best interests of the government and our people."

Among the cases of direct purchase cited by the report are:

1. The procurement of dredging equipment, auxiliary units and spare parts totaling $5,261,500 under deferred payment by the bureau of public works during President Garcia's administration.
2. Acquisition of 20 motor truck chassis by the Manila Railroad Co from International Harvester at a total cost of $105,900, under the Macapagal administration.
3. The acquisition of 10 diesel electric locomotives from the General Electric Co. by the MRR at the original cost of $1,862,666.09, later increased by $10,000 to meet hiked freight charges, under the Macapagal administration.
4. The acquisition by Nawasa of 10 billing machines and one addressograph machine through Erlanger & Galinger in the amount of $112, 975.50, on the amortization plan, under the Garcia Administration.

The acquisition by the National Power Corporation of 8 units of IBM data processing equipment for a contracted price of P241, 360.05 in 1963.

And some 12 other instances of direct purchases of needed government equipment under past administrations, all of which did not go through public bidding, but were nevertheless held valid under the special conditions authorized by Executive Order No. 298.

In its report, the Committee observes that public bidding had been dispensed with many times in the past by previous administrations under authority of Executive Order No. 298, series 1940.

The advantages from the purchase through the Continental Ore Corporation are sharply seen, the report bares, against the guidelines set by the public works department.

1. Terms: to supply $32,688,000 worth of construction equipment at 6.5 percent interest payable in equal semiannual installments over a period of five years, with no down payment. The first installment will be due six months after shipment. Prices of equipment were CIF Manila.
2. Prices; the registered manufacturer's export price list, which remains the same regardless of the buyers or their countries of destination and regardless of whether the purchase is through a dealer or directly from the manufacturer.
3. Quality: Allis Chairman, General Motors and Huber Corporation, which will supply the equipment, are three of the biggest heavy equipment manufacturers in the US, and their products are among the best known in the world.

The method of procurement, through direct purchase, without public bidding, is found by the report to be valid, as authorized by Executive Order No. 298, series 1940, as amended.

The report says that public bidding is not statutory requirement in government transaction concerning procurement of supplies, materials and equipment. It pointed that the requirement for public bidding in Section 1917 of the Revised Administrative Code applies only to contracts covering public works construction and repair.

Executive Order No. 40, series 1963, provides that contracts for public service or supplies may not be submitted to public bidding for extraordinary reason to be determined by a committee composed of the executive secretary, the auditor general and the secretary of justice.

Guidelines for "extraordinary reasons" are those which include meeting projects or emergencies which cannot be delayed without detriment to the public service, provided the purchase is made after a thorough canvass of the market.

The public works department did not only make a complete canvass, the report declares, but also gave the other offerors plenty of time to better their offers, as against the offer of Continental Ore and even studied late offers after the contract with Continental Ore was closed, finding even then that they were not as good as the former.

In concluding, the report avers that "the present administration has embarked on a massive program of road and bridges building designed to establish the foundations for long-term national growth and development to realize this expectation we must act decisively as in the present case."

The report further gives credence to the urgency felt in procuring the equipment immediately, in the light of the delay already caused for lack of proper equipment one full year behind schedule.

Meantime, President Marcos orders Director Nilo de Guia of the Civil Aviation Administration to stop immediately all extra sections (flights) not authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

He also tells De Guia to submit to him within 48 hours the plans for the new Manila International Airport runway, which need improvement to meet the requirements of modern aviation.

The President calls a stop to all unauthorized extra flights of local airlines, following complaints by the Filipinas Orient Airways against the grant of extra sections.

The Filipinas Orient Airways alleged that there were discrimination and partiality in favor of the Philippine Air Lines in the granting of extra flights.

April 6.—PAVING the way for the opening of additional virgin lands for resettlement by relieving the armed forces of responsibility for administering EDCOR (Economic Development Corps) projects, President Marcos assigns to the AFP units concerned the specific mission of opening up new resettlement areas.

He orders Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata to turn over the EDCOR farms to the Land Authority, which will henceforth administer the projects.

The Chief Executive at the same time directs the bureau of lands to furnish the defense department with all the data necessary on virgin lands and other areas which may be opened to resettlement.

He lifts the burden of administering the EDCOR farms from the armed forces, to utilize the units experienced in land resettlement in this new efforts to open up new lands for cultivation. He specifies to Secretary Mata that new lands made available for settlers should be set aside for war veterans.

The EDCOR farms were opened first by the late President Magsaysay, as a resettlement project for surrendered Huks. It was deemed a constructive way of rehabilitating those Huks who had decided on returning to a peaceful life under the law. Since that time, the EDCOR farms, under the administration of armed forces units, have fully developed.

The President asks the officials concerned to report to him within one month, on their implementation of these directives.

At the same time, the President demands an explanation from the members of the board of directors of the National Power Corporation for their alleged “unwarranted interference” in the management of the government corporation.

He takes the step after being informed that because of the interference of the NPC directors, the management of the corporation has not been able to function effectively.

The directors of the firm are given 72 hours to give their side of the controversy. Each board member is asked to submit his own explanation of the five-point specifications of interference filed against the board.

In his memorandum, the President points out to the NPC directors that the specifications against them were serious, and that if allowed to continue might prejudice the interests of the firm.

The specific instances cited in the report to the President are:

1. The demand of some members for offices of their own in the NPC building.
2. Total disregard by some members of established managerial procedures in the NPC, resulting in internal friction and misunderstanding within the organization.
3. The arbitrary establishment of P280 as the minimum salary in the NPC, which with the present P150 cost of living allowance, would result in a floor wage of P430.
4. The employment of unnecessary technical assistants and proteges at high salaries, thereby causing demoralization in the NPC ranks.
5. Hindering the early completion of the Angat River Hydroelectric Project by delaying fund disbursements to the contractor.

President Marcos, in a memorandum to Secretary of Public Works and Communication Antonio Raquiza, directs that no monument or public edifice erected during his administration be named after him.

Instead, the President directs Raquiza to change the name of a pier in Orion, Bataan from Ferdinand E. Marcos pier to that of any other Filipino veteran who fought in Bataan.

He suggests the name of Major Gen. Mateo Capinpin, who commanded one of the most cited divisions in the battle for Bataan, among others.

The President also informs Gov. Pedro Dizon of Bataan, Rep. Pablo Roman and Mayor Floro Roxas, president of the Bataan Mayors League, of his instruction to Sec. Raquiza for their guidance.

The pier was constructed as part of the President's project to develop Mt. Samat into a national shrine commemorating the epic defense of Bataan. The pier will serve those who may visit the shrine from the sea, instead of taking the land route.

In the morning, the President receives first at his study a group of American druggists on a visit here. The group includes Mr. and Mrs. David Corcorran of the Sterling Drug company, Thomas Serpa, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Wren of Winthrop Stearns.

At 10:30 a.m., the President is fetched from Malacañang by Administrator Atilano Cinco of the Philippine Veterans Administration who accompanied him to the World Veterans Federation conference on Asia and Far Eastern Veterans affairs held at the WHO building on United Nations avenue.

In his address, the President challenges Asian soldiers to take the initiative in realizing a forum for peace in Asia, saying that "where dedication and courage can succeed."

"More than anyone," the President states, "it is the soldier who passionately oppose war knowing its wastefulness and vicious destruction of human values." He adds, "so am I obsessed with peace."

He then urges the Veterans to work for an Asian forum "for all Asian countries irrespective of political beliefs, where a crisis like the Vietnam war can be discussed."

He stresses, "Let the soldiers of Asia, often identified with senseless war, lead the way to reasonable peace."

Pointing out that it is inherent in human nature to respond to adventure and excitement, a feeling often satisfied by fighting a war, the President states that this compulsion can be fulfilled by "a moral equivalent," which lies in the arduous tasks of building nations to an "adequate level of peace, of development," and in meeting the "challenge of development and democratization."

These challenges, he notes, are particularly real and urgent for the new nations which World War II had released from colonial bondage and age-old apathy. Projecting the power of war to innovate and father new societies, he points out that World War II gave rise to new nations all over the world.

These new nations, he continues, have taken divergent paths of development, but that whatever their differences, the salient fact is that their peoples have clamored for "wider and stronger democratization of society and of the government."

He states that "it is in this sense that the second world war came to Asia as a liberalizing and democratizing force," during which "feudalism became rapidly outmoded."

Declaring that all soldiers are comrades, even when they had fought on opposite sides of the trenches, because they are bound by the “common bond of courage in the face of death,” the President says that this “comradeship in war could contribute to a just and enduring peace and richer human freedom.”

From the veterans conference, the President drops in at the Manila Doctors Hospital, where he visited Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo and Rep. Vicente Peralta (Sorsogon), both of whom are confined in the hospital.

Back at Malacañang at 12:30 p.m., the President receives the delegates to the veterans conference, whom he honors at luncheon.

In the evening, the President motors to Fort Bonifacio, Rizal, for another speaking engagement.

Besides being guest speaker, he is the principal sponsor at the formal presentation of the official chapters of the American Legion, Philippine department.

April 7—PRESIDENT Marcos further sparks the participation of the private sector when he launched at a breakfast meeting in Malacañang the National Rice Action Group. Present at the day-long conference are government officials in the rice program and prominent citizens already participating in the intensified rice production effort.

The National Rice Action Group (NRAG) is an organization which the President declared will serve “as the bridge between the public and private sectors” in the effort.

The President shows high spirits as he presides at the breakfast meeting, where he inducted the 52 chairman of the provincial councils of the NRAG, distributed “appreciation” plaques and literature on the modern technique of rice production as well as gave away the traditional headgear of farmers, the salakot, to each of the group.

Manuel J. Gonzales is over-all coordinator of this citizens participation in the rice production program under the NRAG.

He notes that as the government has organized a coordinating council on rice production, also will the action group organize the greater portion of the private sector in the “pivotal and crucial crusade” for self-sufficiency in rice.

“We must get each and every farmer to participate in this program,” the President states, “for only upon the cooperation, enthusiasm, and devotion of the private sector can we base any successful effort to attain the goals of this program.”

The President stresses that the government has committed all its resources to the rice problem because it is the principal problem of the country. Now, he continues, it is necessary to correct the gross oversight in previous rice production programs, which is the failure to enlist the full participation of the private sector.

Vice President Fernando Lopez, who is also the overall coordination of the rice and corn production program, in his brief remarks to the group, emphasizes that this is the first administration to conceive a systematic and vigorous campaign to increase rice production.

He points out that the solution to the perennial rice problem is “not the responsibility of the President alone, or of the government agencies concerned, but the solution primarily lies in the hands of the citizenry in general, principally the rice farmers throughout the archipelago.”

The launching of the NRAG is the latest in a series of steps the President has taken to galvanize the private sector into greater participation in the rice production effort.

Earlier he had welcomed the participation of various church groups in the rice program, and offered them the cooperation of the government. During the meeting, the President withdraws several times to receive visitors. Vice President Lopez presides in the interim.

Dr. Arturo de Santos calls on the President, along with members of the Supreme Council of the American Defenders of Bataan and Corregidor. He turns over to the President the only recording of the message of Gen. Jonathan Wainwright of the USAFFE, when, on higher orders, he surrendered the Philippines to the Japanese Imperial Forces on May 6, 1942.

The President is presented with a life time membership card by Art Bressi, president of the American Defenders of Bataan and Corregidor, as honorary national commander.

Also turned over to the President, among others, is a contribution of $3,900 from Mayor Samuel W. Yorty of Los Angeles, California for the "Dambana ng Kagitingan" national shrine on Mt. Samat in Bataan

After receiving his callers, the President returns to the conference still going on at the state dining hall.

At noon, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R Marcos takes lunch with the conferences.

Following the conference, the President spends the rest of the day preparing his speech for the Bataan Day observance on Mt. Samat tomorrow.

April 8.—PRESIDENT Marcos leads Filipino and American veterans, widows and orphans of the last war, as well as government officials in a pilgrimage to Bagac, Bataan to dedicate the "Dambana ng Kagitingan" on Mount Samat.

The President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrives at Mt. Samat at 11:30 a.m. for the dedicatory rites. The First Lady unveils the marker of the national war memorial. The dedicatory speech is made by the President, a hero of the battle at Mt. Samat. Solemnity attends the ceremonies.

A feature of the program is the recitation by Norman Reyes of his broadcast on the fall of Bataan. Reyes was then the radio officer of the USAFFE headquarters. With a voice slightly changed by age, Reyes repeated his broadcast that moved the veterans present.

In his speech, the President pledges that "this generation, and generations after, will keep faith with Bataan,"

To keep this faith, he states, Filipinos must prove true to the legacy of Bataan, which is self-dependence, as well as the responsibilities that go with freedom.

He reminds the people that they are the inheritors of Bataan's legacy, which must be preserved and enlarged in "the quiet tasks of peace," which he says entail the same "courage, passionate devotion and undying love" that the "young, gallant men" who fought in Bataan had displayed.

He stresses, "The problems that beset us demand our courage and resolution; they command discipline under overwhelming odds; above all, they demand clarity of mind and indomitability of spirit."

He bares that Filipinos, proud of their freedom, "dream of a world in freedom." Pointing out that slaves have no history, only fate, he asserts that "we seek that world in which all men to all races shall make their own history."

With this dream and this quest, the President states, "the presence of our brothers in an agonizing spot in Asia" is required. He refers to Vietnam.

Explaining that nations cannot always dictate the terms of the challenges imposed by history, the President declares that the Philippines nevertheless has tried “to raise above war’s clamor the compelling voice of reason.” He emphasizes. We try and shall keep on trying.”

After the dedicatory ceremony, the President and the members of his party takes lunch at Litson Point on Mt. Samat tendered by officials of Bataan.

The First Couple then motors to Mariveles for the unveiling of a historical marker at the point where the infamous “Death March” along a hundred kilometer road to Capas, Tarlac, started.

On his way to Mariveles, the President makes stops at two historical markers that tell of the heroic stand made by Filipino troops along the road leading to Mt. Samat.

The first marker kilometer 132, speaks of the final battle of Bataan. It was at that point along the highways, known as the final North-South Trail 4 to the military, where the 230th Infantry Regiment of the Philippine Army was positioned, and which was subjected to artillery and aerial bombardment on the morning of Good Friday, April 3, 1942.

The second marker was about a kilometer away, and was erected in recollection of the battle of Trail 2.

In his brief remarks in Filipino and English, the President recalls the march as something which had shown the best and the worst in men, adding that the marker will remain as a tribute to the Filipino and American partnership.

The President and his party arrives in Orion at 10 o’clock this morning aboard the RPS “The President.” The ship docks at the newly-constructed pier of the town which he inaugurates upon arrival.

The First Lady cuts the ceremonial ribbon formally opening the pier. The President addresses the crowd that had gathered to meet him, as well us to attend the pier inauguration rites.

He thanks the people of Bataan for insisting that it be named after him, but then, he states, he would not like any public works project named in his honor for as long as he is alive. He names the pier after Gen. Mateo Capinpin instead.

The President and his party leaves Bataan at 5 p.m., arriving in Manila two hours later.

April 9.—MOTORING to the “Libingan ng mga Bayani” in Fort Bonifacio and then to the U.S. Military Cemetery in Makati, Rizal. President Marcos leads Filipino and American Veterans, widows and orphans of World War II, as well as the general public in paying homage to the Filipino and American soldiers who died in the World War.

The President is accompanied by among others the First Lady Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and Ambassador William McCormick Blair, Jr.

At the “Libingan ng mga Bayani,” the President and the First Lady attends an early morning Mass officiated at an improvised altar fronting the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by Fr. Francisco Avendaña.

Mrs. Marcos lays a wreath on behalf of the people of the Philippines at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Following the rites at the “Libingan ng mga Bayani,” the First Couple proceeds to the nearby U.S. Military Cemetery for similar honors for the American soldiers who died in the Philippines during the last war.

In the afternoon, the President together with the First Lady and their three children motors to the Luneta where a grand military parade and program are held to climax the three-day long observance of the Fall of Bataan.

Upon his arrival, the President receives full military honors from the Presidential Guard Battalion commanded by Col. Nicolas Ojeda.

This is followed by a military parade which featured the participation of the Philippine and American Defenders. The latter, numbering about 200, came here purposely to join the observance. These are heavily applauded as they went past the grandstand. The President stands on the platform throughout the parade.

Other features of the rites are the one-minute silence accentuated by the sounding of sirens at exactly 4:30 p.m. in honor of the Philippine and American war dead; and the presentation to the President of a Shield of Honor, degree of chief commander, by Gen. Arellano in behalf of the Defenders.

In his speech, the President describes the defense of Bataan as “an epic of the human spirit,” which is what Filipinos celebrate.

The unifying experience of Bataan, he declares, and the “great exertions of the human spirit, (the) major acts of courage” make Bataan kin to the “other high points of our experience as a people,” including the present challenge of nation-building and “the task of making democracy work in our country.”

The will of the Bataan defenders to endure and to die despite great odds, the President declares, could be “turned purposefully to the tasks of peace and development.”

He states that Bataan will be “seen to fall in place” as one of the more spectacular manifestations of the national purpose, which is to write “our epic of development as a modern nation a permanent bastion of liberty in this part of the world.

Upon departure from the grandstand, the First Couple riding in an open ceremonial car, are mobbed by the vast crowd all along their route up to the National Library building. The First Couple officiate at the formal opening to the public of the Bataan Day exhibits.

Back in Malacañang, the First Couple gives cocktails in honor of all the Defenders of Bataan and Corregidor.

April 10.—THE President orders the Department of Justice to start investigating immediately all officials and other parties who may be involved in the smuggling of Chinese into the Philippines and to prosecute without delay all those against whom evidence may be found.

He takes the steps at the same time that he instructs Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC Chief, and CIS chief Felizardo Tanabe to submit their report on the apprehensions of groups of Chinese in Pangasinan and La Union.

The Chief Executive further instructs the two armed forces officers to coordinate with Undersecretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee in the latter’s investigation of the new racket in human cargo.

The smuggling of Chinese, which culminated in a dramatic expose with the arrests effected last week, has been the object of counter-intelligence effort conducted over the past several months.

Coordinating in the quiet drive are local intelligence agencies and international police agencies. Their joint effort resulted in the accumulation of evidence on the existence of a syndicate manufacturing fake passports to make the illegal Chinese entries possible.

The President had earlier been informed that officials and employees in the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Bureaus of Customs and Immigration, the Manila International Airport, as well as employees of certain airline companies, were involved in the smuggling of Chinese into the country.

In the morning, the President accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, motors to Fort Bonifacio, Rizal where the President formally declares open the 50-hectai-e land in Fort Bonifacio as the Veterans' Center.

President's Week in Review: May 1-27, 1967

President's Week in Review: May 28 - June 3, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

May 28.—DISEMBARKING at Pier 15 at 8 a.m. from RPS "The President," the Chief Executive immediately flies by helicopter to College, Laguna upon his return to Malacañang from a trip to Palawan, Cebu, Ursula Island and the growing community in Balabac.

The President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their three children, hears mass at the deck of the presidential yacht celebrated by Fr. Ciriaco Escutin before disembarking.

At the College, the President addresses the sixth national convention of the Federation of Farmers Association.

In his speech, the President stresses the importance of developing agriculture to the industrialization program of the government.

He notes to develop agriculture was to lay the foundation for industrial development, for industry could best thrive where there was a strong domestic market for manufactured goods.

To develop the domestic market, he states, the government must help the farmers increase his income so that he could save enough money for the purchase of goods produced by industry.

He likewise bares that the administration has laid the foundation for the production of rice, corn and other agricultural products. It is now, he adds, engaged in meeting the problems of storage of these products and in developing a stable market for them.

He states the government had launched a program that would encourage the construction of warehouses. To provide better marketing facilities for farmers' crops, says, the administration was working on the establishment of a Farmer's Market in the Greater Manila area.

Back in Malacañang in the afternoon, the President receives the credentials of Ambassador U Sain Bwa, the new envoy of Burma to the Philippines.

In his reply to the new Envoy's remarks at the presentation rites, the President urges the widening of the fields of cooperation between the Philippines and Burma not only for the mutual benefit to the two countries but also for the good of the region.

The President points out that other fields of cooperation between the Philippines and Burma remained untapped. He declares these fields "challenges our goodwill and imagination."

"I am confident that Burma and the Philippines will not fail to meet this challenge," the President says.

In his remarks, the new envoy of Burma pledges to "cultivate still further the close friendly relations between our two countries."

The new envoy arrives at Malacañang at 5 p.m. At the Palace front door, he is met by a guard of honor made up of a contingent of the Presidential Guard Battalion in their blue gala uniform.

The presentation which was held at the ceremonial hall of the Palace is attended by members of the Cabinet led by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

The President delivers his remarks in Filipino. Following the ceremony, he and the Burmese envoy exchange toasts, using basi, an Ilocano beverage, as ceremonial wine.

May 29.—PRESIDENT Marcos launches a book printing project to meet at the deficiencies in textbook requirements of the public schools, with an initial P11 million earmarked for the project.

He explains that P10 million of this amount will come from the special Education Fund deriving from the US war damage payments, while the P1 million will be provided from the government's general appropriations fund.

The President also asks the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, to launch a book drive, with the assistance of civic organizations, to augment the government book printing project, and in connection with her own cultural program.

The department of education has been assigned to take charge of the whole book printing project, which has set an immediate goal of 3.3 million textbooks within the next year. The overall requirements total 11.4 million textbooks, which is the present deficiency.

The President hopes to cover this deficiency with an intensified book-printing effort. The project is a companion measure to the pre-fabricated school building program of the administration, which in recent months has gathered momentum.

He has set a goal of 30,000 prefab school buildings during the next three years. About 1,000 prefab units have been distributed thus far, and the President has spurred the effort, setting the goal of 6,000 units before school open this year.

At the same time, President Marcos directs Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release the necessary funds to pay the salaries of Pasay City high school teachers.

He issues the directive following receipt of a complaint from a young student in Pasay City, who preferred to remain anonymous. The student wrote the President last May 10, calling the attention of Malacañang to the unpaid salaries of high school teachers in Pasay City, and other problems relating to the city high schools, including lack of schoolhouses.

The student, in the letter to the President, decries the apathy of government officials in relieving the plight of public school teachers, whom the student said, must be suffering extreme hardship, what with the children that many of them have to support.

The President also issues a proclamation declaring Thursday, June 1, as "Makati Day," making it a special public holiday in the municipality of Makati, Rizal.

The day marks the anniversary of the founding of the Rizal town.

In the morning, the President meets with leaders of Congress, to paw the way for congressional consideration of the urgent measures to be taken up in the coming special session opening June 1.

The meeting focuses on:

1. Setting the priorities for the 31 measures certified by the President to the special session;
2. The proposed transshipment zone to be established in Manila or another part of the country;
3. The proposed electoral reforms.

The Chief Executive, during the conference, is fissured of cooperation by the congressional leaders on speedy action on urgent bills, notably on the appropriation bill, the public works bill, the investment incentive bill, a number of tax proposals, amendments to the customs and tariff code, the circuit bill, and the government decentralization bill.

On the tax proposals, there is bipartisan agreement to give top priority to the following tax bills:

1. The act amending the provisions on inheritance and gift taxes by increasing the said taxes
2. The proposal to increase corporate taxes
3. The proposal to increase the gasoline tax.

May 30.—PRESIDENT Marcos creates the Inter-Agency Technical Committee on Foreign Economic Policy to advise the government on problems affecting international economic relations and to otherwise cope with matters pertaining to economics.

He points out that in the conduct of economic relations with other countries, the Philippine government regularly encounters problems involving different government agencies as well as the private sector, which need competent study and knowledgeable solutions.

“There is a necessity for a specific agency to coordinate and consult with other government agencies and the private sector,” the President explains “to insure that their positions and policies are in conformity with established foreign economic policy.”

The President specifies the salient functions of the newly-created body, namely:

1. It shall serves as the official body responsible for conducting studies and research on matters pertaining to Philippine foreign economic relations
2. It shall recommend the Philippine position in international economic negotiations, after consultation with other government agencies and the private business sector; and
3. It shall recommend to the President such other policies of an economic character as would most effectively advance the national interest.

The committee shall be composed of a Chairman from the Department of Foreign Affairs and a representative each from the Department of Commerce and Industry, the Department of Finance, the National Economic Council, the Presidential Economic Staff, the Central Bank of the Philippines and the Tariff Commission, as members.

At the same time, the President orders the release of funds for the vacation salaries of public school teachers, shortly after he learned that many of these teachers had not been paid since the close of the regular school term.

Acting on the President’s orders, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco remarks some P56 million for the payment of the delayed salaries.

The President learns of the delayed payment of teachers’ salaries only this day after being informed by various officials that the public school mentors in many provinces have long been waiting for their vacation salaries to be paid.

Public schoolteachers receive their salaries even though they conduct classes during the two-month Vacation. On the other hand, even during their vacation teachers are often busy with professional seminars, or take special courses for self-improvement, or again are asked to serve in community projects.

In the morning, the President sits down with Teodoro Locsin, Free Press editor, and Edward Kiunisala, staff member of the weekly, for an interview. Also present are Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff and his deputy, Alejandro Melchor, Highway Commissioner Baltazar Aquino and Acting Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave.

After the interview, the President receives Senate President Gil J. Puyat and Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, who came for consultations.

A respite from official business is provided by 14-year-old Alano Pahallwan Aradain, the Muslim youngster with an eye ailment, whom the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, spotted during the recent presidential tour on Mindanao and Sulu and brought to Manila for treatment.

The boy bids the President goodbye, after the successful operation of the eye. He thanks the First Couple for their help, and promises the President that he will study hard and be a good citizen.

After a spell of paperwork, the President once again breaks off to induct Gov. Esteban Bernido of Bohol as Presidential Assistant on Housing and as general manager of the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation.

He likewise inducts Vice-Gov. Lino Chatto, who will take over as governor of Bohol.

Recently arrived Administrator Gilberto Teodoro of the Social Security System and GSIS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario, members of the Philippine delegation to the United Nations-sponsored conference on social security in Leningrad, calls on the President to submit a preliminary report on the meeting.

Early in the afternoon, the President instructs Assistant Executive Secretary Gilberto Duavit and Ambassador Benjamin Romualdez, whom he dispatched to Daraga, Albay immediately after receiving word of the derailment of the Bicol Express this noon to make on-the-spot decisions in assistance to the victims, particularly the injured.

The two officials are ordered by the President to the scene of the mishap, which was reportedly fatal to ten passengers, with several others seriously injured, to make a personal assessment of the tragedy.

The President also orders an army paramedic team to aid the injured, and directs Col. Nicanor Jimenez, general manager of the Philippine National Railways, to fly to the Bicol town with a team of PNR doctors.

May 31.—PRESIDENT Marcos directs all law enforcement agencies to submit monthly reports on crimes for the government drive against lawlessness.

In an executive order, the President states that an accurate picture of the overall crime situation is necessary to guide law enforcement agencies in the campaign against crime and congress in the enactment of proper legislation.

The Chief Executive prescribes a uniform reporting system for all national and local law enforcement agencies, which were directed to submit their monthly reports to the chief of constabulary for consolidation, after which the data will be relayed to the Inter-Departmental Committee on the Coordination of Crime Statistics.

Required to render monthly reports are all chiefs of city, municipal and municipal district police forces; the Chief of Constabulary the director. National Bureau of Investigation; the chairman, Anti-Smuggling Action Center; the Commissioner of Customs; the Commissioner of Immigration and heads of other national law enforcement agencies.

The directive states the report should indicate whether a particular crime was handled exclusively by one agency or jointly with other agencies and also to specify whether it was or was not recorded in any city municipal districts police blotter in the case of crimes investigated by national police agencies.

At the same time, the President approves the request of two famed Filipino artists to perform in the Soviet Union and other countries behind the Iron Curtain.

The two, Misses Conchita Gaston, an opera singer, and Carmencita Lozada, concert violinist, have won recognition here and abroad as artists. They are both now in the Netherlands.

Foreign Secretary Narciso Ramos, who favorably recommend the trip, declares that performances of these two Filipino artists "will be a distinct boost to Philippine culture."

The President also orders the release of P1 million to the Philippine National Railways for the improvement of its lines especially in the area of the derailment of the Bicol Express in Albay.

He instructs Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to make the sum available at once, so that the PNR can start work on the project immediately, particularly the relocation of the railway between Daraga and Legaspi City, where the accident occurred.

The improvement of this portion of the PNR lines was ordered after the President receives from Col. Salvador Villa, chairman of the PNR board of directors, a preliminary report on the derailment the other day of the Bicol Express.

The report reveals that the portion of the PNR lines in the Bicol has long been a hazard to trains because of the steep grade of the railways, which moreover twists dangerously. Thus, trains running in this area must negotiate this portion with extreme care, often going at virtually a snail's pace.

In the morning, the President goes on a two-hour long inspection of important road-building projects north and south of Manila.

The President boards an air force helicopter at 8 a.m., from the Malacañang Parks he flies to the Manila North Diversion Road project.

The President's unscheduled visit comes a cheerful surprise to the construction soldiers, who were even then already busy at their work.

Col. Sergio Isada, commanding officer of the 51st Engineer Brigade which is taking charge of the north road construction, joins the President's party in Balagtas (Bigaa) where the remaining 4.5 kilometers to Tabang in Guiguinto, Bulacan is being completed.

After this inspection, the President proceeds to the Angat Dam construction site in Norzagaray, Bulacan, close to the foothills of the Sierra Madre Mountains. He notes that the construction of the dam was almost complete.

From Angat Dam, the President flies south to look over the Nawasa projects, particularly the aqueduct being built between La Mesa Dam and the Balara Filters. He also views the progress of the work on E. de los Santos Avenue, and the projects in the South Harbor area, particularly Piers 3 and 15.

The President returns to Malacañang at 10 a.m. In his study, he immediately commence receiving callers.

Then, the President confers with his financial advisers.

At the conference, the President instructs Gov. Andres Castillo of the Central Bank to study the problem of dollar purchase for unspecified purposes.

The President asks Castillo to study the whole matter of dollar remittances including identification of those who have been remitting big sums in various places abroad, for no known purposes.

The directive is partly aimed at tightening further the government drive against smuggling, which often begins with the flow of so-called invisibles out of the country.

In this connection, the President asks the CB to pass on the results of its study and the names of purchasers to the bureaus of internal revenue and customs, the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency, the Anti-Smuggling Action Committee, and the Department of National Defense and Justice.

The conference also considers the problem of promoting further foreign trade activities, which in the past year has shown a marked increase. He specially asks for a study of new markets for Philippine export products, and relative to this, the development of new export products.

Meanwhile, the President suspends for two months without pay Municipal Judge Julio Abad of Tanza. Cavite for "dereliction of duty."

The order of suspension carries with it a warning that repetition of the same or similar offense will be dealt with more severely.

The case against Judge Abad springs from his refusal to issue a search warrant to the Philippine Constabulary command on June 16, 1966, which had act a raid on several houses in Barrio Amaya, Tanza, Cavite, suspected of concealing untaxed "blue seal" cigarettes.

June 1.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders all governments officials and employees to refrain from soliciting subscription or contributing for any purpose, unless authorized by the Social Welfare Administration.

The directive is embodied in an executive order further amending Executive Order No 13 dated May 16, 1907, as amended by Executive Order No. 20 dated July 22, 1907.

In his directive, the President stresses that the practice of soliciting so-called "voluntary contributions" for public or semi-public causes by government personnel is "seldom justifiable and frequently productive of abuses."

He asserts that this malpractice on the part of government officials and employees exist in many localities.

Because of frequent lack of justification and the abuses arising from such solicitations, the President states, "a feeling of injury or resentment is often engendered among people who are unable to distinguish between collections made in this manner and those made through taxation."

At the same time, the President creates two advisory councils to upgrade quality and standards in their respective fields, namely, education and manufacturing.

The advisory council on education will make studies and then recommend to the President the steps to be taken in elevating the standards of education the country.

The Other advisory group, called the Philippine Standards Council, will cope with the ever increasing need for rigid specifications, quality standard and appraisal of local and international products sold 'in the Philippines.

Secretary of Education Carlos P. Romulo will head the advisory council on education, with the following members: Dr. Sotero Laurel, Dr. Waldo Perfecto, Dr. Augusto Caesar Espiritu, and Director of Public Schools Juan L. Manuel.

The council will have the following functions:

1. Recommend reforms in the public and private education systems according to the objectives laid down by the Constitution and pertinent to the changes in social, political and economic conditions.
2. Recommend basic policies in this field, with a view to formulating an integrated education pattern for the nation, and coordinating Philippine standards with those set up by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.
3. Examine various phases of vocational education with an eye to helping the government from policies relative to economic development.

The President creates the standards council after noting the difficulties encountered by the Bureau of Standards in coping with the ever increasing scope of its activities, aggravated by inadequate facilities and lack of technical personnel.

The body will be led by the representatives from the Department of Commerce and Industry, with the members composed of one representative each from the bureau of standards, the department of education, the department of public works and communications, the department of general services, the national development board, the Philippine Chamber of Industries, and a representative from among the exporters importers and consumers.

In the morning, the President meets for the second time this week his financial advisers to discuss further early implementation of the various ways of developing the country's natural resources, with an eye particularly to stimulating production of export goods.

He directs the Development Bank of the Philippines to study how easier credit may be given to other firms, in the way that rice and corn producers have been provided more liberal credit; so that they may acquire better facilities and expand their operations.

The President specifies that if necessary these loans can take the form of supervised credit.

The meeting this day is a follow-up of the previous conference, this time to consider the concrete ways of helping stimulate local production of export goods as well as the wider development of natural resources.

He points out that despite surveys showing that there are still large areas of mineral deposits untapped there has been no perceivable intensified activity in the development of these resources. Only a few pioneering firms are now engaged in this development, and some of them are hampered in their efforts by lack of financing.

He adds that the assistance given to rice and corn producers, and which has sparked added momentum in this field of industry, may also energize the development of the country's other natural resources.

In the evening, the President receives at 6 p.m. the special congressional committee who called to inform him that the legislative body has been convened for the special session, in compliance with the President's proclamation of last May 18, to consider urgent administration measures.

June 2.—KEEPING the public adequately informed on the activities and encouraged to do its share in intensifying rice and corn production, President Marcos authorizes the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council to form its own information office.

The information office will be headed by a director to be designated by the chairman of the RCPCC, and equipped with full staff, on the authority of the chairman of the RCPCC.

The center has the following functions and duties:

1. Coordinate the information services of all the agencies, and instrumentalities of the government participating in the rice and corn program under the RCPCC.
2. Assist in the programming of information, particularly as it pertains to the production and dissemination of information materials, with an eye to avoiding duplication, insure wider and more effective dissemination, and compile accurate data on facts, figures and statistics.
3. Collect, gather, and evaluate all information materials produced by the information agencies, entities, and/or instrumentalities under the program, and recommend ways of attaining total accuracy in the data gathered.
4. Provide complete and reliable information on the rice and corn production program under the RCPCC, and other matters relative to the RCPCC projects.
5. Discharge such other functions and duties as may be assigned to it by the RCPCC chairman.

In his executive order, the President likewise orders that all heads of departments, bureaus, agencies and instrumentalities of the government involved in, or concerned with, the rice and corn production program under the RCPCC extend full cooperation to the information office.

In another directive, the President reassigns responsibilities for certain functions held by Malacañang, notably on prison matters, the issuance of permits for firearms to government officials, claims for benefits by government personnel, the granting of franchises to public utilities operators, negotiated contracts for government services or supplies, and authority for local travel by government personnel.

The latest initiative taken by the President in dispersing, executive powers is in accordance with his policy of decentralization, which he had already started implementing in recent months. The dispersal of these powers will continue, he declares, although the pace may be slow since each step requires full study.

The President's directive transfers the following functions:

1. The allocation of plate numbers for motor cars, to the Land Transportation Commissioner.
2. The issuance of permits for possession of firearms to government national officials, and to dealers in firearms, ammunition and explosives, to the Philippine Constabulary chief, acting for the President.
3. The issuance of permits to local government officials for possession of firearms, and to dealers in firearms, ammunition and explosives, also the PC chief, again acting for the President.
4. Action on matters relating to the forfeiture of the certificate of deposit issued as security for licensed firearms, also under the same section of the code, to the PC chief, who shall act for the President.
5. Action on the claims for benefits under Section 699 of the Revised Administrative Code and on applications to teach, practice their professions, or engage in business outside of office hours, or acquire public lands, by personnel under the office of the President, the heads of which are of cabinet level, to the heads of the offices concerned.
6. Action on requests for authority to travel locally not exceeding three months from personnel of cabinet level offices under the President, to the heads of the Offices concerned.

7. Action on request for the transfer of property between offices of cabinet rank under the President, pursuant to Section 641 of the Revised Administrative Code, to the heads of the offices concerned.

8. Action on requisitions of offices of cabinet level under Malacañang to the heads of the Offices concerned.

9. Action on requests for meal allowance while working overtime by personnel of offices of cabinet level under Malacañang, to the heads of offices concerned.

10. The payment of prior years' obligations, or related matters, as provided under Section 7-1(27) of C. A. No. 246, by offices of cabinet level under Malacañang, to the heads of the offices concerned.

11. Authority for granting meal allowances in lieu of additional compensation for overtime work to local personnel to provincial governors and city mayors.

12. Action on request for the use of the AFP band to the defense secretary.

13. Action on prison matters, including confinement of provincial and municipal prisoners in the national penitentiary, or vice-versa, reports and inspection of local jails, recommitment of pardoned prisoners for violation of the conditions of the pardon, classification of prisoners, and requests of prisoners to pay a last visit under guard to recently deceased relatives, to the secretary of justice, who shall act "by authority of the President."

14. Approval of franchises for public utilities granted by municipal councils, to the secretary of justice.

15. Decisions on negotiated contracts for supplies and services to I lie government, involving amounts of P50,000 or less for national government agencies, and P100.000 or less for government-owned or controlled corporations, to the secretary of general services for national government agencies, and to the administrator of economic coordination, for government or semi-government corporations.

16. Action or requests for authority to appoint special policemen by private firms or semi-government institutions, to the Police Commission.

17. Decisions on negotiated contracts wherein the government plays in advance for services not yet rendered and/or for supplies and materials not yet delivered, in the amounts of P50.000 or less for national government agencies and P100 000 or less for government or semi-government firms to the secretary of general services for the national government, and to the administrator of economic coordination for government or semi-government firms.

18. Action on contracts for the lease of private buildings, rooms, lots or spaces, for the use of national government entities or government or semi-government firms, to the officials name above under the same specifications.

The executive order repeals or modifies all other executive orders in the past which may conflict with the present directive.

Other recent directives which decentralized the functions of the President's office, include the delegation to the heads of government lending institutions the authority to approve applications for loans exceeding P500,000 which formerly required Malacañang's approval; the delegation of powers or authority to ranking officials of such agencies as the PACD, the ACA, the ISU, and others in the rice and corn production program and the economic development program, including the Land Authority.

The President had given the heads of these offices the authority to delegate some of their powers to their key officials, in order to expedite accomplishments and streamline functions.

At the same time, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, meet 347 members of the Lapiang Malaya at Malacañang, prior to their departure the next day for their homes. The President is specially interested in inquiring into their problems.

The President has earlier gone to bat for the misled members, and is instrumental in discharging them from the rebellion case filed with the Pasay City Court of First Instance. The court handed down its decision earlier this day releasing the group from the charges.

He bids them to go back to their homes and live peacefully.

In the course of the meeting, the President orders the Social Welfare Administration to extend full assistance to the LM members released by the court so that they could go home immediately.

In the morning, the President confers with officials and receives the usual long list of callers in his study. He confers at breakfast with the Reparations officials with whom he discussed the 11th year schedule of Japanese reparations.

The President also inducts the newly appointed officials of the three provinces created out of Davao province. They are Gov. Paciano Bangoy and Vice Gov. Leopoldo Lopez of Davao Oriental; Gov. Ramon de los Cientos and Vice Gov. Cresencio Lascuña of Davao del Sur; Gov. Verulo Boiser and Cecilia a de la Paz of Davao del Norte; and several board members.

Following the induction rites, the President receives the report of the Mindanao Development Authority officials and their project studies on the economic development of the area.

June 3.—PRESIDENT Marcos spends most of his working day working on official papers, a self-imposed weekend practice.

He emerges from his private study later in the morning to receive Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Undersecretary of Finance and Customs Commissioner Juan Ponce Enrile who took up with him budgetary and financial matters.

In the afternoon, the President addresses the commencement exercises of the Philippine College of Commerce held at the Rizal Memorial Coliseum. During the rites, he also receives the degree of Doctor of Economics, honoris causa.

In his speech, the President again emphasizes the need for total national support to the economic policy of balanced development of an agro-industrial economy, with the primary stress on the rapid strengthening of agriculture as the base for industrialization.

He also discusses the implications of present educational trends, and proposes that education should be geared to social and personal development as well as to infuse the youth with a concern for social and economic progress.

In the course of his speech, the President bares he will set aside a portion of Fort Bonifacio in Makati, Rizal, as a permanent site of the Philippine College of Commerce.

The past year-and-a-half, the President declares has been instructive in the task of “building a good material life for our people.” He says that he has recognized the vastness of the task as well as the capacity of the people to solve the immense problems attending this task, through earnest work and a high sense of responsibility.

He points to the recent gains in this effort, notably to the reduction of smuggling, the increase correspondingly in customs and internal revenue collections, and the growing improvement of the infrastructure and agricultural supports.

The President declares that it is essential to recognize that successful industrialization depends upon the attainment of “an agricultural surplus level,” This, he states, has already been accepted by local economists, who are now concerned with solidifying the “interrelationship between agricultural and industry.”

Rapid industrialization, he states, depends on a widespread mass market which must include the agricultural sector. Otherwise there will be an industrial sector that “caters to and subsists by itself.”

In the afternoon, the President again delivers a speech as guest of honor at the final session of the 7th annual convention of Philippine lumbermen held at the VIP building convention hall on Roxas boulevard.

In his speech, the President underscores before the leaders of the lumber industry that his policies on the industry are dictated by “the imperatives of forest conservation.”

The President states that he recognizes the lumber industry as one of the country’s most important enterprises, but that his administration will support the industry only if it honors the law on forest conservation.

He explains that ‘it was in consideration of conservation that the government banned log dealers and required processing plants for wood products as a condition for the grant of forest concession licenses.

President's Week in Review: June 4-10, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

June 4.—THE President spends most of his time going over state papers and studying various projects of government.

Among the projects considered at length by the President are the plans to develop the North and South harbors and the proposal to open the lands occupied by the penal colonies to agricultural development.

The President instructs Director Alejandro B. Deleña of the bureau of public works to submit immediately the plans on the development of north and south harbors.

He directs acting Director Catalino Macaraig, Jr. of the bureau of prisons to make a listing of areas in the penal colonies suitable for agriculture.

After lunch, the President studies the draft of the bill making the dissolution of the Namarco and creating an agency to take over the functions of the government corporation. He plans to certify the bill to the current special session of Congress.

Then, he goes over the report of Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata on the plan to transfer the Philippine Merchant Marine Academy to a new site. The President had reserved the present campus of the Academy for the Asian Development Bank.

Meantime, President Marcos asks the Auditor General to inquire into the operations of the Central Cooperative Exchange, which has a long overdue account of P17 million with the government.

He designates the Auditor General to exercise the visitorial powers of the government, with instructions to inspect the books of the firm to determine its financial condition. The government has not conducted any auditing of the accounts of the firm, which is supposed to buy the crops of farmers, since 1962.

He orders the inquiry into the operations of the CCE in the face of threat poised by the Agricultural Credit Administration to sue the firm for its unpaid debts amounting to P17 million.

June 5.—THE Chief Executive sets the pace for his activities this day with a breakfast conference with members of the editorial staff of the Manila Chronicle led by Matias Marbella, managing editor.

The breakfast meeting is followed by a series of conferences with provincial officials and other leaders, among whom were prominent leaders of Cebu, Capiz and Isabela.

In the afternoon, the President concentrates on studying official papers, in the course of which he issues various directives.

Among the many orders issued by him are:

1. A memorandum to the National Science Development Board, the Philippine Inventors Commission, the UP College of Agriculture and the Philippine Coconut Administration, to jointly make a study and submit recommendations to Malacañang Within one month, on the feasibility of utilizing copra-drying machinery in the country, and
2. An order to BIR Commissioner Misael Vera to immediately relieve the internal revenue officials in Ilocos Sur "who are always unavailable" or absent from their posts.

President Marcos also constitutes the Irrigation Council, as provided for by Republic Act No. 2152 so as to expedite decisions on long pending applications for water rights.

June 6.—ACCEPTING the proposal of the secretariat of the Asian Productivity Organization (APO) to make the Philippines the base of its information center, President Marcos immediately orders Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release P400.000 to underwrite part of the cost of the center.

The proposed information center will set up publications and media unit, an audio-visual production unit, and a translation unit which will be used to disseminate vital information designed to stimulate industrial and agricultural productivity, and manpower activities.

The Philippine contribution of P400.000 represents about one third of the total cost of the project, with the U.S. AID in Washington contributing $290 000 for machinery and printing equipment for the center.

THE APO was established in 1961 with the view of giving adequate impetus to the productivity movement in Asia, and thereby accelerate the pace of economic development in the region.

In the morning, the President meets at breakfast with the editorial staff of the Manila Daily Bulletin, headed by Gen. Hans Menzi and editor Felix Gonzales.

Following the breakfast meeting with the Bulletin, the President receives Ambassador Olivier Lange of France who presented his letter of credence as the new French envoy to this country.

The President, in his remarks, expresses gratification over the increasing economic, commercial and cultural relations between the Philippines and France.

Responding to the remarks of Ambassador Lange, the President states he had dispatched an economic mission to Paris to continue the dialogue with the French economic mission which recently visited Manila.

This dialogue, he says, was “with a view of opening avenues already explored and laying the foundations of a mutually beneficial trade relations between France and the Philippines.”

He assures the President that “I shall completely devote myself to the promotion of that development in order to insure the success of the high mission kindly entrusted to me by General de Gaulle.”

Ambassador Lange succeeds Ambassadors Ghislain Clauzel as head of the French diplomatic mission to this country. Ambassador Clauzel had been called back to the home office for reassignment after completing his tour of duty here.

Right after the presentation rites, the President meets for a three-hour long conference the Foreign Policy Council to assess the shooting war in the Middle East.

During the conference, the President and the Council agrees to support all efforts of the United Nations and other nations concerned with peacekeeping to effect a ceasefire and bring the conflict to a peaceful settlement.

After the conference which started at 11 a.m. and ended at 2 p.m. the following statement is issued:

“The Philippines views with grave concern the outbreak of hostilities in the Middle East, and vigorously supports the United Nations, and other agencies concerned with the maintenance of international peace and security in working for a ceasefire.

“The Philippines likewise joins other nations in appealing for a cessation of hostilities and the settlement of the differences of the contending parties through peaceful means.

“The Philippines also endorses the proposal of Pope Paul VI to declare Jerusalem an open city in order to protect places in the Holy City sacred to all religions.

June 7.—PRESIDENT Marcos issues a memorandum further clarifying a point in the previous memorandum which required stricter implementation of the provision of law which bars persons of questionable character from holding passports.

The present memorandum specifies that only persons who have been convicted of crimes, or who have dubious reputations, or are facing criminal charges in court may be denied passports.

In this connection, he directs the National Bureau of Investigation, the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency and the foreign office to coordinate in pinning down such persons so that they will not be able to secure passports. At the same time, the President asks the foreign office to be more strict in issuing passports, by adhering closely to the rules.

Clarifying points in Paragraph 4 of the May 31 memorandum, is the portion of the present memorandum that follows:

“4. Effective immediately NBI clearance for passport applicants shall be required when, in the judgment and discretion of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, such clearance is necessary to prevent, or minimize the number of citizens with pending criminal cases, or who have been convicted by the courts, or those of questionable reputation, from being issued passports. For this purpose the NICA and the NBI are hereby directed to furnish immediately the Secretary of Foreign Affairs with the names and data of all such persons and to update such information periodically.”

The President cites this provision in the law which deny passports to persons with pending criminal cases, those who have been convicted by the courts, and those of questionable reputation.”

At the same time, the President orders the release of an additional P1 million for the improvement of the facilities and services of the Philippine General Hospital.

In complementary move to upgrade government health services, the President also directs Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia to look into means of improving the facilities of the North General Hospital and the National Mental Hospital. With respect to the latter, the President instructs Secretary Garcia to pursue plans to disperse the patients and provide them with better living conditions.

He specifies that the P1 million will be used for purchase of medicine, improvement of the food of the patients, and improvement of the building and other faculties of the hospital, especially those at the emergency wards.

The President likewise issues a memorandum order to Forestry Director Antonio Quejado to “enjoin all limber concessionaires to construct their logging roads in accordance with a master plan concerning all timber concessions with barrios and towns.”

Loggers who apply for lumber license are required to “donate to the government” whaler permanent improvements they make in the concession area, including roads.

It is to utilize the roads constructed by the logger that the President asks that planning of road built by the loggers on one hand and the bureaus of forestry and of public highways on the other should be coordinated.

President Marco this day meets the Cabinet after conferring with the publisher and editorial staff of the Manila Times and receiving several callers at his study.

He sits down promptly at 8 a.m. for breakfast with the Times staff, led by Joaquin P. Roces and Jose Luna Castro, publisher and editor, respectively.

The breakfast conference is one in a series of informal meetings with new papers. The President had similar conferences with the staffs of the Manila Chronicle, Monday, and the Manila Daily Bulletin, Tuesday.

At 9:20 a.m. the President receives Ambassador Takeshi Yasukawa of Japan and talk with the envoy for about ten minutes.

At 10:30 a.m., the President meets his Cabinet at the Council of State Room.

He meets the members of his cabinet to perfect preparations for meeting any sudden emergency, as well as the possible adverse effects of the Middle East hostilities on the prices of prime commodities and other essential supplies, including food imports, fuel and rice.

The President, however, stresses that there is no reason for alarm, particularly as it relates to the Middle East crisis.

All the same, he declares, it is timely to prepare for any emergency, including the updating and upgrading of the capabilities of the Civil Defense Administration.

From the two-hour cabinet meeting, these merges:

1. The creation of a special committee to take charge of the efficient implementation of any plans drawn up for coping with any emergency, and to assist the CDA in its function.
2. Secretary of Commerce Marcelo Balatbat was instructed to meet with private firms to take stock of the local supply of goods, especially imported prime commodities. He will also discuss guarantees with the measures to keep prices at normal levels.
3. The country has nothing to fear about an oil shortage because, according to Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, there are enough stocks available from sources other than the Middle East.
4. Rice stocks are adequate to meet immediate needs and that the rice supply from abroad is assured of reaching the country according to the contracts signed.

The committee formed by the President to assist the CDA will be composed of the secretaries of national defense, health, education, and labor, the social welfare administrator, and a representative of the Philippine National Red Cross.

The special committee created by the President is instructed to assure the efficient implementation of all plans made to meet every possible emergency, and to provide assistance to the Civil Defense Administration in carrying out its functions.

The President also asks every cabinet member to study the said plans and recommend any additional ideas for the improvement of the measures taken in connection with any emergency.

In the afternoon, the President works on state papers Among the decisions and order he issued are:

1. Identical orders to Commissioner Baltazar Aquino of Public Highways and Director Antonio Quejado of the bureau of Forestry to integrate the road-building being undertaken by logging concessionaires into the matter plan for the nation's road network.

2. An order to the Philippine National Railways to terminate all train trips to Bicol at the town of Camalig, Albay, until the improvement of dangerous portion of the railway near Daraga. where six persons died in a train accident recently, is completed.

June 8.—PRESIDENT Marcos spends the day following up reports on the flash floods which hit the Greater Manila area and other parts of Luzon and going over state papers.

He confers with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas chairman of the Presidential Committee on Relief and Rehabilitation, on measures to extend prompt assistance to flood victims.

The President also follows up reports coming through the telephone and by telegram on the extent of the damage and of the progress of relief and rescue operations.

In the afternoon, the President confers with Acting Director Alejandro Deleña of Public Works on long and short range flood control programs for the Greater Manila area and Central Luzon. He orders that steps be taken to speed implementation of these projects.

In the evening, the President addresses the 14th National Convention of Manufacturers and Producers sponsored by the Philippine Chamber of Industries.

In his speech, the President allays fears of any shortage in rice and fuel as a result of the outbreak of hostilities in the Middle East.

He declares that the outbreak of hostilities in the Middle East would not affect the fuel supply of the country since the sources of the crude oil were far from the scene of battle.

“According to the reports submitted to me by the Secretary of Finance the sources of crude oil of our four refineries in the Philippines indicate that they are not going to be affected by the present crisis in the Middle East,” he states.

On the rice supply, the President points out that the Philippines had received assurances that the suppliers of rice would deliver the cereal committed by them.

He says some 70,000 tons of the rice to be imported was coming from Egypt and has been delivered.

“But there is an assurance from the Egyptian government of delivery,” he states.

“We have also entered into other contracts with other sources to cover this same amount, as a matter of precaution,” he bares.

In his address, the President also state:

- 1 That the immediate goal of the development program was to increase agricultural productivity and income, but the ultimate goal was a balanced agro-industrial economy.

2. That the emphasis on agricultural development at this stage was intended to rectify earlier neglect of food production and expanding exports.

3. That the administration has continued efforts to establish new markets for Philippine exports as it strived to broaden the domestic market for locally manufactured products.

4. That the disturbing problems of high prices will remain unsolved until the country can reach tolerable levels of food production.

5. That a successful program of agricultural productivity especially in food production will close the widening gap between rates of population growth and food production.

June 9.—THE President continues to assess the nation's capabilities for meeting national emergencies as he meet members of the military council, who briefed him on the plans of the Department of National Defense.

Before attending the military briefing, the President meet officials concerned with public works projects to discuss flood control and drainage matters, to assess immediate requirements.

The President, earlier in the morning, confer with officials of the Federation of Filipino Chinese Chamber of Commerce to discuss the need for keeping the prices of prime commodities stable.

The rest of his day is crammed with appointments, visitors, and the usual paper work.

The FFCCC officials led by Ralph Nubia, the federation president, during their call on the President, pledges full support to the government's efforts to keep Mindanao rice from flowing outside the country, and to help keep rice and other commodity prices down, as well as stabilize the supply of cereal.

At 10:30 a.m. in., the President motors to the infrastructure Operations Center at Camp Aguinaldo where he is briefed on the progress of public works constructions all over the country, jointly being undertaken by the Armed Forces and the Department of Public Works.

Later, still at Camp Aguinaldo, the President is again briefed, this time, on the nation's defense posture and other plans for coping with emergencies.

The new studies of present plans to cope with national emergencies are ordered by the President in the belief that the swift pace and sudden changes developments require the government to be prepared at all times.

The defense department has ready plans for all emergencies but the President asks that these be reassessed, and constantly adjusted to the exigencies of changing situations here and abroad.

Back at Malacañang, the President presides at ceremonies conferring the Order of Kalantiao, first class, on Justice Roberto Regala, who retired from the Supreme Court June 7.

In the evening, the President motors to the National Press Club building on Magallanes drive to participate at the NPC's "Meet the Press" television program as special guest.

June 10.—MOVING further to solve the problem of floods in Manila and environs, President Marcos orders the bureau of public works to focus on restoring the esteros as drainage outlets, including clearing them of squatters.

He instructs the public works bureau to survey immediately the esteros of Manila, determine their boundaries, clear their banks of squatters and set up a plan for dredging these waterways.

The President notes that Manila's esteros remain today as still the main outlets of floodwaters in the city, as well as other accumulations of water in. the city's streets and gutters.

In addition, the President brings to the public works official's notice the fact that portions of the Pasig river, including areas along the Escolta have been reclaimed for commercial or other uses. He orders that this should be stopped.

He points out that rather than construct the Pasig river, it should be cleared of debris and otherwise improved to permit the free flow of river water, particularly during the rainy season.

The dredging of Manila's esteros is considered of high priority by the President, for he has been informed by engineers that this dredging is necessary if flood control pumps, which, the city government has ordered through reparations, can be used effectively to relieve Manila of its Hash floods.

The President communicates this aspect of the problem to Mayor Antonio J. Villegas, who had applied for 28 flood control pumps through reparations.

He also informs Mayor Villegas that the city government's request for 100 garbage trucks to be procured through reparations has been favorably endorsed to the reparations commission.

In the morning, the President receives Don Huth, bureau manager of Associated Press, who is leaving for a three-month vacation in the U.S.

Following the call, the President motors to the Philippine National Bank social hall, to address the convention of the Federation International de Abogadas (FIDA), a locally based organization of women lawyers which count an international membership.

In his address, the President exhorts the members of the FIDA to take up the cause of justice at all times and to practice their profession with consistent competence and idealism.

He declares that while it is the women's duty to guide the spiritual development of the young, women who are also lawyers have other duties to do beyond the traditional women's role.

"The profession of law in our time has become disposable," he states. "The idealism of our profession has given way to opportunism."

He points to the cynical public view of lawyers to justify the observation.

Exhorting the women lawyers to reverse this view, he says that "it is justice that should interest you and not money; justice should rule your professional conduct and not factional interest or political alliances and it is justice that should guide you and not your personal ambition.

"It is time," he states, "that we recover for our profession the highest type of idealism. The most direct way is by making your services available at all times to everyone, without charge if necessary."

The President notes that the Filipino women of today are different from those of yesterday, which he interpreted as indicative of change toward progress. But he also asks Filipino women to remain true to accepted values which he said should be retained at all cost.

He concludes stressing that it is a women's duty to check the "violent impulses (if the young." She should serve as a restraining force, the President states, "in the prevailing climate of violence."

In the afternoon, the President motors to Camp Bonifacio where he addresses the graduates of the chief of police training course sponsored by the police commission.

In his address, the President states that the course is a modest beginning in the combined efforts of the PolCom, NBI, the PC and other agencies to upgrade the local police forces, to make them measure up to the task of improving police services throughout the country.

The beginning, he declares, will lead to greater achievements and eventually the restoration of public confidence in the law enforcement agencies of the country.

He points out that the public cynicism in this area maybe compared to the prevalent doubts about the ability of the government to successfully wage its drive against smuggling, graft and corruption in the government, particularly in the bureaus of internal revenue and customs. Results however in the past year have shown that the campaign had been substantially successful.

The President observes that the performance of chiefs of police are crucial to the peace and order campaign, for it is they who can provide substantial support to the PC, which, he says, cannot do all the work despite the fact that he had already boosted its strength from 17,000 to 20,000 in a year-and-a-half.

He appeals to the police chiefs to begin at once the work of improving the local police forces, by leading the way, and showing by performance that the police officers of the country can be led toward better efficiency, and infused with honesty a high sense of integrity.

Back at the Palace, the President receives some 50 Muslim leaders from Tawi-Tawi, who along with leaders of other cultural minority groups, have been invited to attend the main Independence Day celebration in Manila Monday.

He informs the Muslim leaders that he has invited them and the leaders or representatives of other cultural minorities in the islands, in recognition of the fact that Filipinos are one and the same despite different faiths, beliefs, and backgrounds.

He stresses that "your presence here will demonstrate to all the world that the Filipinos are indivisibly united."

The President intimates to the group that he hoped to invite more and more of Filipino cultural minorities to the Independence Day rites in Manila, "year after year."

He states that the visits here of members of the nations' cultural minorities are to be desired, for one, because these will enable other Filipinos to become familiar with them and to learn to understand them.

President's Week in Review: June 11-17, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

June 11.—TO FORESTALL the reported resurgence of carnapping activities, President Marcos revives the special anti-carnapping teams under Col. Jose Lukban, commissioner of the Police Commission.

The special anti-carnapping team was disbanded by the President two months ago when it appeared then that carnapping was already under control.

Col. Lukban will coordinate all anti-carnapping activities, including those of local police agencies.

At the same time, the President authorizes the acceptance by Chairman Crispino de Castro of the Police Commission of a British Government study grant.

The British government has invited De Castro to visit the United Kingdom to study the British Police system. The grant covers studies and observations of the administration and operations of Scotland Yard, the Metropolitan police force of London, the police forces outside London and the training of police officers.

President Marcos spends most of his time closeted in the seclusion of his private study working on state papers and his speech at the 69th Independence Day anniversary rites at the Luneta the next day.

He leaves the Palace only late in the afternoon to address the 21st annual assembly of the Civic Assembly of Women of the Philippines at the Malacañang Park.

He is accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who was special guest at the presentation of CAWP presidential merit medal awards.

During the affair, the CAWP also present awards to some leaders, who have distinguished themselves in their respective fields of endeavor.

Among those who received the presidential merit medals are Judge Amado del Rosario and Commissioner Nieves Baens del Rosario of the Workmen's Compensation Commission for public service; former Ambassador Trinidad F. Legarda for civic leadership, Dr. Jesus Perpiñan for education, Col. Laureano Cariño for cultural advancement, Felicísimo B. Serrano for science and research; the Rural Improvement Club for community development and the Cursillo Movement for moral and spiritual uplift.

In his speech, the President lauds Filipino women for their achievements in gaining recognition and equality, but counseled against their neglecting their primary duty as home-makers.

He declares: "While women assert their equality, if not supremacy, perhaps they should not forget their primary role as a home-makers."

"Of what use is our technological knowledge if, through the de-womanization of women, we begin to raise children impersonally to the extent that they grow up ignorant of the human and social values that make for progressive nation?" the President asks.

He observes that in some countries, children are manipulated to adulthood. Deprived of the affection of parents, he states, these children recognize only their duties to the state that, in turn, devours them.

"Indeed, the process of dehumanization begins when equal status of women turn them into some sort of weaker, second-class men," he adds.

He expresses gratification over resolutions passed by the assembly where they had decided to participate in the peace and order drive of the government, the rice propagation campaign and in community development.

He recalls he had appealed to all the churches and all the denominations to participate in these campaigns and noted favorable response to his appeal.

In the morning, the President goes over the list of prisoners recommended by the board of pardons and parole for executive clemency. In the process, he extends executive clemency to a total of 154 prisoners, of which four are granted special absolute pardon, 31 are granted absolute pardon, five are granted conditional pardons and 35 are granted conditional pardons with parole conditions. The 79 others are extended commutations of sentence.

Other problems that occupied the President's attention are:

1. The status of Filipino Muslim scholars in Cairo, Egypt.

The President instruct the Department of Foreign Affairs to take steps to ensure the safety of the students.

2. A request of Mayor Antonio J. Villegas of Manila for support to his proposition to give Manila residents free NAWASA water. He refers the matter to Antonio Menor, General Manager of the National Waterworks.

3. A proposal of Mr. Goethals and Verkor, S. A., to establish factories that would manufacture parcel boards out of wood and forestry wastes. He refers the matter to the Presidential Economic Staff for feasibility study.

Meanwhile, President Marcos in a message issued on the eve of the 69th anniversary of Philippine Independence, calls upon the Filipinos to renew their commitment to uphold and preserve their dignity and freedom.

The Chief Executive states that June 12 is commemorated as the first united action of the Filipino people to achieve "their common aspiration for dignity and freedom." But he adds the Filipinos must also renew their commitment to this achievement.

"For dignity and freedom entail the obligation to uphold and preserve them through the vicissitudes of history," he says.

June 12.—CONCERNED over the subhuman conditions obtaining at the national penitentiary. President Marcos directs the prison director to submit to him at least of all prisoners 65 years of old or over for possible parole or pardon to ease the congestion.

The Chief Executive, in another directive, instructs Catalino Macaraig, officer-in-charge of the bureau of prisons, to submit to him a plan on how the bureau can supply railroad ties to the Philippine National Railways.

One remedial measure being considered is the granting of parole or conditional pardons to deserving prisoners, for this reason, the President asks the bureau of prisons, and the board on pardons and parole to submit within two weeks names of all prisoners 65 years old or over who may qualify for conditional pardons.

In the second directive, the President instructs Macaraig to confer immediately with Chairman Salvador Villa and General Manager Nicanor Jimenez of the PNR on the matter, and to submit a plan for such a project in two weeks.

In the morning, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, leads the nation this day in commemorating the 69th Independence Day anniversary.

The First Couple, accompanied by their children, motors for the Luneta at 6:45 a.m. for the flag-raising rites, which took place at seven a. m.

Receiving military honors, the President, assisted by armed forces cadet raises the national colors. At the same time, sirens wails from ships anchored at Manila Bay.

With the flag-raising rites over, the President moves on to the Rizal monument, where he laid a wreath of flowers. The marine guard sounds taps as the President, members of his family and other ranking officials stood in silent prayer.

Following the Luneta rites, the First Family views the improvements that are being made on the Luneta. They are accompanied by Teodoro F. Valencia.

The First Family visits the Chinese Garden, which has stirred up a pocket controversy.

Back at Malacañang at 9 a.m., the President and the First Lady briefly relaxes with their children, obviously buoyed by the holiday mood.

In the afternoon at 2:20, the First Family again headed for the Luneta where the President addresses the nation at the Quirino Grandstand.

On arrival, the President is accorded full military honors by a company of the Presidential Guard Battalion. He is soundly applauded as he marched briskly to troop the line.

After a two-hour long military and civic parade, the President addresses the crowd numbering some half-a-million who had converge at the Luneta as early as 12 o'clock noon.

The crowd surges forward close to the grandstand as the President started to speak, and sensing their eagerness to take a fuller view of the President and the other dignitaries and guests at the grandstand, he invites them to move closer.

In his address, the President sounds a call to the nation for rededication to the ideals which founded the First Republic of the Philippines, even as he stressed the realities of trial and challenge facing the nation today.

He also reaffirms the democratic way of life as the best way forward for the nation, not only from the historical choice long ago made, but from the strength of the commitment to freedom of the Filipinos of this generation.

The President takes cognizance of the fact that "in a time of trial and challenge," some segments of the nation have questioned the "effectiveness of these sentiments, ideals, and institutions" that have so long united the Filipinos.

He says that these advocates of reexamination may have been driven to this position by the ordeals of the past two decades of hardship and setbacks.

Conceding the difficulties of the democratic approach to national problems, the President states that he would still stand up for democratic means as against the alternative of a regimented society.

The totalitarian alternative, he declares, exacts a price in loss of human values for national development.

"Human beings are functionalize: there is no nation, as we know it— but a state extracting for its power and glory the servitude of men," he adds

Rejecting this alternative, he declares: "I am not willing to pay that price, even if by some quirk of fate, it should be your mandate."

Recalling the major aims of the movement toward an independent Filipino government, which culminated in the proclamation of the First Republic, the President restate these goals as:

1. To grant all Filipinos personal security and the greatest number of liberties:
2. To give Filipinos maximum satisfaction of economic wants; and
3. To grant them the best possible education.

These are still the goals to which later-day Filipino leaders respond, he said, but the commitment of the First Republic to the “pursuit of the democratic path” is now being questioned by certain elements in Philippine society.

The alternative, he says, advocated more or less by certain sectors, is to subscribe to the “mathematical terms” of totalitarian development, or to bow to regimentation under a “strong man.”

“Is this fit alternative for Filipinos?” he asks.

The historical choice, he points out, was made long ago, and to deny it is to “blind ourselves to history.”

The generation who fought in World War II, the President says, was not the first to choose freedom as a way of life. Generations of Filipinos in an earlier time also fought and died for freedom through three centuries of colonialism.

Stating that leadership for development is concerned mainly with the “rational allocation of scarce resources,” the President underscores the need to adopt a system of priorities.

Relating this policy to present efforts, the President cites as example the implementation of infrastructure projects.

Which area or province may first be served? he asks. Under a system of priority, the first recipients of such benefits are made clear, he states.

Despite these hard choices, he says, it would be “a fatal mistake” if all social conflicts are eliminated in a democracy. For then, he explains, democracy ceases to be dynamic, adding that the interplay of social forces leads to general progress when well managed.

What is unfortunate in this country, he states is the existence of “elitist groups,” which do not recognize the right of other factions to exist.

These groups, he says, do not seek to propose, but only to impose their will. They are active, he said, as opponents of land reform, as detractors of policy, as advocates of pompous formulas, and as monopolists of good, faith, seen this quality only in themselves and not in those they oppose.

The President underlines one other mark of elitist thinking, that which approaches all forms of social discontent with undue arm. This thinking, he says, presupposes that the aim of a modern society is not continuing progress by the “nirvana of contentment.”

He points out that “societies have become backward because they became contented.” The issue, he emphasizes, is not social unrest in itself but in how it is expressed.

In this connection, he explain that the social problem in Central Luzon is disturbing because it takes a subversive form, but it is irresponsible, he cautions, to view this as proof that Philippine society is not variable.

There is no developing society anywhere, he observes, does not have subversive elements. Human nature makes some men choose violence to express discontent, he added.

Filipino experience in freedom, the President notes, has given the nation important milestones in mobility. This passage forward had been marked by many monuments, from Mactan to Bataan and Corregidor.

In recent months, he declares, there have been important gains made against government bankruptcy, smuggling, low revenues, the stagnant state of public works effort, and lack of schools, all of which were deeply felt before and viewed with defeatism. Today, he says, the outlook has changed. The lesson of Philippine history, he stresses, is not that of "successive defeats and even death but of the resurrection of the dream and aspiration." He adds that freedom is not one man's creation but the "fruit of oneness and unity."

The people together, he says, must resolve and sustain the task of nation-building, with energy, courage and integrity. Thus, he continues, there must be an enlightened citizenry. Such a citizenry, and makes the work of development easier.

Paramount to the lessons of Filipino heritage, he declares, is the "lesson of unity." Some new democracies find it harder to survive, he says, because of divisive forces, or special interest, and the lack of the administrative requirements of a democratic society.

The Philippine offers contrast, by being a true government for, by and of the people, the President states. He stresses, "It would be a shame indeed, if, in spite of our advantages, we abandon our commitment to democracy in a time of trial and challenge."

The people must view this time of trial and challenge he declares as "the burden of national heritage." The continuing commitment to their heritage, he says, is "our bond with history," for it unites the present with the past, as it is the idea that will shape our future"

The President states that "our obligation is necessarily greater" but it had always been so before, and none had faltered.

"We are a privileged generation," he declares, "for we are being tried and challenged to make this nation better than how we found it."

He asks the people, finally, to be true to themselves by doing their duty.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady tenders a reception at Malacañang.

The First Couple had cancelled the traditional state dinner in deference to the suffering brought by the recent floods which hit Manila and environs to a large number of people.

June 13.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders a sweeping change in the utilization of personnel in the bureau of posts, after noting that many of the employees have been ineffectively or improperly utilized.

The President directs Postmaster General Enrico Palomar to reassign all casual employees now working outside of the bureau of posts, preferably in the postal section where service breakdown have resulted in recurrent mail jams.

He orders the changes after the Budget Commission submitted the report of its management survey team, which assessed the problems of the postal service.

The report specifically notes the misuse of casual personnel, many of whom were not employed in the postal service but assigned to other offices. The report further notes that whereas the essential tasks required manual work and night duty, many of the casuals employed were women and that furthermore they were assigned to other offices not directly handling mail matters.

He orders that henceforth all appointments of employees in the posts bureau be made in accordance with civil service rules and regulations. This extends to casual employees which must meet I.Q. requirement and other qualifications adopted by the civil service commission.

He adds that that if necessary, the postmaster general should reorganize the entire sections dealing with postal matters, to effect maximum efficiency. He stresses, however, that this should be done according to existing laws and regulations.

In the morning, the President meet Nacionalista leaders in Congress to assess the progress of the special session in the consideration of the certified bills.

At the breakfast meeting, the President and Nacionalista leaders agrees on exerting every effort to push through vital bills to the special session of Congress.

Among the high priority measures are the appropriations bill, the decentralization bill, the bill setting the government policy on the use of voters registry for the next elections, the bill amending the customs and revenue code, the investment incentives bill and the reorganization, bill.

During the meeting, the President also certifies three additional bills, namely:

1. A bill setting aside P40 to pay for the death and disability benefits.
2. A bill creating the Price Stabilization Administration and dissolving the National Marketing Corporation; and
3. A bill requiring the payment of P500 by those travelling abroad, as well as the payment of the same amount in registering luxury motor cars.

This bill provides that the amount paid be refundable in the form of income tax.

The President and the NP senators also agrees to work for the passage of the P50 million outlay proposed for the implementation of the Wage and Position Classification Office (WAPCO) plan increasing salaries in the government service.

At the same time, the President asks Congress to include in the public work bill certified to the special session a P175 million outlay for flood control projects, which will be spent in improving drainage facilities in Manila.

Also added to the public works bill is an appropriation of P100 million for the construction of a new international airport to serve Manila.

The President seeks the inclusion of the appropriation for flood control projects in Manila in the wake of the costly floods that damaged property and caused the loss of lives in Manila and the Suburbs during the recent heavy rains.

The P175 million earmarked for flood control projects in Manila will be immediately used for such constructions as a river wall, bigger conduits, and for dredging Manila's esteros which remain today the primary outlet for floodwaters in the Greater Manila area. As proposed, the outlay may be raised through the flotation of long-term bonds.

Among the projects envisioned to control floods in the Manila area are:

1. The dredging and widening of the city's esteros.
2. The construction of about 46 kilometers of drainage mains, implementation of which has been delayed precisely because of lack of funds.
3. The erection of retaining walls along the Pasig river, some 14 Kilometers long, to shore up the swollen river during heavy rains.
4. The laying out of 35 units of 42-inch drainage pipes, capable of pumping water from low areas at the rate of 10 cubic meters per second.
5. Construction of water control gates at the mouth of esteros to prevent overflow from the Pasig River, which adds to the inundation of low areas in the city.

The Chief Executive also submits to the Commission on Appointments the nominations of 134 positions in the judiciary and to 57 positions in the diplomatic services.

After the conference, the President inducts into office the new officers of the Women Lawyers Association, led by Clarita Tankiang Sanchez.

June 14.—PRESIDENT Marcos meets his cabinet and in a two-hour long conference threshed out various urgent state matters. He likewise takes the opportunity to reiterate his policy restricting travel abroad of government officials, and asked strict compliance.

The ban on travel was first ordered by the President when he emphasized a fiscal policy of austerity, at the time when the government he took over was virtually bankrupt.

The President advise against travel abroad of officials when there were urgent national problems to cope with at home.

Exceptions to the rule, according to the President, are those trips required by international conferences, to which the Philippines is committed, and travel grants given by foreign nations for special studies in connections with government work.

During the meeting, the President also orders a management audit of all government corporations which have failed or deteriorated in term: of service, and therefore need to be revitalized.

The Budget Commission has been tapped by the President to carry out the task.

The audit is also part of the government program to upgrade services and improve the efficiency of government agencies and instrumentalities. The program is launched from the start of the present administration, in recognition of the longstanding complaints of the public against the deteriorating services of government agencies and firms.

In the morning, the President motors to Fort Bonifacio to pay homage to the fallen soldiers of the USAFIP-NL guerrilla unit, in connection with the commemoration of the battle of Bessang Pass 22 years ago today. The battle resulted in the decisive defeat of the enemy, and marked the liberation of Northern Luzon.

The President, who fought in the battle under the unit, is joined by many of his comrades at the Libingan Ng Mga Bayani at Fort Bonifacio, where he laid a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

In offering the wreath, the President states that it was offered not only to his fallen comrades, but also to "each and everyone of those who are here, along now, in the absence of husband, son, father or friend."

The President stays in the Libingan for about 15 minutes, then motors back to Malacañang.

Back in Malacañang, the President proceeds straight to the Communications Command Center, where he tested the facilities, by making calls to various parts of the country. The center is set up so that the President could make spot checks on the progress of various development and public works projects.

After the dry run, the President goes back to his study where he received a group of South Vietnamese officials led by Minister of Justice Tran Minh Tiet.

Following this meeting, the President buckles down to work on state matters. Among the matters he acted on are:

1. The creation of a committee to make formal proposals to possible sources of financing for the coconut research and development center, which will be set up here along the lines of the International Rice Research Institute.
2. The copra imports of Sweden, on which he orders the Presidential Economic Staff to immediately correct of the inequity in prices, with Swedish importers paying two dollars more per metric ton than other European importers.
3. The cementing of Taft Avenue, about which he orders Highways-Commissioner Baltazar Aquino to assist the Manila authorities in speeding up completion of the final portion of the avenue in Manila, preferably before the opening of schools next month.
4. On the drive against vice, he directs Col Tomas Karingal, chief of police of Quezon City, to immediately close all places of vice, including the bookie operations in the La Loma and Balintawak districts.

The President has received numerous complaints from residents in the area about these immoral establishments.

The President also orders Col. Mariano Tumaliuan, Pasay City police chief, to report on what has been done to prevent prison riots, such as the one which recently occurred at the city jail.

June 15.—DUE to mounting responsibility as a result of accelerated and enlarged government programs, President Marcos tells cabinet members to relinquish their posts as directors of board of government firms.

The President issues the directive to give cabinet officials opportunity to devote full time service to their more important functions.

In the case of cabinet members who hold directorship in government corporations by provision of law, the President advises them to begin delegating certain powers to their undersecretaries so that important official matters may be given prompt and full attention.

Among the department secretaries who hold ex officio positions by provision of the law are the Secretary of Education who is also chairman of the board of all government colleges and universities, among others; the Secretary of Commerce, who holds key positions in various government agencies closely allied to department functions; and a few other cabinet members.

At the same time, the President instructs the Department of Justice to make a further study of the plan to grant pardons to convicts in the national penitentiary who are 65 years old or older.

In his directive to Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee of justice, the President asks that the plan be studied for immediate implementation as government policy.

The plan is hatched in the face of the growing congestion at Muntinlupa Prison. Prisoners aging 65 and older compose one fourth of the prison population. It is maintained that if these oldsters are pardoned, the congestion will be substantially eased.

The study will decide whether paroles or conditional pardons will be granted to all prisoners 65 years of age or older, or only to those of this age group deemed deserving. One view is that convicts of this age group are old to be further considered as a police problem.

In a related move, the President instructs Acting Director of Prisons Catalino Macaraig, Jr. to effect at once the segregation of prisoners at Muntinlupa. The order specifies that hardened criminals be separated from inmates who are not considered professional criminals.

It is pointed out that convicts with no propensity for criminal careers are often corrupted by hardened inmates who initiate them into a life of crime.

The Chief Executive also directs Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release P10,000 as aid to the victims of the recent floods in Davao del Sur.

The President immediately orders the financial assistance in the wake of reports that some 40 persons were killed and many more still missing, after 16 barrios of Digos, the capital of Davao del Sur flooded last Tuesday, June 13.

Reports reaching the President state that the sitio Tumayan, among other communities at the foot of Mount Apo, suffered severe losses in life, property and work animals.

In the morning, the President starts his working day with a conference on the status of current investigations being undertaken by the presidential investigative committee led by Dr. Gaudencio Garcia, chairman of the group. He assesses with Dr. Garcia the progress of the investigations.

One of the first groups of callers to see the President is that from Negros Occidental headed by Rep. Armando Gustilo. The group is composed of local officials, who came for the signing of H.B. No. 460, by the President. The law converts the town of Cadiz into a city.

United States Ambassador William McCormick Blair, Jr. calls on the President, along with Major Theodore Adams of the Mobility Equipment Command of the U.S. Army, Pershing G. Rolfe and Major Salvatore Nunziata of JUSMAG (Joint United States Military Advisory Group). They brief the President on the recently arrived engineering equipment, which the U.S. had promised to deliver to the five AFP engineering battalions engaged in civic action work.

Next to see the President is Angel Sangalang, district land officer of Baguio City, who reported on the results of his investigation of the squatter problem in the Pines City.

Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan also reports on Central Luzon peace and order conditions, and on the reassignment of military units in the area.

June 16.—PRESIDENT Marcos instructs Commissioner Abelardo Subido of Civil Service to answer immediately the formal complaint lodged against him by one Faustino Tugade.

Subido is asked to submit with explanation “such written evidence as he may have in “support of your side of the case”

Commissioner Subido was charged on seven counts, the most serious of which are 1) illegal, unauthorized and involuntary exaction of money from subordinate officials and employees ostensibly to go into a so called “welfare” fund; 2) violation of the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act 3) anomalous irregular and illegal appointments; and 4) violation of the Civil Service Law, Rules and Regulations.

The complainant also charged Subido before the Rizal Court of First Instance for violation of the Anti-Graft Law.

In the morning, the President starts his working day with a breakfast conference with the editorial staff of the Philippines Herald, headed by publisher Sebastian Ugarte and editor Manuel Abad Gaerlan.

The meeting with the newsmen lasts from 8 to 10:20 a.m., during which the President exchanges views with them on current national, and international issues. The meeting is the latest in a series of informal conference with members of the press.

Immediately after the breakfast conference, the President begins working on official papers in his study. In the course of his work he:

1. Endorses the trade agreement between the Philippines and the Benelux countries to the Senate for ratification.

The Benelux countries, which has an economic union, are Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. They are also members of the European Economic Community.

Under the trade agreement, the Philippines and the Benelux Economic Union will accord "most-favored-nation" treatment to each other's products. This applies to customs duties, internal duties and other changes.

In his endorsement, the President points out that the agreement hews closely to the desire of the country "to promote and expand" the Philippines' foreign markets."

2. Proclaims the period of the anti-tuberculosis society fund drive; proclaims the same for the Boys Scouts of the Philippines, sets aside Saturday, June 17, as Blood Donor's Day, and authorizes June 15 to Dec. 31, as the fund campaign period for the Quezon Memorial Circle Development and Beautification Committee.

In proclaiming Blood Donor's Day, the President declares it was only proper to honor blood donors throughout the country who give of themselves "in order that others may live."

On the BSP (Boys Scouts of the Philippines) fund drive, the President stresses that the boy scout movement deserves the support of the public not only to carry out its operations effectively, but also to intensify its nationwide training and recruiting program, as well as to meet its obligations as a member of the Boy Scouts World Bureau.

In authorizing the fund drive for the Quezon Memorial Circle, the President points out that the project aims to perpetuate the memory of a great leader who devoted his life to the attainment of Philippine Independence and the welfare of his people. He calls on the public to assist in the drive by giving generously to the project fund.

3. Creates the Philippine panel to lay the basis for the renegotiation of the Laurel-Langley Agreement which will expire in 1974.

The panel will particularly focus on filling the vacuum when the preferential tariff rates on Philippine exports to the United States are voided with the Expiration of the Laurel-Langley agreement.

Named to the panel are: Undersecretary of Industry Cesar Virata, who will act as chairman; and the Tariff Commissioner Montano Tejam, Foreign Affairs Officer Wilfredo Vega, Antonio Ayala of the Central Bank, and Efren I. Plana of the Foreign Affairs Department.

June 17.—PRESIDENT Marcos confers the Presidential Merit Medal on two men for saving the lives of 39 men, women and children at the height of the flood on the night of June 8 in Roxas District, Quezon City.

Those awarded in ceremonies at the Palace ceremonial hall are Second Class Seaman Melecio Barnarte of the Philippine Navy and Dominador Bolima.

The two are credited with having saved 39 people from certain drowning in the floodwaters that engulfed a portion of Roxas District one of the hardest hit localities in the Greater Manila area. They are cited for their “fortitude, generosity of spirit and humility, which are the common virtues of heroes.”

In the morning, the President plays a round of golf with a group of officers of the USAFIP–NL, the guerilla unit which bore the brunt of the battle of Bessang Pass.

The President leaves the game at 9:30 a.m. to begin receiving filers at Malacañang. But he rejoins the group, and a large crowd of USAFIP–NL veterans at lunch, staying to watch a four-hour program that highlighted the reunion.

The reunion is held in commemoration of the decisive battle of Bessang Pass.

In the course of the day, the President as usual finds time to buckle down to his paperwork in his study. Among other matters acted upon, he:

1. Orders a legal Study of the validity of the Jai-Alai operations in Cebu City.
2. Directs the Philippine Navy to transport stranded Filipino workers in Tawau, Sabah. The workers, numbering 16, from Pangasinan, were recruited as laborers in Sabah, but were rejected on arrival at their destination.

He further directs the Department of Labor to inquire into the circumstances of the case.

3. Orders a study of the effects of installing an additional ice plant and cold storage facilities in Rajah Buayan City (Cotabato), in connection with House Bill 4472, which grants a franchise for these facilities to an operator there. He asks the Public Service Commission to ascertain whether this new plant will not offer ruinous competition, and the Bureau of Fisheries to report on whether the new plant is necessary.

4. Instructs the Presidential Economic Staff, the Legislative-Executive Tax Commission and the Secretary of Finance to comment and submit recommendations on the bill levying a special import tax and excise tax on the sale for foreign exchange.

5. Certifies the Police Retirement bill to the special session of Congress.

6. Orders the bureau of mines to submit a complete list, including necessary information, of mining concessions already granted throughout the country.

7. Directs the director of the bureau of forestry to submit a list of forest concessions granted, concessions cancelled, and applications for concessions pending.

8. Asks the executive secretary to apprise him of what other remedial measures the office of the President can provide for the damage caused to rice and corn crops by the recent floods.

In the afternoon, the President receives 200 American Peace Corps volunteers due to ship back to the United States after serving in the Philippines barrios for one to three years.

In brief remarks, the President states that understanding and cooperation among nations are imperative at this time because “unfortunately we live in a world where once again violence has become acceptable.”

The president declares that Asians realize that the responsibility of developing their respective countries and providing for their security primarily rests on them.

Humanity, the President notes, realizes now that war is something that is fought “not only in the battlefields but in the more humdrum struggles of men, especially Asia, Africa and Latin America, for the betterment of life.”

But then he says, “when we speak of security, we speak of balances of forces, and not economic development.”

In economic development, therefore as well as in security, nations must rely on friends and allies,” he states.

The Philippines, the President declares, must quicken its pace of development because of the new danger posed by Red China which, he says, proposes an ideology that attracts the discontented.

In hailing the American Peace Corp volunteers, the President states that in their stay in one or three years in the Philippines they had done what no diplomat could do in the Philippines or in Asia.

The volunteer workers are accompanied by Minister Richard Wilson and Peace Corps Director Dick Bolch to Malacañang.

President's Week in Review: June 18-24, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

June 18.—THE President takes a much needed rest after a very busy week. President Marcos likewise stays up late last night to beat the Constitutional deadline for him to act on the 350 bills transmitted to him for signature or veto by Congress. The bills are passed during the last regular session of the Sixth Congress.

He comes out of his study only shortly before noon to go over pending state papers with his assistants, who are summoned to the Palace earlier.

At 11 a.m., the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, together with their children hears mass at the Palace chapel.

He takes lunch at 2 p.m. and shortly thereafter had a brief afternoon nap.

In the evening, the President returns to his private study and resumes work on state papers.

Meanwhile, President Marcos states he hoped the members of the United Nations would avail of the U.N. General Assembly, instead of another forum, for the resolution of the Israeli-Arab question.

In a press statement, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras states the President, in the face of a move to convene the Big Powers to a summit meeting on the Middle East issue, instruct Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez to make known his preference for consideration of the question first by the U.N.

The instructions are sent to Ambassador Lopez earlier today by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

The President declares the Philippines "views a formal summit conference at this time to discuss the Israeli-Arab question would constitute a bypass of the United Nations."

Secretary Aspiras says the President considered the U.N. as the appropriate forum for consideration of disputes constituting threats to international peace, and this was clearly expressed by the U.N. members in the Charter.

In expressing preference for the consideration of the Israeli-Arab dispute first by the U.N. General Assembly, the President states it was in this assembly that small nations were represented, and therefore had a voice.

He explains that these small nations were as much interested in world peace and stability as the Big Powers, and therefore deserved to be heard on questions, that constitutes threats to peace.

"I hope, therefore, that the United States, the Soviet Union and the other Big Powers utilize the forums of the U.N. General Assembly, and not other forums, for the settlement of the Israeli-Arab dispute," he states.

The President at the same time expresses the hope that the U.N. could work out a permanent solution to the issues that had sparked the shooting war between Israel and the Arab nations.

June 19.—THE Chief Executive nominates as associate justices of the Supreme Court Presiding Justice Eugenio Angeles of the Court of Appeals and Enrique Fernando, known law practitioner and professor of law.

The President also names 16 nominees to fill the post of clerk of court in courts of first instance throughout the country.

The nominees to the Supreme Court will fill two of the three vacancies created by the retirements of Justice Felix Bautista Angelo, Justice Jesus Barrera and Justice Roberto Regala.

At the same time, President Marcos proclaims the period from June 18 of this year as National Integration Week.

He issues the proclamation in recognition of the necessity of effecting in a more rapid and complete manner the economic, social, moral, and political advancement of the cultural minorities and their integration into the body politics.”

He notes that the desire to integrate and assimilate the cultural minorities, who until lately were referred to as Non-Christian, into the national way of life, goes back to Spanish colonial times.

He observes that the Commission on National Integration, which was created in 1957 has made great strides towards the integration.

In the morning, the President meets members of the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council and various officials involved with the rice and corn production program.

During the two-and-a-half hour breakfast conference, the President approves for immediate implementation the new distribution system worked out by Rice and Corn Administration to insure that the cereals reach consumers, particularly in areas with deficient supply of the staple.

The President also takes up the urgent problem of warehousing, and orders the Philippine National Bank and the Development Bank of the Philippines to step up its efforts in providing storage on its own or through private initiative.

Important features of the new distribution system are the following:

1. Manila, Baguio and Cebu City as well as other metropolitan centers will have rice distributed through the GSIS for government employees and members of the system and the SSS for employees of private firms. In this connection, Meralco, first to apply under the system, has already started distributing rice to its employees.
2. Aside from the GSIS and SSS channels, rice will also be distributed through selected retailers in public markets. To prevent irregularities this distribution will be supervised by housewives through Federation of Women’s Clubs.
3. In the provinces, rice will be distributed through Rice and Corn Board retailers in public markets, and through school teachers in public schools.

The President limits the adoption of the system in metropolitan areas to cities deficient in rice, in order that government distribution will not compete with private rice traders in surplus areas.

Shortly after the meeting with RCPCC, the President works in his study. Among other things, the President:

1. Directs the Department of Foreign Affairs to request the United States government that the first meeting of the Laurel-Langley renegotiation panels be held in Manila.
2. Instructs Undersecretary of Public Works Marciano Bautista to immediately act on the bids for supplying the raw materials in the pre-fabricated school building program.
3. Orders the Director of Mines, Director of Forestry and the Commissioner of Public Highways to integrate all mining roads with the national network of roads and highways.

4. Asks the Police Commission to report on the raids conducted by police forces and other allied elements against suspected lairs of pirates in the Manila Bay area; as well as on the hideouts of other notorious criminals.

At 1:20 p.m., the President sits down to lunch with members of the Evening News staff led by Fred Elizalde.

June 20.—NOTING the need for surprising action on administration measures with the session due to close in one week, President Marcos confers with congressional leaders on the pending bills before the special session of Congress.

Closeted with the President in his study are Speaker Jose Laurel, Jr. and Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, on whose shoulders rest the burden, of speeding up House action on the 31 certified bills, none of which to date had been acted upon by both Houses.

Apart from this conference, the only other extended meeting the President has with a group is the luncheon session with editorial staff members of the Daily Mirror, led by editor Emilio Aguilar Cruz.

Devoting most of his day to official matters and paperwork in his study, the President:

1. Nominates Fiscal Eulogio S. Serrano of Manila as member of the Court of Appeals.
2. Considers the proposal of the electronics firm, Marconi, to put up a computerized air traffic control system at the Manila International Airport He consequently refers it to the Presidential Economic Staff for further study.
3. Requires the PES to itemize, in accordance with priorities, the funds to be allocated as aid to the Manila flood control and drainage project. He asks that the amount needed and the order of priorities be specified.
4. Gives the go-signal for the NAWASA to procure the equipment for the pumping plants needed by the Manila and suburbs waterworks projects.
5. Refers to PES for comment and recommendations, the request of the Bataan provincial board for putting up a sugar central in that province.
6. Orders the release of P30,000 for the repair of the school buildings damaged by monsoon rains in Abra.
7. Directs the secretary of public works to repair immediately the airport in Pili, Camarines Sur.

June 21.—PRESIDENT Marcos takes up with his key financial advisers important policy matters, while finding time as well to attend to particular problems of various localities, whose officials came to consult him on pressing needs.

In the morning, the President starts his day with a breakfast meeting with the editorial staff of the Daily Star led by editor Juan Perez, Jr.

Following the breakfast meeting, the President retires to his study for the usual paper work, before receiving official callers, starting at 10:20 a.m.

Later, the President meet with Commissioner Misael Vera of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and Quezon City regional BIR director, Leonardo Cabañero, to discuss problems regarding the bureau.

Resuming his desk work at about 11 a.m., the President certifies to Congress for immediate enactment two bills, namely, 1) H. No. 12108, which seeks to provide safeguards in the use of special police by the Manila Mayor; 2) S. No. 297, amending the Corporation Law (Act No. 1459) to encourage investment in the mining industry.

In a conference with Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee, the President approves the nomination of 30 municipal judges and two auxiliary municipal judges.

In another meeting, the President is consulted by Presidential Assistant on Housing Esteban Bernido on the housing program and the People's Home-site and Housing Corporation operations.

Meantime, President Marcos signs a proclamation reserving for public fishpond purposes a parcel of the public domain in the barrio of Banculasi, Navotas, Rizal.

This proclamation withdraws from sale or settlement the area reserved. It includes fishpond construction demolished by a public works team under the direct supervision of Secretary Antonio Raquiza of Public Works, upon orders of the President.

The total area proclaimed as a government reserve covers 45,288 square meters.

The President also signs an administrative order amending Administrative Order No. 123 of May 6, 1965 which created the Committee on Regional Planning.

The President amends the original order to include a representative from the National Planning Commission. This is sought in order to effect a closer coordination between the national and regional planning bodies.

June 22.—TAKING steps to keep expenses of students at reasonable levels, President Marcos directs Secretary Carlos P. Romulo of Education to inquire into the reported increase in tuition fees and other school expenses.

He asks Secretary Romulo to confer with heads of private universities and colleges and ascertain the reasons for the reported increase in tuition fees, and charges for other services given by private schools.

The President tells Romulo to appeal to the heads of private universities and colleges, and request them to keep tuition fees within reasonable levels. He points out that the "primary aim of educational institutions was not to make profits but to educate the youth."

At the same time, the President refers to the Presidential Investigating Committee the charges filed against Commissioner of Civil Service Abelardo Subido for investigation.

The Chief Executive orders the probe immediately after receiving the reply of Commissioner Subido this day to the charges filed against him.

Subido answers all seven specifications in the administrative charges brought against him by a former employee of the Civil Service Commission, Faustino Tugade, in effect refuting all of them.

In his reply, the Commissioner also takes the occasion to explain the acute problems of space, morale, lack of personnel and funds of the CSC, the Solutions to which led such initiatives as the construction of the CSC Center, the employment of casuals, and the request for detail to his office of specialists in other offices. These actions are the basis of some of the charges filed by Tugade.

President Marcos likewise orders the investigation of reported leakages in the medical board examinations held last June 14 to 16.

He directs Enrique M. Fernando, whom he had recently nominated as associate justice of the Supreme Court, to conduct a thorough probe and to order the cancellation of the examination if his findings confirm the reported leakages.

The four-day examination was originally scheduled to start last June 8. The flash floods which inundated Manila and suburbs that day forced the postponement.

The President suspends classes in public and private schools on June 8, including the board examinations.

The board of medical examiners is composed of Dr. Jose Molano, chairman, and Drs. Godofredo Reyes, Osmundo Rama, Casiano Plaza, Alejandro Gaerlan and Arturo Tolentino, Jr. members.

In the morning, the President receives Deputy Speaker Itzhak Navon of the Israeli parliament, who formally requested Philippine support for Israel in the United Nations. He explains at length the Israeli position relative to the Middle East issue.

Accompanied by his country's envoy here Ambassador Abraham Kidron the Israeli official is closeted with the President briefly during which he speaks about the need of majority support for the Israeli cause aimed at establishing a permanent and just peace in the Middle East. He states such a peace will benefit all of the world.

While at work in his study, the President:

1. Signs a proclamation declaring Saturday, June 24, as a special public-holiday in Manila, it being the 396th anniversary of the city's founding.
2. Directs Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata to increase PC strength in the south, particularly coastal towns in the Visayas and northern Mindanao.
3. Approves the nomination of Vicente M. Veloso of member of the Board of Textbooks.
4. Appoints Fruto Olivera as member of the Quezon provincial board, to fill the place vacated by Remedies Aguila who resigned to join the foreign service.

During a lengthy meeting with Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee, the President approves 32 nominations to the posts of provincial, city and assistant fiscals.

At a meeting with congressmen and local officials, the President discusses the integration of local public works programs with national projects.

June 23.—PRESIDENT Marcos calls a halt on all sales of and bids on surplus government busy heavy equipment, approved by the Board of Liquidators.

The President as well instructs Public Works Secretary Antonio Raquiza to immediately take possession of all this equipment.

The President take the measures, because he said that the bureau of public works badly needs every available equipment for the massive public works and infrastructure construction projects.

He declares that the Department of Public Works should gather every available equipment and make them operational, to boost further the number of heavy equipment now in use.

At the same time, the President dismisses two municipal judges for serious misconduct and inefficiency, after reviewing the finding of investigators and approving their recommendations to separate the two officials from the judiciary.

Dismissed are Judge Pascual Beltran of the Municipal court of Buena-vista, Iloilo, and Judge Pedro San Roque of the municipal court of Virac, Catanduanes.

In the morning, the President confers with acting Secretary of Agriculture Dioscoro Umali on plans to transfer the Iwahig Penal colony and to develop the area for agriculture.

In this connection, the President directs the Philippine Navy to render full assistance to the committee to facilitate its work.

He also directs the Philippine Constabulary to provide the necessary support for the enforcement of the President's proclamation which reserved the whole of Palawan and islands surrounding it, as a natural sanctuary of birds and other wildlife.

In the afternoon the President meet officials and employees of the Bureau of Forestry headed by Director Antonio Quejado, who called to hear the President's message on the occasion of their sixth annual conference which opened last Tuesday and ends tomorrow.

In his extemporaneous message, the President inquires about the needs of Forestry personnel. He then instructs Director Quejado to work out a scheme to raise salaries in the bureau, acquire permanent office buildings and necessary equipment, including vehicles.

After talking to the forestry men, the President, with Mrs. Marcos, witness demonstrations by the foresters of some of their activities, such as log scaling and forest surveying.

June 24.—SPENDING almost all of the morning at Camp Aguinaldo, President Marcos inspects the operations in connection with the fabrication of the Marcos-type school-buildings, the repair of armed forces vehicles, and to formally receive the engineering equipment for five construction battalion given by the United States government.

He also devotes a substantial part of his day to a conference with representative of private universities and colleges, including the heads of these institutions. The conference deals on the increase in tuition fees in private schools, and on how these fees might be standardized to benefit both the schools and the public.

In his brief remarks during the turnover rites of equipment from the United States, the President and Ambassador William McCormick Blair, Jr. reaffirm the Philippine-United States partnership in the pursuit of peace, and in deepening the understanding between the two countries.

The President later inspects the equipment which was displayed on the premises.

Afterwards, the President visits the nearby plant which manufacture components for the prefabricated Marcos-type school building.

He is briefed on the manufacturing process, as he viewed the operations. After this tour, the President motors back to Malacañang to receive scheduled callers.

In the afternoon, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, motor to the Luneta for the ceremonies formally turning-over the Chinese Garden built by the Chinese community to the Philippine government.

The turn-over of the P850,00-Chinese garden was one of the highlights of the ceremonies ending the Philippine-China Friendship Year.

Chinese Ambassador Han Lih-Wu makes the formal presentation of the garden.

From the Luneta ceremonies, the First Couple goes to the Manila Hotel to attend the graduation exercises of Lozada's Swimming School. Their children—Imee, Irene and Bongbong—are among the graduates. The President's son is awarded a trophy for proficiency in swimming after only two months of lessons.

Shortly after returning to Malacañang, the President steps, cut again this time to address a gathering at the Philamlife building, capping the celebration of the Philippines-China Friendship Year.

President's Week in Review: July 16-18, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

July 16—PRESIDENT Marcos makes a flying visit to South Vietnam to expressly spend the day with members of the Philippine Civic Action Group in Vietnam, in an effort to express the nation's admiration and support for their work in that embattled country.

He brings off successfully a long planned trip to Vietnam, expressly to visit with the PHILCAG troops there, and confer well deserved medals on certain officers and men for distinguished performance.

The President, accompanied by a small group of government officials, and newspaper publishers, spends practically the whole day in Vietnam. Except for an unexpected engine trouble shortly after takeoff from the Manila International Airport at 7:30 the whole trip is smooth and entirely successful. The President and his party is warmly received by the PHILCAG which has been doing civic action work in Vietnam since September last year.

Dressed in khaki, the President leaves Malacañang at 6:45 a.m., along with a group of Manila publishers, a handful of palace aides, and Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos, Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras and Fr. Horacio de la Costa.

The flight to Saigon is delayed after the PAL YS-111 developed engine trouble about, half an hour after takeoff, necessitating a change of planes. This is done after the return to the MIA. The two-hour flight to Tan Son Nhut airport in Saigon was uneventful.

The President and party stays only briefly in Saigon, confined to the airport for the formalities of welcome, which was given by South Vietnamese officials, led by Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu.

From the Saigon airport, the President and party flies direct to Tay Ninh.

The President arrives at the Tay Ninh West Airport at 12:40 p.m. proceeding straight to the PHILCAG Base Camp where he was rendered Military honors.

One of the first acts of the President upon arrival at the Philcag camp is to present decorations to Philcag officers and men for, among others, heroism and meritorious service.

After presenting the decorations to the Philcag men, the President addresses the entire personnel.

In his speech before the Philcag, the President once more reiterated the Philippine commitment to "the sacred ideals of peace, liberty, and prosperity as the grand pursuits of mankind."

He disputes the contention that the Philcag mission in Vietnam is a Philippine involvement in Vietnam war. He states that in more precise terms, the Filipino people, through the Philcag, are "involved in the agony of the human spirit in Vietnam."

The battle lines in Vietnam, he declares, "evoke the poignant question of our time, whether this world of ours can endure half-slave and half-free."

Pointing out that there is no middle ground in the violent issues "that rend Vietnam today," he states that although the Philippine Constitution rules out war as an instrument of national policy, it does not forbid the nation from extending "sympathy with those who are in the midst of this beleaguered area of freedom."

Saying that the decision to dispatch the PHILCAG was a lonely task that he had to make after everyone in the country had been heard on the question, he emphasizes that it was a decision made on a national consensus for liberty.

He tells the PHILCAG troopers that the nation took pride in their mission of peace, where “you sheath your sword in a spot where swords clash in mortal strife.” This, he states, makes the PHILCAG soldiers “martyrs for peace.”

He notes that there was no doubt the PHILCAG position in Vietnam is difficult, but he added that an understanding of the issues in Vietnam “can sustain and console you.”

The issues are clear, he says, although not simple. The Vietcong as a belligerent, he continues, betrays the true menace, which is the Marxist view of history, which is to crucify mankind “in the cross of the state.” The Philippine commitment in Vietnam, he declares, is a commitment in history, began with the revolution of 1898, which was “for all of Asia.” Aside from this, he observes, “our own national interest dictate our involvement as peacemakers.” He declares, “we cannot live as an island of freedom in a sea of tyranny.”

Next, the President visits the station hospital, to look in specially on the wounded soldiers there. Then he goes to the PHILCAG chapel to join in prayers led by Fr. de la Costa. After a briefing conducted by Brig. Gen. Gaudencio Tobias, Philcag Commander, at the sand-bagged headquarters command post, which centered on the pacification campaign, the President boards a helicopter to tour Philcag work sites and projects in Than Dien.

At 2 p.m., the President enplanes for the Tan Son Nhut Airport in Saigon, where he reboards the PAL jet for the return flight to Manila.

After the arrival rites and a brief press conference, the President returns to Malacañang, where he rest briefly. He then works on some papers later in the evening.

July 17.—MOVING further to enhance the anti-criminality drive, President Marcos tap former Defense Secretary Alejo Santos as presidential coordinator on peace and order and concurrently acting director of prisons.

He names Santos to improve conditions in the different penal institutions and colonies.

The President also signs another appointment, that of Leyte Gov. Norberto Romualdez, Jr., as member of the advisory council on community development and public works.

He decides to make these designations in the course of discussions with administrative leaders on the peace and order situation and the public works program for Leyte and Samar.

In a series of meetings with administrative officials, the President likewise:

1. Orders Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release P1 million for the dredging of the port of Cebu, at the same time asking Highways Commissioner Baltazar Aquino to start the project immediately.
2. Directs Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata to assign a battalion of AFP engineers to repair roads in Central Luzon and carry on flood control projects, in coordination with the department of public works.
3. Instructs Commissioner Sy-Changco to allocate P2 million for the immediate construction of badly needed roads in Leyte and Samar.

In a series of meetings with administrative officials, the President shooting team which leaves tonight for Tokyo, to participate in the first Asian shooting tournament, slated for July 21 to 23.

Following the call of the team, the President receives the special congressional committee which formally informed him that the special session of Congress has convened.

Receiving the legislators, the President states, "it is a grave responsibility to call another session, but it is extremely necessary." He appeals to them to "please act on the measures in record time."

In between callers, the President inducts David Lozada as register of deeds in Negros Occidental, vice retired Benjamin Ledesma.

In the afternoon, the President motors to the Quezon City residence of former Defense Secretary Santos, to felicitate him on his 56th birth anniversary.

Back in Malacañang at 2:30 p.m., the President rest briefly, after which he works steadily on state papers.

July 18.—TAKING new initiatives in the campaign against crime, President Marcos order the Police Commission to bring charges against policemen whose oil-duty activities might be illegal.

He instruct Solicitor General Antonio Barredo to clear the way for enforcing the ban on liquor sales in school and church vicinities, and Land Transportation Commissioner Romeo Edu to begin licensing bus conductors.

He indicates that crimes are often abetted or committed in these areas, and therefore there should be positive moves taken immediately to bring them into better control.

In the case of off-duty policemen, the President asks the Department of Justice to study the legality of private employment of policemen during off-duty hours. If these activities are ascertained to be illegal, the President states, the POLCOM should take steps to file up the proper charges against culpable policemen.

He points out that in such instances where policemen work as bouncers in nightclubs or bars, or act as bodyguards for private persons, there is always the possibility of abuses being committed by the policemen, which may result in violence or other criminal offenses.

Towards noon time, the President pauses from his desk work to induct several officials at the Palace reception hall. He administer the oath of office to Judge Jose Rodriguez of the Court of First Instance of Palawan; Judge Leonor Ines Luciano of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court of Quezon City; the officials of the Women's Lawyer's Circle of the University of the Philippines; and the officers of the Confederation of Government Employees Organizations.

Earlier in the morning, the President leaves Malacañang to inspect the Nagtahan bridge in Sampaloc. Manila, which is to be opened to the public on August 15.

He decides to assess the progress of the work on the bridge which has been under construction since the last administration, to see for himself if the deadline for completion will actually be met.

Considered one of the major bridges in Manila, since it links many main arteries in the city, particularly the heavily traversed Magsaysay boulevard, to the San Miguel district and the Pandacan and Paco districts, and the whole of South Manila, the President had earlier ordered the early completion of the bridge.

The Nagtahan bridge was first began as completely new span under the Macapagal administration by private contractors, but except for the approach foundation, the construction languished for lack of funds, until the present administration took over.

President's Week in Review: July 19-29, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

July 19.—PRESIDENT Marcos goes on a flying inspection trip to Pampanga, to assess the progress of development projects in Central Luzon, including public works construction, flood control, irrigation, and civic action projects.

He returns to Malacañang at noon with these impressions:

1. The work on development projects is substantially advanced, as proved by the constructions already finished.
2. There is need to accelerate the tempo of the program, toward which he prodded the officials concerned to exert greater effort.

The President takes off at 7:30 a.m. in a helicopter, with a small group of officials. On the way to Pampanga he views the progress of work on the Manila North Diversion road, which army engineers are about to complete. Of the 28-kilometer stretch of concrete highway only a section of about 300 meters remains to be finished, Undersecretary of Defense Manuel Syquiao tells the President.

His first stop is Barrio Bahay Pare, in eastern Candaba, where he inaugurates the Lower Maasin River irrigation system. The system will service 4,000 to 5,000 hectares of farmlands in the towns of Candaba, San Simon and San Luis. The system is built at an estimated cost of P1.055 million.

In Barrio San Agustin, Magalang, the President's second stop, he inaugurates one of 16 multipurpose centers constructed by the Central Luzon Development Authority. He likewise visits the Pampanga Agricultural School there, before flying to Mawake, Mabalacat, where he looked over the communal irrigation project.

From there, the President flies to Sta. Barbara in the town of Bacolor to see the Pasig-Portrero flood control project, which is still under construction.

From the air, the President closely scrutinizes the San Isidro barrio road being built in the San Luis area, the Bahay Pare-Candaba road, the Arayat emergency hospital and the La Paz (Magalang) irrigation project.

Back in Malacañang at 12:30 p.m. following a brief rest after lunch, the President buckles down to work at his study, during which he:

1. Instructs Justice Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee to require the provincial fiscal of Capiz to explain in 72 hours why his office has delayed, the investigation of the kidnapping case against Mayor Ramon D. Benjamin of Dumarao.
2. Orders the Postmaster General to immediately suspend postal inspector Maximo Amil, assigned to Zamboanga del Sur, Zamboanga del Norte and Misamis Occidental, who has been accused of rape by a 16-year old student.
3. Asks the PC provincial commander and Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo to inquire into reports that Vice Mayor Angel Selcedo of Sara, who has been charged with forcible abduction and rape, has freedom to go in and out of jail, although held without bail. The President asks the two officials to keep the accused in jail.
4. Tells the PC chief to assist Lorenzo Lazo of Pasuquin, Ilocos Norte, relative to the murder of Lazo's son, for which the town chief of police and 10 policemen had been charged.

At the same time, the President calls on the Auditor General to conduct an audit of the books of the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation, to ascertain how well its funds are utilized for the promotion of sports.

The President also studies the report of Brig. Gen. Crispino do Castro, chairman of the Police Commission, the peace and order conditions in the towns of Leyte, Leyte and Kabankalan, Negros Occidental, both of which are under constabulary control.

July 20.—THE Chief Executive devotes most of his working hours to an appreciation of rural problems as brought to him by provincial delegations and to an assessment of the progress made so far in rice production.

The President formally opens a briefing for the press at the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources building in Quezon City, which was conducted by the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council, in cooperation with the National Press Club.

At this briefing, the President describes the “breakthrough” in the effort to increase production towards self-sufficiency in the nation’s staple.

Before motoring to Quezon City, where the initial briefing is held, the President sits down to a breakfast conference at Malacañang with close aides.

At the NPC-RCPCC briefing, the President emphasizes that a “breakthrough” has been made in our rice production. The factors, he states, which made it possible are:

1. Cooperation of the private sector with the government and
2. Close coordination among the various government agencies concerned with production.

“There had to be one leadership and one policy,” he says, in reference to the failure of previous administrations to make a breakthrough, because of dissipation of energy.

After opening the NPC-RCPCC briefing, the President returns to Malacañang where he works on state papers for a while. Then, he begins receiving visitors, including various delegations from the provinces who came to discuss their problems.

The President also inducts Hadji Bulog Mangutara as acting provincial assessor of Lanao del Sur and Casto P. Profugo as vice mayor of Lucena City. Rodolfo Rivilla is likewise inducted as acting member of the Board of Industries.

July 21.—PRESIDENT Marcos concentrates on two national concerns, one, the initiatives to be taken on the development of other food resources, notably meat and fish, and the other, the continuing concern over the state of peace and order.

But again, he takes time to attend to problems of local governments, as he devotes four hours receiving government, leaders from various regions of the country, who came to discuss the needs of their constituencies.

At 10 a.m., the President joins the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who was at the time receiving the Harvard-Radeliffe glee club.

“What a happy interlude in a very busy morning,” he exclaims, after listening to the Filipino tune “Sampaguita,” rendered with precision by the 90-member chorus.

The conference on food production is held early in the morning with Development of Bank of the Philippines officials, and officials of various government agencies involved in food production.

Discussed are new initiatives for increasing meat, fish, poultry and dairy, products. Toward this end, the President asks the DBP to reduce its interest on loans to these food producers, in the same way that rice and corn producers have been encouraged by liberal terms; on loans by the DBP and the Philippine National Bank.

He focuses on other food products following the breakthrough in the intensified rice and corn production program. The new drive is designed to complement the supply of the staple cereals.

During his usual work session in his study, the President, among others:

1. Asks the Commission on Elections to keep open the registration of voters even on Saturdays and Sundays and holidays throughout the country.
2. Orders the placing of Pasay City under Philippine Constabulary control.
3. Appeals to all cities and towns to organize civic groups similar to the one in Pasay City, in the campaign against crime. He congratulates the civic-spirited citizens led by Jose Concepcion, Jr. of Pasay for their initiative.

Meanwhile, the President creates a national center to study and devise solutions to the problem of urban squatters.

To be named the Central Institute for the Training and Relocation of Urban Squatters (CITRUS) with offices in Sapang Palay, San Jose del Monte, Bulacan, the center's functions will include:

1. Promotion of the economic sufficiency and social stability of former urban squatters and existing resident families in the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation property on a nationwide scale; and
2. Undertake organized research and training programs in coordination with other government or private agencies which are involved in improving patterns of human resettlement and planned social and economic adjustment.

July 22.—PRESIDENT Marcos attends to a well-round schedule of activities, highlighted by a meeting with Congress and Nacionalista Party leaders and his attendance at the opening rites of the First Asian Foreign Service Course at the Department of Foreign Affairs.

In the morning, the President motors to the Mabini Shrine in Nagtahan where he offered a wreath to commemorate the 103rd birth anniversary of Apolinario Mabini, the Sublime Paralytic.

To perpetuate further the memory of Mabini, the President renames the almost completed Nagtahan bridge, Mabini bridge. The President likewise proclaims the portion of the former bureau of animal industry compound where Mabini's old house was relocated as the site of the Mabini shrine.

Back in Malacañang an hour later, the President meets at breakfast with Senate President Gil J. Puyat and Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr. and Secretary Constancio E. Castañeda on NP plans for its national directorate meeting set for July 29.

After the meeting, the President leaves for the Department of Foreign Affairs to attend as guest speaker at the opening ceremonies of the First Asian Foreign Service Course.

In his speech, the President underscores the importance of regional order and the establishment and preservation of regional harmony in the management of world peace.

He slates the establishment and preservation of regional harmony as more urgent as the councils of the world face the prospect of a change from bi-polarity to multi-polarity as a result of the experience gained by nations in the creation and use of atomic power.

“Diverse as the cultural traditions are of the policy and experiences of our peoples in our part of the world, we nevertheless, share a common dream of harmony,” the President says.

“Better than leave the expression of this vision in the hands of policy makers per se, we have now come to a point where men, in the fullness of their own knowledge and experience, share in the responsibility of making and expressing national policy,” the President adds.

In the afternoon, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, attend the formal launching of the Philippine Amateur Swimming Association Educational and Fund campaign at the Malacañang swimming pool across the Pasig.

Meanwhile, President Marcos gives added force to the peace and order drive by ordering the vigorous enforcement of motion pictures not approved by the Board of Censors for Motion Pictures.

In an executive order, the President calls on all officers and employees of the government concerned to exert all possible efforts to implement the law as contained in Republic Act No. 3060.

This law declares as unlawful for any person or entity to exhibit or cause to be exhibited by television any motion picture, including trailers, stills and other pictorial advertisements in connection with motion pictures, which have not been previously approved by the Board of Censors for Motion Pictures.

The President, in his directive, points out that in the face of the rising criminality and breakdown of morality, only motion pictures which are not offensive to morals and to the peace and order of society should be exhibited. He also appeals to the Huks “to return to the folds of the law” and assist in the implementation of the various programs of the government designed to improve social and economic conditions in Central Luzon.

He indicates he is creating a joint executive-legislative committee to further consider the matter of granting amnesty to the Huks. He discloses that he had been considering the advisability of granting amnesty to them. The Presidential statement is a reaction to a report in newspapers, saying that the Huks “are in complete accord with the land reform program and are fully behind President Marcos in his Central Luzon Development Program.”

The report quoted a letter reportedly written by Pedro Taruc, Huk supremo.

“I am convinced,” the President states, “that the principal weapon against the social unrest in Central Luzon is community development, civic action and a relentless drive against disease, ignorance, poverty and other economic and social ills.”

“Our programs are designed to remove all causes of unrest in the area, and in view of the support expressed for these programs by the Huk leaders I now appeal to them and their followers to return to the folds of the law and assist us in implementing these programs, instead of sabotaging them,” he says.

July 23.—PRESIDENT Marcos issues an appeal urging members of Congress who are planning to go on missions abroad to defer their travel plans until after the current special session.

He conveys the appeal through Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos, who consults the President on requests of certain members of Congress for passports, and other documents.

The President tells Secretary Ramos to plead with the members of Congress to defer their departure until after the current special session pointing out that the work of Congress has been hamstrung by the lack of quorum.

In his appeal, the President stresses the urgency of the passage of the bills intended to bolster the peace and order campaign and the economic-bills. He had also pointed out the need to pass the reorganization, decentralization, investments incentives and public works bills.

At the same time, the President admonishes a city judge and reprimands clerk of court as he presses the administration effort to improve the quality and efficiency of judicial officials.

The President admonishes Presiding Judge Mariano R. Virtucio of Quezon City advising him to be more conscientious in the performance of his duties, and reprimands Pedro Aldea, clerk of court of the Court of First Instance of Bataan.

The Chief Executive also releases P3 million as aid of the national government to the various public works projects of Manila in response to numerous petitions from citizen living in Manila and the suburbs.

He authorizes the release of the funds by Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco after a two-hour on-the-spot survey of public works projects in Manila and the suburbs. He visits the projects to determine the problems facing them, and consequently how the national government aid could be effectively used.

In the afternoon, the President spends most of his time in his private study working on state papers.

July 24.—PRESIDENT Marcos starts the week with a brisk schedule of activities, highlighted by a series of conference with leaders from various regions of the country.

In the morning, the President sits down with Nacionalista congressmen led by Speaker Jose Laurel, Jr., after which he met a group of barrio captains and councilors.

From this conference, he goes on to other meetings with varied groups, notably the officials of the Philippine Horse Breeders Association, the boy scout delegation to the 12th World Jamboree and 21st World Scout Conference in the United States, officers of the Confederation of Labor Unions in Government Corporations, and officials of the Philippine Junior Chamber of Commerce, who saw the President for the launching of their project, Search for the Ten Outstanding Policemen.

In his first conference of the day, the President takes up with the 44 NP congressmen present the need for completion before the November elections the new permanent voters registry, which the Commission on Elections is undertaking in a race against time.

The President calls on the congressional leaders to pursue every means within their constituencies to spur new voters to register, and 1965 voters to have their registration validated, which are the twin concern of the Comelec drive.

He next receives the group representing local horse breeders, led by Florencio Sagmit. The group brings up before the President the association's petition for government aid in bringing in foreign bred mares and stallions to improve local breeds.

Besides the P400,000 allocated by the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office for the purpose, the President creates a committee to study any further assistance the government can give to the association, in line with the request.

Right after the call of the group, the President meets with some 60 barrio captains, later reenacting for their benefit his signing into law of Senate Bill No. 128, which gives insurance coverage to barrio captains and councilmen.

The Philippine Boy Scout delegation pays a farewell call on the President, as they prepared to leave for Farragut State Park in Idaho, where the Jamboree will be held from August 1 to 9.

In the meeting with the Jaycee officials the President pledges full government support to the project to choose 10 outstanding policemen of the Philippines. He says he welcomes the Jaycee initiative to provide much needed incentives for policemen to do better work, and to set the example for other civic groups to participate in the drive against criminality.

July 25—IN a long drawn meeting with his financial and economic advisers. President Marcos gives special attention to the administration's fiscal policies. The President also, in the course of the day, discusses legislative matters with Nacionalista party congressional leaders. Despite the demands of official business, the President finds time to commend Luis Reyes, officer-in-charge of the dredging and reclamation unit of the bureau of public works, for distinct accomplishments, in line with his policy to give due credit to public officials who perform with excellence.

In the meeting with his fiscal advisers, the President reassesses the administration's monetary policies against the background of current economic conditions and with an eye to future initiatives. During the meeting the President takes up agricultural requirements; which may be procured from the Japanese reparations payments.

After attending to callers, the President resumes studies on reports and other official papers in his desk.

July 26.—PRESIDENT Marcos clamps a lid on nightclubs for all Police Commission, Constabulary and Anti-Smuggling Action Center personnel, whether day or night clubs, anywhere in the country. Violation of the order will result in stern disciplinary action, the President warns.

He imposes the ban following reports that personnel of the said agencies have been observed as regularly patronizing these places.

Measures must be taken to see to it that the ban is enforced to the letter, according to the President's directive.

At the same time, the President directs Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, Constabulary chief, to dismiss summarily from the service all Constabulary personnel, especially Metrocom officers and men, found guilty of venalities, in a move to enforce discipline among law enforcement officers.

The directive is issued after the President commended Gen. Yan for his prompt action in disciplining two Philippine Constabulary enlisted men earlier reported as Metrocom personnel, caught mulcting.

"The Metrocom should set the example in integrity and devotion to duty," the President stresses.

The Chief Executive attends to a full day of conferences with government leaders from various sectors, including the legislative, the judicial, and local governments.

In the afternoon, as usual, he receives only a few visitors, as he concentrates on state papers, with emphasis on economic matters.

In his meeting with a group of municipal judges, the President discusses the peace and order campaign. The judges informs the President that they had taken steps to remedy the delay in the trial of criminal cases.

Among his other important meetings this day are those with Social Security System Administrator Gilberto Teodoro and Chairman Ramon Gaviola of the SSS, on the problems and projects of the agency; and with Governor Gualberto Lumauig of Ifugao, on local problems.

Meantime, President Marcos indicates that he will increase the assistance given to rural banks under the Agricultural Guaranty and Loan Fund (AGLF) program, due to the encouraging results of the partnership between the banks and the government in augmenting rice production.

In a speech at the induction of the new officers of the Rural Bankers Association of the Philippines at the Plaza, the President commends the performance of the bankers which has made it an impressive force, he states, in economic development, particularly of the rural areas.

Under the AGLF program, the rural banks have provided loans for rice production without collateral, but under close supervision.

“This program,” the President says, “is a partnership between the rural banks on one hand and the government on the other hand.”

The increased assistance proposed by the President will come through additional contribution of deposit from the GSIS, the SSS and the Philippine National Bank.

He declares that he is hopeful, therefore, that “the fruitful partnership between the government and the rural banking system will continue to flourish for the benefit not only of our small farmers but more so for our country and people.”

The President emphasizes the necessity for partnership between the government and the private sector, saying that it is “the true, and only, answer to the problem of poverty and ignorance that have long been a blight on Philippine society.”

Nation-building, he points out, is not the task of government alone, but also of the people themselves, who “as individuals and as a group must be involved.”

The government, he notes, has been constantly aware of its own contribution to this partnership. Thus, he had marked infrastructure development and rice sufficiency as the first priorities, “because no other accomplishment would be satisfactory without these.”

July 27.—THE Chief Executive orders the preventive suspension of three members of the board of examiners for marine engineers and marine officers, who were held responsible for the leakage of questions in the examinations in Cebu City early this week.

The President likewise orders the replacement of a fourth examiner, Boanerjes Duran, chairman of the Board of Examiners for Marine Engineers, whose term has terminated.

Ordered suspended on recommendation of Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido are Captains Vicente M. Orlina and Arturo Ilagan, members of the Board of Examiners for Marine Officers and Crisanto G. Almoguera, member of the Board of Examiners for Marine Engineers.

All four, according to Subido, have been administratively charged, for bribery, on the basis of the findings of a Philippine Constabulary investigation team, which probed the case.

Subido reports, that the four examiners received cash from candidates in the engineer and marine officers examinations, given last July 24 in Cebu City, in exchange for copies of the test papers and the corresponding answers.

At the same time, the President expresses regret over the reported decision of Sen. Raul Manglapus to retire from the public service.

He states that the announced retirement of Sen. Manglapus will “deprive the government service of a man of great usefulness in view of high qualifications for any elective or executive position.”

He adds that he hoped that the senator “will not entirely close the door to possible service in the executive branch of the government,” particularly in the diplomatic service where he had performed with high distinction in the past.

The President, in a meeting with members of the Nacionalista Party directorate, gains fresh insight into the political situation all over the country and the implementation of the various government programs for the development of rural areas.

After the meeting with the NP directorate, the President returns to the Palace across the Pasig River and works on official papers after a brief rest.

July 28—PRESIDENT Marcos tops a busy schedule, consisting mostly of official business with a surprise visit to four government hospitals in Manila, to see for himself conditions in these institutions.

The President leaves for the tour of hospitals after receiving Vice President Fernando Lopez, who arrives late in the afternoon from a special mission abroad.

The hospitals visited are the Philippine General Hospital, the Reyes Memorial Hospital, the San Lazaro Hospital, and the Lacson Memorial Hospital. The President is accompanied by Health Secretary Paulino Garcia.

He welcomes Vice President Lopez, when he called early in the evening, shortly after arriving in Manila. The Vice President reports on his observations of modern agricultural methods and practices abroad.

During most of the morning, the President attends to the Nacionalista Party delegates from the provinces, who called on him at Malacañang. The delegates take the opportunity to report on the progress of administration program in their regions, as well as to bring before the President the salient problems in their localities

The President, in turn, inquires into the rural development projects, specifically any problems affecting these projects so that immediate solutions may be found and implemented.

In the evening, the President works on his report on the various government programs to the National directorate meet slated the next day.

July 29—THE President in up early to attend to urgent state matters which requires his attention, and then he motors to the Manila Hotel for the Nacionalista Party national directorate meeting.

He arrives at 10 a.m. and is immediately engulfed by NP delegates and other party members who had converged at the hotel.

He starts speaking at 11:15 a.m. and in the main, he reports on the accomplishments of the administration, as based on the party platform which in 1965 won the people's mandate for the Nacionalista to take over power.

The President points out that significant gains in economic development, including the rice and corn production program, the public works program to strengthen the nation's infrastructure, the land reform program, and the peace and order program which has arrested the freewheeling surge of smuggling and other crimes.

He also blisters the opposition for its obstructionism and lack of responsibility. He lays squarely at the door of the opposition the rise in crime, the stagnation in national development, and the disruption or slow down of government programs.

The President, who was accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, is received with a standing ovation on his arrival at the meeting hall, the Fiesta Pavillion.

After his well received speech, he stays on the meeting, where he had lunch, and continues to talk with various groups, and observers from time to time the progress of the balloting which started shortly after the nominations were closed, almost midafternoon.

President's Week in Review: July 30 - August 5, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

July 30.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the National Bureau of Investigation to inquire into the activities of an association which had been promising redemption of Japanese war notes for a fee.

He directs the NBI to launch the investigation at once and set the ground for immediate prosecution of parties found responsible.

The Japanese War Notes Association led by one Al Abcede had been reported promising its members that it would secure U.S. government redemption of war notes issued to them by the occupation forces in World War II.

In exchange for such "service," the association is said to have been: collecting fees from the members.

In another move, the President requests the Peace and Order Council to conduct a study of the fundamental causes of the present crime incidence.

The study, according to the President, will serve as a guide to the formulation of laws and other remedial measures. He issues the instructions as the President focused greater attention on a long-range peace and order program.

Taking advantage of the presence in Manila of local government heads who attend Saturday's Nacionalista Party Convention, the President meets these provincial and municipal leaders to hear their problems and devise with them procedures for rapid implementation of development projects pertaining to their localities.

He is assisted by a panel of cabinet members, who help him attend to inquiries and suggestions from the local leaders concerning community improvement in cooperation with the administration's national program.

Many of the leaders who are present at the Malacañang working session came from far-flung towns, where quick consultations with the national government have been difficult because of existing communication facilities.

The President asks them to submit before returning to the provinces a list of their projects and their suggestions for more effective implementation of the various national programs in their localities.

July 31.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the dismantling of all billboards on government property along national highways which advertise alcoholic drinks.

In his directive, the President gives the owners of these billboards one month to remove them otherwise the Philippine Constabulary will tear them down.

The Chief Executive also prods the National Bureau of Investigation and the Anti-Smuggling Action Center to arrest government officials, especially fiscals, city and municipal judges of Manila and surrounding cities and towns, caught smoking blue-seal cigarettes.

He issues these directives in connection with the administration's anti-smuggling and peace and order drives following receipt of the monthly report of the Police Commission and ASAC, which recommended new measures in these two areas.

The NBI and ASAC are directed to form teams to curb the open sales of blue-seal cigarettes and to arrest smokers, particularly government officials and employees.

On the drive against drunkenness, the President also appeals to all media of communication—newspapers, magazines, TV, radio and others—to reject advertisements of alcoholic drinks, which tend to make liquor drinking a desirable habit.

According to a report from Police Commission Chairman Brig. Gen. Crispino de Castro (ret.), a growing percentage of the total number of crimes committed in the metropolitan area alone is traceable in origin to drunkenness.

The President continues exchanging views with provincial leaders on various focal problems. He receives the officials, mostly by delegations.

The delegations included those from Iloilo, Misamis Occidental, Cagayan, Leyte, Surigao del Norte, Zamboanga del Norte, Zamboanga del Sur, Cebu, Davao and Lipa City.

After receiving the delegations from different provinces, the President devotes the rest of the afternoon up to the late hours in the evening working on state papers.

August 1—THE President authorizes Foreign Affairs Secretary Narciso Ramos to reopen negotiations for an air agreement with the United States.

Secretary Ramos is directed to coordinate with the Civil Aeronautics board led by Commerce Secretary Marcelo Balatbat in the conduct of the negotiations.

Talks between the Philippines and the United States to work out a new bilateral air agreement were suspended in August, 1965 over disagreement on the frequency of U.S. airline flights into the Philippines.

The old RP-US air agreement expired in 1965 and since then commercial air relations between the two countries have been based on authority granted by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The impasse in the negotiations for a new air treaty resulted from differences between the Philippine and American positions on the issue of frequency flights.

The Philippines during the 1965 talks invoked the “five freedoms of the air” agreed upon in the 1944 International Conference on Civil Aviation in Chicago.

On the other hand, the US has been advocating unlimited frequency of flights, invoking the 1946 agreement between her and the United Kingdom in Bermuda. Accordingly, the US has been seeking agreements which place no restrictions on frequencies, capacities and fifth freedom traffic in most of the countries that its airlines serve.

In the morning, the President confers for four hours with groups of provincial NP leaders, on both government and party matters in their respective regions.

On government, the President considers the problems and requests for aid of the regional leaders, relative to national and local development programs.

Director-General Placido Mapa Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff and members of his staff review with the President the studies made on major administration projects.

Among the PES recommendations approved by the President are:

1. The three-year development program of the Port of Manila, at an estimated cost of P41.2 million.

2. A funding scheme for irrigation projects aimed at irrigating an additional 143,500 hectares of farm lands by the 1968 planting season. The project will require P49.97 million this fiscal year.

The President also grounds the police chief of Baguio City and ordered the investigation of alleged police brutality committed against members of a union picketing a Baguio firm recently.

He directs Gen. Crispino de Castro, (ret.) Polcom chief, to ground the police chief, Maj. Mariano Aagsalud, in Manila pending the investigation of the charges, to prevent any possibility of coercion of witnesses against the police.

The President, at the same time, directs Maj. Gen. Manuel Yan, Chief of the Constabulary, to place the police force of Tagkawayan and Sampaloc in Quezon under PC control, because Sampaloc has no policemen, and peace and order condition in Tagkawayan has deteriorated considerably.

August 2.—IN consonance with his policy to appraise and approve foreign policy matters on a non-partisan basis, President Marcos confers with the Foreign Policy Council to discuss the proposal for enlarged economic and regional cooperation through a bigger organization, of South east Asian nations, preparatory to the departure of the Philippine delegation for Bangkok.

The Bangkok meeting which will be attended by SEA foreign ministers, will discuss the formation of a larger group of nations in the region. Among those participating are the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand and Singapore. The conference is slated to open on August 5 to last until August 9.

Foreign Secretary Narciso Ramos will head the Philippine delegation. In naming Secretary Ramos as head of the delegation, the President states that the foreign secretary has his "special trust and confidence."

The nation's leaders who attend the council meeting are unanimous in endorsing the proposal, specially as it pertains to the strengthening of SEA regional cooperation along economic development lines, and in enlarging mutual technical assistance to countries in the region.

At the same time, the President further bolstered the drive against errant peace officers by ordering the organization of a combined POLCOM-PC-NBI team to go after police officers and men patronizing nightclubs and accepting private jobs.

He directs Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC Chief, and Col. Jolly Bugarin, NBI chief, to have the composite team ready and operating within a week.

The President also instructs the drafting of a bill regulating the operation and maintenance of hotels, motels, boarding and lodging houses. He will certify the bill to the current special session of Congress.

The Supreme Court recently upheld the constitutionality of a Manila ordinance imposing rules and restrictions on hotels and motels so as to remove the elements of secrecy in the entry, presence and exit of guests in these establishments.

He asks all city and municipal councils of suburban areas to pass similar ordinances to augment the efforts of the national government to curb sex crimes.

In another meeting, the President discusses at length the government's public works program for this fiscal year.

In the afternoon, the President delivers a speech formally opening the Fourth Asian Regional Conference and Seminar of the Associated Country Women of the World (ACWW) held at the National Science Development Board pavilion.

In his speech, the President calls on the women of Asia to help bring about a change in the rural areas through development.

He states that “it is a task cut out for the women.” This task, he explained, involved not only physical but spiritual transformation as well.

The President emphasizes that rural development must necessarily involve the building of roads, artesian wells, irrigation systems, and others required for material advancement.

But, he says, “material progress is not possible unless strong enough will to progress is developed among the citizens.”

The women, the President declares, “can prepare the groundwork for development by helping in the education of our peasants and their children.”

He states that the women’s efforts need not be formal, but can be under taken as a supplement to the work of the professional teachers.

The women should concentrate on areas of practical application, such as sanitation, farm management, handicraft, child care, cooking, sewing and others in the same sphere.

By teaching farmers these skills, he says, the women will help farmers enlarge their economic options, and introduce them to “the world of science and technology.”

The President stresses that the change desired in the rural areas cannot be postponed any longer.

Ultimately, he says, “the task of ushering our rural folk into the age of science and technology is performed in the service of democracy and freedom.” In working toward this objective, he adds, the women can ask for “no nobler duty.”

Back at the Palace, the President rejoins the council meeting after receiving Lt. Gen. Benjamin Davis. The meeting ends with a unanimous endorsement of the plan for extended regional cooperation along economic development.

Gen. Davis, the new commanding officer of Clark Air Force Base was accompanied by Minister James Wilson of the U.S. Embassy and Maj. Gen. Michael J. Ingelido, CAFB Deputy Commander. The new CAFB commander came to pay a courtesy call on the President.

Pursuing his usual work schedule in his study, the President among others, issues the following instructions;

1. Directs the Police Commission, the PC and the NBI to organize, within one week, composite teams to implement the regulations prohibiting PC and police personnel from frequenting nightclubs and working in private capacities for pay.
2. Appeals to all city and municipal councils in the suburban areas to pass ordinances similar to that enacted by the city of Manila, which removes the elements of secrecy attending patronage of motels.

August 3.—THE welfare of prisoners, financing of the different government ” projects as housing, better roads and bridges, airports, irrigation and hospitals, are the main concerns which occupied President Marcos the whole day.

The first of a series of meetings the President attended is with the heads of government financing institutions, and his fiscal advisers.

He discusses with them the funding requirements of the high priority programs of the administration, notably roads and other public works projects, schools and housing and resettlement projects.

In a meeting with Acting Director of Prisons Alejo Santos, who is also presidential coordinator of the anti-crime drive, the President orders that new and young prisoners be segregated from old and habitual criminals.

The President authorizes the release of P200,000 for a separate housing for these prisoners. He also orders the release of P400, 000 for the construction of a hospital in Muntinlupa.

He instructs Santos to implement at once the transfer of the Iwahig penal colony from Puerto Princesa to the island of Culion, both in Palawan.

The prisons director is also asked to study the feasibility of transferring the penal colony at Sablayan. Mindoro Occidental to the island of Semirara, south of the Mindoro mainland. In this connection, the President orders Director Antonio Quejado of Forestry to ascertain whether the island is available for this purpose.

Following the conference, the President instructs Commissioner Baltazar Aquino of Public Highways to include provisions in the public works appropriations bill which would impose penalties for price-padding of purchases of equipment and spare parts by public highways officials. The President takes this step to stop once and for all the practice of overpricing purchases.

August 4.—PRESIDENT Marcos presides at two important meetings: one on the crime situation, and the other on gasoline prices, which filled most of his morning work hours. In-between, he receives several visitors.

“Keeping up the pace of the anti-crime campaign,” the President tells the officials involved in the drive, during the meeting.

He urges greater action against vandals, orders the arrest of any persons caught defacing walls. He also orders intensification of operations against pirates and cattle rustlers.

He instructs various police agencies to work closer together, and when necessary to combine forces in striking at criminal elements.

He, at the same time, orders the disarming of all security guards of the arrastre services in the South Harbor, following the slaying of two customs policemen in a gunfight with Guacods Terminals security guards.

To prevent recurrence of the slaying incident, the President bans the carrying of firearms in the customs zone, except as authorized by the customs commissioner.

In this connection, the President orders the assignment of Col. Tomas Karingal, Quezon City police chief, to the customs zone to temporarily take charge of security in the area till the situation returns to normal.

He also orders brig. Gen. Ricardo Papa (ret.), Manila Police Chief, Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC chief, to investigate the shooting incident to the end that all guilty parties are punished.

At the conference with representatives of oil companies, the President appeals for the maintenance of existing gasoline prices and transportation rates, stating that the public interest demand that the status quo remain undisturbed.

In the afternoon, the President signs into law H. B. No. 15920 setting aside P2,272,210,527 for the operating expenditures of the government and its expenses for the different developmental projects for the current fiscal year.

The Chief Executive slashes P4,260,317 from the outlays approved by Congress. Congress has approved House Bill No. 15920 appropriating P2, 276,470,844.

Among the vetoed items are appropriations for the Senate, P152,160, House of Representatives, P135,279; Department of Justice, P3,254,918; Supreme Court, P265,220 and the Court of Appeals, P452,740. These out lays are mostly for new positions and salary increases.

The new budget is only P201,785,499 more than the budget for the last fiscal year, which was P2.97 billion. Most of the additional outlays will go to capital expenditures or the development programs of the administration, and P45 million set aside on request of the President for salary increases for government employees. The employees will receive a five per cent general increase.

The salary increases for the government employees takes effect, under the law, on July 1, 1967. All employees who are in the service as of June 30, 1967, will be entitled to the salary raise.

The P25 million set aside from Bond Fund will all go to the development projects such as roads, bridges, ports, airports and irrigation.

The three biggest outlays goes to the Department of Education, the Department of National Defense, and the Department of Public Works and Communications.

August 5.—PRESIDENT Marcos sets into motion a sweeping revamp of the Cabinet, with the acceptance of the resignation of Justice Secretary Jose Yulo and the appointment of Undersecretary Claudio Teehankee as acting Secretary of Justice.

President's Week in Review: August 6-14, 1967

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

August 6.—THE President opens the 1967 National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball series, which rolled on to a furious and colorful start at the Rizal Memorial Coliseum.

The President stays on after the opening rites in an effort to help revive national interest in the sport and to “sharpen public awareness of the benenccences and rewards arising from athletics.”

He is accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their three children.

In the morning, the President devotes most of his time going on state papers in his private study. He goes over the report of Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia who had investigated alleged irregularities in the last medical board examinations.

He cancels the examinations after confirming from the excerpts of the evidence gathered by Secretary Garcia which showed that there was “conclusive evidence of cheating, and persuasive” evidence of leakage of test questions.

At the same time, the President also orders the deportation of four aliens on the ground that their presence in the Philippines “is a menace to the peace and safety of the community.”

Ordered deported by the President are Alvin J. Smith, a third class US air force airman; Kee Lian Liok of Caloocan city; Ong Chu of Makati, Rizal; and Victor Co of Lucena City. The last three are all Chinese nationals.

In the case of Smith, the President directed his arrest, but orders deferment of his deportation until after he has served his sentence in a criminal case against him. He has been sentenced to serve one year in prison and to pay a fine of P500 with subsidiary imprisonment in case of insolvency for assaulting agents of a person in authority by the Court of first instance of Cavite. The decision is now on appeal with the Court of Appeals.

August 7.—TAKING steps to remedy the shortage of permanent buildings to house government offices, President Marcos instructs the Development Bank of the Philippines to grant loans for the construction of these buildings.

He has apprised all of the government agencies still without permanent offices of these loans and instructed them to avail of this monetary assistance immediately. The offices concerned can amortize the loans, the President states, from the fund appropriated for rentals.

He formalizes the plan for constructing these buildings, with a directive on the loans to the DBP, and a circular to the government offices concerned stating the plan.

At the same time, the President gives strict instructions to the same offices to restrain them from using any sum from the outlays in the general appropriations act for constructing buildings. He issues these orders to encourage the agencies concerned in availing of the loans.

He tells the heads of the offices to move quickly in getting the loans so that the buildings needed will earlier be completed. He adds that this is essential for the government itself, on its own funds, cannot in the near future afford to put up the buildings for its various agencies and instrumentalities.

Many government offices today are merely renting the buildings, or in most cases, the suite of offices, or floors they occupy, in order to have a place for working. Other offices are crowded into the few government buildings available. For lack of funds, the government has not been able to put up its own buildings.

The Chief Executive attends to several conferences on important national issues, some with private groups which call at Malacañang. The President takes advantage of these calls to discuss at length national problems and issues.

In a meeting with the representatives of the coconut industry, the President urges an acceleration of effort in the establishment of the coconut institute, asking the industry leaders to marshal their own resources, if possible, to provide the initial capital outlay for the agency.

During the meeting, the President asks the coconut growers and planters to submit their recommendations on the revision of the Laurel-Langley trade agreement in connection with the industry.

He likewise orders a management audit of the Philippine Coconut Administration (PHILCOA). The principal objective is to pin down extraneous services and surplus personnel. The audit will also seek to streamline the agency, such that there will be more economic and effective use of its resources.

August 8.—ORDERING an inquiry into certain cases that have dragged on for a long time, President Marcos serves stern warning on all fiscals and other officials who have shown a tendency to cause or allow delays in the investigation of criminal cases.

The President instructs Justice secretary Claudio Teehankee to investigate why the office of the city fiscal of Manila has not taken any definite action up to this time on the Visitacion Ibardolaza murder case.

He also tells Secretary Teehankee to require the municipal judge of Dumangas, Iloilo to explain why up to now he has not taken any action on a double murder case that was filed last January 10, 1967.

The Ibardolaza case has been pending investigation and final action by the Manila city fiscal's office for the past two years.

In his directive, the President emphasizes that he is determined to improve the machinery of the law in consonance with his program of social justice.

The Chief Executive attends two anniversary celebrations in the morning, the 66th anniversary day of the Philippine Constabulary; and in the afternoon, the anniversary of the signing of the land reform code.

In his speech before the officers and men of the Philippine Constabulary, the President reviews the process of reorganization that he had set into motion upon his assumption of the presidency last year and said this process has been going on since then, and will continue as long as I find it necessary to achieve an organization that will be most responsive to the needs of the people for a dependable and efficient safeguard against crime."

The President states that, in addition to reorganizing the PC to make it a more effective and reliable organization, he entrusted to it increased roles in the anti-smuggling, anti-crime and anti-vice drives.

"I felt that all these had to be done so that, through its performance, the Constabulary, as the country's national and premiere police organization, could gradually win back public confidence," the President says.

From Camp Crame, the President views the exhibits put up by the Land Authority, in connection with the land reform anniversary.

In the afternoon, still in commemoration of the land reform anniversary, the President signs Senate Bill 689 in the presence of farmers and tenants from Central Luzon; and reenacted the signing of Senate Bill 500.

Senate Bill 689 empowers the President to sell government property to raise funds for the land reform program requirements; while Senate Bill 500 authorizes the Agrarian Counsel to represent farm tenants and other agricultural workers in court cases.

Meanwhile, President Marcos directs the Postmaster General and other proper officials to allow works of art, including reproductions of these on any printed matter, to go through the mail or customs.

The President tells the postmaster general, the commissioner of customs, as well as their subordinates and all other government officials whose functions have something to do with receiving and conveying mail matter or importations, to allow works of art to go through the mails or customs and to be delivered to their addressees and consignees.

He specifically refers to paintings, sculptures, woodcuts and lithographs, “especially those deemed classical,” and their reproductions.

The directive is contained in a memorandum circular signed for the President by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, which was issued shortly after the President had lifted a ban imposed by Assistant Postmaster General Belarmino Navarro on the August 4 issue of Time Magazine.

In a telegram to Navarro Monday night, the President ordered the release of the banned issue and told the assistant postmaster general to refrain henceforth from banning in the mails publications containing reproductions of works of art.

Navarro’s ban had been imposed on the ground that the Time issue of August 4 contained a reproduction of a classic work of art, Renoir’s “After the Bath,” a painting of a nude woman which Navarro claimed was “indecent.”

The President had told Navarro that works of art are neither indecent nor pornographic, and the public should not be prevented from viewing them.

In another move, the President further revamps the Cabinet by appointing a new social welfare administrator and a new tourism commissioner.

The President names Gregorio M. Feliciano, president of the Philippine Rural Reconstruction Movement, as acting SWA chief and Gregorio Araneta II, president of an advertising company, acting commissioner of tourism.

Feliciano will take over from Francisco E. F. Remotigue who will run for mayor of Cebu City while Araneta will replace Manuel H. Nieto, Jr. who has asked for a leave of absence.

August 9.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the relief of a Philippine Constabulary non-commissioned officer assigned with Metrocom who was found to have acted rudely during a raid on the residence of a former judge.

He also orders acting Justice Secretary Claudio Teehankee to consider the filing of perjury charges against the person who furnished Metrocom with apparently wrong information which led to the raid on the residence of the judge.

In his relief order, the President cautions Metrocom to act with circumspection lest the organization lose the faith and confidence of the public and its effectiveness diminishes as the administration’s frontline strike force against crime.

He counsels the Metrocom after it brought to his attention the raid on the home of the judge and other raids which turned out to have been based on a wrong information.

Ordered relieved is M/Sgt. Ricarclo Clarin of the Metrocom who was verified to have behaved rudely during the raid on the residence of former Judge Avelino Santos in Malabon, Rizal

At the same time, the President instructs the National Bureau of Investigation to conduct a special investigation into the reported man-handling of Lapiang Malaya chieftain Valentin de los Santos.

He orders Col. Jolly Bugarin, NBI Chief, to inquire immediately into the incident at the National Mental Hospital, where an inmate reportedly beat up the aged Lapián leader, resulting in injuries which might have proved fatal.

The NBI is asked to pinpoint responsibility: whether the inmate who allegedly manhandled De los Santos was dangerous, and what the cause of the incident was.

In the morning, the President is guest of honor and speaker at the opening of the second national conference of the Philippine Foreign Operations Administration Fellows Association at the Manila hotel.

In his speech, the President projects the importance to the country's progress of Filipino trained manpower. He states that these able men and women should "roll up their sleeves and work," emphasizing that it is only through work that national goals may be attained.

Back in Malacañang, the President receives Mrs. Josephine Schuyler, mother of a young concert pianist who played at the Palace last year.

The President commiserates with Mrs. Schuyler on the sudden death of her daughter, Philippa, who was killed in a helicopter crash during a mission in Vietnam to rescue children from a war zone.

Mrs. Schuyler is accompanied by Herman E. Kimsey, deputy coordinator of the Philippa Schuyler Memorial Foundation, which seeks to help the Vietnamese return to a peaceful and stable life.

August 10.—PRESIDING a meeting with his Cabinet, President Marcos starts by admonishing them to refrain from using military equipment such as aircraft, for any unofficial missions to preclude any suspicion of abuse of privilege for electioneering purposes.

He states that this is important at this time particularly, with an election campaign about to begin. He warns that use of military aircraft by cabinet members may be mistakenly construed by observers as politicking.

The Chief Executive emphasizes that cabinet members and other government officials must act at all times with due regard for the rules and regulations, and that administration men should show by example adherence to poll laws and regulations.

During the two-hour long meeting, the President and members of his cabinet assess anew the various government projects, with special emphasis on the housing program and rural health projects.

The President concentrates on housing and health in view of the hopeful gains made in the other programs, which are now moving on their own momentum.

To accelerate the progress of the health program, the President directs Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez to make available P11 million for the program.

Of this amount, P6 million will be spent for the rural health program, while P5 million will go into the improvement of hospitals and hospital services.

On housing, the President urges greater initiatives toward completing projects already programmed.

He directs the Government Service Insurance System to channel its funds in the meantime to housing, in effect giving it high priority.

At same time, the President removes Undersecretary for Special Health Services Rodolfo Canos, after finding him guilty of charges of willful neglect of duty, with grave abuse of authority, dishonesty and conduct prejudicial to the best interest of the public services.

He unholds the findings of a presidential investigating committee, which had found the one-time acting secretary of health guilty of all three charges, and subsequently declares him “resigned from the service effective as of the date of his preventive suspension.” Dr. Canos was suspended Nov 29, 1966.

The findings of the probers establish that the former health secretary was culpable for the irregular purchase of non-emergency equipment, preferential treatment of certain dealers, over-pricing of the purchases made, and disregard of proper procedure, when he bypassed the processing units.

The irregularities of which Carlos was found guilty were committed when he was Acting Secretary of Health from Sept. 5, 1963 to Sept. 18, 1964 and mostly involved emergency procurement of supplies and equipment for the National Orthopedic Hospital.

In the morning before receiving scheduled callers, the President works on state papers in his study.

Then, he holds a series of conferences with, notably, Sen. Arturo Tolentino, Rep. Leonardo Perez, former Rep. and Mrs. Ramon Bagatsing, PAAF president Antonio de las Alas and Dr. Amado Campos, president of the Central Mindanao University.

Dr. Campos tells the President that he is in Manila to follow up a DBP loan earmarked for major projects of the university, such as irrigation facilities and livestock raising, particularly cattle.

A welcome break from routine is the call of the members of the Philippine Shooting Association, led by Gen. Alfredo Santos (ret.), who paid their courtesies on the return of the Philippine shooting team from the first Asian Shooting tournament in Tokyo.

He is enthused about the report of Gen. Santos that the Philippine team finished third in the tournament in a field of ten teams. The team won five gold medals, 12 bronze medals, four master’s badge and three diplomas of merit, the PSA officials informed the President.

Meanwhile, President Marcos authorizes Friendship, Inc., an organization devoted to the moral, educational, social and economic rehabilitation of former prisoners, to conduct an educational, membership and fund campaign from Sept. 1 to Dec. 31, 1967.

The Chief Executive gives the organization the authority to conduct the drive, in line with the administration policy of extending the benefits of social justice to all citizens, including reformed prisoners.

He points out that former prisoners desiring to live an honest life need moral and material support from the more fortunate members of society.

August 11.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the recall of Assistant Director Emilio M. Asistores of the Civil Aeronautics Administration from Tokyo and the investigation of his unauthorized trip to Japan.

He acts on the memorandum of Assistant Executive Secretary Jose Leido, which described the trip of Asistores as a violation of Section 7 (b) of R.A. No. 1789, or the Reparations Law.

This provision of the law prohibits any official or employee of the government from interceding in the procurement of reparations goods, and/ or services, or in negotiating or concluding reparations contracts with any Japanese nationality or entity.

Leido reports that Asistores left for Japan without authority from Malacañang to make the trip, nor the authority to accept CAA reparations

Asistores requested authorization to travel to Japan for the purpose of supervising the inspection, testing and processing of items covered under Reparations Bid No. 289, consisting of airport lighting facilities.

No authority was given him, but Asistores departed just the same for Tokyo, the Malacañang official reports.

In the morning, the President gives full attention to the unstable peace and order conditions in Pampanga, particularly Angeles City, following two recent killings in the province.

In a conference with Pampanga civilian authorities led by Gov. Francisco Nepomuceno and Philippine Constabulary officials headed by Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC chief, the President discusses the intensification of the anti-crime drive in the region, through closer coordination of civil and military forces engaged in the campaign.

Besides this conference, the President receives several groups of officials, Manila Nacionalista Party loaders, and provincial delegations.

While in the course of work in his study, the President, among others:

1. Approves the National Historical Commissions recommendation to have all historical markers in Pilipino, including the new marker naming the former Nagtahan bridge after Apolinario Mabini.
2. Refers the recommendation of Manila Police Department Chief Ricardo Papa that stiffer penalties be given vandals to his legal advisers for further study.
3. Instructs the Home Financing Commission chief to explore the possibility of including an allocation for housing in the US-RP Investments Guarantee Agreement, by negotiating for the expansion of its scope.

The President, during the day, takes time out to witness with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the signing of the agreement with the United States government which channels $3.5 million from the $28 million educational fund under the war damage payments to the cultural development fund of the Philippine Cultural Center.

August 12.—PRESIDENT Marcos creates a committee to deal directly with cases of illegal entry of aliens and incursions of foreign vessels into Philippine territorial waters.

He constitutes the committee in order to provide a compact and coordinated body that could speedily dispose of these cases.

The committee will be composed of representatives of the department of foreign affairs, Philippine Constabulary, bureau of immigration, bureau of fisheries, Philippine Navy, Philippine Army and the anti-smuggling action committee, the body is empowered to investigate and dispose of all cases brought before it.

The decisions of the committee in every instance shall be final, unless otherwise directed by higher authority, or as provided by law.

In creating the committee, the President points out that the illegal entry of aliens and the incursions of foreign vessels constituted a threat to our national security.

“Hence, the need,” he states, “for a more sustained and vigorous effort to stop these illegal entry of aliens and incursions of vessels into Philippine territorial waters.”

At the same time, the President imposed rigid curbs on a number of drugs which he defined as habit-forming, by placing them under government control.

The President issues a proclamation to this effect, following a notification from the Secretary General of the United Nations on the decision of the World Health Organization that the drugs specified fall under the rules laid down in the 1931 Convention for drugs.

The strict control imposed by the President is in accordance with the provisions of the Narcotic Drugs Law. Its purpose is to prevent or minimize use of addiction-forming, or addiction-sustaining drugs, and then put more teeth in the drive against drug addiction.

In the afternoon, the President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, attends the inauguration of the Nacionalista Party headquarters on España boulevard and Galicia street.

In his brief remarks, the President elaborates on the need for close adherence to the election law, the subject that had occupied him earlier.

He warns against violations of poll laws and regulations, especially overspending by candidates, declaring that any violator would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

In this connection, he directs Justice Secretary Claudio Teehankee to create a team of investigators and prosecutors to undertake the special task of investigating and prosecuting poll law violations.

August 13.—SPENDING most of his working hours in his study, President Marcos goes over administrative and other state matters needing his urgent attention.

He works from early morning up to late in the evening, with only a brief rest at noon, to clear his desk of state papers, which had piled up during a week. He had to devote most of the time during the last six days to attend to delegations of leaders from the provinces.

It is only towards noon that he came out of his private study to confer with Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, and a group of leaders from La Union.

In his meeting with Commissioner Sy-Changco, the President orders the immediate implementation of the plan to increase the salary of some 400,000 officials and employees of the national government.

Under the plan state employees will received a five percent pay increase in their salary effective July 1, this year.

A lump sum appropriation of ₱45 million has been provided for the salary increases in the budget signed by the President last August 4. The salary adjustments takes effect July 1, 1967.

To hasten implementation of the law, he also directs Commissioner Sy-Changco to waive the requirement that new appointments covering the salary adjustments be first issued before the employees are paid under the adjusted salary scales.

At the same time, the President imposes a fine corresponding to three months salary against the register of deeds of Lanao del Sur and ordered the provincial treasurer of the same province considered retired from the service effective August 4, 1967.

Hadji Urang Naga, the provincial treasurer, was found guilty of charges of gross negligence, incurring unauthorized overdrafts, and misuse of trust funds.

Domingo A. Carillo, the register of deeds, was found negligent in the performance of his duties for his failure to comply with regulations on the safe-keeping of government funds. Besides being fined, Carillo was also reprimanded by the President and warned that a repetition of the offense would be dealt with more severely.

The President also calls on the entire nation to join in the nationwide observance of National Language week.

By virtue of a continuing proclamation, National Language Week is observed from August 13 to 19 every year.

In his message, the President emphasizes that language is not only the soul of a race, but that it also serves as a unifying factor for national solidarity.

“No nation has become great without a language of its own,” the President stresses. “If the Philippines must be great again, we Filipinos should love, cultivate and use our own language.”

August 14.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders Health Secretary Paulino Garcia to immediately investigate the walk-out of interns at the Rizal Provincial Hospital the other day.

The walk-out is reportedly staged by some 55 medical students of the Far Eastern University who are serving their internship at the hospital because of the alleged assault of one of the female interns by a resident physician and the refusal of the hospital director to take action against him.

The female intern was reportedly criminally attacked two weeks ago by the resident physician. She brought the case to the attention of the hospital director, Dr. Glicerio Bustamante, but the latter allegedly refused to take any action against the physician.

At the same time, the President suspends from office First Assistant Provincial Fiscal Carlo Lozada of Surigao del Norte for improper conduct, arising from charges of oppression and harassment. He is suspended for a period of one year, and is sternly warned that repetition of the same offense will be dealt with more severely.

In the suspension order it was pointed out that Lozada filed with the municipal court of Mainit, Surigao del Norte charges against Mrs. Maria M. Sorongon for vote-buying in the 1965 elections.

However, the fiscal himself violated the Revised Election Code which specified that charges arising from election law violations should be filed with the court of first instance, which has exclusive jurisdiction over such cases.

The President also directs the Bureau of Immigration to deport a Chinese national, Chua King, as an undesirable alien, and to ship him out by the first available transportation to China or Formosa.

King violated a condition on which the deportation case filed against him on March 11, 1963 was held in abeyance, which was to report to the National Bureau of Investigation once a month for a period of five years.

He, however, reported to the NBI on April 17, 1963 and monthly thereafter up to Nov. 17, 1965 only. This was in gross violation of the said condition, thus warranting his outright deportation.

In the morning, the President confers with Gov. Feliciano Leviste of Batangas, with whom he discusses the decentralization bill now pending in Congress.

In the course of his work in his study on state papers, the President, among others, starts a major revamp of the Armed Forces of the Philippines high command by terminating the services of eight generals and one colonel, all holding key commands in the AFP.

He decides not to further extend the tours of duty of the nine ranking officers, all of whom are serving past the compulsory retirement period.

The officers to be retired, effective tomorrow, Aug. 15, are Gen. Victor Osias, AFP chief of staff; Commodore Heracleo Alano, flag officer in command of the Philippine Navy; Brig. Gen. Jose Ramos, PAF commanding general; Brig. Gen. Horacio Farolan, PAF vice commander; Brig. Gen. Isauro Sison, I MA commander; Brig. Gen. Reynaldo Mendoza, PMA superintendent; Brig. Gen. Protacio Sotto, surgeon general, V. Luna hospital; Brig. Gen. Salvador Piccio, deputy chief, PC; and Col. Jose N. Valdez, chaplain, Camp Aguinaldo.

The President is now screening a list of officers who are qualified to take over from the group of officers due to be retired tomorrow.

Generals Osias and Farolan were members of the PMA class of 1940, and were due to retire when their services were extended on Sept. 15, 1966; Commodore Alano and Generals Mendoza and Piccio, also belonged to PMA Class '40, and were retirable when their services were extended on June 15, 1966; Gen. Ramos was retirable when his tour of duty was extended on June 22, 1966; Gen. Sotto was also retirable when his service was extended on Aug. 29, 1966; Gen. Sison's service was extended on Sept. 30, 1966; and Col. Valdez, on Oct. 10, 1966.

In the group, only Generals Sison and Sotto are integrees, while Gen Ramos is a graduate of the PAF Flying School, class of 1940.

Official Week in Review: August 6 – August 14, 1967

August 6.—THE President opens the 1967 National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball series, which rolled on to a furious and colorful start at the Rizal Memorial Coliseum.

The President stays on after the opening rites in an effort to help revive national interest in the sport and to “sharpen public awareness of the benences and rewards arising from athletics.”

He is accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their three children.

In the morning, the President devotes most of his time going on state papers in his private study. He goes over the report of Secretary of Health Paulino Garcia who had investigated alleged irregularities in the last medical board examinations.

He cancels the examinations after confirming from the excerpts of the evidence gathered by Secretary Garcia which showed that there was “conclusive evidence of cheating, and persuasive” evidence of leakage of test questions.

At the same time, the President also orders the deportation of four aliens on the ground that their presence in the Philippines “is a menace to the peace and safety of the community.”

Ordered deported by the President are Alvin J. Smith, a third class US air force airman; Kee Lian Liok of Caloocan city; Ong Chu of Makati, Rizal; and Victor Co of Lucena City. The last three are all Chinese nationals.

In the case of Smith, the President directed his arrest, but orders deferment of his deportation until after he has served his sentence in a criminal case against him. He has been sentenced to serve one year in prison and to pay a fine of P500 with subsidiary imprisonment in case of insolvency for assaulting agents of a person in authority by the Court of first instance of Cavite. The decision is now on appeal with the Court of Appeals.

August 7.—TAKING steps to remedy the shortage of permanent buildings to house government offices, President Marcos instructs the Development Bank of the Philippines to grant loans for the construction of these buildings.

He has apprised all of the government agencies still without permanent offices of these loans and instructed them to avail of this monetary assistance immediately. The offices concerned can amortize the loans, the President states, from the fund appropriated for rentals.

He formalizes the plan for constructing these buildings, with a directive on the loans to the DBP, and a circular to the government offices concerned stating the plan.

At the same time, the President gives strict instructions to the same offices to restrain them from using any sum from the outlays in the general appropriations act for constructing buildings. He issues these orders to encourage the agencies concerned in availing of the loans.

He tells the heads of the offices to move quickly in getting the loans so that the buildings needed will earlier be completed. He adds that this is essential for the government itself, on its own funds, cannot in the near future afford to put up the buildings for its various agencies and instrumentalities.

Many government offices today are merely renting the buildings, or in most cases, the suite of offices, or floors they occupy, in order to have a place for working. Other offices are crowded into the few government buildings available. For lack of funds, the government has not been able to put up its own buildings.

The Chief Executive attends to several conferences on important national issues, some with private groups which call at Malacañang. The President takes advantage of these calls to discuss at length national problems and issues.

In a meeting with the representatives of the coconut industry, the President urges an acceleration of effort in the establishment of the coconut institute, asking the industry leaders to marshall their own resources, if possible, to provide the initial capital outlay for the agency.

During the meeting, the President asks the coconut growers and planters to submit their recommendations on the revision of the Laurel-Langley trade agreement in connection with the industry.

He likewise orders a management audit of the Philippine Coconut Administration (PHILCOA). The principal objective is to pin down extraneous services and surplus personnel. The audit will also seek to streamline the agency, such that there will be more economic and effective use of its resources.

August 8.—ORDERING an inquiry into certain cases that have dragged on for a long time, President Marcos serves stern warning on all fiscals and other officials who have shown a tendency to cause or allow delays in the investigation of criminal cases.

The President instructs Justice secretary Claudio Teehankee to investigate why the office of the city fiscal of Manila has not taken any definite action up to this time on the Visitacion Ibardolaza murder case.

He also tells Secretary Teehankee to require the municipal judge of Dumangas, Iloilo to explain why up to now he has not taken any action on a double murder case that was filed last January 10, 1967.

The Ibardolaza case has been pending investigation and final action by the Manila city fiscal's office for the past two years.

In his directive, the President emphasizes that he is determined to improve the machinery of the law in consonance with his program of social justice.

The Chief Executive attends two anniversary celebrations in the morning, the 66th anniversary day of the Philippine Constabulary; and in the afternoon, the anniversary of the signing of the land reform code.

In his speech before the officers and men of the Philippine Constabulary, the President reviews the process of reorganization that he had set into motion upon his assumption of the presidency last year and said this process has been going on since then, and will continue as long as I find it necessary to achieve an organization that will be most responsive to the needs of the people for a dependable and efficient safeguard against crime."

The President states that, in addition to reorganizing the PC to make it a more effective and reliable organization, he entrusted to it increased roles in the anti-smuggling, anti-crime and anti-vice drives.

"I felt that all these had to be done so that, through its performance, the Constabulary, as the country's national and premiere police organization, could gradually win back public confidence," the President says.

From Camp Crame, the President views the exhibits put up by the Land Authority, in connection with the land reform anniversary.

In the afternoon, still in commemoration of the land reform anniversary, the President signs Senate Bill 689 in the presence of farmers and tenants from Central Luzon; and reenacted the signing of Senate Bill 500.

Senate Bill 689 empowers the President to sell government property to raise funds for the land reform program requirements; while Senate Bill 500 authorizes the Agrarian Counsel to represent farm tenants and other agricultural workers in court cases.

Meanwhile, President Marcos directs the Postmaster General and other proper officials to allow works of art, including reproductions of these on any printed matter, to go through the mail or customs.

The President tells the postmaster general, the commissioner of customs, as well as their subordinates and all other government officials whose functions have something to do with receiving and conveying mail matter or importations, to allow works of art to go through the mails or customs and to be delivered to their addressees and consignees.

He specifically refers to paintings, sculptures, woodcuts and lithographs, “especially those deemed classical,” and their reproductions.

The directive is contained in a memorandum circular signed for the President by Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, which was issued shortly after the President had lifted a ban imposed by Assistant Postmaster General Belarmino Navarro on the August 4 issue of Time Magazine.

In a telegram to Navarro Monday night, the President ordered the release of the banned issue and told the assistant postmaster general to refrain henceforth from banning in the mails publications containing reproductions of works of art.

Navarro’s ban had been imposed on the ground that the Time issue of August 4 contained a reproduction of a classic work of art, Renoir’s “After the Bath,” a painting of a nude woman which Navarro claimed was “indecent.”

The President had told Navarro that works of art are neither indecent nor pornographic, and the public should not be prevented from viewing them.

In another move, the President further revamps the Cabinet by appointing a new social welfare administrator and a new tourism commissioner.

The President names Gregorio M. Feliciano, president of the Philippine Rural Reconstruction Movement, as acting SWA chief and Gregorio Araneta II, president of an advertising company, acting commissioner of tourism.

Feliciano will take over from Francisco E. F. Remotigue who will run for mayor of Cebu City while Araneta will replace Manuel H. Nieto, Jr. who has asked for a leave of absence.

August 9.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the relief of a Philippine Constabulary non-commissioned officer assigned with Metrocom who was found to have acted rudely during a raid on the residence of a former judge.

He also orders acting Justice Secretary Claudio Teehankee to consider the filing of perjury charges against the person who furnished Metrocom with apparently wrong information which led to the raid on the residence of the judge.

In his relief order, the President cautions Metrocom to act with circumspection lest the organization lose the faith and confidence of the public and its effectiveness diminishes as the administration’s frontline strike force against crime.

He counsels the Metrocom after it brought to his attention the raid on the home of the judge and other raids which turned out to have been based on a wrong information.

Ordered relieved is M/Sgt. Ricarclo Clarin of the Metrocom who was verified to have behaved rudely during the raid on the residence of former Judge Avelino Santos in Malabon, Rizal

At the same time, the President instructs the National Bureau of Investigation to conduct a special investigation into the reported man-handling of Lapiang Malaya chieftain Valentin de los Santos.

He orders Col. Jolly Bugarin, NBI Chief, to inquire immediately into the incident at the National Mental Hospital, where an inmate reportedly beat up the aged Lapiang leader, resulting in injuries which might have proved fatal.

The NBI is asked to pinpoint responsibility: whether the inmate who allegedly manhandled De los Santos was dangerous, and what the cause of the incident was.

In the morning, the President is guest of honor and speaker at the opening of the second national conference of the Philippine Foreign Operations Administration Fellows Association at the Manila hotel.

In his speech, the President projects the importance to the country's progress of Filipino trained manpower. He states that these able men and women should "roll up their sleeves and work," emphasizing that it is only through work that national goals may be attained.

Back in Malacañang, the President receives Mrs. Josephine Schuyler, mother of a young concert pianist who played at the Palace last year.

The President commiserates with Mrs. Schuyler on the sudden death of her daughter, Philippa, who was killed in a helicopter crash during a mission in Vietnam to rescue children from a war zone.

Mrs. Schuyler is accompanied by Herman E. Kimsey, deputy coordinator of the Philippa Schuyler Memorial Foundation, which seeks to help the Vietnamese return to a peaceful and stable life.

August 10.—PRESIDING a meeting with his Cabinet, President Marcos starts by admonishing them to refrain from using military equipment such as aircraft, for any unofficial missions to preclude any suspicion of abuse of privilege for electioneering purposes.

He states that this is important at this time particularly, with an election campaign about to begin. He warns that use of military aircraft by cabinet members may be mistakenly construed by observers as politicking.

The Chief Executive emphasizes that cabinet members and other government officials must act at all times with due regard for the rules and regulations, and that administration men should show by example adherence to poll laws and regulations.

During the two-hour long meeting, the President and members of his cabinet assess anew the various government projects, with special emphasis on the housing" program and rural health projects.

The President concentrates on housing and health in view of the hopeful gains made in the other programs, which are now moving on their own momentum.

To accelerate the progress of the health program, the President directs Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez to make available P11 million for the program.

Of this amount, P6 million will be spent for the rural health program, while P5 million will go into the improvement of hospitals and" hospital services.

On housing, the President urges greater initiatives toward completing projects already programmed.

He directs the Government Service Insurance System to channel its funds in the meantime to housing, in effect giving it high priority.

At same time, the President removes Undersecretary for Special Health Services Rodolfo Canos, after finding him guilty of charges of willful neglect of duty, with grave abuse of authority, dishonesty and conduct prejudicial to the best interest of the public services.

He unholds the findings of a presidential investigating committee, which had found the one-time acting secretary of health guilty of all three charges, and subsequently declares him “resigned from the service effective as of the date of his preventive suspension.” Dr. Canos was suspended Nov 29, 1966.

The findings of the probers establish that the former health secretary was culpable for the irregular purchase of non-emergency equipment, preferential treatment of certain dealers, over-pricing of the purchases made, and disregard of proper procedure, when he bypassed the processing units.

The irregularities of which Carlos was found guilty were committed when he was Acting Secretary of Health from Sept. 5, 1963 to Sept. 18, 1964 and mostly involved emergency procurement of supplies and equipment for the National Orthopedic Hospital.

In the morning before receiving scheduled callers, the President works on state papers in his study.

Then, he holds a series of conferences with, notably, Sen. Arturo Tolentino, Rep. Leonardo Perez, former Rep. and Mrs. Ramon Bagatsing, PAAF president Antonio de las Alas and Dr. Amado Campos, president of the Central Mindanao University.

Dr. Campos tells the President that he is in Manila to follow up a DBP loan earmarked for major projects of the university, such as irrigation facilities and livestock raising, particularly cattle.

A welcome break from routine is the call of the members of the Philippine Shooting Association, led by Gen. Alfredo Santos (ret.), who paid their courtesies on the return of the Philippine shooting team from the first Asian Shooting tournament in Tokyo.

He is enthused about the report of Gen. Santos that the Philippine team finished third in the tournament in a field of ten teams. The team won five gold medals, 12 bronze medals, four master’s badge and three diplomas of merit, the PSA officials informed the President.

Meanwhile, President Marcos authorizes Friendship, Inc., an organization devoted to the moral, educational, social and economic rehabilitation of former prisoners, to conduct an educational, membership and fund campaign from Sept. 1 to Dec. 31, 1967.

The Chief Executive gives the organization the authority to conduct the drive, in line with the administration policy of extending the benefits of social justice to all citizens, including reformed prisoners.

He points out that former prisoners desiring to live an honest life need moral and material support from the more fortunate members of society.

August 11.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders the recall of Assistant Director Emilio M. Asistores of the Civil Aeronautics Administration from Tokyo and the investigation of his unauthorized trip to Japan.

He acts on the memorandum of Assistant Executive Secretary Jose Leido, which described the trip of Asistores as a violation of Section 7 (b) of R.A. No. 1789, or the Reparations Law.

This provision of the law prohibits any official or employee of the government from interceding in the procurement of reparations goods, and/ or services, or in negotiating or concluding reparations contracts with any Japanese nationality or entity.

Leido reports that Asistores left for Japan without authority from Malacañang to make the trip, nor the authority to accept CAA reparations

Asistores requested authorization to travel to Japan for the purpose of supervising the inspection, testing and processing of items covered under Reparations Bid No. 289, consisting of airport lighting facilities.

No authority was given him, but Asistores departed just the same for Tokyo, the Malacañang official reports.

In the morning, the President gives full attention to the unstable peace and order conditions in Pampanga, particularly Angeles City, following two recent killings in the province.

In a conference with Pampanga civilian authorities led by Gov. Francisco Nepomuceno and Philippine Constabulary officials headed by Brig. Gen. Manuel Yan, PC chief, the President discusses the intensification of the anti-crime drive in the region, through closer coordination of civil and military forces engaged in the campaign.

Besides this conference, the President receives several groups of officials, Manila Nacionalista Party loaders, and provincial delegations.

While in the course of work in his study, the President, among others:

1. Approves the National Historical Commissions recommendation to have all historical markers in Pilipino, including the new marker naming the former Nagtahan bridge after Apolinario Mabini.
2. Refers the recommendation of Manila Police Department Chief Ricardo Papa that stiller penalties be given vandals to his legal advisers for further study.
3. Instructs the Home Financing Commission chief to explore the possibility of including an allocation for housing in the US-RP Investments Guarantee Agreement, by negotiating for the expansion of its scope.

The President, during the day, takes time out to witness with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the signing of the agreement with the United States government which channels $3.5 million from the $28 million educational fund under the war damage payments to the cultural development fund of the Philippine Cultural Center.

August 12.—PRESIDENT Marcos creates a committee to deal directly with cases of illegal entry of aliens and incursions of foreign vessels into Philippine territorial waters.

He constitutes the committee in order to provide a compact and coordinated body that could speedily dispose of these cases.

The committee will be composed of representatives of the department of foreign affairs, Philippine Constabulary, bureau of immigration, bureau of fisheries, Philippine Navy, Philippine Army and the anti-smuggling action committee, the body is empowered to investigate and dispose of all cases brought before it.

The decisions of the committee in every instance shall be final, unless otherwise directed by higher authority, or as provided by law.

In creating the committee, the President points out that the illegal entry of aliens and the incursions of foreign vessels constituted a threat to our national security.

“Hence, the need,” he states, “for a more sustained and vigorous effort to stop these illegal entry of aliens and incursions of vessels into Philippine territorial waters.”

At the same time, the President imposed rigid curbs on a number of drugs which he defined as habit-forming, by placing them under government control.

The President issues a proclamation to this effect, following a notification from the Secretary General of the United Nations on the decision of the World Health Organization that the drugs specified fall under the rules laid down in the 1931 Convention for drugs.

The strict control imposed by the President is in accordance with the provisions of the Narcotic Drugs Law. Its purpose is to prevent or minimize use of addiction-forming, or addiction-sustaining drugs, and then put more teeth in the drive against drug addiction.

In the afternoon, the President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, attends the inauguration of the Nacionalista Party headquarters on España boulevard and Galicia street.

In his brief remarks, the President elaborates on the need for close adherence to the election law, the subject that had occupied him earlier.

He warns against violations of poll laws and regulations, especially overspending by candidates, declaring that any violator would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

In this connection, he directs Justice Secretary Claudio Teehankee to create a team of investigators and prosecutors to undertake the special task of investigating and prosecuting poll law violations.

August 13.—SPENDING most of his working hours in his study, President Marcos goes over administrative and other state matters needing his urgent attention.

He works from early morning up to late in the evening, with only a brief rest at noon, to clear his desk of state papers, which had piled up during a week. He had to devote most of the time during the last six days to attend to delegations of leaders from the provinces.

It is only towards noon that he came out of his private study to confer with Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, and a group of leaders from La Union.

In his meeting with Commissioner Sy-Changco, the President orders the immediate implementation of the plan to increase the salary of some 400,000 officials and employees of the national government.

Under the plan state employees will received a five percent pay increase in their salary effective July 1, this year.

A lump sum appropriation of ₱45 million has been provided for the salary increases in the budget signed by the President last August 4. The salary adjustments takes effect July 1, 1967.

To hasten implementation of the law, he also directs Commissioner Sy-Changco to waive the requirement that new appointments covering the salary adjustments be first issued before the employees are paid under the adjusted salary scales.

At the same time, the President imposes a fine corresponding to three months salary against the register of deeds of Lanao del Sur and ordered the provincial treasurer of the same province considered retired from the service effective August 4, 1967.

Hadji Urang Naga, the provincial treasurer, was found guilty of charges of gross negligence, incurring unauthorized overdrafts, and misuse of trust funds.

Domingo A. Carillo, the register of deeds, was found negligent in the performance of his duties for his failure to comply with regulations on the safe-keeping of government funds. Besides being fined, Carillo was also reprimanded by the President and warned that a repetition of the offense would be dealt with more severely.

The President also calls on the entire nation to join in the nationwide observance of National Language week.

By virtue of a continuing proclamation, National Language Week is observed from August 13 to 19 every year.

In his message, the President emphasizes that language is not only the soul of a race, but that it also serves as a unifying factor for national solidarity.

“No nation has become great without a language of its own,” the President stresses. “If the Philippines must be great again, we Filipinos should love, cultivate and use our own language.”

August 14.—PRESIDENT Marcos orders Health Secretary Paulino Garcia to immediately investigate the walk-out of interns at the Rizal Provincial Hospital the other day.

The walk-out is reportedly staged by some 55 medical students of the Far Eastern University who are serving their internship at the hospital because of the alleged assault of one of the female interns by a resident physician and the refusal of the hospital director to take action against him.

The female intern was reportedly criminally attacked two weeks ago by the resident physician. She brought the case to the attention of the hospital director, Dr. Glicerio Bustamante, but the latter allegedly refused to take any action against the physician.

At the same time, the President suspends from office First Assistant Provincial Fiscal Carlo Lozada of Surigao del Norte for improper conduct, arising from charges of oppression and harassment. He is suspended for a period of one year, and is sternly warned that repetition of the same offense will be dealt with more severely.

In the suspension order it was pointed out that Lozada filed with the municipal court of Mainit, Surigao del Norte charges against Mrs. Maria M. Sorongon for vote-buying in the 1965 elections.

However, the fiscal himself violated the Revised Election Code which specified that charges arising from election law violations should be filed with the court of first instance, which has exclusive jurisdiction over such cases.

The President also directs the Bureau of Immigration to deport a Chinese national, Chua King, as an undesirable alien, and to ship him out by the first available transportation to China or Formosa.

King violated a condition on which the deportation case filed against him on March 11, 1963 was held in abeyance, which was to report to the National Bureau of Investigation once a month for a period of five years.

He, however, reported to the NBI on April 17, 1963 and monthly thereafter up to Nov. 17, 1965 only. This was in gross violation of the said condition, thus warranting his outright deportation.

In the morning, the President confers with Gov. Feliciano Leviste of Batangas, with whom he discusses the decentralization bill now pending in Congress.

In the course of his work in his study on state papers, the President, among others, starts a major revamp of the Armed Forces of the Philippines high command by terminating the services of eight generals and one colonel, all holding key commands in the AFP.

He decides not to further extend the tours of duty of the nine ranking officers, all of whom are serving past the compulsory retirement period.

general; Brig. Gen. Horacio Farolan, PAF vice commander; Brig. Gen. Isauro Sison, I MA commander; Brig. Gen. Reynaldo Mendoza, PMA superintendent; Brig. Gen. Protacio Sotto, surgeon general, V. Luna hospital; Brig. Gen. Salvador Piccio, deputy chief, PC; and Col. Jose N. Valdez, chaplain, Camp Aguinaldo.

The President is now screening a list of officers who are qualified to take over from the group of officers due to be retired tomorrow.

Sison's service was extended on Sept. 30, 1966; and Col. Valdez, on Oct. 10, 1966.

In the group, only Generals Sison and Sotto are integrees, while Gen Ramos is a graduate of the PAF Flying School, class of 1940.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

August 30

PRESIDENT Marcos managed his official time to accommodate conferences, callers, and necessary paper work, in the process dealing with anti-crime drive problems, a report by seismology experts on the recent earthquakes here, Philcomsat matters and economic concerns.

In a conference with seismology experts, the President took occasion to allay the fears of the public about an alleged impending major quake, which nine misguided seer had foisted on the people. He relayed the opinion of experts that no earthquake can be scientifically predicted.

Among the experts who saw him were Dr. S. Omote of the UNESCO and Director Roman Kintanar of the Weather Bureau.

Government officials who met with the President included Senator Leonardo Perez. Labor Secretary Blas F. Ople, Rep. Marcelino Veloso, House Majority Floor Leader; Acting Secretary of Education O. D. Corpuz, Undersecretary of Transportation and Communications Manuel B. Syquio and Undersecretary of Defense for Munitions Manuel Q. Salientes.

The President discussed with Secretary Corpuz the necessity of encouraging engineering schools in putting up courses on earthquake engineering.

Secretary Syquio consulted the President on the problems of the Philcomsat station, while Secretary Salientes accompanied William, Goldbach, William Pickering and E. Zehner, all officials of the Colt Industries Manufacturing, who paid a courtesy call on the Chief Executive.

Meanwhile, the President directed Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release P500,000 to the Weather Bureau to support its project designed to zone the country according to particular areas' sensitivity to earthquakes.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Enunciated a new government policy in the handling of Muslim pilgrimages to Mecca.

The new policy requires that only one ship and one aircraft be chartered, that the port of embarkation should be Manila, and that pilgrimage funds be properly audited prior to the pilgrim's departure,

2. Directed Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, to prosecute a group of PC men who were reported to have extorted money from Chinese businessmen while allegedly on a special mission in Nueva Ecija.

3. Directed Chairman Crispino de Castro of the Police Commission to take administrative and criminal action against policeman Moises Platon of Makati, Rizal for having shot and killed one Francisco Mateo; policeman Marcelino Santiago of Malolos, Bulacan for having shot a detainee, and a policeman of Navotas, Rizal for having shot Venancio Olanda.

In the evening, the President was guest speaker at the induction ceremonies of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce held at the Manila Hotel.

August 31

PRESIDENT Marcos kept pace with engagements that for a weekend was full, apart from his usual heavy paper work which he reserves for Saturday and Sunday.

He presided at the signing of the contracts for the establishment of rural electrification pilot projects at two points of the country, in Negros Occidental and Misamis Oriental, which non-profit and non-stock cooperatives will implement.

The pioneering projects, patterned after the non-profit power cooperative, which electrified 98 per cent of the rural United States, will be set up with the aid of the U. S. Agency for International Development. Then the Chief Executive officiated at the oath-taking of the officials of the newly chartered Bais City in Negros Oriental. Reenactment of the signing of the bill making Bais a city was witnessed by Sen. Lorenzo Teves, Gov. Mariano Perdices and officials of the new city headed by Mayor Genaro Goñi.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, honored at luncheon at Malacañang Minister of Economic Affairs Li Kwoh-ling of the Republic of China, who had come to Manila to receive the 1968 Ramon Magsaysay Award for good government.

Present at the luncheon were Chinese Ambassador Han Lih-wu, members of the Cabinet headed by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos, and prominent members of the Chinese community in Manila.

In the afternoon, the First couple motored to Makati, Rizal where they were guests at cocktails given by the Philippines Free Press in celebration of the magazine's 60th anniversary.

In the evening, the President was the special guest at the annual reunion of Pangasinenses, where he spoke of the administration's efforts to hasten social and economic change in order to broaden the base of Philippine democracy.

September 1

PRESIDENT Marcos declared that the additional taxes sought in the administration's tax program were the Nation's 'investment in progress.'

The Chief Executive made this point clear in discussing national issues at his weekly "Pakinggan ang Pangulo" radio-television chat.

Explaining the relationship of tax bills and prices, the President said: "Taxation is one of the ways of dampening inflationary pressures (for) when you tax, you remove from the hands of the demand sector, meaning the buying sector, the money that exerts pressure on the prices."

He conceded there might be an increase in prices as a result of the increase in cost at the outset, such as that expected of the increased taxes on petroleum products.

However, he said, prices will settle at reasonable levels after some time.

September 2

PRESIDENT Marcos made a quick trip by air through the flood-ravaged provinces of Central Luzon, to assess for himself the extent of damage and destruction from the recent typhoon. "

Earlier in the day, the President followed his usual schedule of conferences receiving visitors, and desk work, meeting among others Philippine Air Lines.

The Philippine Soft Ball delegation, headed by Alfredo Andal and Jose Valle, availed on the President to bid farewell prior to their departure for Mexico, where the team will compete in the World Olympics. They were accompanied by PAAF President Felipe Monserrat, Jr. who is also president of the Philippine Olympic Committee.

In the afternoon, the President inducted Gaudencio Santos as port manager of San Fernando, La Union. Santos was formerly assistant civil engineer, and has been in the public works bureau for the last 34 years. Among other actions, the Chief Executive:

1. Issued a proclamation extending the first educational and fund campaign of the Moral Re-Armament Foundation of the Philippines to November 30 this year.

2. Signed the designations of:

- (a) Undersecretary Petra de Joya as acting secretary of the department of Social Service, in the absence of Secretary Gregorio Feliciano who is on an official mission abroad.

- (b) DBP Chairman Gregorio Licaros as acting chairman of the National Economic Council, in the absence of Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, acting NEC chairman.

- (c) Luis Tirso Revilla and Jose Moras as members of the board of director of the Philippine Sugar Institute.

- (d) Rodrigo Amistoso as acting provincial treasurer of Iloilo.

Meanwhile, the President also extended ad interim appointments to Manuel Agudo as chairman of the Civil Service Board of Appeals, and to Josias Guinto as member of the same board.

Agudo's elevation to chairman is a promotion. He was a member of the same board, a post which Guinto will fill.

Earlier today the President proclaimed two special holidays: September 5, in General Santos City; and September 9, in Cebu province and the cities of Cebu, Danao, Lapu-Lapu and Toledo.

September 5 marks the inauguration of the new City, while September 9 was the birthday of the late President Sergio Osmeña.

September 4

PRESIDENT Marcos concentrated on desk work, pausing only to induct live district judges confirmed by the Commission on Appointments.

Among others, the Chief Executive:

1. Ordered the immediate implementation of the program of seminars for local government officials, to acquaint them better with the dynamics development programs.

2. Directed that illegal dikes and fishponds in the communal fishing grounds of Bulacan be demolished, except those covered by injunctions.

3. Instructed the bureau of telecommunications to set up an effective teletype network for the Metrocom, which will link its headquarters with all local police stations and key national government agencies concerned with the anti-crime drive.

4. Asked the Philippine Committee on Space Research to direct and coordinate all space programs and activities.

5. Directed the defense department to declassify photogrammetric materials for the use of provincial and other local governments in tax mapping and land reassessment.

6. Proclaimed Sept. 15-21 as Savings and Home Loan Week; Oct. 17 as Credit Union Day; and Sept. 16 as Law Day.

At about noon, the President inducted five more district judges at a ceremony in his study room attended by the now judges' kin and close friends, as well as a group of government, officials.

Those inducted were Judges Elviro Peralta, Victorino Savellano, Jose Ratnolete, Alfredo Laya and Otilio Abaya.

In the afternoon, the President wired Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio Feliciano to congratulate him for his unanimous election as president of the 90-Nation U. N. International Conference of Ministers responsible for social welfare.

Later in the evening, the President closeted himself and work on state papers.

September 5

PRESIDENT Marcos and a small party which accompanied him from Manila touched down at General Santos City's airfield at about 10 a.m. this morning. A large crowd gave him a warm welcome, and followed the presidential party into the city proper, where the President's first stop was at the city church where Te Deum was said in his behalf.

He then attended a public rally in connection with the inaugural rites, where he was the guest of honor and principal speaker. In his speech he underscored the spirit of integration which, he said, would bring the cultural minorities into the national mainstream and make for a unified Filipino people, so necessary to rapid development of the country.

He also announced during the speech several measures taken to bring Muslims closer to the government, and the release of outlays for important infrastructure and other public works projects.

Later, the Chief Executive conferred with army area commanders and PC zone and provincial commanders on the peace and order situation. Apart from a survey of development projects and attending the inauguration, the President also surveyed the peace and order situation in Cotabato province and other areas.

The President made a sidetrip to the Dole Philippines plantation to take a look at its facilities.

September 6

ARRIVING in Surigao del Norte from South Cotabato where he inaugurated the new City of General Santos, the President announced the availability to the masses of medicines worth P15 million to meet the flu epidemic and other common diseases.

The medicines will be distributed to the various health centers and rural health units throughout the country for free distribution.

The President has been giving emphasis to the rural health aspect of the medical program to cut down on deaths due to lack of medical assistance in the rural areas.

Earlier in the morning, before he left Cotabato, he visited the Bilaan tribe on Mount Matutum.

The Chief Executive arrived in Surigao del Norte at noon after hearing Te Deum at the local parish church, he inaugurated the new science building of the Saint Nicholas College which is operated by Dutch missionaries.

At 3 p.m., the President opened the athletic competition, and later inaugurated the Pacific Cement company, Inc.

Meanwhile, the President ordered the suspension of the eviction of squatters at the Buhangin area, a portion of the Yutivo property in Davao as he requested Sen. Alejandro Almendras and Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, to proceed to the locality and look into their problems.

In the evening, the Chief Executive met aboard the Philippine Navy ship. EPS 777 PC provincial commanders and chiefs of police of Mindanao as he directed Col. Paulino Sanchez, IV PC zone commander, to submit plans of action for a concerted peace and order drive in the region. The President asked the provincial commanders, after a two-hour conference, to return to their respective posts and to meet: with and ask political, civic and religious leaders to cooperate, especially in the campaign against loose firearms.

Among those who conferred with the President aboard RPS 777, aside from Mindanao PC provincial commanders, were Chiefs of Police Lamatao Sali of Marawi City, Cesar Neri of Cagayan de Oro City, and Angel Mallorga, Jr, of Butuan City.

Also in attendance were Gov. Jose Sering of Surigao del Norte. Rep. Constantino Navarro, chairman of the House committee on national defense: and Rep. Gregorio Murillo of Surigao del Sur.

September 7

PRESIDENT Marcos departed by plane from Surigao at about 9 a.m., flying straight to Dumaguete City where he inaugurated the new provincial airport and the new City of Bais.

He arrived at the new airport where a big crowd headed by Gov. Mariano Perdices and Sen. Lorenzo Teves await him.

After the inaugural rites, the President motored to Bais City, 44 kilometers away, for the inauguration and induction of the new officials of Bais.

In his speech, the Chief Executive called for national unity in the pursuit of national development tasks, emphasizing that divisive politics or any other acts which will destroy national harmony and unity are inimical to the nation's interest.

Afterwards, the President visited the Bais Sugar Central where he had lunch. Hosts were officials of the Central, with Col. Salvador Villa chairman of the Philippine National Railways, acting as principal host.

Shortly after lunch and a bit of rest, the President enplaned for Manila arriving at Malacañang about half past 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Early in the evening, the President directed Justice Secretary Claudio Teehankee to suspend the sheriff of South Cotabato and file administrative charges against him for abuse of authority and oppression.

In addition, the Chief Executive ordered Undersecretary of Agriculture Isosceles Pascual to suspend the issuance of any titles to the lands now occupied by the original settlers in Maitum, South Cotabato, even if said titles have already been signed.

In a third order, the President instructed the PC provincial commander in that province to eject any representative of Fleischer and Company now occupying the disputed lands, and investigate the killing of the head of the firm

Tin; President's order were issued upon representation of the settlers of Maitum who allowed that they have been oppressed and evicted outright from their lands by Fleischer and Co. with the help of the sheriff and certain other entities.

In another move for the increase and promotion of the country's export trade, the President in an executive order promulgated now and simplified export procedures of government commodity agencies, with the elimination of much paper work.

President's Week in Review: September 8-14, 1968

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

September 8

PRESIDENT Marcos focused his attention on labor problems, holding a series of meetings with Department of Labor officials, leaders of the Social Security System labor union, and the management of the National Power Corporation.

The Chief Executive conferred shortly before noon with Acting Secretary of Labor S. Tomas dela Cruz, who briefed him on developments in the labor front.

Early in the evening, the President met the leaders of the striking labor union of the SSS, and later with the officials of the National Power Corporation, headed by Chairman Canuto Enerio and General Manager Ramon Ravanzo.

The President advised the SSS employees association leaders to further consider compliance with the return-to-work order of the Court of Industrial Relations.

Before meeting the SSS labor union leaders, the President met Director Reginaldo Pascual and a delegation of doctors and nurses from the Philippine General Hospital, with whom he discussed the problem of the government hospital.

The Chief Executive ordered the immediate release of P3 million to the PGH to meet its most urgent problems. He also directed a management audit of the administrative, medical and nursing staffs of the hospital with the view to improving efficiency.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children—Imee, Bongbong and Irene—heard Mass at the Malacañang chapel.

September 9

PRESIDENT Marcos had a full schedule of visitors, including diplomats, businessmen, and officials while attending in-between to state papers and other urgent official business.

Topping his schedule of activities was the presentation of credentials by Federico Barrera as new Mexican ambassador to the Philippines.

Earlier in the morning the President directed the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources to reconsider the case involving a land dispute between settlers in M'lang, Cotabato and a plantation firm there.

In instructions to Undersecretaries Dioscoro Umali and Isosceles Pascual, the President asked that a decision on the case be held in abeyance and that if any titles on the disputed lands had been issued, to recall the titles immediately.

In another directive the President ordered Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief- and Forestry Director Teofilo Santos to suspend and investigate all the officers and men under them identified as having demolished the houses and destroyed the fields of small settlers in a timber concession in Davao del Norte.

He asked both Gen. Raval and Director Santos to implement the order immediately and to report on the action taken within 15 days.

Other presidential directives on agriculture included:

1. Instructions to the Development Bank of the Philippines to continue to extend loans to small farmers for the purchase of needed agricultural equipment, such as small tractors and hand tillers.

The DBP had earlier suspended all loans to farmers, including small farmers. The President specified that the loans for small machinery are to be exceptions.

2. Instructions to the Presidential Economic Staff to call a public bidding for supplying 10,000 head of cattle to Operations Cattle Dispersal.

Later the President approved the trip to Soviet Russia of two officials awarded a fellowship by the Food and Agriculture Organization to make a study of livestock industries and livestock products statistics in that country.

Cleared for travel to the USSR are Dr. Severino Recto of the Bureau of Animal Industry and Dr. Mamerto Mamasco of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Their trip was approved upon the recommendation of Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos who underscored the “intrinsic merits” of the two cases.

The Chief Executive also approved the composition of the Philippine delegation to the ASEAN conference set for September 23-28 in Manila. The delegation will be headed by Secretary of Commerce and Industry Marcelo Balatbat, with the following as members: Juan Araneta of the National Export Coordinating Center, vice-chairman; Wilfredo Vega of the Department of Foreign Affairs; Mrs. Rosario Malao of the ASEAN secretariat in the Philippines; Dr. Urbano Zafra, executive director of the DCI technical staff; Razon Haresco, Tariff Commission member; Guillermo Soliven of the Central Bank; Constancio Ancheta of the NEC; Rafael Zulueta of the Presidential Economic Staff; Teofisto Guingona, Jr., president of the Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines; Federico Borromeo, president of the Philippine Chamber of Industries; Gaudencio Mahalac of the Philippine Chamber of Wood Industries; and Francisco Ortigas.

Forming an advisory group to the delegation are Voltaire Andres, Jose Zarate, Edsel Custodio and Tahir Amilhamja, all foreign trade promotion attaches in the Philippine embassies in Djakarta, Bangkok, Kuala Lumpur and Singapore, respectively.

In the evening the President approved the promotional appointments to colonel and navy captain of 73 officers in the various branches of the Armed Forces, as well as the promotion of 79 company-grade officers of the Philippine Air Force, five officers in the Bureau of Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The President then received the Far East participants in the 63rd Trade Mission of the International House, who paid their respects, and Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos, who came with Japanese Ambassador Takeshi Yasukawa and Gregorio Abad, chairman of the Reparations Commission.

Earlier on the day the President met with Governor Isidro Rodriguez and some municipal mayors of Rizal on problems of their constituencies.

September 10

ON THE EVE of his birthday, President Marcos carried on official business as usual, broken only by special engagements, including the loyalty pledge rites by the Armed Forces, the inauguration of the Rural Development and Research Center at Camp Aguinaldo, and the turnover of a village for orphans to the government.

While at work in his study room, the President ordered an inquiry into a third land dispute in Mindanao, involving 150 settler families evicted from their lands; directed that a 200-hectare reservation be given to Manobos in Agusan, and extended clemency to more than 160 prisoners, among them Rafael Lacson, former governor of Negros Occidental; and Hadji Kamlon, Luis Taruc, former Huk supremo, was granted conditional pardon.

The President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, was honored at a loyalty parade and review by the Armed Forces of the Philippines at Camp Aguinaldo in the morning.

The traditional pledge of loyalty by the AFP was interpreted by the Chief Executive as symbolic of the AFP's involvement in national development and progress.

Following the loyalty parade, the President inducted into office 73 new army colonels, whom he had extended ad interim promotions.

President and Mrs. Marcos then officiated at the formal inauguration of the Rural Development and Research Center at the Infrastructure Operations Center in Camp Aguinaldo. The Center will open its facilities to local government executives in coordinating their economic development programs with national government plans, by gleaming from the Center all the economic facts and data they need.

Former Leyte Gov. Norberto Romualdez, Jr., coordinator and action officer of the Presidential Advisory Council for Public Works and Community Development, turned over the research center to the President.

From Camp Aguinaldo, the President and the First Lady motored to the Civil Aeronautics Administration compound where the First Lady turned over to the government the newly completed "Nayon ng Kabataan", a 14-cottage orphanage built by the Volunteer Ladies Committee under Mrs. Marcos' integrated social welfare program.

Among those present at the ceremonies were former President and Mrs. Carlos P. Garcia, Mayors Jovito Claudio of Pasay City and Florencio Bernabe of Parañaque, Rizal, Gov. Isidro Rodriguez and members of the Volunteer Ladies Committee and their wards.

Back at Malacañang at well past noon, the President received Eugene Black, president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, who paid him a courtesy call. Black was accompanied by U.S. Ambassador G. Mennen Williams.

In the afternoon, the President worked on state papers.

September 11

PRESIDENT Marcos observed his birthday simply, highlighted only by the "open house" at Malacañang which saw an estimated throng of 50,000 people, coming from all walks of life, converging at the Palace to greet the Number One Citizen of the Republic.

With the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, beside him, and their three children—Imee, Ferdinand Jr., and Irene—assisting, the President stood for three hours at the Malacañang south hall shaking hands with well-wishers, ranging from laborers to ranking government officials. It was past 11 a.m. when the President ended the "open house" to meet other well-wishers, notably the members of the diplomatic corps. The foreign ambassadors offered a toast to the President, which prayed for his continued good health and success.

Leading the President's well-wishers were Senate President and Mrs. Gil J Puyat, former President and Mrs. Carlos P. Garcia, Chief Justice Roberto Concepcion of the Supreme Court, and Mrs. Josefa Edralin-Marcos, mother of the President.

At about 11:30 a.m., the President and his family heard Mass, celebrated by Fr. Horacio de la Costa, at the Malacañang ceremonial hall. Guests, including diplomats, high government officials, close kin and friends of the First Family attended the Mass.

After the Mass, the First Family joined guests at luncheon hold at the Heroes' Hall. The luncheon was followed by a program in which members of the Cabinet, Congress and Armed Forces generals participated.

Imee and Bongbong acted as masters of ceremonies.

Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas closed the program by gathering the Cabinet secretaries and singing "Happy Birthday" Justice Secretary Claudio Teehankee led the chorus.

The Chief Executive at 1:30 p.m. met with representatives of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office management and employees union, in an effort to settle the strike at the PCSO. Immediately after, the striking employees returned to work.

Those who conferred with the President were Chairman Manuel Barrel to. Jr., General Manager Nereo Andolong, and Manuel L. Venus, president of the PCSO employees union.

The leaders of the striking employees were accompanied to Malacañang by Acting Secretary of Labor S. Tomas de la Cruz and Director of Labor Relations Amado Inciong.

Early in the evening the Chief Executive directed PARGO Secretary Ramon D. Bagatsing to initiate immediately administrative action against those apprehended misusing government vehicles.

The Campaign against misuse of government vehicles is being pursued vigorously by the PARGO in compliance with the President's directive issued last year.

September 12

PRESIDENT Marcos had small and big conferences on a variety of subjects, including labor problems, agriculture, legislation, land reform, and urgent state matters.

Among other reports he received and studied was that of Undersecretary of Justice Felix Makasiar, who submitted his findings on the case of prisoner Cesar Guy, whose trip to Palawan on special assignment turned out to be full of violations of prison rules.

The President also received a report on the completion of the two vessels converted from LCMs to floating clinics, to serve communities in remote areas, especially those of Mindanao and Sulu.

Among his visitors were Dean Jeremias Montemayor, president of the Federation of Free Farmers of the Philippines, who discussed problems affecting farmers and the administration's land reform program and delegation from Laguna headed by Mayor Rufo Borja of Sta. Cruz, and including Sen. Wenceslao R. Lagumbay and Jose Yulo. Jr

Another group of officials who called was composed of Northern Luzon leaders led by Gov. Jovenal Guerrero of La Union, Ben Palispis of Benguet and Chairman. Joaquin Ortega of the San Fernando Port Authority

Other callers included Reps. Aguedo Agbayani of Pangasinan, Jose Aquino of Agusan, William Chiongbian of Misamis Occidental and Andres Cosalan of Mt. Province.

In another meeting, the Chief Executive discussed with Chairman Ramon Encarnacion and acting Manager Federico Moreno of the Philippine Virginia Tobacco Administration some problems affecting the tobacco agency. In the afternoon, the President met with top Department of Labor officials headed by Secretary Blas F. Ople, who reported on the status of labor disputes in government corporations.

The labor officials reported that thus far three labor disputes have been settled and three are under negotiations with bright prospect of early settlement.

Only the strike at the SSS remained unsettled. The President asked Secretary Ople and other labor officials to undertake new efforts to resolve the dispute.

Later, while at work on state papers, the President designated David Eusebio as acting assistant director of the Bureau of Lands.

The Chief Executive also received a delegation from Laguna. The group was accompanied by Sen. Wenceslao R. Lagumbay, Gov. Felicisimo San Luis, Mayor Vicente Pahotan of Victoria and former Rep. Jacobo Gonzales, and including some 50 landowners in that province's first congressional district.

The landowners sought postponement of the projected proclamation of the first district as a land reform area, to afford them, more time to get together with their tenants and explore the ways of avoiding unnecessary friction in the implementation of the land reform program. Some 12,000 hectares will be affected.

Among others in the group were Mayors Mauro Alimagno of Cabuyao, Benjamin Real of Sta. Maria, Jeremias Elocro of Pila, Lorenzo Meneses, Jr. of Los Baños, Jose Amante of San Pedro and Angel Tiongco of Sta. Rosa.

September 13

PRESIDENT Marcos concentrated on paper work at his private study, receiving only a few callers, mostly government officials.

Among others, he continued to issue directives on necessary steps to break up land-grabbing and other abuses in Mindanao and other areas by timber firms, or other parties, with minority groups and settlers usually the victims. The Chief Executive, in a series of directives to National Integration Commissioner Mamintal Tamaho, Forestry Director Teofilo Santos and the PC provincial commanders of Agusan, Misamis Oriental and Bukidnon, ordered that stern steps be taken against lumber concessionaires who have usurped the lands of cultural minority groups, and if necessary to cancel the timber licenses of erring concessionaires.

The President also went over reports from various officials, including that of Dr. Juan Salcedo, chairman of the National Science Development Board, on the results of the UNESCO conference on the application of science and technology to developing countries in Asia.

The report cited the fact that the Philippines won a special distinction by having two of the members of its delegation chosen as members of two of three commissions created by the convention. Dr. Salcedo was elected chairman of the commission on national science policy and Dr. Alejandro R. Roces as vice chairman of the commission on science education.

Another report detailed the break-up of a racket in La Union whereby FACOMA tobacco or tobacco belonging to certain entities are re-baled and shipped out by a Chinese operator, to be resold to other redrying firms. The brains behind the operation, identified as Chan Tiam, was ordered deported by the President. He likewise directed the filing of criminal charges against others involved, and the elevation in rank by one grade of members of the PC team responsible for breaking up the racket.

In the afternoon, the President directed Secretary of Finance Eduarda Z. Romualdez to release P1.5 million to the Manila city government to bail it out of its present financial difficulties and ensure payment of salaries of some 24,000 city hall employees.

The President instructed Secretary Romualdez to release the funds immediately, notwithstanding the pendency of the ascertainment of the amount due the city government from the national government.

Early in the evening, the Chief Executive commended Col. Roy Bass of the JUSMAG for his special efforts in the development of the Armed Forces, especially the Philippine Constabulary command.

September 14

PRESIDENT Marcos motored to Laguna at mid-morning to proclaim the first district of that province, consisting of 12 towns, a land reform area. The ceremonies took place at the Los Baños college campus of the U. P. College of agriculture.

The Chief Executive stressed that the proclamation did not close the door on any arrangements between landowners and tenants for a better relationship; and that it was taken at this time in order to give the Land Authority the opportunity to publicize the proclamation in accordance with law.

From Los Baños, the President visited the resettlement areas for urban squatter families at San Pedro Tunasan, where he surveyed the facilities so far built or provided. He assured the people in the settlement that in time the place will have all the conveniences of a regular community.

Back in Malacañang at about 4:00 p.m., the President joined a group of young boys and girls, who had come to Malacañang for the birthday party of Bongbong (Ferdinand Jr), who turned 11.

Later, he conferred with Governor Alfonso Calalang and Deputy Governor Amado Briñas of the Central Bank, who reported on steps that have taken to help private commercial banks in the face of mass withdrawals by depositors.

He was assured by the two officials that the Central Bank is ready to back up these banks. He then issued an appeal counseling depositors in private commercial banks against rush withdrawals of their deposits.

At 6 p.m. the President motored to the Rizal Memorial Stadium where he was guest of honor at the opening of the Cycling benefit finals.

In the evening, the Chief Executive received a cablegram from Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez, permanent Philippine representative to the United Nations, who reported on the recommendations adopted by the international conference of ministers responsible for social welfare, and presided by Social Welfare Secretary Gregorio Feliciano of the Philippines. The recommendations will be presented to the forthcoming resumed session of the ECOSOC and the General Assembly sessions, as well as to the Commission for Social Development.

President's Week in Review: September 15-19, 1968

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

September 15

PRESIDENT Marcos called on the reserve officers of the AFP to take active part in the prosecution of government campaigns, such as the drive against criminality, by serving as effective liaison groups between the civilian and military forces.

The Chief Executive was guest speaker at the 30th anniversary and 29th annual convention of the Reserve Officers Legion of the Philippines at Camp Aguinaldo. He said the on-going government efforts to control criminality and to hasten the developments of the country needed the total involvement of all sectors of the community.

In one of the directives issued in the morning, the President instructed Acting Secretary of Finance Juan Ponce Enrile to ascertain, and settle as soon as possible, claims of the City of Manila against the national government.

At the same time, the Chief Executive required Hermogenes Diego, city treasurer of Manila, to inform him if the funds earlier released to the city government would be enough for the salaries of Manila employees for the week ending September 15. The President ordered the release of P1.5 million upon learning that employees of the city government did not receive their salaries last Friday.

Earlier in the day, the President ordered the Monetary Board to extend all possible assistance to the banks hit by the rash of withdrawals.

"It is my hope that we will not panic on this matter," the Chief Executive said, pursuing his appeal for sobriety, "There is no need to worry or to fear that you will lose your funds. The Central Bank has stated that it will back to the limits of the law the operations of these banks, which are now adequately supported, and are operating within the rules and regulations," he added.

In the evening, the President called on the private sector of the local industry to join the government in its effort to implement a positive and vigorous science program designed to provide intensive training for scientists and technologists and to awaken greater science-consciousness among Filipinos.

Discussing the administration's science program in his weekly Pakinggan ang Pangulo program, the Chief Executive said that science and technology constituted an "indispensable ingredient" of the country's development program.

The President said that the historic breakthrough achieved by the Philippines in its rice production program, demonstrated the importance of science to the nation's development effort.

September 16

PRESIDENT Marcos inducted three ranking justices, conferred on urgent national problems with the officials concerned, and adhered to a close schedule of desk work and visitors.

In the afternoon, he had a pleasant visit with young volunteers in development work, who came to convey their belated birthday greetings.

The volunteers, members of the Civic Action Corps of the Philippines, pledged support for the President's development efforts to ensure economic security for the country.

Among other official actions, the Chief Executive issued a new M-I of policies to correct certain deficiencies in the handling of army reservists and in the assignment, retirement and separation of officers.

Early callers included Luis Taruc, one time Huk supremo, who came with his mother, Mrs. Roberto M. Taruc, to thank the President for the pardon given the celebrated socialist. Taruc pledged to dedicate the rest of his life to helping rural folk improve the quality of their lives.

Also received by the President was Manuel Elizalde, Jr., presidential assistant on national minorities, and Mamintal Tamano, commissioner on national integration, both of whom conferred with the President on measures to broaden and accelerate the improvement of the lot of the nation's cultural minorities.

Between callers, the President found time to induct at sperate rites, three new justices, namely:

1. Presiding Justice Francisco Capistrano of the Court of Appeals as associate justice of the Supreme Court;
2. Associate Justice Julio Villamor as presiding justice of the Court of Appeals, vice Capistrano; and,
3. Judge Cecilia Muñoz Palma as associate justice of the Court of Appeals, vice Villamor.

Among other callers were Rep. Nicanor Yñiguez of Southern Leyte, Minister Jose de Venecia, and Governor Alfonso Calalang of the Central Bank.

Early in the evening, the President approved the establishment of a Philippine diplomatic mission in Colombia upon the recommendation of Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos.

The Philippine ambassador to Mexico will head the mission as a nonresident envoy.

The Chief Executive, upon the request of Tarlac Governor Eduardo Cojuangco and Mayor Venustiano Martinez of La Paz, proclaimed Tuesday, September 17, a special public holiday in Tarlac in commemoration of the birth anniversary of General Francisco Macabulos.

General Macabulos was one of the outstanding Filipino generals in the revolutionary wars against Spain and the United States.

The President also asked Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido to approve as soon as possible" the appointment of State Prosecutor Francisco A. Villa as chief of police of Pasay City to enable the city government to start its long-delayed revamp of the city's police department and thus mate it a more effective force in the administration's anti-crime drive.

Villa has been strongly recommended by the Pasig Citizens League for Good Government, the Pasay City Council and City Mayor Jovito Claudio.

September 17

PRESIDENT Marcos received the credentials of a new ambassador, conferred a medal on the most outstanding rural physician, received an international labor executive, and as usual did his paper work and received a variety of callers.

In a ceremony this morning, the Chief Executive received the credentials of Ambassador Patrick Pichi Sun, the new Chinese envoy to the Philippines. Present at the ceremonies were members of the Cabinet.

Later, the President, assisted by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, conferred the Presidential Merit Medal on Dr. Altagracia Villaflor, municipal health officer of Matalom, Leyte, as the Most Outstanding Rural Health Physician of 1967. She is the first awardee in this field.

A group of police chiefs, all members of METROPOL, called on the President to hand in a resolution asking for immediate implementation of an agreement with METROCOM on the augmentation of police manpower, communications and transportation facilities. During the call, the Chief Executive scheduled a meeting with the police chiefs, the Polcom, Department of National Defense officials, METROCOM officers and suburban mayors for September 20.

Notable among other visitors was David Morse, director general of the International Labor Organization, who is here to help in the establishment of an Asian Labor Center in Manila. He was accompanied by Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople.

Two groups also called, one from the Bicol region led by Sen. Dominador Aytona; and the other composed of settlers in Davao City whose lands have been usurped by a corporation. The latter was accompanied by Sen. Alejandro Almendras.

The Chief Executive ordered a probe of the case, with an eye to nullifying the title acquired by the corporation, if as alleged it was obtained through fraudulent means.

Among other actions, the President ordered the close adherence of the Armed Forces to Republic Act No. 2334 which provides for the rotation of reserve officers in the active service.

Meanwhile, the President commended the Bureau of Customs which reported that in the first dozen days of September, the customs service collected a record P31,904,835.01, which is P9,336,747.13 over the collection for the same period last year.

He also received pledges of support for his stand on the SSS labor dispute from various national labor unions in the country. The President has followed a strictly "hands off" policy in the dispute, saying that the Court of Industrial Relations has already acted on the dispute and that at this stage it is now a matter for the courts.

THE PRESIDENT discussed with the Foreign Policy Council at a conference held at the state dining hall of Malacañang from 11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Senate Bill No. 954, amending Section 1 of Republic Act No. 346, entitled "An Act to define the baselines of the territorial sea of the Philippines." (See page 10291, October 7, 1968 issue, for the text of the President's letter of instruction to Sec. Ramos.

This conference culminated with the President's signing of the bill later in the afternoon, during which he emphasized there is no implication in the new law of a Philippine annexation of Sabah, nor of any over threat of force in the settlement of the claim on that piece of land.

The conference and signing of the bill highlighted a day which ran smoothly according to the regular presidential schedule of visitors, conference and desk work.

Among those present at the conference were Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos and Undersecretaries Jose D. Ingles and Manuel Collantes;

Justice Secretary Claudio Teehankee, Senate President Protempore Jose Roy, Also present were Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Presidential Exe-Senate Majority Floor Leader Arturo M Tolentino, Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Rep. Ramon Mitra, Jr., Rep. Carmelo Barbero, Secretary Cesar Virata, and Ambassador Romeo Busuego.

Also present were Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Presidential Executive Assistant Jaime N. Ferrer, Undersecretary of Defense Alejandro Melchor, Jr., who represented Secretary Ernesto Mata, Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave and Commodore Ismael Lomibao, flag officer in command of the Philippine Navy.

Just before meeting the Foreign Policy Council, the President received Ambassador John Mansfield Addis of the United Kingdom, Secretary Ramos and Secretary Teehankee.

Other callers included Central Bank Governor Calalang, Reps. Fernando Veloso of Samar and James Chiongbian of South Cotabato.

Governor Calalang received final instructions prior to his departure for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

The President worked on state papers early in the morning, and again in the afternoon.

Among other actions, the Chief Executive:

1. Issued a proclamation authorizing the Philippine Normal College Development Foundation to conduct a national membership and fund campaign from September 7, this year to March 31, 1969.

In connection with the campaign, the President noted that unlike the University of the Philippines and other government educational institutions, which have land grants, the PNC has no other source of income except the annual government allocation and fees paid by the students. He urged total public support to the campaign to generate the means financing the full development of the PNC.

2. Granted full powers to the Philippine delegations to two conferences namely (a) the IMF and the IBRD; and (b) the 15th session of the General Conference of UNESCO.

Headed by former Secretary of Education Alejandro Roces, the delegation to the UNESCO conference, slated in Paris, France from October 15 to November 20 this year, includes Ambassador Jose Alejandrino, Sen. Eva Estrada Kalaw, and Reps. Aguedo Agbayani and Salipada K. Pendatun with Dr. Estefania Aldaba-Lim and Pedro F. Abella as alternate delegates.

3. Ordered the inquiry into the bureau of public highways overpricing case by the presidential probe committee expedited with an eye to early prosecution of those culpable.

In the evening, the President honored David Morse, ILO director-general, with a formal dinner at Malacañang.

September 19

THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE ordered a management audit of six state hospitals, even as national attention was focused on conditions in many public hospitals.

He had a heavy schedule of visitors in the morning, and again in the afternoon, some of them officials who came to discuss various problems

Surprise visitor was a wartime comrade, Filomeno Gulayan, skipper of the sailboat which the President used on several missions to the Visayas. The veteran sailor was a member of a delegation from Surigao del Sur.

The President also received the main group of the Philippine delegation to the World Olympics in Mexico, composed of athletes and officials. The group called to say farewell prior to their departure for the Olympic games.

Other callers were:

1. Gabriel Velisano, Jr. and Marion Antonini, who submitted a proposal for the printing plant project of the National Cultural Center.
2. Roberto Villanueva of the Bancom Development Corporation.
3. Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, Mayor Beatriz Durano of Danao City, Mayors Beatriz Calderon of Samboan and Demetrio Cortez of Mandaue, both in Cebu; and S. C. Shangkuan, contractor of the Mandaue-Opon bridge.

The group discussed with the President the construction of the bridge linking Mandaue to Opon, and also the proposed reclamation of 218-hectare area, a joint project of the Cebu provincial and Mandaue municipal governments.

4. Acting Secretary of Agriculture Isosceles Pascual, who discussed matters affecting the DANR department.
5. Former Ambassador Jose Fuentebella, who was inducted as presidential adviser on foreign affairs.
6. Reps. Gregorio Murillo, Epifanio Castillejos, Tereso Dumon and Constantino Navarro; and Gov. Jose Sering of Surigao del Norte.

Among others, the President reconstituted the Presidential Committee on Sports, created by virtue of his memorandum of March 13, 1967.

As reconstituted, the committee will be composed of the secretary of education as chairman; the secretary of defense or his designate; Jesus Perpiñan; the president of the PAAF; Manuel Elizalde, Sr., and Col. Jose Syjuco, as members.

The President also issued a proclamation authorizing an extension for the fund campaign period of the Philippine Cheshire Home, Inc. (Sinag-Tala) to December 31, this year.

He also approved the composition of the Philippine delegation to the special meeting of the General Assembly on December 10, to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. General Carlos P. Romulo will head the delegation.

The preparation of a presidential award for MISERIOR, a German program of assistance that has undertaken various health and agricultural projects worth millions of pesos in the Philippines, was directed by the President. The award will be presented to Msgr. Gotterfried Dossing, director general of the program, who is scheduled to arrive in late October.

In the evening, the President was guest of honor at the Civil Service Awards night, held at the Manila Hotel.

President's Week in Review: September 20-26, 1968

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

September 20.

PRESIDENT Marcos had a long session with the mayors and chiefs of police of the Greater Manila area, Metrocom officers and heads of other police agencies at Fort Bonifacio, to discuss the full implementation of the Metrocom-Police coordinated plan of action in the anti-crime drive.

The Chief Executive's first important conference was held about mid-morning with the officials concerned with the reexamination of the Laurel-Langley Agreement. The reexamination was launched sometime ago with an eye to finding alternatives to the vacuum expected with the expiration of the Agreement in 1974.

Those present were Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Senators Gerardo M. Roxas and Jose W. Diokno; Secretaries Claudio Teehankee of Justice and Ernesto Mata of Defense; Undersecretaries Jose D. Ingles of Foreign Affairs, Dioscoro Umali of Agriculture, Juan Ponce Enrile of Finance, and Raoul Inocentes of Labor; CB Governor Alfonso Calalang, DBP Chairman Gregorio Licaros, Solicitor General Antonio Barredo and Secretary Cesar Virata of the Board of Investments.

Aside from this conference, the President also met about 100 Mindanao logging operators. In that meeting, the President revealed the impending reassessment of government policy pertaining to logging, forestry, and agriculture. He also warned loggers against the use of unlicensed firearms and against harboring criminal elements.

Those who attended the meeting aside from the loggers, were Commissioner Mamintal Tamano of National Integration, and Manuel Elizalde, Jr., presidential assistant on national minorities.

Notable among the callers of the President were Henry Luce III, editor and publisher of Time-Lifemagazines; his wife and his daughter. The Luces were lunch guests of the First Family.

September 21

THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE had a lengthy conference with members of the Foreign Policy Council to assess developments related to the Sabah issue. The meeting lasted for three hours, with the leaders receiving reports and briefings from the Department of Foreign Affairs and other sources on the developments, and exchanging views on them.

During the three-hour meeting the President told the Council that the General Military Council had taken steps to ensure the defense of the territory against any attacks from foreign forces.

Present at the Foreign Policy Council meetings were Secretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, Undersecretary of Defense Alejandro Melchor, Undersecretaries of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles and Manuel Collantes.

Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Senate Majority Floor Leader Arturo M. Tolentino, Senator Gerardo M. Roxas, Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Rep. Ramon Mitra, Jr.; former Secretaries of Foreign Affairs Felmo Neri and Felixberto Serrano.

Also present were Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave; Presidential Executive Assistant Jaime N. Ferrer, Rep. Carmelo Barbero, Ambassador Tomas Benitez and Minister Pacifico Castro of the Department of Foreign Affairs.

Earlier, he met behind closed doors U.S. Ambassador G. Mennen Williams, whom he summoned in connection with the RP-Malaysia crisis. The President handed the American envoy an Aide Memoire on the Sabah issue, and discussed the U. S. stand in the dispute between the two countries. The President worked on state papers, including going over reports from key offices on the progress of their operations.

Among these reports were:

1. The initiatives taken to fill the balance of the 1968 Philippines sugar quota allotted by the United States, and to control the domestic prices of sugar.

Sugar Quota Administrator Ramon Nolan assured the President that the SQA has programmed shipments of sugar to the United States to fill the balance this year, totalling 178,588.72 long tons. He also reported that the local price of sugar has stabilized at P.60, P.70 and P.80 per kilo, of the brown, washed and refined sugar, respectively.

2. The utilization of the 953 scalers trained last year, with 730 emergency scalers already employed by the Bureau of Forestry, according to Director Teofilo Santos.

3. The disappearance of a vital witness, Melchor Ramos, in the murder of movie actor Alberto Alonzo last year. The victim's kin reported that the case against the suspected gunman, Armando Trinidad, Jr., could not be prosecuted because of the missing witness.

The President directed in this connection the NBI to locate Ramos "by all means."

September 22.

PRESIDENT Marcos designated Assistant Executive Secretary Jose J. Leido, Jr. as acting executive secretary, during the absence of Secretary Rafael M. Salas.

Secretary Salas left for New York, where he will attend the regular annual general assembly session of the United Nations organization, as a member of the Philippine delegation.

In the evening, the Chief Executive declared that the Philippines will pursue its claim to Sabah through peaceful means, and counselled against any precipitate action.

Addressing the nation during his Pakinggan ang Pangulo program, the President said: "There is no reason for precipitate action. Sobriety should inform our conduct. I want to assure you once again that the situation is fully under control." (See p. 10025—J for full text of Radio-TV Chat.

September 23.

THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE met with members of the Foreign Policy Council which assessed anew the developments over the Sabah issue and approved the move he announced earlier for a possible summit conference with Malaysia's Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman on Sabah.

The President also received earlier U. S. Ambassador G. Mennen Williams who submitted an AideMemoire declaring that the U. S. Government is "totally impartial" with respect to the territorial dispute involving Sabah.

At 10:30 a.m., the President formally launched the implementation of the law Republic Act No. 4898, providing insurance coverage for barrio officials insurance, during a program in Malacañang attended by more than a hundred representatives of provincial leagues of barrio councils from all over the country.

The President turned over to GSIS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario a check for P500,000 to cover the initial payment of premiums for the insurance coverage of barrio officials.

In his extemporaneous speech before the barrio officials gathered at Malacañang, the President said that the barrio people constitute the base of the country's social pyramid, and this base of Philippine society "must be built firm and strong, no matter what ideology, what political party inclinations the people have."

After the ceremony, the Chief Executive received Gen. Jesus Vargas, secretary general of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, who paid a farewell call prior to his departure for his Bangkok post.

He also received William Stine, vice president and director of CALTEX Petroleum (New York), who paid his respects in the course of a few days visit here. Stine was accompanied by J.J. Wolahan and F. Alegre, president and managing director, and assistant PRO, respectively, of CALTEX Philippines.

At noon, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, officiated at the formal inauguration of the floating clinic of PANAMIN (Presidential Assistant on National Minorities), berthed at the Pasig River beside the Malacañang Heroes Hall.

The PANAMIN clinic was formally turned over to the government by Manuel Elizalde, Jr., presidential assistant on national minorities, for use in the Mindanao area to help in the health needs of rural people.

At 3 p.m., the President presided over a meeting of the Foreign Policy Council, held at the state dining hall of Malacañang.

In the evening, the Chief Executive continued to receive a stream of wired messages from all sectors of the population, all of them giving full encouragement and support to the government's stand on its claim on Sabah.

September 24.

PRESIDENT Marcos conferred with Acting Secretary of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles who transmitted the reply of Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman to the proposal calling for a summit meeting between the Malaysian Premier and himself.

The Chief Executive instructed Secretary Ingles, who was accompanied by Ambassador Romeo Busuego, to consider with the Malaysian ambassador here the holding of ministerial talks as soon as possible. The President issued the instructions in response to the suggestion of the Tunku that preparatory talks be first held before a summit meeting can be set.

A delegation from the three new Davao provinces headed by Governors Verulo C. Boiser of Davao del Norte, Leopoldo Lopez of Davao Oriental and Ramon de los Cientos of Davao del Sur presented the President with resolutions renewing their pledge of loyalty to his administration.

Accompanied by Sen. Alejandro Almendras, the delegation thanked the President for having made their infant provinces direct beneficiaries of his infrastructure program, in terms of concrete highways, bridges and school-buildings, which have been set for building in their localities, or are now being constructed.

During the call, the Chief Executive signed the appointment of three municipal judges, namely, Jose Suelto of New Corella, Davao del Norte; Eliseo Lopez and Santiago Inutan of Magsaysay and Sta. Maria, respectively, of Davao del Sur.

A delegation from Olongapo City headed by Mayor Amelia Gordon and Vice Mayor Alfredo de Perio, Jr. called to consult with the President on some of their most pressing problems. They also informed the President that peace and order in their city has considerably improved. Other callers included OEC Administrator Constancio Castaneda, GSTS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario, Acting DBP Chairman Julio V. Macuja, Rep. Ernesto Bascon of Cebu, Vice Gov. Carolina Bayot of Capiz and Mayor Arturo Pascual of San Jose, Nueva Ecija. In the afternoon, the President received Vice President Fernando Lopez who reported on his trip abroad.

Early in the evening, the President directed Secretary of Commerce and Industry Marcelo Balatbat to conduct a deeper inquiry into irregularities in the purchase of conveyor belts by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Dr. Gaudencio Garcia, chairman of the Presidential Investigating Committee, after completing a preliminary investigation of the case, recommended to the President a formal inquiry into the CAA purchases.

The President also promoted five colonels to the grade of brigadier general and a navy captain to the rank of commodore.

Promoted were Colonels Rizalino Garcia, PC deputy Chief; Carlos A. Oanes, chief of the PC traffic control group; Wilfredo Estrada, III PC zone commander; Paulino Sanchez, IV PC zone commander; and Pedro Ramos, Military Area commander; and Navy Captain Geronimo M. Cabal, commandant of the Philippine Coast Guard.

September 25.

THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE signed into law three tax measures passed during the last special session of Congress, all designed to generate funds for such critical fields as science, education, and peace and order.

Signed by the President in the presence of Senate and House leaders were:

1. House Bill No. 17485, which provides for the creation of a special science fund for scientific and technological research and development;
2. House Bill No. 17066 creating a special education fund to finance the opening of more extension classes to accommodate all children of school age and the improvement of the standard of instruction in the public schools;
3. House Bill No. 14544 increasing the specific taxes on certain distilled spirits as a means of arresting the rising tide of criminality, in the face of findings that Widespread consumption of intoxicating liquors has contributed to serious crimes.

The signing highlighted a day full of activities, including a press conference on the administration's 1000 days in office, where he stated anew the Philippine stand on the Sabah claim, emphasizing that the nation's leaders are facing the situation with a full comprehension of the realities of world politics.

In the morning the President received the officials of the President Osmeña Memorial Foundation, who presented him with a plaque of appreciation for the reconstruction of historic Ayuntamiento as a memorial to the late President. The group included former Senator Jose Locsin, foundation chairman; former Secretary of Health Elpidio Valencia, J. Antonio Araneta and Sebastian Ugarte.

Another group headed by Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople and Mons Mariano Gaviola, chairman and co-chairman, respectively, of the executive committee of the Social Action Year, called on the President to discuss the harnessing of all sectors of society, into the administration's program of social and economic development.

The period from May 1, 1968 to April 30, 1969 was declared National Social Action and Economic Development Year by the President.

The President also received other callers, including Acting Secretary of Finance Juan Ponce Enrile, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Undersecretary of Defense Alejandro Melchor, Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the PES, and Governors Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales and Rafael Palmares of Iloilo.

In the course of his desk work, the President approved the promotions of two AFP colonels to the next higher rank, namely, Leonardo Sangalang and Felix Pestaña, now both brigadier generals.

September 26.

ARRIVING in Dagupan City where he addressed the Lions Club convention, President Marcos again reiterated the Philippine determination to press the Sabah claim, based on "right, not might."

After the Lions Club speech, the President addressed a spontaneous rally staged by some 10,000 placard-bearing Pangasinan students. Again the subject of Sabah, and the President's stand brought roaring approval and support from the youths.

Earlier at the Lingayen airport, a huge crowd, including Pangasinan officials led by Gov. Tito Primicias, pledged support to the President's policy on Sabah. Many of the pledges were embodied in resolutions handed to him by barrio and municipal councils and the provincial board.

From there he proceeded to the provincial capitol where he talked with local officials, and disclosed the release to Pangasinan towns of funds for development, and the distribution of breeding cattle to localities in that province in connection with the cattle dispersal program of the administration.

It was late in the afternoon when the President and his party started the trip by car to Baguio City. Along the way, the President inspected public works projects, inquiring into problems and requirements.

In Baguio, the Chief Executive conferred with Mountain Province and Northern Luzon officials on problems affecting their respective provinces.

President's Week in Review: October 4-10, 1968

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

October 4.

PRESIDENT Marcos returned from a two-day trip to Cebu where he fulfilled engagements, including the launching of a floating clinic and the inauguration of several government projects.

He arrived in Manila on time to receive the delegates to the ASEAN conference, who called to pay their respects. He conveyed through the chief delegates of Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, and Indonesia a message of goodwill to their respective heads of state. The group, which ended its conference yesterday, was accompanied by Secretary of Commerce and Industry Marcelo Balatbat.

The ASEAN delegates were Victor de Bruyne of the Malaysian ministry of commerce and industry; Mohammad Sismal, secretary general of Indonesia's department of commerce, Taw Soo Chye, director of Singapore's trade and finance division; and Charnchai Leethavorn of the Thai Embassy. The call of the ASEAN delegates was only the first of many other calls, notably those of Gov. Cornelio Balmaceda of the Asian Development Bank, who discussed with the President the construction of the ADB building; Ambassador Pham Dang Lam of South Vietnam; and the delegates to the 19th session of the Western Pacific Regional Committee (WPRC), an agency of the World Health Organization.

The delegates to the WPRC conference who called were headed by Dr. K. C. Chang, regional chairman; and Dr. Francisco Dy, WHO regional director. They were accompanied by Acting Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz and Undersecretary Clemente Gatmaitan.

Between calls, the President worked on state papers, and among others:

1. Directed Commissioner on National Integration Mamintal Tamano to implement the recommendations of a special study group of the Presidential Economic Staff, which proposed the revision of the scholarship program of the CNI to make it more useful and effective.
2. Designated Undersecretary of Labor S. Tomas de la Cruz as Philippine representative to the Asian Regional Experts Meeting on Vocational Training Planning, to be conducted by the International Labor Organization at Sydney from December 2 to 20, this year.
3. Directed the Department of Foreign Affairs to circularize all Philippine missions abroad regarding unauthorized activities of a group with forged Malacañang credentials, representing itself as a special government mission.

The President was informed by Abdulhamid Lukman and Asali Isnani, presidents of the Sulu Municipal League and the Sulu Lawyers League, respectively, that the two organizations will hold a joint rally with all colleges and civic organizations in support of the government stand on the Sabah issue.

In a wire received by the President, Nemesio E. Prudente, president of the Philippine College of Commerce, expressed "sincere and heartfelt gratitude" for the 10-hectare area at Fort Bonifacio reserved for the permanent site of the PCC building and campus.

Among other actions, the Chief Executive authorized an 18-man trade mission of the Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines to travel to Soviet Russia and certain Eastern European countries for the purpose of exploring business possibilities.

October 5.

PRESIDENT MARCOS instructed Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos to effect a meeting as soon as possible with the Malaysian foreign minister to determine how the President and Prime Tunku Abdul Rahman may ease tensions in the Southeast Asia area through a top-level meeting.

Early in the morning, the President received Secretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, who called on him, to explain his controversy with Public Service Commissioner Enrique Medina, and in the process submitted a list of charges he has brought against the PSC chief. Also present was Undersecretary Felix Makasiar.

Spanish Ambassador Jose Perez del Arco also called to invite the President and the First Lady, to be the guests of honor at the Spanish Festival, scheduled at the Manila Hilton on October 12 to November 9, 1968. The Spanish envoy informed the President that the festival will feature an exposition depicting different aspects of Spanish life and culture.

In the afternoon, Commissioner Medina also called, and was asked by the President to explain his side of the controversy, and to answer within a week the charges of the secretary of justice. The President gave him a copy of the charges.

The President received no other visitors the whole day, preferring to work on state papers.

October 6.

PRESIDENT MARCOS inaugurated the new City of Iriga (in Camarines Sur), seeded with bangus fry Lake Bato in that province and met with local and national officials from the Bicol region.

The President left Manila 7:45 a.m., flying to Legazpi City where he arrived at 9:05 a.m. He was met at the airport by leaders of the Bicol region, including provincial, municipal and national officials.

From Legazpi City, the President motored to Iriga, stopping at every town along the way. In the town of Bato, the Chief Executive released 160,000 bangus fingerlings at Lake Bato to increase its fishing potential.

Arriving in Iriga City, the President went to the San Antonio ne Padua church, where he heard a TeDeum Mass.

Later, the President formally inaugurated the new city and installed city officials headed by Mayor Jose Villanueva.

In his speech, the Chief Executive paid tribute to the leaders of the Bicol region, particularly the people of the new city, "on their successful bid to exercise greater participation in their government."

The President had lunch at the Iriga city hall where he also conferred with local officials.

While there, he released P200,000 as initial aid to the new city, but emphasized, however, that the fund will be utilized for the city's most important projects, and not for any ordinary expenses like payment of salaries of employees.

From Iriga, the President proceeded to Naga City, where he met with the leaders from the Bicol region.

In the evening, the President addressed the nation in his weekly radio-television program, Pakinggan ang Pangulo.

October 7.

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned from his inspection trip to Camarines Sur, during which he visited a number of places, among them Iriga City, Naga City, Pili, and Legazpi City in Albay.

Upon arrival in Maiacañang, the Chief Executive conferred with Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata, Gen. Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff; Brig. Gen. Rafael Ilete, deputy chief of staff and chief of AFP intelligence; and Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Ordered the Department of Foreign Affairs to present the Philippines' opposition to the installation by the U. S. government of a new communications cable aimed at linking this country, Taiwan, Japan, Thailand, and the Southeast Asian mainland for defense purposes.

The opposition was based on the fact that the proposed cable would prejudice the operations of major RP communications projects.

2. Directed Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, to disarm the security guards of the National Mental Hospital, and take over security control of the institution, following findings that the hospital guards were in cahoots with underworld characters who have used guardhouse as an operating center for criminal activities.
3. Issued an executive order extending to the Grains Marketing Cooperatives of the Philippines, Inc. (GRAMACOP) the privileges of agencies. Only the RCA and the CCE were previously authorized receiving requisitions for rice from the government institutions and to fill such orders.
4. Signed an administrative order creating a committee to be headed by a governor of the Board of Investments, which will gather, collate and evaluate statistical data and information for the use of the Board of Industries in the preparation of the annual investment priorities plan.
5. Approved the remittance of a contribution by the Philippine government of 32,000 to the United Nations capital development fund.
6. Authorized the Philippine official participation in two international conferences, namely:

a) The Colombo Plan Consultative Committee Meeting to be held in Seoul. Korea from October 8 to 25: with Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. of the Presidential Economic Staff, Ambassador Benjamin Tirona to Korea. Ambassador Pura Castrence, Minister Julia Palarca and Sebastian Nuguid as members.

b) The meeting on the conventions for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion, with the governments of Spain and West Germany, and other countries; with Undersecretary of Finance Juan Ponce Enrile as chairman; and BIR Deputy Commissioner Ambrosio Lina, Jose Plana, Tomas C. Toledo, Efren I. Plana and Juan F. Rivera as members.

7. Approved the visit here of Sergei Svirin, regional manager of the Soviet news agency, Tass, who is based in Singapore.

Enroute to Manila, the President worked also on state papers brought along by Presidential Assistant Jaime N. Ferrer.

In the evening, the Chief Executive signed the ad interim appointments of two district judges, three municipal judges, one auxiliary city judge and one city fiscal.

Appointed were:

1. Emilio Salas as district judge, 7th judicial district, Court of First Instance of Rizal and the Cities of Quezon, Pasay and Caloocan;
2. Manuel Serapio as regional district judge, Court of Agrarian Relations, 5th regional district, with station at Balanga, Bataan;
3. Artemio A. Rillo as auxiliary city judge of the City of Iriga;
4. Emilio T. Reyes and Manuel Trinidad, Jr. as municipal judges of Sibonga and Argao, Cebu, respectively;
5. Silvestre S. Felix as municipal judge of Bato, Camarines Sur; and

6. Angel S. Malaya as city fiscal of Iriga City.

The President also signed the designation of Melencio A. Cortero as first assistant city fiscal of the newly created City of Iriga.

October 8.

PRESIDENT MARCOS issued several directives extending additional assistance to the Bicol region, including a survey of the abaca industry, and release of funds for priority projects.

He also sought further facilitation of disaster relief services by directive Acting Executive Secretary Jose J. Leido, Jr. to coordinate with the Department of National Defense and the Armed Forces in instituting a more efficient system of operations.

Early this morning the President met with his financial advisers led by Acting Secretary of Finance Juan Ponce Enrile. The talks centered on priority economic affairs.

Present at the conference, aside from Secretary Enrile, were Deputy Governor Amado Briñas of the Central Bank, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, PNB Executive Vice President Eusebio Villatuya, GSIS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario, SSS Chairman Ramon Gaviola, Acting DBP Chairman Julio Macuja, Acting Executive Secretary Jose J. Leido, Jr., and Director General Placido Mapa, Jr., of the Presidential Economic Staff.

Following the conferences, the President received National Integration Commissioner Mamintal Tamano who briefed him on the proposed establishment of pilot integration centers in Mindanao and other places where cultural minorities live. The proposed centers are aimed at accelerating the integration of minorities into the national mainstream.

Then he had a session with Undersecretary of Agriculture Dioscoro Umali and Rice and Corn Administration Chairman Osmundo Mondoñedo on the current rice situation, particularly the need for better warehousing and drying facilities.

Undersecretary Umali and Col. Osmundo Mondoñedo reported that the exportation of 25,000 metric tons of rice to India will generate P15 million to finance the rice buying program of the RCA. Sugar Quota Administrator Ramon Nolan, also called on the President to receive final instructions before departing for Washington, D.C. to take up with U. S. officials the country's basic sugar export quota.

The President then received Director Anacleto Coronel who reported on the progress of the administration's cattle dispersal program.

In between conferences, the Chief Executive administered the oaths of office to:

1. Capt. Oscar Tempongko, dental surgeon of the Philippine Navy;
2. Col. Mariano Cardenas, medical officer of the 1st PC zone; and
3. Leon Rojas, Jr. as judge of the Criminal Circuit Court of the 11th judicial district with station in Roxas City.

The President received callers at his study until 2:30 p.m.

Other callers included delegations headed by Rep. Floro Crisologo and Gov-Carmeling Crisologo of Uocos Sur; Gov. Vicente Ceriles of Zamboanga del Sur, Gov. Murphy Sangkula of Sulu, Gov. Ignacio Santiago of Bulacan, Gov. Jose Legaspi of Aklan, Mayor Juan Lomibao of San Carlos City and Mayor Cipriano Manaois of Dagupan City.

October 9.

PRESIDENT MARCOS directed Undersecretary of National Defense Alejandro Melchor to establish a way of augmenting the number of police trainees a year in order to step up the improvement of police capabilities. One of the most serious flaws in law enforcement is the lack of trained and qualified policemen.

Early in the morning the President went over reports submitted to him on the progress of on-going government projects and other matters. Among these reports were:

1. The case of some 380 Manobo and Ata tribesmen who were reported as having been driven out of their traditional settlements by logging concessionaires.

Commissioner on National Integration Mamintal Tamano informed the President that the Kalinan Timber Industries authorities agreed to recompense the tribesmen in the amount of P1,000 for destroyed property, and to assist in resettling the tribes on their ancestral lands and (o provide a school site for their children.

2. The collated accomplishment report of 16 out of 26 participating agencies in the Central Luzon Development, submitted by PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, for the month of July, 1968.
3. The progress of squatter relocation and clearing of the Quezon City National Park. Presidential Assistant Esteban Bernido said a total of 1,905 family heads with 9,823 dependents have been resettled, while about 600 houses still remain to be demolished.
4. The September report on the operations of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, submitted by Commissioner Misael Vera, in which he stated among others, that the campaign against altered or fake official receipts has increased BIR collections by P2,037,492.52.

Among his callers were:

1. Indian Ambassador A. S. Dhawan who paid a courtesy call, during which he presented the President with several volumes on the life and teachings of Mahatma Gandhi, the great spiritual leader of India.
2. Andrew Joseph, new United Nations Development Program representative in the Philippines. Joseph succeeded Warren Cornwell who returned to the UNDP headquarters in Rome for reassignment after completing this tour of duty here.
3. The World Bank appraisal team which conducted on-the-spot surveys of the upper Pampanga River multi-purpose project, which the international financing institution might assist.

Headed by Amnon Golan, economist, the other members of the team are Jacques Marinnet, agronomist; Carl Hoffman and William Douglas, civil engineers. They were accompanied to the President by Undersecretary of National Defense Alejandro Melchor, National Irrigation Administrator Alfredo Juinio, National Power Corporation General Ramon Ravanzo, NAWASA General Manager Antonio Menor, and Leopoldo Kagahistian, who represented Director Aleandro Deleña of the Bureau of Public Works.

Other callers included Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Reps. Jose Moreno of Romblon, Tereso Dumon of Cebu, Benjamin Ligot of Cagayan and William Chiongbian of Misamis Occidental; Gov. Jose Evangelista of Ilocos Norte, and Mayor Jovito Claudio of Pasay City, who took up with the President matters concerning their constituencies.

While attending to his callers, the President received a wire from Gov. Alfonso Calalang of the Central Bank informing him that he had signed a loan agreement with U. S. commercial banks. Under the agreement, $81.5 million of Central Bank short-term obligations were converted into 4-year credits and that $28.1 million of time deposits, which were pledged against the short-term loans, were released by the U. S. banks.

In the afternoon, the President appointed Ambassador Gauttier F. Bisnar, assistant secretary for legal affairs in the Department of Foreign Affairs. as ad interim consul general of the Philippines.

He also signed the appointments of:

1. Jose M. Manglicmot as regent of the Central Luzon State University;

3. Florencio Baltazar as member of the board of directors of the Philippine Tobacco Administration;
4. Manuel C. Ozaraga as municipal judge in Baliañgao, Misamis Occidental; and
5. Zosimo P. Bajamonde as special attorney in the Office of the Agrarian Counsel, Ozamis City branch.

Late in the afternoon the President received a delegation of labor leaders who presented him with a resolution from organized labor urging more drastic action against the Malaysian and British governments for the “haughty, unjustified and hostile activities” in connection with the Philippine claim to Sabah.

In the evening, the President cleared his desk of urgent state papers preparatory to leaving for the South in pursuance of his inspection visits to various areas of the country to assess the progress of on-going government projects.

October 10.

IN A SPEECH at a morning rally on his arrival at Zamboanga City’s airport, President Marcos said that the Filipino people are determined to pursue the Sabah claim along the lines spelled out in the Manila Accord of 1963. He said that the Philippines and Malaysia bound themselves in the Manila Accord to “exert their best endeavors to bring the claim to a just and expeditious solution by peaceful means.”

The Chief Executive, accompanied by Secretary of Justice Claudio Teehankee, PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Presidential Executive Assistant Jaime Ferrer, Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave and Dr. Pacifico Marcos left Manila on board the presidential Fokker plane at 6:40 a.m., for Zamboanga City via Cotabato City where his plane touched down at 9 a.m.

From Cotabato, the party took off in a PAL jet at 9:30 a.m., arriving in Zamboanga City 45 minutes later. With him in the plane was Rep. Salipada Pendatun.

At the airport to meet him was a huge welcoming crowd led by mayors and governors and other officials of the Mindanao, Sulu, and Palawan area. Many of the welcomers carried placards endorsing the President’s stand on Sabah.

Some of the placards read: “Down with British gunboat diplomacy,” “Pursue Sabah claim by peaceful means,” “President Marcos, we are behind you.” and “On to Sabah.” The last one was carried by the Sulu delegation.

The welcome turned into a rally at which Reps. Pendatun and Ali Dimaporo also spoke. In his speech, the President reiterated the Philippine stand, saying he will insist on elevating the issue to the World Court.

After the rally the President headed for the headquarters of the AFP Southwest Command where he was briefed on the military situation in the area. Afterward, he had lunch with governors, mayors and other officials of the Mindanao, Sulu, and Palawan area.

After lunch, the President met separately with various delegations to audit their problems and requirements. Many of the officials requested aid from the national government for their projects.

Later, the Chief Executive took the opportunity to pay his last respects to former Governor Leon Fernandez of Sulu, the remains of whom lay in state at a local funeral home.

In the evening, the President conferred with local officials on their problems and priority projects.

Official Week in Review: January 3 – January 9, 1969

January 3—

PRESIDENT Marcos continued to induct into office newly appointed officials following the government revamp he started early last month.

The President administered the oath to journalist and international beauty Gemma Cruz Araneta as director of the National Museum, vice Galo Ocampo who was named presidential assistant on heraldry matters.

He also inducted Andres Cristobal Cruz, also a well-known writer and journalist, as assistant director of the National Libraries. Both ceremonies were held in Malacañang this noon.

At the same time, the President named former Secretary of Foreign Affairs Narciso Ramos as presidential adviser on foreign affairs.

The President felt that Secretary Ramos could continue to serve the nation as presidential adviser, although the former Cabinet official has expressed a desire to lead a more tranquil life.

Earlier, the President received Rep. Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte and former Rep. Reynaldo Honrado of Surigao del Sur now CFI judge of Tandag, same province. He discussed local problems with the officials.

Meantime, the President ordered the Department of Justice to dismiss the charges against a Bulacan farmer, Benito Fidel, who had slain in self-defense four cattle rustlers.

Impressed by the farmer's courage, he also ordered that a presidential award be conferred on the farmer, who has been jailed in Marilao, Bulacan.

The President also ordered an investigation to verify the charges of former Speaker Cornelio Villareal that his telegrams calling opposition leaders to a conference in Baguio City were not delivered.

He directed Director Antonio Gamboa of the Bureau of Telecommunications to take drastic action against bureau personnel found responsible for the alleged non-delivery of the telegrams, and to report within 72 hours on the action he had taken.

Early in the evening the President issued a proclamation declaring Monday, January 6, this year, a special public holiday in Quezon City in commemoration of the birth anniversary of Melchora Aquino, known as "Tandang Sora", famous heroine of the Revolution.

The President also issued another proclamation declaring January 18 to 25, this year, as Small Scale Industries Week.

Later in the evening, the President attended a dinner commemorating the 20th anniversary of the Central Bank, held at Malacañang Park.

In brief remarks, the President praised the Central Bank for adhering closely to an informed and liberal policy geared to national development.

January 4—

CHANGING PACE for the new year, President Marcos worked just as though it was not the weekend, which he usually devoted in the past to intensive desk work; rather he received officials and focused on the anti-graft drive and the means to improve the administration of justice.

Early in the day, he conferred with Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile on the needs of the anti-crime drive and on new initiatives for upgrading the administration of justice.

The President asked that the courts be made more accessible to the people, notably those in the rural areas.

He also directed that prosecution of anti-graft cases be speeded up now, after being informed that special teams for this purpose had already been organized by the Department of Justice.

The President later received Ambassador Jose S. Laurel III, Philippine envoy to Japan, who reported on the progress of the negotiations for loans from the Export and Import Bank of Tokyo. The loans are earmarked for the construction of the Friendship Highway which will stretch from Luzon to Mindanao.

The Friendship Highway is one of the more than 5,000 on-going infrastructure projects of the President slated for completion this year.

The President also received Secretary Gregorio Feliciano of the Department of Social Welfare who reported on the recently concluded U.N. conference on social welfare and on his study trips to Europe and the United States.

Others who called on the President were Reps. Floro Crisologo of Ilocos Sur and Pablo Roman of Bataan, and Gen. Eulogio Balao of the Philippine Reparations Mission in Tokyo and Gregorio Abad, chairman of the Reparations Commission.

Meanwhile the President lifted PC control over the police forces of five towns in Northern Luzon and the Visayas upon receiving reports that the peace and order conditions in these localities have return to normal.

The police forces affected were those of Agoo, Balaoan, and San Juan, all in La Union; Escalante, Negros Occidental; and Sta. Catalina, Negros Oriental.

The President also approved the commissioning in the reserve force of the Armed Forces of the Philippines of 97 reservists, in line with the program to buildup the country's citizen army.

All the newly commissioned officers passed the rigid AFP physical and medical examinations.

The President spent the rest of the afternoon and evening working on urgent state papers and going over year-end reports from the different government agencies.

January 5—

PRESIDENT Marcos set aside the cares of state for a well deserved relaxation with his family on a cruise aboard the RPS The President.

He left Malacañang last night with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children Imee, Ferdinand (Bongbong), Jr. and Irene, and was off at Manila Bay about 3 a.m.

The First Family heard Mass in the morning celebrated on board the presidential ship.

The ship cruised on Manila Bay and along the Cavite west coast.

The First Family returned to Manila about 4 p.m.

Back at Malacañang, the President however kept himself busy as usual by going over urgent state papers until late in the evening.

He issued fresh instructions to Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to press on further the campaign against criminality, and graft and corruption in the government service.

He directed Enrile to give top priority to the prosecution of major unsolved murder cases still pending in the courts.

January 6—

PRESIDENT Marcos celebrated the new spirit among the Filipinos which has moved forward national progress, and is best symbolized in the distinguished contributions of activities in community development in the public and private sectors.

Paying tribute to the individuals who have contributed significantly to the programs, and to the new leadership at local levels of government, the President revealed, at the Malacañang ceremonies awarding plaques and citations to these outstanding men and women, a continuing concern for the rural areas and the goals of the government aimed at a better life for the poor and the dispossessed (See pp. 262–266 for full text of the President's speech.)

Among the awardees were 14 provincial governors, eight town mayors, seven city mayors, seven barrio captains, outstanding PACD workers, private volunteers and members of the press and civic organizations.

The award ceremonies, which were held at the social hall of the Executive Office building and later moved on to the Heroes Hall of Malacañang, were in connection with the celebration of the Community Development Week which ended today, and the 13th anniversary of the Presidential Arm on Community Development (PACD).

Earlier, the President received the credentials of Ambassador Jose Villanueva Carmendia, who is first envoy of the Dominican Republic to the Philippines.

The ceremony was attended by members of the Cabinet, led by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, who was present at the rites for the first time as foreign secretary.

Other callers during the day were Mrs. Nambi, who discussed proposals for ferrying Muslim pilgrims to Mecca; Gov. Consuelo Calo of Agusan, who discussed problems affecting her province; and Chairman Faustino Tobia of the Cebu Portland Cement Company.

In order to carry on the vital work of the CAA, the President designated Capt. Federico Ablan, Jr. as acting director of the Aeronautics Administration. The appointment insures continuity of the important CAA projects designed to improve domestic aviation facilities and cope with upcoming requirements of super-jet travel.

The President spent the rest of the day working on state papers, including working further on the needs of the current drive against graft and corruption among officialdom.

He also continued studying year-end reports from the different government agencies.

January 7—

PRESIDENT Marcos spent the whole morning greeting well-wishers, including plain citizens from all walks of life, sharing the traditional "Open House" hospitality of Malacañang with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who gamely shook hands with over 30,000 people.

In the afternoon, the President was guest of honor at the opening exercises of the first basic training course given by the Police Commission for police personnel, as well as for new recruits who were qualified by means of a higher standard of requirements.

In-between these two main chores of the day, the President inducted Capt. Federico Ablan as director of the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

As early as 7 a.m., the crowd of well-wishers began gathering at the gates of Malacañang, where they were soon formed into a well-ordered queue, which snaked out of the palace grounds, up the main stairway, to the reception hall.

The President and the First Lady were out at the reception hall according to schedule, and began first to receive high government officials led by Vice President Fernando Lopez, who came with Mrs. Lopez and some of his grandchildren. The President promptly had an impromptu conference with the Vice President on urgent state matters, which he repeated with various other officials who come up to greet him, including Speaker Jose Laurel Jr., other members of Congress and members of the Cabinet.

Shortly after he had met all top officials and the diplomatic corps, the President took a breather at the state dining room, where he observed the traditional exchange of new year toasts with members of the diplomatic corps. He then returned to the reception hall to continue greeting all comers.

Many of the citizens who came brought along their children, and besides greetings, they also boldly pleaded for aid or favors. Those that the First Couple could promptly accommodate were freely given, including autographs.

The Open House officially closed at 1:30 p.m., ending a hectic schedule which however did not ruffle the First Couple, who were genuinely glad to meet the people.

An interesting sidelight to the Open House was the call of a group of some 10,000 students, led by campus leaders, who exchanged views with the President on educational needs. They also sought additional appropriations for state institutions.

The President directed Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to confer with Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz and Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco on the petition of the student.

In the afternoon, about 4 p.m., the President motored to Fort Bonifacio where he addressed the first group of 100 police recruits which will undergo training under the supervision of the Police Commission.

The President emphasized that the trainees starting the course will be the first police personnel to embody a professionalized police force. He told them that it is up to them to set the example for police efficiency and integrity.

Later the President resumed his desk work at the palace, where among other things he ordered Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to study the legality of the stock swap planned by the Benguet Consolidated Mining Corporation and the Grand Bahamas Port Authority; and Commissioner Raoul Beloso of the Small Farmers Commission to settle the dispute over land boundaries in Panamao, Sulu.

President Marcos worked on state papers and studied reports from the different government agencies aboard the presidential yacht, the RPS The President, while en route to the Visayas to check, among other things, on the progress of administration development projects and confer with local officials on urgent problems.

The President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, left Manila very early in the morning for Cebu City, his first stop, where he will meet with rural bankers and then inaugurate the Mandawe Diversion Road.

Before leaving Manila, the President turned over to Vice President Fernando Lopez the presidential administrative duties, asking the latter to hold office at the presidential study for the purpose.

January 9—

PRESIDENT Marcos spent most of the day checking on administration development projects and inaugurating completed ones, even as he assessed the performance of government workers in Cebu, and conferred with local officials on urgent problems.

He arrived at Pier 1 in Cebu City aboard the RPS The President at 9:30 a.m., accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and close presidential advisers.

He proceeded to the Visayas-Mindanao Confederation of Trade Unions building where he was accorded military honors. At the VIMCONTU, the President swore in Democrito Mendoza as SSS Commissioner to represent labor, vice Roy Padilla whose resignation was accepted by the President when he began the government revamp early last month.

After this ceremony, the President went on to the Cebu City country club for the conference with rural bankers, where he was guest of honor. Following this engagement, he left for Mandawe to inaugurate a network of concrete roads in that town.

The President then moved on to barrio Basak where he again inaugurated several PACD multi-purpose centers.

He then made a quick trip to Jubay in Liloan where he once more inaugurated more PACD multi-purpose centers and distributed PACD certificates affirming the turn-over to barrios of the finished projects.

From Liloan, the President returned to the presidential ship, where he conferred lengthily with provincial, city and municipal officials on projects and other urgent local problems.

At 5 p.m., the President opened the Police Commission regional academy in Cebu. Accompanying him was Polcom Commissioner Crispino de Castro, who fetched the President from the ship.

Upon returning to the ship in the evening, for his next stop in Iloilo City, the President ordered the spot promotion to the next higher rank of all the officers and enlisted men engaged in the gunbattle which resulted in the killing of 12 huks in Orani, Bataan earlier in the day.

He told Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, who reported the encounter, to convey to the troops involved his personal commendation for a work well done.

The President likewise ordered:

(1) An investigation to establish the identity of Reparations Commission officials who reportedly interceded for certain parties arranging the entry into the country of more than P7 million worth of highly dutiable goods.

The Reparations officials allegedly told agents of the Anti-Smuggling Action Center (ASAC), who intercepted 10 vehicles carrying the goods last Tuesday, to release the trucks because their cargoes were only reparations goods.

(2) The arrest of Tanauan Mayor Jaime “Banjo” Laurel and his companions if the investigation establishes a prima facie case against him and others involved in the shooting incident at the Bayside nightclub.

The President instructed Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile and the Philippine Constabulary to arrest Mayor Laurel and his companions and to prosecute them if the evidence showed them responsible for the gunfray.

(3) The National Bureau of Investigation and the Criminal Investigation Service to help in rounding up and protecting witnesses who were reportedly not available because of fear from reprisals.

Official Week in Review: January 24 – January 30, 1969

January 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was up very early to go over the draft of his state-of-the-nation message, which he will deliver Monday, January 27, when Congress opens its regular session.

He took the opportunity to comb further the speech for any further need of revision, while Malacañang visitors have not begun to arrive and other state business have not started flowing to his desk.

At 12:30, he left for Malabon, Rizal where he was speaker at the first national convention of the Federation of Barrio High Schools.

In a brief speech, the President posed a challenge to barrio leaders and particularly barrio high schools to get more deeply involved in the renewal of the rural areas and in the meaningful community action.

He stressed that in the barrios, education can become “a real touchstone to community action and renewal.” (See Jan. 27 issue of the Official Gazette for full text of the President’s speech.)

On returning to Malacañang, the President received a few officials who called to take up urgent matters. Then, he settled down to some desk work.

Among other actions, he instructed Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez to submit within the week his draft of the bill giving the responsibility for paying the salary differentials of Manila public school teachers to the city government. The President followed up on the proposed bill in order to get this serious problem out of the way as soon as possible.

He also studied reports which came to his desk, including the plan submitted by the Department of Education on its goals for the next couple of years, which embodied most of the current concerns in education, such as the need for increasing classes in view of the wising school population; the need for school involvement in the socio-economic development efforts; the need for upgrading teachers’ welfare and morale; the need for better planning.

He also received a report from the Metrocom on the break-up of two notorious Manila Bay pirate gangs, identified as the Ranger and the Dagang Dingding.

The President spent the rest of the afternoon going over the draft of his state-of-the-nation message once again.

January 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS interspersed work on his state-of-the-nation address with other important matters, such as a meeting this morning with the country’s leading labor leaders, and brief conferences with top aides and officials, notably Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata.

During his breakfast conference with representatives of the country’s labor movements, the President threshed out with the labor leaders the problems facing the common workers as well as the projects designed to improve their welfare.

Notable among the proposals from the labor leaders was that of a Workers Bank, which they said would exclusively cater to the country’s working masses. The President showed interest in the proposal and asked the labor leaders to get together with fiscal and banking experts, particularly with officials of the Central Bank. He said that such an undertaking should be studied thoroughly, particularly on the technical aspects.

After this meeting, the President met other aides on the day's urgent problems. He also received a number of officials who came to consult him on various state matters.

In-between these conferences, the President worked on state papers, and whenever possible, on his speech which will be delivered Monday, on the opening of the regular session of Congress.

One of the primary concerns of the President was the long dry spell in certain parts of the country, which in the face of the coming summer months might prove to be more formidable. He therefore set a meeting with the RCPCC to discuss contingency plans, especially in safeguarding rice production.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Enjoined the National Housing Corporation from implementing any contract it may have concluded with the Hildebrand Maschinenanhandle G.M.B.H., a German firm, pending the approval of the said contract by the Cabinet bidding committee. Under existing rules, government contracts involving amounts exceeding P100,000 must be passed upon by the Cabinet bidding committee.
2. Ordered public hearings conducted immediately by the National Water and Air Pollution Control Commission on the cases of 12 factories facing closure for failure to set up treatment plants for the purification of industrial wastes. The directive was issued to NSDB Chairman Juan Salcedo, Jr., concurrently chairman of the NWAPCC, who had recommended the closure of the factories.

In the afternoon, the President was guest speaker at the inter-church unity rally, held at the Rizal Park. In his speech, he urged the people to support the church-state partnership on behalf of rural improvement and the overall development of the nation.

In the evening, he returned to his paperwork and to further polishing of his state-of-the-nation message.

January 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS worked overtime putting the finishing touches on his message to the joint assembly of Congress tomorrow signalling the opening of this year's regular session.

He found time, however, to discuss with key Cabinet officials the problems raised by student groups who walked out of their classrooms to join demonstrations against certain policies of their schools.

The President earlier received a report from Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz on developments at the Far Eastern University where the students' protest has been marked with violence.

The President also discussed the problem with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Secretary Corpuz, Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople and Undersecretary of Finance Roman Cruz, Jr.

Among the gripes if the students were high increases in tuition fees, issuance of new identification cards for students every semester, and the incursions of school administration on the students' press freedom in connection with the publication of campus newspapers and other periodicals.

In this connection, the President has directed Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez to examine the books of accounts of universities and colleges in the country to determine if it is true that these educational institutions have become profit-making establishments.

The President also approved the promotion of 139 AFP officers to the rank of full colonel (captain, in the case of the navy) on recommendation of defense and armed forces authorities.

Meanwhile, the President declared that his administration has committed the government to the promotion and expansion of scientific and technological activities, in appreciation of research as an indispensable component of development.

He underscored the valuable role science will play in national development saying that it is science and technology, together with skilled manpower, that will build the future of the country.

The President made these observations in a speech read for him by Dean Cesar Virata, chairman of the Board of Investments, before the Industrial Research Workshop which opened under the joint sponsorship of the NSDB Council for Economic Development and the Economic Development Foundation in Baguio City.

The President had a photo session in the afternoon with Rodolfo G. Tupas and Evaristo F. Nievera of the Sunday Times Magazine.

After this, the President returned to his study to work further on his State-of-the-Nation message.

He heard Mass in the evening at the Malacañang chapel, together with the members of his family.

January 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS proposed the organization of a presidential commission to study the possibility of major changes in the governmental system even as he told the Sixth Congress on the opening of its last regular session that the administration has “set the nation on a firm and unchangeable course towards progress and independence.”

The President said the “existing political system has been incapable of producing satisfactory conditions of living” and the “inefficiency and immorality in government were partly due to the defective political system.”

He reported on the state of the nation and offered concrete solutions to many of the grave problems confronting the country, some of which require legislative authority for implementation.

In his message, the President affirmed the transformation of the country even as he pointed to the unmistakable advance in every field, as generated by the administration’s program of government.

The President, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrived in Congress shortly after 5 p.m. The First Couple was accorded a standing ovation as they entered the session hall.

The President then proceeded to the rostrum while the First Lady took her seat with Congress ladies. Along the way he exchanged greetings and shook hands with members of Congress sitting along the aisle.

The proceedings started with Senate President Gil J. Puyat and Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr. calling to order the joint session of the two chambers.

Col. Nicolas Ortega, chief of the Chaplain Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, then said the invocation.

The President started delivering his message at 5:15 p.m. Although he skipped portions dealing with detailed data, it took him about one hour and 15 minutes, anyway, to deliver the whole message. (See February 3 issue of the Official Gazette for full text of the State-of-the-Nation address.)

The President spent most of the day before delivering the State-of-the-Nation address on the final polishing of the speech. Since early morning, he was already involved with last minute changes, taking time off only at 10:35 a.m. to receive the members of the special committee of Congress who came to formally inform him that the legislature has been convened and was ready to receive his message.

The joint committee was composed of Senators Lorenzo M. Tañada (NCP), Helena Benitez (N), Dominador Aytona (N), Leonardo Perez (N), and Benigno S. Aquino, Jr. (L); and Reps. Jose Alberto (N), Manuel Concordia (L), Alberto Unay (N), Melanio Singson (L), and Nicanor Yñiguez (N).

The President attended to urgent official paper in his study in the evening.

January 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS focused on the groundwork needed to propel forward the program for 1969, resulting in almost uninterrupted desk work in his Study.

However, he broke away several times to receive visitors, notably Brig. Gen. Charles A. Lindbergh (USAF ret.), who became a world hero after flying solo for the first time across the Atlantic. He also received other officials, mostly close advisers, and at least three provincial delegations.

In addition, he inducted into office the officers of the Federation of Public Barrio High Schools and the Bicol Association.

In connection with Gen. Lindbergh's call, the President sounded an appeal for closer cooperation between the public and the government in the conservation of the increasingly rare tamaraw.

Gen. Lindbergh, who is now vice-president of Pan American World Airways, has come to Manila to make representations for various nature and wildlife conservation groups for the preservation of the famed Tamaraw.

Gen. Lindbergh was accompanied to Malacañang by Prof. Tom Harrison of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature, and Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr., presidential assistant on national minorities.

Shortly before noon, the President inducted several officials, notably those of the Bicol Association, Inc. and the Federation of Public Barrio High Schools.

Officers of the Bicol Association were headed by Domingo M. Guevarra, president and board chairman; while those of the Federation of Public Barrio High Schools were led by Mayor Lucio G. Gutierrez of Malabon, Rizal, federation chairman.

The President also administered the oath to Eladio Malugan as board director of the Mountain Province Development Authority. The other day, the President inducted Pio Felwa as director of the MPDA. President at this noon's induction were delegations from Ifugao headed by Gov. Gualberto Lumawig and Mountain Province led by Rep. Andres Cosalan.

The President received visitors until 2 p.m. Other callers included delegations from Masbate headed by Rep. Andres Clemente; Camarines Norte led by Rep. Fernando Pajarillo; Cebu headed by Rep. Ramon Durano; and from Ozamiz City headed by Mayor Hilarion A. Ramiro.

In the afternoon, the President went to the Malacañang Heroes Hall where the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, was presiding at ceremonies commemorating the first anniversary of the approval by the U.N. General Assembly of the Declaration on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women.

The ceremonies, which were attended by some 800 women leaders, was sponsored by the Civic Assembly of Women of the Philippines.

PRESIDENT MARCOS threshed out in 3-hour meeting with his financial advisers the funding of urgent government projects in 1969, in a vigorous follow-up of the various development legislative proposals he enunciated in his State-of-the-Nation address last Monday.

In the conference at Malacañang, the President pressed for the implementation of the measures to eliminate delays in the payment of teacher's salaries, including the speed-up of the processing of the appointment papers of teachers.

Shortly before 12 noon, the President temporarily left the conference to give final instructions to Ambassador Luis Moreno Salcedo prior to the latter's departure for his new post as Philippine envoy to Paris. Ambassador Salcedo succeeds as envoy to France Ambassador Jose M. Alejandrino, who has been reassigned to Rome.

After his conference with financial advisers, which lasted from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, played host to Brig. Gen. Charles A. Lindbergh (USAF, ret.), who was acclaimed by the world as the "Lone Eagle," when he crossed the Atlantic alone in a single-engine plane in May 1927. It was the first time anyone flew non-stop solo across the Atlantic.

Now vice-president of Pan American Airways, Gen. Lindbergh is on a visit here on behalf of several world organizations concerned with the preservation of wildlife.

In the course of the day, the President also:

1. Conferred with Commissioner on National Integration Mamintal Tamano on this year's Muslim pilgrimage to Mecca.
2. Directed Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez to start immediately the proposed inquiry into the books of private colleges and universities, in the wake of student demonstrations against the alleged high fees charged by these institutions.

During the conference this morning with his fiscal advisers, the President took note of the unrest in private universities and colleges, partly stemming from the fees charged by these institutions, which students described as excessive.

3. Received an expression of gratitude from the Student Movement for Reforms, a group within the Far Eastern University, for his interest in educational reforms.

At the same time, the student leaders, numbering 23 in all, also assured the President that they will henceforth conduct any demonstration in a "peaceful and orderly manner."

4. Demanded an explanation from the Civil Service Commission of the alleged unnecessary delay in the processing of appointments of teachers and other government employees by that office.

This delay in the processing of appointments was pinpointed as one of the principal reasons for the delay in the payment of salaries of public school teachers. The President had been receiving complaints from teachers from many parts of the country about the non-payment of their salaries.

5. Ordered Commissioner Sy-Changco and Secretary Corpuz to establish a more effective liaison between their offices and the Civil Service Commission in order to cut the delay in the processing of teachers' appointments.

In the evening, the President motored to the Manila Hotel where he was guest of honor at the dinner commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rotary Club of Manila.

In his speech, he assured the business community that there will be no further restrictions on credit, no exchange controls, and no devaluation. (See Feb. 10 issue of the Official Gazette for full text of President's speech.)

January 30—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted his time conferring with various officials, working on important state papers, inducting officers, and receiving visitors.

Among others, he moved to relieve the abaca industry of the pressures burdening it arising from the toll of typhoons, and to receive the visiting Foreign Vice-Minister of Peru, Dr. Javier Perez de Cuellar.

De Cuellar was here as official guest of the Department of Foreign Affairs. He called at Malacañang to pay his courtesies to the President. He was accompanied by Dr. Gutierrez Varagas, charge d'affaires of the Peruvian embassy in Taipei.

After meeting the Peruvian official, the President sat down with leaders of the abaca industry to consider their problems.

Former Ambassador Jose Fuentebella, Sr., president of the Bicol Federation of Abaca Producers, requested a year's respite before settling the industry's accounts with the Development Bank of the Philippines, which has moved to foreclose federation properties in view of the abaca producers' failure to pay their debts to the DBP.

Senator Dominador Aytona recommended a one-year moratorium by the DBP on the collection of debts. The President acceded, directing chairman Gregorio Licaros of the DBP to grant the moratorium.

Ambassador Fuentebella and Bernardo Silverio, another official of the federation, also discussed with the President an industry project toward the processing of abaca for pulp, the raw material in paper manufacturing.

In-between callers, the President inducted into office:

1. Former Mayor Anastacio Bernal of Lubao Pampanga as member of the National Planning Commission; and
2. Eusebio Botengan, Jr. as member of the Mountain Province Development Authority.

The Chief Executive also:

1. Directed the Presidential School Building Committee to study immediately the possibility of constructing two-story pre-fabricated schoolhouses for the barrio high schools movement.

The President specified that the pre-fab unit should be patterned after the Marcos-type pre-fab schoolhouses, which is the more durable of the two types of pre-fabs now available in the country.

He ordered the study in the hope of augmenting the number of barrio high schools now existing, which is viewed as not enough to meet the needs of young people eager to get a secondary education.

2. Directed Secretary Ramon Bagatsing, PARGO chairman, to recall or remove the so-called "eyes and ears" of PARGO from government offices, if indeed there are such "agents."

The President observed that there is no necessity for such agents, adding that there are enough civic-spirited government employees and plain citizens who in discovering irregularities in public offices are compelled to call the attention of the authorities to these cases.

Among other callers were Senators Leonardo Perez, Emmanuel Pelaez and Lorenzo Teves; Reps. Constancio Maglana, Lorenzo Sarmiento, Gregorio Murillo, Andres Cosalan, Rafael Legaspi, Lambero Macias and William Chiongbian.

A big delegation of local officials from Lanao del Sur headed by Rep. Ali Dimaporo, Gov. Linang Mandangan and Marawi City Mayor Omar Dianalan, also called to consult the President on local problems.

Rep. Sarmiento accompanied several mayors from Davao Del Norte, who brought up their respective requirements; while Rep. Maglana and Gov. Leopoldo Lopez of Davao Oriental took up the road project connecting all the towns in their province.

Mayor Titina Anni of Siasi, Jolo, accompanied by her husband, Indanan Anni, also discussed local problems.

Among the President's last callers was Gaudencio Mañalac who invited the President to induct the officers of the Philippine Chamber of Wood Industries.

In the evening the President motored to D'Plaza in Makati, Rizal to address the Philippine institute of Certified Public Accountants. (See Feb. 10 issue of the official Gazette for full text of the President's speech.)

Official Week in Review: February 7 – February 13, 1969

February 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had the opportunity to discuss directly certain rural development projects brought up to him by delegations of barrio officials from Batangas and Cavite, who called in separate groups in the morning at Malacañang.

The President also considered other problems with various officials whom he received, including members of Congress.

Otherwise, the President's day was concentrated on desk work, as he studied official papers and reports from various offices of the government.

Among his callers was Manuel Cudiamat, supervisor of the IBM division of the Budget Commission, who brought to the President some 4,000 treasury warrants covering the salaries of Manila public school teachers. The warrants compare the first batch of national government paychecks to be delivered direct to school teachers, in accordance with presidential instructions. This means was taken to prevent delay in the payment of salaries, which was the case when payment was made through the Manila city treasurer's office.

Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco accompanied Cudiamat, and later took up briefly with the President other fiscal matters.

The Batangas group was accompanied by Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Governor Feliciano Leviste, and Mayors Amado E. Laurel of Talisay, Tirso P. Ramos of Lobo, and Soriano L. Lubis of Mataas na Kahoy; while the Cavite barrio leaders were accompanied by Undersecretary of Commerce Fernando Campos, former Governor Dominador Camerino and Mayor Eusebio Leachon of Amadeo and former Vice-Governor Benigno Guinto.

The Batangas and Cavite barrio officials called to inform the President of the priority projects they have chosen for their respective localities. They requested the aid of the national government, in line with the administration's intensified program for rural development, in implementing the projects.

Others who called on the President included Senators Dominador Aytona and Leonardo Perez and Rep. Floro Crisologo of Ilocos Sur; Governors Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales and Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal.

In the course of the day, the Chief Executive also:

1. Certified to Congress the bills pending in the Senate and the House proposing a Magna Carta for students, thus rounding out the measures taken to respond to the problems and grievances of the student community.

The President's certification of the Magna Carta for students was in accordance with a pledge earlier in conference with student leaders, following the demonstrations in several Manila colleges and universities where students presented grievances and asked for guarantees in their rights and privileges.

2. Received Paul Hoffman, administrator of the United Nations Development Program who is here on a four-day official visit to see UNDP-assisted projects in the country. He is a house guest at Malacañang.

In his after-dinner remarks, the President emphasized that many countries owe to the competence and dedicated leadership of the UNDP official in international assistance programs much of their present security and abundance.

3. Received the support of, and vote of confidence in Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz of the Philippine Public School Teachers Association headed by Santos Pascual, PPSTA president.

4. Received assurance from former Governor Norberto Romualdez, Jr., coordinator and action officer of the Presidential Advisory Council on Public Works and Community Development (PACPWCD), that the production of maps for use by the Commission on Elections in the coming poll will be ready on March 31, 1969, the deadline for completion.

The assurance was given on the inquiry of the President as to the progress of the work, in appreciation of the importance of the maps in the facilitation of the Comelec's work in the coming elections.

February 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS urged the start of "an earnest and responsible" dialogue on the changes in the Constitution which a constitutional convention will consider in 1971.

In brief remarks at cocktails honoring surviving delegates to the Constitutional Convention and members of the Philippine Constitution Association given at Malacañang, in connection with the nation's observance of Constitution Day, the President affirmed the "sanctity" with which the Filipinos regard the nation's charter.

At the same time, he said, the Constitution is "the will of the people, and the people, through their representatives, have the sovereign right, when they so prefer, to remold the Constitution and make it more responsive to the needs of the national community."

In the morning, the President, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, attended the inauguration of the new IBM building on Ayala Avenue in Makati, Rizal where the President was guest of honor and speaker.

Otherwise, the President confined himself to the study of official papers, setting up in the process two commissions relative to the proposed reorganization of the government machinery and decentralization of the government.

A third body was also set up by the President to oversee the production of food, in the country's thrust toward food self-sufficiency. The central body is patterned after the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council except that it has broader scope to include all food production programs.

It was, for the President, also a day of award ceremonies, notably the presentation of presidential plaques to the 18 outstanding farmers of the country, for having coaxed quantum yields per hectare from their rice crops, using modern methods.

The farmers were Vicente Bacani of Bagabag, Nueva Vizcaya; Artemio Alivia of Ilagan, Isabela; Paolo Carag of Solana, Cagayan; Pedro Dizon of Mexico Pampanga; Abraham Dycoco of Libon, Albay; Placido Hernandez of Naujan, Oriental Mindoro; Tirso Jamandre of La Paz, Iloilo City; Concepcion Z. Ledesma of Calumangan, Bago City; Zoilo Perlas of Plaridel, Bulacan; Jacinto Mita of Alangalang, Leyte; Perfecto Obias, Jr. of San Jose, Camarines Sur; Feliciano Olaya of Abucay, Bataan; Bautista Rosal of Isulan, Cotabato; Marcelino Rosete of San Felipe, Zambales; Porfirio Ruoda of San Jose, Nueva Ecija; Rosendo M. Tomas of Mayantoc, Tarlac; Miguel Villapaña of Urdaneta, Pangasinan; and Gregorio Zarraga of Biñan, Laguna.

The President also conferred an award on Arthur K. Watson, IBM Worldwide chairman, who received the Order of the Golden Heart for "service to humanity and the 20th century" by virtue of IBM contributions to science and technology.

Earlier, the President had Watson as breakfast guest, along with some members of the Cabinet and other government officials.

In his speech at the IBM building inauguration, the President projected the essentiality of a social conscience in big business, which will enable business entities to render services to the nation in which they actuate toward improving public welfare and helping in social uplift.

At the affair honoring the Constitutional Convention delegates, the President delivered brief remarks which delineated the sturdy values of the Constitution, but also supported the proposed changes in the basic Charter, saying that the nation's experience since the Charter was drafted has indicated that amendments are needed to update the document in response to present and future needs.

Among those at the affair were members of the Philippine Constitution Association led by Justice Jose Ma. Paredes, president; members of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Cabinet, other ranking officials, and the surviving delegates led by Don Vicente Francisco.

February 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was guest of honor at the 30th anniversary rites of the Philippine Navy, where in his speech he outlined the challenges facing the naval arm and what the Navy can do in contribution to national development and security.

The President also received visitors and conferred with officials, although Sunday is usually a day he reserves for concentrated desk work.

Notable among his callers today was Sir Stanley Tomlins, deputy undersecretary of state for Asian affairs of the British foreign ministry. The British official called in the evening at Malacañang, accompanied by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo and British Ambassador John Mansfield Addis.

Among the reports studied by the President was that of Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez on the scrutiny of the books of big universities and colleges in Manila. In sum, the report said that these institutions realize sizable profits from their operations.

In other actions, the Chief Executive:

1. Dispatched Felicisimo Ocampo, associate reparations commissioner to Tokyo where he will supervise the public bidding on certain reparations items.

He indicated that Ocampo was picked to oversee the bidding because he represented the opposition party. Ocampo's specific mission is to keep the bidding aboveboard.

2. Established by executive order a national food and agriculture council to coordinate the activities of various government agencies involved in the administration's program aimed at attaining self-sufficiency in food.

The new body is an expanded version of the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council which had succeeded in increasing production of the nation's two staple food.

3. Created a Youth and Student Affairs Board composed solely of representatives of student and youth organizations to serve as an agency to formulate policies and programs for the youth and students and as the channel for a continuing dialogue between them and the government.
4. Published his income tax payments during the last three years, with a statement that any increase or decrease in the amount of taxes paid by him was due to the uncertainties that attend the practice of law.

According to the statement the President paid P89,937.00 in income tax in 1966 for income in 1965; P84,106.30 in 1967 for income in 1966, and P188,208.00 in 1968 for income in 1967.

"The increase in my income in 1967 was due to an increase in payments of attorney's fees for cases which I had handled even before I became a Senator, but which were finally adjudicated by the trial or appellate courts only in 1967 and for which I was paid my corresponding fees that year," he said.

Leaving Malacañang in the company of Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata and General Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff, the President motored to Pier 15 where he boarded RPS 777, a Navy hydrofoil used in the anti-smuggling drive.

Aboard the hydrofoil, the President received the Navy salute, rendered by a naval formation. Commodore Ismael Lomibao, flag-officer-in-command of the Navy, joined the President after the salute.

The President then went on to the Navy headquarters where the main Navy Day rites were held.

Highlighting the program was the conferment of awards to 12 military personnel and 11 civilians and entities who have contributed to the Navy's welfare. The President gave the awards.

The awardees were: Seaman 1st Class Melecio Bernate who received a battle commendation medal; LCdr. Rosita Macaling of the Nurse Corps, LCdr. Leonardo Nuval, Capt. Conrado Chuidian and LDdr. Brillante Ochoco, who each received a military merit medal; Cdr. Gonzalo Santos who was given a military merit medal and a military commendation ribbon; Capt. Hilario Ruiz, military commendation medal; LCdr. Redmedios Aquino, Cpl. Leonardo Orate, Pfc. Edgardo Flores and Pfc. Roberto Mendoza, who all received the military commendation ribbon; and Major Thomas Ahern, Jr. of JUSMAG, who was given the Flag-Officer-In-Command Plaque.

Other recipients of the FOIC plaque were Fiscal Narciso Diokno Salcedo, Rodolfo G. Tupas, Pedro Lopez, Jr., Ramon Flores, Jr., Johnny de Leon, the DND Press Corps, the Press Photographers of the Philippines, the Society of Philippine Illustrators and Cartoonists, Laja Hamaluddin, Juanito de los Santos and Benigno Manabat.

PRESIDENT MARCOS submitted to Congress the proposed P3.197 billion appropriation bill for the next fiscal year to cover government operations and development expenditures, addressed the regional meeting of the United Nations Development Program being held in Manila, and then flew to Davao City.

The overall budget of P3.197 billion is P131 million less than the current budget of 3.328 billion.

The proposed expenditures under the General Fund is P200 million less than the expenditures under the General Fund last year.

The President signed the budget message at Malacañang this morning and was immediately submitted to Congress by Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco.

At 8:00 a.m., the President motored to the WHO building at UN Avenue where he addressed the UNDP regional meeting wherein he projected the profound changes taking place in the world and the need for all people to respond to it with action for the larger welfare of mankind.

In this connection, the President underlined the endeavors of the United Nations Development Program, under the various projects of which part of the answer to the challenge of change has been provided.

He said that beyond what the UN has done to meet this challenge, the various countries of the world must meet the challenge through better laws, greater assistance to have-nots, through cooperation, and efforts in behalf of peace, justice and world order.

"It is a task not alone for you," he said, "nor for one nation, but for all leaders of free men in Asia and Africa, in the Americas, and in Europe." (See pp. 1545-1549 for full text of the President's speech).

Immediately after his address, the President, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, proceeded to the airport and boarded the Presidential Fokker plane for Davao City. They arrived there at about 11:30 a.m.

At the Davao airport, the First Couple was met by a rousing welcome from a crowd that virtually swarmed all over the city airport.

Leading the welcomers were provincial, municipal and barrio officials, as well as national officials from Mindanao.

After the military honors rendered the President, the First Couple headed motorcade that first stopped at the city cathedral for a Te Deum sung in the couple's honor.

After the Te Deum, the President and the First Lady officiated at the inauguration of the Davao-Calinan asphalt road. On the way to Calinan, the Presidential party made unscheduled stops at barrios to return the people's greetings. The President spoke briefly at each stop to the barrio people.

Along the way, the President inaugurated Marcos-type schoolhouses. The unscheduled stops disrupted his schedule, so that he had to forego lunch at Calinan. Instead he turned right around to attend the opening of the Mindanao Athletic Association Meet in Davao City.

The ceremonies started not at 3:00 p.m. as scheduled but at 5:00 p.m. After the rites, during which the President spoke, he again inaugurated a new edifice, the Division of City Schools administration building.

During the day he had conferences with various officials and distributed development funds allocated to barrios.

In the evening, the President had a conference with local and Mindanao leaders at the Insular Hotel. He inducted two groups of officials, one of the city barrio councils federation, the other of the local PTA.

The President also called on candidates for public office and officials holding high public office to disclose their income tax payments since 1965.

The President said he had divulged his own income tax payments in order to set an example for all who are aspiring to public office in the coming elections.

"I now ask that everyone now in high public office and all those who aim to run for the office of the President of the Philippines, to divulge their own income tax payments since 1965 so that the people may know."

February 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS tirelessly moved through two Davao provinces, as he pressed for the second day his inspection of rural improvement projects and inaugurated completed ones.

The President said that an equally important objective of his current trip is the inquiry into the further needs of the people in the area, particularly rural folks, so that proper action may be taken.

At the residence of Senator Alejandro Almendras, where the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, had lunch, the President conferred with provincial governors and city and municipal mayors of Mindanao provinces participating in the week-long Mindanao Athletic Association meet, now being held in Davao City.

Accompanied by First Lady, the President visited the new provinces of Davao Oriental and Davao del Norte.

Last night, after officiating at the opening of the athletic meet the President and the First Lady motored to Digos, capital of Davao del Sur, some 60 kilometers from Davao City, where the President conferred with barrio captains of the province.

At this conference, the President received a scroll of gratitude jointly passed by all the 267 barrio councils of Davao del Sur. The scroll thanked the President for rural improvement projects launched by the administration in their respective communities.

Returning to the city about 11:00 p.m., the President again conferred with councilmen of the 117 barrios of the city, at the Insular Hotel. Mayor Elias Lopez accompanied the group.

Earlier in the morning, Brig. Gen. Hans Menzi piloted the President in a light plane across the Davao gulf to Mati, capital of Davao Oriental, where the President had another conference with councilmen of the 149 barrios of the province. He also inspected the progress of the work on the extension of the local pier. The improved pier will be able to handle the increasing traffic in that inter-island shipping center of Mindanao.

The President gave the provincial engineer and the AFP engineering battalion assigned in Davao Oriental five months to finish a 70-kilometer road connecting four coastal towns of the province.

Back in Davao City at 1:00 p.m., the President proceeded to the University of Mindanao where he addressed a seminar of government employees in connection with the observance of Savings and Thrift Year held under the auspices of the Kapisanan ng mga Kawani ng Pamahalaan and the Central Bank.

Later, the President and the First Lady motored to Tagum, capital of Davao del Norte, where he again conferred with provincial, municipal and barrio officials.

On the way to the capital town, the First Couple stopped briefly at Carmen where they inaugurated a multi-purpose center.

The President and First Lady were back in Davao City early in the evening.

The President met at dinner at the Insular Hotel representatives of the local mass media.

Meanwhile, the President promulgated by executive order the manual of student rights and responsibilities, which the Department of Education will implement.

The manual was instituted in the “interest of the state and society,” the presidential order said, with both public and private educational institutions required to “provide facilities for academic development as well as conditions for intelligent social participation.”

The manual seeks to attain this objective by establishing rapport between school and students through guarantee of student rights, while defining student responsibilities.

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned to Manila from a two-day inspection trip to the Davao region, arriving around 1:30 p.m. at Nichols Air Base. He was accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who made the trip with him.

On arrival at Malacañang, the President immediately scanned official papers on his desk and acted on a number of urgent state business.

He issued an administrative order creating a special committee for student affairs, which will deal with the problems of U.P. students.

Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas will head the group, which will be composed of three others representing the government and the U.P. administration; and three students to be picked by the U.P. student council, as well as the president of the council himself.

The President also accepted upon receipt the resignation of Senator Benigno Aquino, Jr. as member of the Presidential Study Commission on Central Luzon.

Aquino was appointed member of the Commission by the President simultaneous with its creation. The Commission was created to study in depth the problems of the region. Former Senator Manuel Manahan is the chairman of the group.

Besides doing his paperwork, the President also consulted with close aides on current concerns and conferred with various officials who called at Malacañang.

Among those who saw the President were Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile and Governor Eduardo Cojuangco, Jr. of Tarlac.

In the evening, the President continued to work at his desk in the presidential Study.

February 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS interceded for government employees deserving of promotion by asking the Civil Service Commission to act on their papers; ordered a probe of the incident in Pangasinan involving the Angeles City mayor and certain PC personnel; and took steps to have a study commission consider necessary amendments to the Constitution.

These were some of the actions taken by the President as he concentrated on paper work at his desk. He received almost no outside visitors, except for government officials and close aides.

He also asked his staff to announce the termination of services of 15 ranking officers, including eight generals and seven colonels, all of whom were due for retirement but served extended tours of duty. The officers were variously retired within the current fiscal year, some in the first half of the year, others this month and the next.

The President is now studying the termination of the services of 15 other officers, due for retirement soon.

Working in his Study, the President pored over reports and problems elevated to him. He received only officials with urgent matters to take up, concentrating most of his time on the work at hand. For this purpose, he called in occasionally his aides.

He instructed Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to set up a presidential study commission which will recommend amendments to the nations Charter. The group will be headed by a retired Supreme Court justice, and will have as members representatives from among national lawyers groups and members of the PHILCONSA as well as of the academic community.

The President also ordered a probe by a composite team from the justice department, the NBI and the PC of the incident in Carmen, Pangasinan, where Mayor Eugenio Suarez was reportedly stopped at gunpoint by a group of PC men.

In the case of promotions of government employees, the President asked CSC Commissioner Abelardo Subido to give due course to the promotion of deserving personnel in order that their chances for advancement may not be prejudiced. To meet the problem of promotion plan of offices, lack of which pended the promotion of employees, the President asked the CSC to give a year's extension for the completion of the plans.

The President kept close to his Study through the evening, to catch up with paper work which piled up during his recent survey trip to the Davao provinces.

Official Week in Review: February 7 – February 13, 1969

February 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had the opportunity to discuss directly certain rural development projects brought up to him by delegations of barrio officials from Batangas and Cavite, who called in separate groups in the morning at Malacañang.

The President also considered other problems with various officials whom he received, including members of Congress.

Otherwise, the President's day was concentrated on desk work, as he studied official papers and reports from various offices of the government.

Among his callers was Manuel Cudiamat, supervisor of the IBM division of the Budget Commission, who brought to the President some 4,000 treasury warrants covering the salaries of Manila public school teachers. The warrants comprise the first batch of national government paychecks to be delivered direct to school teachers, in accordance with presidential instructions. This means was taken to prevent delay in the payment of salaries, which was the case when payment was made through the Manila city treasurer's office.

Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco accompanied Cudiamat, and later took up briefly with the President other fiscal matters.

The Batangas group was accompanied by Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Governor Feliciano Leviste, and Mayors Amado E. Laurel of Talisay, Tirso P. Ramos of Lobo, and Soriano L. Lubis of Mataas na Kahoy; while the Cavite barrio leaders were accompanied by Undersecretary of Commerce Fernando Campos, former Governor Dominador Camerino and Mayor Eusebio Leachon of Amadeo and former Vice-Governor Benigno Guinto.

The Batangas and Cavite barrio officials called to inform the President of the priority projects they have chosen for their respective localities. They requested the aid of the national government, in line with the administration's intensified program for rural development, in implementing the projects.

Others who called on the President included Senators Dominador Aytona and Leonardo Perez and Rep. Floro Crisologo of Ilocos Sur; Governors Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales and Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal.

In the course of the day, the Chief Executive also:

1. Certified to Congress the bills pending in the Senate and the House proposing a Magna Carta for students, thus rounding out the measures taken to respond to the problems and grievances of the student community.

The President's certification of the Magna Carta for students was in accordance with a pledge earlier in conference with student leaders, following the demonstrations in several Manila colleges and universities where students presented grievances and asked for guarantees in their rights and privileges.

2. Received Paul Hoffman, administrator of the United Nations Development Program who is here on a four-day official visit to see UNDP-assisted projects in the country. He is a house guest at Malacañang.

In his after-dinner remarks, the President emphasized that many countries owe to the competence and dedicated leadership of the UNDP official in international assistance programs much of their present security and abundance.

3. Received the support of, and vote of confidence in Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz of the Philippine Public School Teachers Association headed by Santos Pascual, PPSTA president.

4. Received assurance from former Governor Norberto Romualdez, Jr., coordinator and action officer of the Presidential Advisory Council on Public Works and Community Development (PAC-PWCD), that the production of maps for use by the Commission on Elections in the coming poll will be ready on March 31, 1969, the deadline for completion.

The assurance was given on the inquiry of the President as to the progress of the work, in appreciation of the importance of the maps in the facilitation of the Comelec's work in the coming elections.

February 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS urged the start of "an earnest and responsible" dialogue on the changes in the Constitution which a constitutional convention will consider in 1971.

In brief remarks at cocktails honoring surviving delegates to the Constitutional Convention and members of the Philippine Constitution Association given at Malacañang, in connection with the nation's observance of Constitution Day, the President affirmed the "sanctity" with which the Filipinos regard the nation's charter.

At the same time, he said, the Constitution is "the will of the people, and the people, through their representatives, have the sovereign right, when they so prefer, to remold the Constitution and make it more responsive to the needs of the national community."

In the morning, the President, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda E. Marcos, attended the inauguration of the new IBM building on Ayala Avenue in Makati, Rizal where the President was guest of honor and speaker.

Otherwise, the President confined himself to the study of official papers, setting up in the process two commissions relative to the proposed reorganization of the government machinery and decentralization of the government.

A third body was also set up by the President to oversee the production of food, in the country's thrust toward food self-sufficiency. The central body is patterned after the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council, except that it has broader scope to include all food production programs.

It was, for the President, also a day of award ceremonies, notably the presentation of presidential plaques to the 18 outstanding farmers of the country, for having coaxed quantum yields per hectare from their rice crops, using modern methods.

The farmers awarded were Vicente Bacani of Bagabag, Nueva Vizcaya; Artemio Alivia of Ilagan, Isabela; Pablo Carag of Solana, Cagayan; Pedro Dizon of Mexico, Pampanga; Abraham Dycoco of Libon, Albay; Placido Hernandez of Naujan, Oriental Mindoro; Tirso Jamandre of La Paz, Iloilo City; Concepcion Z. Ledesma of Calumangan, Bago City; Zoilo Perlas of Plaridel, Bulacan; Jacinto Mita of Alangalang, Leyte; Perfecto Obias, Jr. of San Jose, Camarines Sur; Feliciano Olaya of Abucay, Bataan; Bautista Rosal of Isulan, Cotabato; Marcelino Rosete of San Felipe, Zambales; Porfirio Ruoda of San Jose, Nueva Ecija; Rosendo M. Tomas of Mayantoc, Tarlac; Miguel Villapaña of Urdaneta, Pangasinan; and Gregorio Zarraga of Biñan, Laguna.

The President also conferred an award on Arthur K. Watson, IBM Worldwide chairman, who received the Order of the Golden Heart for "service to humanity and the 20th century" by virtue of IBM contributions to science and technology.

Earlier, the President had Watson as breakfast guest, along with some members of the Cabinet and other government officials.

In his speech at the IBM building inauguration, the President projected the essentiality of a social conscience in big business, which will enable business entities to render services to the nation in which they actuate toward improving public welfare and helping in social uplift.

At the affair honoring the Constitutional Convention delegates, the President delivered brief remarks which delineated the sturdy values of the Constitution, but also supported the proposed changes in the basic Charter, saying that the nation's experience since the Charter was drafted has indicated that amendments are needed to update the document in response to present and future needs.

Among those at the affair were members of the Philippine Constitution Association led by Justice Jose Ma. Paredes, president; members of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Cabinet, other ranking officials, and the surviving delegates led by Don Vicente Francisco.

February 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was guest of honor at the 30th anniversary rites of the Philippine Navy, where in his speech he outlined the challenges facing the naval arm and what the Navy can do in contribution to national development and security.

The President also received visitors and conferred with officials, although Sunday is usually a day he reserves for concentrated desk work.

3. Created a Youth and Student Affairs Board composed solely of representatives of student and youth organizations to serve as an agency to formulate policies and programs for the youth and students and as the channel for a continuing dialogue between them and the government.

Published his income tax payments during the last three years, with a statement that any increase or decrease in the amount of taxes paid by him was due to the uncertainties that attend the practice of law.

According to the statement the President paid P89,937.00 in income tax in 1966 for income in 1965; P84,106.30 in 1967 for income in 1966, and P188,208.00 in 1968 for income in 1967.

"The increase in my income in 1967 was due to an increase in payments of attorney's fees for cases which I had handled even before I became a Senator, but which were finally adjudicated by the trial or appellate courts only in 1967 and for which I was paid my corresponding fees that year," he said.

Leaving Malacañang in the company of Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata and General Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff, the President motored to Pier 15 where he boarded RPS 777, a Navy hydrofoil used in the anti-smuggling drive.

Roberto Mendoza, who all received the military commendation ribbon; and Major Thomas Ahern, Jr. of JUSMAG, who was given the Flag-Officer-In-Command Plaque.

Other recipients of the FOIC plaque-were Fiscal Narciso Diokno Salcedo, Rodolfo G. Tupas, Pedro Lopez, Jr., Ramon Flores, Jr., Johnny de Leon the DND Press Corps, the Press Photographers of the Philippines, the Society of Philippine Illustrators and Cartoonists, Laja Hamaluddin, Juanito de los Santos and Benigno Manabat.

February 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS submitted to Congress the proposed P3.197 billion appropriation bill for the next fiscal year to cover government operations and development expenditures addressed the regional meeting of the United Nations Development Program being held in Manila and then flew to Davao City.

The overall budget of P3.197 billion is P131 million less than the current budget of 3.328 billion.

The proposed expenditures under the General Fund is P200 million less than the expenditures under the General Fund last year.

The President signed the budget message at Malacañang this morning and was immediately submitted to Congress by Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco.

At 8:00 a.m., the President motored to, the WHO building at UN Avenue where he addressed the UNDP regional meeting wherein he projected the profound changes taking place in the world and the need for all peoples to respond to it with positive action for the larger welfare of mankind.

In this connection, the President underlined the endeavors of the United Nations Development Program, under the various projects of which part of the answer to the challenge of change has been provided.

He said that beyond what the UN has done to meet this challenge, the various countries of the world must meet the challenge through better laws, greater assistance to have-nots, through cooperation, and efforts in behalf of peace, justice and world order.

"It is a task not alone for you," he said, "nor for one nation, but for all leaders of free men in Asia and Africa, in the Americas, and in Europe." (See pp. 1545-1549 for full text of the President's speech).

Immediately after his address, the President, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, proceeded to the airport and boarded the Presidential Fokker plane for Davao City. They arrived there at about 11:30a.m.

At the Davao airport, the First Couple was met by a rousing welcome from a crowd that virtually swarmed all over the city airport.

Leading the welcomers were provincial, municipal and barrio officials, as well as national officials from Mindanao.

After the military honors rendered the President, the First Couple headed a motorcade that first stopped at the city cathedral for a Te Deum sung in the couple's honor.

After the Te Deum, the President and the First Lady officiated at the inauguration of the Davao-Calinan asphalt road. On the way to Calinan, the Presidential party made unscheduled stops at barrios to return the people's greetings. The President spoke briefly at each stop to the barrio people.

Along the way, the President inaugurated Marcos-type schoolhouses. The unscheduled stops disrupted his schedule, so that he had to forego lunch at Calinan. Instead he turned right around to attend the opening of the Mindanao Athletic Association Meet in Davao City.

The ceremonies started not at 3:00 p.m. as scheduled but at 5:00 p.m. After the rites, during which the President spoke, he again inaugurated a new edifice, the Division of City Schools administration building.

During the day he had conferences with various officials and distributed development funds allocated to barrios.

In the evening, the President, had a conference with local and Mindanao leaders at the Insular Hotel. He inducted two groups of officials, one of the city barrio councils federation, the other of the local PTA.

The President also called on candidates for public office and officials holding high public office to disclose their income tax payments since 1965.

The President said he had divulged his own income tax payments in order to set an example for all who are aspiring to public office in the coming elections.

"I now ask that everyone now in high public office and all those who aim to run for the office of the President of the Philippines, to divulge their own income tax payments since 1965 so that the people may know."

February 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS tirelessly moved through two Davao provinces, as he pressed for the second day his inspection of rural improvement projects and inaugurated completed ones.

The President said that an equally important objective of his current trip is the inquiry into the further needs of the people in the area, particularly rural folks, so that proper action may be taken.

At the residence of Senator Alejandro Almendras, where the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, had lunch, the President conferred with provincial governors and city and municipal mayors of Mindanao provinces participating in the week-long Mindanao Athletic Association meet, now being held in Davao City.

Accompanied by First Lady, the President visited the new provinces of Davao Oriental and Davao del Norte.

Last night, after officiating at the opening of the athletic meet the President and the First Lady motored to Digos, capital of Davao del Sur, some 60 kilometers from Davao City, where the President conferred with barrio captains of the province.

At this conference, the President received a scroll of gratitude jointly passed by all the 267 barrio councils of Davao del Sur. The scroll thanked the President for rural improvement projects launched by the administration in their respective communities.

Returning to the city about 11:00 p.m., the President again conferred with councilmen of the 117 barrios of the city, at the Insular Hotel. Mayor Elias Lopez accompanied the group.

Earlier in the morning, Brig. Gen. Hans Menzi piloted the President in a light plane across the Davao gulf to Mati, capital of Davao Oriental, where the President had another conference with councilmen of the 149 barrios of the province. He also inspected the progress of the work on the extension of the local pier. The improved pier will be able to handle the increasing traffic in that interisland shipping center of Mindanao.

The President gave the provincial engineer and the AFP engineering battalion assigned in Davao Oriental five months to finish a 70-kilometer road connecting four coastal towns of the province.

Back in Davao City at 1:00 p.m., the President proceeded to the University of Mindanao where he addressed a seminar of government employees connection with the observance of Savings and Thrift Year held under the auspices of the Kapisanan ng mga Kawani ng Pamahalaan and the Central Bank.

Later, the President and the First Lady motored to Tagum, capital of Davao del Norte, where he again conferred with provincial, municipal and barrio officials.

On the way to the capital town, the First Couple stopped briefly at Carmen where they inaugurated a multi-purpose center.

The President and First Lady were back in Davao City early in the evening.

The President met at dinner at the Insular Hotel representatives of the local mass media.

Meanwhile, the President promulgated by executive order the manual of student rights and responsibilities, which the Department of Education will implement.

The manual was instituted in the “interest of the state and society,” the presidential order said, with both public and private educational institutions required to “provide facilities for academic development as well as conditions for intelligent social participation.”

The manual seeks to attain this objective by establishing rapport between school and students through guarantee of student rights, while defining student responsibilities.

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned to Manila from a two-day inspection trip to the Davao region, arriving around 1:30 p.m. at Nichols Air Base. He was accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who made the trip with him.

On arrival at Malacañang, the President immediately scanned official papers on his desk and acted on a number of urgent state business.

He issued an administrative order creating a special committee for student affairs, which will deal with the problems of U.P. students.

Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas will Head the group, which will be composed of three others representing the government and the U.P. administration; and three students to be picked by the U.P. student council, as well as the president of the council himself.

The President also accepted upon receipt the resignation of Senator Benigno Aquino, Jr. as member of the Presidential Study Commission on Central Luzon.

Aquino was appointed member of the Commission by the President simultaneous with its creation. The Commission was created to study in depth the problems of the region. Former Senator Manuel Manahan is the chairman of the group.

Besides doing his paperwork, the President also consulted with close aides on current concerns and conferred with various officials who called at Malacañang.

Among those who saw the President were Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile and Governor Eduardo Cojuangco, Jr. of Tarlac.

In the evening, the President continued to work at his desk in the presidential Study.

February 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS interceded for government employees deserving of promotion by asking the Civil Service Commission to act on their papers; ordered a probe of the incident in Pangasinan involving the Angeles City mayor and certain PC personnel; and took steps to have a study commission consider necessary amendments to the Constitution.

These were some of the actions taken by the President as he concentrated on paper work at his desk. He received almost no outside visitors, except for government officials and close aides.

He also asked his staff to announce the termination of services of 15 ranking officers, including eight generals and seven colonels, all of whom were due for retirement but served extended tours of duty. The officers were variously retired within the current fiscal year, some in the first half of the year, others this month and the next.

The President is now studying the termination of the services of 15 other officers, due for retirement soon.

Working in his Study, the President pored over reports and problems elevated to him. He received only officials with urgent matters to take up, concentrating most of his time on the work at hand. For this purpose, he called in occasionally his aides.

He instructed Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to set up a presidential study commission which will recommend amendments to the nations Charter. The group will be headed by a retired Supreme Court justice, and will have as members representatives from among national lawyers groups and members of the PHILCONSA as well as of the academic community.

The President also ordered a probe by a composite team from the justice department, the NBI and the PC of the incident in Carmen, Pangasinan, where Mayor Eugenio Suarez was reportedly stopped at gunpoint by a group of PC men.

In the case of promotions of government employees, the President asked CSC Commissioner Abelardo Subido to give due course to the promotion of deserving personnel in order that their chances for advancement may not be prejudiced. To meet the problem of promotion plan of offices, lack of which pended the promotion of employees, the President asked the CSC to give a year's extension for the completion of the plans.

The President kept close to his Study through the evening, to catch up with paper work which piled up during his recent survey trip to the Davao provinces.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

March 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued his personal survey of government projects and his program of conferences with local officials with a flying visit to Dumaguete City where he met local and provincial officials of Negros Oriental.

Leaving Manila at about 6:30 a.m., the President and his party flew straight to Dumaguete City where a big crowd awaited him at the airport, led by Mayor Jose Pro. Teves, to give him proper welcome. After the usual ceremonies, the President went to the city church where a Te Deum was sung in his honor.

Emerging from the church, the President was besieged by admirers who vied for the opportunity to shake his hand. The President enthusiastically responded, reaching out to shake hands with as many citizens as possible.

Then he whisked off to the city auditorium where he conferred with an impressive gathering of delegations from all the municipalities and barrios of the province.

In a conference later with local officials, which was attended by Senator Lorenzo Teves, Rep. Lamberto Macias, Secretary of General Services Salih Ututalum, Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, PACT) Secretary Ernesto Maceda, and district engineers, the President listened to the problems of local officials, including that of lack of heavy equipment for speed-ding up the construction of barrio and feeder roads.

As a result of this complaint, the President directed the Department of Public Works and Communications to form construction teams in each engineering district throughout the country, whose special mission will be to expedite road construction and to maintain existing ones.

The President and his party returned to Manila about 3 p.m. Enroute both ways the President worked on state papers, in the course of which he:

1. Asked for a study of the feasibility of suspending the effectivity of the law authorizing an additional one per cent on realty taxes, which will go into the special education fund.
2. Approved the immediate construction of the Dumaguete City pier.
3. Asked the committee headed by Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez to report within 24 hours on the purported hike in bus and jeepney fares.
4. Approved air service agreements between this country and Lebanon, France, the Netherlands, and Italy.
5. Authorized the Department of Social Welfare to administer the P100 million World Food Program in this country.
6. Declared the period from March 17 to 23 this year as "National Museum Week," as a means of promoting cultural consciousness among the Filipinos.
7. Signed House Bill No. 17837 declaring the period from March 22, 1969 to March 22, 1970 as the General Emilio Aguinaldo Centennial Year.

The bill appropriated P500,000 to carry out the purposes of the law.

Introduced by Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr. it was certified earlier and passed by both chambers of Congress, in honor of General Aguinaldo, the first and only President of the First Republic of the Philippines, which was the first democratic Republic in Asia.

In the evening, the President was guest of honor at the AFP celebration of Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo's 100th birthday.

March 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS asked the nation to “give new meaning” to Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo’s vision of a free and viable Republic in the “context of our time.”

The President stressed that the “shape and nature of the nation proclaimed by Aguinaldo is still the image of the Future” which Filipinos today perceive.

In a speech delivered for him by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, at the commemoration of the 100th birthday of Gen. Aguinaldo, at Kawit, Cavite, the President asserted that the Second Republic was launched with the same vision which imbued the men of the Revolution.

“It is now ours to fulfill that vision,” he stated. “We must make the choices, reach the decisions, do the work, fight the battles, and our people, God willing, win our place in history.” (See pp. 3112-3115 for full text of the President’s speech.)

The President devoted much of his working day to the study of state papers, reports, and other official matters,

He left Malacañang for a quick trip to the Veterans Memorial Hospital in Quezon City early in the morning to consult doctors on a stomach upset.

A complete check-up, however, revealed nothing particularly wrong. The VMH doctors gave him a clean bill of health.

In the afternoon, the President went to Fort Bonifacio to speak at the ceremonies commemorating the 72nd anniversary of the Philippine Army.

In his speech, the President emphasized his determination to implement the fundamental policy prohibiting any member of the armed forces from engaging in any activity that might be interpreted as partisan political action.

On his return to Malacañang, he once again concentrated on his paper work.

The Chief Executive, among others:

1. Authorized Immigration Commissioner Edmundo Reyes to conduct hearings on the case of Chinese businessman Ernesto Ting, with the view of resolving the case immediately and recommending the proper action for Malacañang to take.
2. Set the summer session of government offices, from April 1 to June 15, with government employees allowed to work only from 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., with provisions for a skeleton force in the afternoon to take care of urgent official business.

Excepted from the half-session are officials and personnel performing special or urgent duties.

3. Approved the promotion of over 438 reserve officers, ranging from first lieutenant to major.
4. Communicated anew with the LP leaders on the need for an LP representative in the supervisory board of the Friendship Highway project, the invitation to which was sent to Senator Gerardo Roxas earlier by the President, but did not receive any response.

March 23—

USUALLY A COMPARATIVELY quiet day devoted to uninterrupted work on state papers, this day was uncommon for President Marcos because he spent a good part of his time outside Malacañang, in the morning with Filipino veterans and in the afternoon with students and school officials.

At 9:45 a.m., the President, accompanied by Maj. Gen. Dionisio Ojeda (ret.) motored to the Veterans Center at Fort Bonifacio, Rizal where he inaugurated the Veterans Building which houses the offices of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines, the Board of Trustees of Veterans of World War II; Veterans and Military Museum, Rehabilitation and medicare centers, and other veterans offices.

Upon arrival, the President was met by veterans and military officials led by Undersecretary of Defense Manuel Salientes, Gen. Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff, and Simeon Medalla, president of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines.

After receiving full military honors, the President unveiled the marker for the General Aguinaldo Home for the Aged and Infirm, one of the facilities in the veterans center.

Then the President formally inaugurated the P300,000 Veterans Building. He also viewed the galleries and museum on the ground floor of the building, where various relics of the Filipino soldiery, including guerillas, which evoke the Filipino struggle for liberty and independence, were exhibited.

In his address before the big gathering of veterans and guests, the President renewed his pledge, made to dying comrades during the war, to “try and build a nation” worthy of their sacrifices.

During the affair, the President, asserting that the veterans deserve more aid, named Col. Medalla (ret.), to head the office of the Presidential Assistance for Veterans Affairs. The unanimous approval of this move impelled the President to induct Col. Medalla forthwith.

The President returned to Malacañang about noontime.

After a brief rest, the President again emerged from Malacañang, at about 1:40 p.m., this time to formally open the PRISAA Meet in Marikina, Rizal.

Mayor Osmundo de Guzman of Marikina welcomed the athletes and guests from all over the country, while Gov. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal introduced the President.

In his remarks at the ceremonies, the President paid tribute to the provincial government of Rizal for building the modern Rodriguez Sports Center, which boasts of a “tartan” surfaced playground; it is a rubberized material.

After addressing the meet, the President lingered to witness the colorful playground demonstrations performed by students from Rizal and Manila Schools.

The President left the sports center at about 5:30 p.m.

The President suspended from office Desiderio Custodio, municipal judge of Mainit, Surigao del Norte, for a period of one month without pay for ignorance of the law and oppression.

The judge was also sternly warned that a repetition of the same offense will be dealt with more severely.

For the rest of the day, the President worked on state papers.

March 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the whole day in Zambales, where he turned over to local officials more than 150 government projects, including schoolhouses, and broke ground for the P78 million sugar central which will go ivy in one of the barrios.

The President left Malacañang early in the morning with a handful of officials and flew in a private plane piloted by Brig. Gen. Hans Menzi, the senior presidential military aide, landing a little over one hour later on an airstrip of the PC camp in the province.

After receiving the usual military honors, and stopping at a barrio, the President motored the short distance to Iba, the capital town.

Among his welcomers were Rep. Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., Zambales provincial officials led by Gov. Vicente Magsaysay, Vice Gov. Antonio Diaz, Olongapo City Mayor Amelia Gordon, and former Gov. Manuel Barretto.

Accompanying the President were PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda and Presidential Executive Assistant Jaime Ferrer.

From the airfield, the President first stopped at Barrio Amungan, largest in the province, where he inaugurated the Marcos-type schoolbuilding set up there. The ceremonies symbolized the establishment of over 100 other prefab schoolhouses allocated to the province.

In Iba, the President was enthusiastically received by a huge turnout of people which included residents of towns and barrios nearby. At a popular rally in the town plaza, to which he walked directly from the church after the Te Deum in his honor, the President told the people that his program of development is by way of continuing the policy of the late President Magsaysay, who laid emphasis on development projects which would improve the life of the people.

The President then turned over to local officials in a formal ceremony about 50 PACD projects, consisting of multi-purpose pavements, health centers, artesian wells and natural springs developed into a safe and permanent water supply for rural communities.

About noontime, the President went to Barrio Pagudpud, in the town of Botolan, to lay the cornerstone and break ground for the sugar central of the Central Azucarera-Refineria de Bataan.

After lunch, the President surveyed the on-going projects in nearby places and conferred with provincial, municipal and barrio officials, on the various problems of the region and on their priority requirements for development.

The President and his party flew back early in the afternoon to Manila, arriving about 3 p.m.

Back at Malacañang, the President received at about 6 p.m. the prime minister of the German federal state of Northrhine Westphalia, Minister President Heinz Kuehn, who paid his respects. The German dignitary arrived in Manila on a five-day visit.

Minister Kuehn, who is a member of the board of trustees of the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung, a private German foundation, planed in March 22 to confer with local Stiftung members and observe their activities here.

March 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS called on the military to enhance the “total commitment” to the state it serves, and the society in which it functions as an integral part, so that it can better serve the people.

In a speech at the graduation exercises of the Philippine Military Academy at Fort Del Pilar, the President said that “as a developing nation, we need the services of manpower trained not only in science and technology but also in administration so as to improve efficiency and reduce waste.”

The President left Malacañang about 9 o'clock in the morning for the flight to Baguio City. He arrived in the summer capital at 10:80 a.m.

City Mayor Luis Lardizabal and other local officials, including those from the province of Ifugao, Benguet, the Mt. Province, Kalinga-Apayao, and La Union, led the large crowd which welcomed the President at the airport.

From the airport, the President proceeded to the city plaza where he addressed a public rally. He discussed the various programs of the national government to improve the rural areas, and explained the P100 million barrio development fund which is pacing rural improvement.

The President had a luncheon conference at the Mansion House with local officials and leaders from La Union, including Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Gov. Juvenal Guerrero, Chairman Joaquin Ortega of the San Fernando Port Authority and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave.

Early in the afternoon, the President received student leaders of the city, who staged a demonstration seeking the ouster of the city chief of police.

According to the students, the peace and order situation in the summer capital has deteriorated because of the incapacities of the incumbent police chief.

Later in the afternoon, the President motored to the Philippine Military Academy and addressed the year's corp of graduating cadets.

The President was fetched from the Mansion House at 3:45 p.m. by General Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff; and Brig. Gen. Cesar M. Garcia, PMA superintendent. Upon arrival at Fort Del Pilar, site of the academy, the President was given full military honors, including a 21-gun salute, and a parade in review.

Leading the cadet corps that welcomed the President were Cadet Capt. Eduardo Jonson, and cadet officers Felipe Gaerlan, Erwin Ver, Guillermo Parayno, and Edgardo Perez.

From the PMA, the President went direct to the retreat house on Mirador Hill for his annual spiritual meditation

But just before entering the retreat house, the President signed the deportation order directing Immigration Commissioner Edmundo Reyes to "deport Chinese businessman Ernesto Ting by the first available transportation to China or Formosa, and, thereafter, to exclude him from the Philippines."

Ting's ouster from the country was precipitated by the President's receipt of several signed complaints from private parties, which denounced the Chinese national's illegal activities, including smuggling, traffic in drugs, white slavery, gambling, and abetting or facilitating the illegal entry here of aliens.

The President's decision to deport Ting was further compelled by the action of the Supreme Court, on August 10, 1966, divesting Ting of his status as a naturalized Filipino, which the court said he acquired fraudulently.

March 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS remained cloistered all day at the Mirador Hill retreat house.

With a handfull of other faithful, he spent the day in spiritual meditation and in his private room devoted his reading to religious books. The spiritual meditation is an annual practice of the President, in preparation for the observance of the Holy Week.

March 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS ended his 3-day spiritual retreat in Baguio City at 5 p.m., when he emerged from Mirador Hill sanctuary.

The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, was on hand to greet the President as he stepped out into the cool afternoon looking rested, hale, and hearty. The couple motored together to the Mansion House.

At his desk at the Mansion House, the President found a pile of state papers brought by Presidential Assistant Jaime N. Ferrer from Malacañang in the morning. The President briskly waded in the papers. He later received several officials, including Rep. Fernando Pajarillo of Camarines Norte and Gov. Alfredo Lamen of Mt. Province. The officials took up with the President various local problems.

In resuming work on matters of state, the President:

1. Ordered Immigration Commissioner Edmundo Reyes to deport Chinese businessman Ernesto Ting immediately if possible.

The President also instructed Commissioner Reyes to inquire into the so-called Red Book, which press reports described as a record kept by Ting on officials he had dealt with in connection with business activities, so that appropriate action may be taken against guilty parties.

2. Created a national committee to take charge of the celebration of Independence Day on June 12, with Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo and Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople as chairman and vice chairman, respectively.

Named as members of the committee are Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, National Integration Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, Public Works Undersecretary Baltazar Aquino, Education Undersecretary Juan L. Manuel, Defense Undersecretary Alejandro Melchor, Commerce Undersecretary Fernando Campos, Deputy Administrator Severino Salang of the Office of Economic Coordination.

Mayor Antonio J. Villegas of Manila, Carmen Guerrero Nakpil, Virgilio de los Santos, president of the Philippine Association of Colleges and Universities, (PACU); Col. Simeon Medalla, president of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines; Josefina Phodaca-Ambrosio, president of the Civic Assembly of Women of the Philippines; Teofisto Guingona Jr. president of the Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines; and Teodoro F. Valencia, vice-chairman of the National Parks Development Committee.

Jose A. Balquiedra, Presidential protocol officer, was designated secretary of the committee.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

April 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had the unusual experience of being guest of honor at three inaugurals, one a hotel, another a radio station, and the third the first fund campaign of the PANAMIN.

In-between, the President worked on state papers and problems, and received callers, mostly officials on state business.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, formally launched in the morning the national educational and fund drive of the PANAMIN Foundation, Inc., a private organization geared to the amelioration of cultural minorities all over the country.

The First Lady, who is honorary campaign chairman of the PANAMIN, received donations during the ceremony.

At about noontime, the President and the First Lady motored to the imposing Inter-Continental Hotel Manila, at Makati, Rizal, where they officiated at ceremonies inaugurating the hotel.

The First Couple, Vice President and Mrs. Fernando Lopez, other high government officials, leaders of industry and of tourism, as well as diplomatic representatives also attended the inaugural. The guests were served lunch at the spacious ballroom of the luxurious and modern hotel.

At 4 p. m., the First Couple were again guests of honor, this time at the inauguration of the Veritas radio station in Quezon City.

Earlier in the evening, the President ordered Brig. Gen. Jonas Victoria (ret.), acting administrator of the National Civil Defense Administration (NCDA), to look into alleged irregularities in that agency.

The President asked for the inquiry after receiving reports that money deposited by five municipalities with the NCDA had been unaccounted for. The deposits would have been used to cover insurance and freight fees for reparations jeeps and trucks by the said municipalities, which were procured for their fire departments.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady were hosts at a party honoring Cardinal-designate Julio Rosales, held at Malacañang.

April 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of the day in the field, with official visits to Balayan and Batangas, Batangas.

The President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, lifted off at Malacañang Park early this morning for Balayan, in PAF helicopters.

Others in the party included Roberto Benedicto, president of the Philippine National Bank, PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, and Executive Assistant Jaime N. Ferrer.

Landing at the Balayan airstrip about 9:30 a.m., the President and the First Lady were greeted by a sizable crowd of townspeople, and by Batangas officials led by Speaker Jose Laurel, Jr. and Rep. Federico Serrano. Governor Feliciano Leviste did not make it to the airstrip because he was not feeling well.

After the welcome rites, the President and party proceeded directly to the new sugar central, operated by the Batangas Sugar Central, Inc. He and the First Lady officiated at the inauguration of the modern plant.

In his speech during the rites, the President stressed the importance of the sugar industry to the nation's economy, and the benefits deriving from the operation of the central.

The First Couple had lunch at the central, with the establishment's officers and local officials as hosts.

Shortly afterward, the presidential party boarded the two helicopters for the short flight to Batangas town. There, Gov. Leviste headed a large crowd who accorded the visitors' an enthusiastic welcome.

The President conferred with local officials, specially municipal and barrio leaders, at the governor's mansion. They discussed the current and proposed development projects in the region, as well as examined problems and solutions.

Afterward, the President turned over to local officials over 100 PACD projects in the towns and barrios, including pre-fab schoolhouses and multi-purpose centers.

Later, the President and the First Lady laid the cornerstone of the Mabini Memorial Hall of Justice, named after the "Sublime Paralytic," one of the nation's cherished patriots.

The memorial is the project of the Batangas Lawyers Association, headed by Mayor Pedro Tolentino of Batangas town.

The President and the First Lady arrived back in Malacañang about 6:15 p.m., also by helicopter.

In the evening, as he did earlier in the morning, the President returned to his unceasing paper work.

Earlier, the President ordered deported by the first available transportation to mainland China or Formosa Ching Tian of Park Avenue, Pasay City, a Chinese national, convicted twice by the Court of First Instance of Pasay City for illegal possession of morphine.

April 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS found himself still very busy today, although it was Sunday, as he spent his time attending to official callers in his study, as well as working on state papers the whole day.

Earlier, the President, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, honored at breakfast in Malacañang Dr. Lucien Gregg, resident representative here of Rockefeller Foundation.

At a ceremony preceding the breakfast, the President conferred on Dr. Gregg a Presidential Merit Award in appreciation of his effort in "bringing to our rural folk the benefits of expert medical care."

Dr. Gregg was responsible for the establishment of the Community Comprehensive Rural Health Program at Bay, Laguna.

While working on state papers, the President:

1. Authorized the Philippine Committee on ECAFE matters to offer the Philippines as the site for the second session of the ECAFE Typhoon Committee, slated to be held next December.
2. Forwarded to the Commission on Appointments the nomination of Alfredo L. Endaya as district state prosecutor of the Department of Justice, for the eight judicial district.

3. Designated Esteban Atienza, the provincial auditor; and Alfredo Torres, highways district engineer; as chairman and member, respectively, of the Board of Assessment Appeals of Batangas.

4. Approved the promotions of 40 reserve officers in the inactive status of the Armed Forces of the Philippines to ranks ranging from first lieutenant to lieutenant colonel.

The President also submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the nominations of three reserve officers in the inactive status of the armed forces to the rank of full colonel. Nominated were Lieutenant Colonels Esteban O. Peña, Yuguis W. Mohammad and Simeon C. Medalla.

In the course of his work, the President also received some callers, among whom were:

1. Ambassador Vicente Arenas, Philippine envoy to the Vatican;

2. General Jesus Vargas, secretary-general of the SEATO, accompanied by William Copeland and Col. Jose Reyn;

3. Rep. Donald E. Luckens of the United States Congress now here to meet with Philippine officials concerning US military and economic assistance to the Philippines, who paid a call.

4. John Maclain of Fortune Magazine, and Guillermo Santos of Time-Life who interviewed the President.

April 14—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived in Iloilo City about 5 p.m., with enthusiastic crowd led by Vice President Fernando Lopez and the local officials giving him a tumultuous welcome.

Upon arrival, the President, accompanied by Vice President Lopez, proceeded to the Ledesma Hotel where he addressed the third biennial convention of the National Congress of Unions in the Sugar Industry of the Philippines (NACUSIP).

The President was introduced to the convention by former Rep. Pascual Espinosa, a Liberal, and a prominent labor leader. Espinosa praised the President's labor record, from the time he was a representative, through his terms as a senator, and now as President.

As a member of Congress, the President, according to Espinosa, sponsored the Magna Carta of Labor, the Land Reform Act and the Women and Child labor laws, among others.

Among those present at the convention ceremonies were Vice President Lopez, Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople, Undersecretary Raoul Inocentes, and Zoilo de la Cruz, Jr., president of the NACUSIP.

After addressing the NACUSIP convention, the President proceeded to the University of Iloilo, where he was conferred the degree of doctor of laws, honoris causa. It was the first doctorate degree to be conferred by that university.

At the University of Iloilo commencement exercises, the President was joined by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who had followed from Manila.

The investiture was held at the university quadrangle. The ceremonies were witnessed by a big crowd, and by ranking officials, including Gov. Rafael Palmares, Iloilo City Mayor Reinerio Ticao, Reps. Fermin Caram, Ricardo Ladrido, Pedro Trono, and Gloria Tabiana; and Mrs. Ester Aldeguer, wife of Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer.

The President landed in Iloilo from Masbate, where he also met in the morning with the local officials and checked on the progress of development projects in that province.

A big crowd headed by Gov. Moises Espinosa and Rep. Andres Clemente met the First Couple on their arrival at the Masbate airport.

Also on hand to welcome them were Sen. Dominador Aytona, former Secretary of Labor Emilio Espinosa; and Reps. Fernando Pajarillo of Camarines Norte, Carlos Imperial of Albay, and Felix Fuentebella of Camarines Sur.

The President and the First Lady heard Te Deum at the St. Anthony's church, after which Mrs. Marcos, accompanied by ladies of local officials, visited a puericulture center and laid the cornerstone for a local home for the aged.

Before leaving for Masbate in the morning, the President worked on urgent state matters in his study.

Among other actions, the Chief Executive:

1. Certified to Congress a bill which would amend Republic Act No. 4665, the law providing for the printing and sale of 70-centavo airmail postage stamps to raise funds for the Taal Volcano eruption victims.

The amendatory bill would reduce from five hectares to three the lot to be allotted to each family-evacuee at the resettlement site.

2. Authorized Secretary Cesar Virata, chairman of the Board of Investments, to head the Philippine delegation to the Third Session of the Industrial Development Board, which will convene in Vienna on April 24, and deliberate up to May 15 this year.

Ambassador to Geneva Hortencio Brillantes was designated vice chairman of the delegation, while Minister Wilfredo V. Vega of the Philippine embassy in Geneva and Domingo Siazon of the Philippine embassy in Berne were named members.

April 15—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrived in Cagayan de Oro City to a rousing welcome from an impressive crowd at mid-afternoon.

Earlier in the day, the President and the First Lady flew in a private plane from Iloilo City direct to Camiguin Island. The plane touched down at the Mambajo airport about 11:30 a.m.

A big crowd which had gathered at the airport had to wait for sometime, because the First Couple was delayed by last minute conferences that the President had with Iloilo officials.

Despite the delay, the crowd gave the President and the First Lady an enthusiastic welcome led by Senator Emmanuel Palaez and Gov. Jose P. Neri of Camiguin.

Following a Te Deum in the First Couple's honor at the local church, the President conferred with provincial, municipal and barrio officials at the Mambajao town plaza. Discussed were local projects and urgent problems relative to development.

It was already past high noon when the President and the First Lady were able to have lunch at the residence of Gov. Neri.

Afterward, the First Couple took off for Cagayan de Oro City, arriving sometime after 3 p.m. First stop was this city's St. Augustine's church, where a Te Deum was said for them.

Then they hied off to the new public market, which the First Lady inaugurated at ribbon-cutting ceremonies. It was at the same site that the President met local officials.

While enroute to Camiguin earlier in the day, the President signed the certifications to Congress of three bills providing for: 1) a school tax in place of the residence tax, which is to be abolished; 2) creation of more extension classes; and 3) special retirement system for policemen.

The President also:

1. Issued an executive order creating the Panay Development Planning Board, an agency needed to accelerate the economic progress of the Panay province. The members of the board who witnessed the signing of the executive order were Governors Rafael Palmares of Iloilo; Cornelio Villareal, Jr. of Capiz; Jose B. Legaspi of Aklan; and Julian Pacificador of Antique; Iloilo City Mayor Reinerio Ticao and acting Mayor Teodor'o Arcenas of Roxas City.

Also present at the signing of the order were Vice President Fernando Lopez, congressmen, municipal and other local leaders of the four provinces.

2. Submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation his nominations of a fiscal and 11 assistant fiscals for Iloilo City.

3. Ordered the deportation of Chua Tong Po and Sy Cho, two Chinese nationals, both ex-convicts, the first for adultery and the second for vagrancy and violation of opium law.

April 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS made flying visits to the provinces of Lanao del Sur and Lanao del Norte, Marawi City, and Iligan City.

During these visits, he discussed matters relating to local economic development with local officials at all levels, and inquired into their needs and problems.

After passing the night aboard the RPS 777, the President boarded a helicopter which lifted off the ship's pad for the visit to Marawi City and Lanao del Sur.

The President was accompanied by Sen. Alejandro Almendras and Rep. Ali Dimaporo of Lanao del Norte. Waiting to welcome him and his party were National Integration Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, Gov. Linang Mandangan of Lanao del Sur and Marawi City Mayor Omar Dianalan.

The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, flying in another helicopter, joined the President at Marawi City a little later.

The President's party stayed in Marawi City until after lunch time, during which he met with Lanao del Sur officials, including barrio captains.

The President's party left Marawi City at 3 p.m. for Iligan City. After a brief flight, he landed at the compound of the Iligan Integrated Steel Mills (IISMI). Upon arrival, the President first inspected the IISMI plant, eyeing closely the new facilities.

Col. Cipriano de Leon, senior vice-president of IISMI, briefed him during the tour on the plant's installations.

From the IISMI, the President proceeded to the Iligan Institute of Technology, a branch of the Mindanao State University. The President officiated at the inauguration of the modern Institute.

In his speech, the President described the Institute as his administration's answer to the needs of the youth and manpower development program in the Mindanao region.

Towards evening, the President met at the residence of Gov. Arsenio Quibranza with provincial, municipal and barrio officials of Lanao del Norte and Iligan City. He discussed with them further development needs of their respective localities, and other urgent matters.

April 17—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrived in Ozamis City at 7 a.m. after an overnight cruise from Iligan City, with large delegations from the two cities and all the municipalities of Misamis Occidental giving them a rousing welcome.

Leading the welcomers were Gov. Henry Regalado, Rep. William Chiong-bian, Mayor Hilarion Ramiro of Ozamis City and Mayor Alfonso Tan of Tangub City.

Among others who accompanied the President were Senator Alejandro Almendras, PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Rep. Ali Dimaporo of Lanao del Norte and Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu.

The President, along with Mrs. Marcos, heard a Te Deum in their honor at the city cathedral. Then, they proceeded to the local Tomb of the Unknown Soldier where the President laid a wreath.

From the tomb, the President went on to the city stadium where the official delegations from the cities and municipalities of Misamis Occidental had already assembled.

At 1:30 p.m., following luncheon, the President and the First Lady, Senator Almendras and Rep. Dimaporo flew in a helicopter to Pagadian, capital of Zamboanga del Sur.

Earlier, the First Couple sent a wire from Ozamiz City to their son, Bongbong, congratulating him for a medal he won in elocution. The medal was to be awarded to Bongbong in a ceremony in the afternoon at the La Salle Green Hills campus. "Keep it up," Bongbong's parents told him.

Aside from tackling urgent problems presented by local officials, the President also announced that he had ordered the formulation of a five-year plan to upgrade the salaries of all public school teachers, based on the idea of gearing their salaries to their responsibilities.

He pointed out that measured against the grave responsibilities of public school teachers, their salaries are inequitable.

The President said the plan is being worked out within the framework of gradual upgrading of teachers' salaries in the next five years. The Department of Education and the Budget Commission are Working on the plan, he added.

He said the salary plan is in accordance with the overall administration program to upgrade education in the country. This program, he emphasized, has been given top priority.

Before debarking in Ozamiz City, the President:

1. Ordered Secretary of Health Amadeo H. Cruz to organize special teams to audit the distribution of free medicines in the barrios and rural communities.

He issued the order in the face of unabated complaints that the free medicines distributed by the government are not reaching beneficiaries, namely the poor of the rural areas.

2. Ordered the deportation of three ex-convicts of foreign nationality, whose continued presence here is considered a menace to the peace and safety of the community.

Ordered deported were Co Lin, of 1223 C. M. Recto Avenue; Vicente Kong, of Paco, Kidapawan, Cotabato; and Tim Ma Kem of San Pablo City.

President's Week in Review: April 18-24, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

April 18—

AN IMPRESSIVE gathering of Mindanao leaders joined a turnout of citizens to welcome President Marcos and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, in Cotabato City, in one of the most rousing demonstrations of support for the President and his program of government.

The President and the First Lady arrived in the city about ten minutes of each other, with the President aboard the Presidential plane, and Mrs. Marcos in a private plane. The couple came about 3 p.m., flying from Dipolog, Zamboanga del Norte.

The President's party received a very warm welcome at the city's airport which, as will be recalled, was completed and inaugurated by the President himself only last year.

After the airport welcome ceremonies, the President and the First Lady led a motorcade to the city plaza where a rally awaited them,

Among the Mindanao leaders accompanying the President were Sen. Alejandro Almendras, Rep. Ali Dimaporo of Lanao del Norte, the president of the Mindanao-Sulu-Palawan Association (MINSUPALA); Reps. William Chiongbian of Misamis Occidental and James Chiongbian of South Cotabato; Governors Rene Espina of Cebu, Vicente Cerilles of Zamboanga del Sur, Virgilio Lacaya of Zamboanga del Norte, Henry Regalado of Misamis Occidental and Ramon de los Cientos of Davao del Sur.

The President's party was welcomed formally by acting Gov- Simeon A. Datumanong and Cotabato City Mayor Teodoro Juliano, both Liberals. The President was also greeted by Nacionalista Party leaders of the province, among whom were Dr. Gil Gadi, Blah Sinsuat, Odin Sinsuat and Mama Sinsuat.

Earlier, the President visited the province of Zamboanga del Norte. Sailing overnight aboard the RPS 777, the President and his party landed at the Pulawan port, Dipolog, about 8 a.m.

At Dipolog, the President inaugurated the newly completed Mibutak bridge, one of the many government projects in that province. Later, the President addressed a public rally at the town plaza.

The President met with the local officials of Zamboanga del Norte after the rally, and following lunch, enplaned for Cotabato City. Also with the President's party were Presidential Executive Assistant Jaime N. Ferrer and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave.

While working on state papers aboard the RPS 777, the President:

1- Certified to Congress the bill appropriating ₱10 million for equipping police forces all over the country with modern facilities, in order to upgrade the capabilities of local forces, who cannot cope adequately with their duties for lack of proper equipment, including standard weapons and modern communications systems.

2. Approved the air services agreement between the Philippines and the Republic of South Korea, in line with the "open skies" policy of the administration. The policy is based on reciprocity, which calls for equal privileges to Philippine flag carriers as are given by the Philippines to foreign airlines.

April 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was given the warmest welcome ever accorded a visiting official in General Santos City, as he and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrived there from Koronadal from an encouraging session of direct dialogue with the people and their officials on matters of common concern.

Accompanied by prominent leaders of the region, many of whom have been with him since his arrival in Mindanao on an assessment survey of government projects, the President once again met barrio captains and councilmen.

One of the highlights of the President's visit in General Santos was the surrender to him of Joloano outlaw Jamiri Musa and some 30 of his followers on board a Philippine Navy vessel anchored at Dole Makar wharf in the city.

Present at the surrender rites were Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata, General Manuel Yan, AFP chief of Staff; and Brig. Gen. Carlos Oanes, fourth military area commander.

In his talks with local officials, the President, as he has done earlier in other localities, inquired into the progress of rural health services, telling the barrio officials that they will now take charge of distributing medical kits, including the free medicines that the government is making available to barrio folks.

He explained that he has transferred the responsibility of distributing these supplies to the people because of the sad experience in other regions, where the free medicines were diverted to other recipients by still unspecified parties.

An investigation into this irregularity is now being conducted, he added.

Before disembarking, the President constituted the Philippine delegation which will participate in the election of five judges of the International Court of Justice.

Named by the President were Supreme Court Chief Justice Roberto Concepcion, chairman; and Associate Justices J. B. L. Reyes, Arsenio P. Dizon and Querube Makalintal, members.

The group will represent the Philippines in the deliberations to nominate candidates to judgments in the ICJ or the World Court.

April 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned from a weeklong trip to the Visayas and Mindanao where he met local leaders and assessed the progress of on-going government projects.

The President arrived at 12:10 p.m. aboard the Presidential plane. He left General Santos City at 9:30 a.m., accompanied by Sen. Alejandro Almendras, Gov. Vicente M. Cerilles, Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary Jaime Ferrer and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave.

From the airport he motored directly to the Social Security Commission in Quezon City where he addressed the convention of district judges.

The President enjoined the judges to find new means of clearing their dockets of pending cases even as he ordered an overhaul of the Court of Industrial Relations and the Court of Agrarian Relations to meet the outcry for improved administration of justice from the workers and tenant farmers.

He stressed the necessity of clearing the dockets of courts, especially the criminal courts of pending cases, declaring that retributive justice can only be an effective deterrent to criminality if cases were disposed of with dispatch.

On board the plane en route to Manila, the President worked on state papers and discussed means of further improving the administration of justice with Secretary Enrile.

He certified the following bills for immediate consideration by Congress:

1. House Bill No. 14563 (S.B. 212), entitled: An act establishing and maintaining career internal revenue and customs services.
2. Senate Bill No. 913, entitled: An act to amend Section 1 of Republic Act No. -2361, entitled: "An act reverting to the general funds of the national government the cash balances of certain special or revolving funds under certain conditions."
3. A bill entitled: An act to amend the National Internal Revenue Code, as amended, by inserting a new section providing for penalties for unlawful cutting or gathering of forest products in any public forest or forest reserves without payment of prescribed charges.

He also acted on some papers, which needed his attention and brought along by Secretary Ferrer.

The President also went through the names of armed forces officers recommended by Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata for promotion.

April 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed a stiff regimen of office work, as he concentrated on papers that bided his return from an inspection trip to the South. At the same time, he met his usual crowded schedule of callers, all in all adding up to quite a busy day.

Priority attention was given by the President to the follow-up of decisions made during his assessment tour of Mindanao provinces, resulting in a series of directives to meet problems and needs of localities, which he personally discussed with local officials during the trip.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Submitted to the Senate for ratification the treaty on non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, together with the draft resolution concurring with the said treaty.

The Philippines is a signatory to the nuclear ban treaty, which was signed for the government by former Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez on July 1, 1968 in Washington, D. C. and on July 18, 1968 in Moscow.

The Philippines signed the treaty convinced that it will lead to further meaningful developments toward solidifying the peace, such as a comprehensive ban, a verified halt in the production of destructive fissionable materials, a reduction of offensive and defensive nuclear-delivery vehicles, and/or an increased reduction and possibly the eventual elimination of all nuclear weapons.

2. Forwarded to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the nominations of 31 officials to fill up vacancies existing in national offices in several provinces he visited last week.
3. Issued directives for the release of funds needed by various urgent projects in Mindanao.
4. Signed the promotion of 90 reserve officers in the inactive roster of the armed forces, and of 12 regular officers in the technical services, to fill up existing vacancies.

In-between paper work in his study, the President received several groups and individuals, among whom were:

1. Darian Nelson, president of the Standard Oil of California (Chevron Overseas) Exploration Producing Company, and J. J. Wolahan, president and managing director of Caltex (Phil.) Inc., who apprised the President of their firm's plan to intensify oil exploration activities in the Philippines.

Also with the group were John O'Connor, M. Porzio, Herminio Banico and F. Alegre, Jr., all officials of Caltex.

In connection with the meeting with the Caltex officials, the President also conferred briefly with Francisco Comsti, chief of the geology division of the Bureau of Mines; Vice Chairman Edgardo Tordesillas of the Board of Investments, and Froilan Gervasio, also of the BOI.

2. Reps. Tito Dupaya, Jose Fornier, Lamberto Macias, Felipe Abrigo, Pablo Roman and Gregorio Murillo; and House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso.

3. Gov. Tito Primicias of Pangasinan and Mayor Ramon J. Guico of Binalonan, of the same province.

4. Mayor Manuel Era of Kabugao, Kalinga-Apayao.

5. Mayor Guillermo Sanchez of Butuan City, Board Member Vicente C. Rosales of Agusan, and Dr. Casiano Plaza, also of Butuan.

At 5 p.m., the President attended the reunion of class 1939 of the College of Law, University of the Philippines, held at the Heroes Hall of Malacañang. The President played host to fellow alumni at amerienda-cena.

April 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted a large part of his time to conferences with various officials, concentrating in-between on important state papers.

Two welcome breaks from a rigid schedule of work on official matters were the ceremonies conferring awards on a Thai general and on a religious activist. The rest of his day was filled out by the usual callers.

The President conferred on Lieutenant General Chalard Hirunsiri, commander of the Royal Thai Forces in Vietnam, the Philippine Legion of Honor for "distinguished and valuable services" to the PHILCAG in Vietnam. The other awardee was Rev. James F. Donelan, for being a "dedicated servant, inspiring leader and unforgettable friend" of the Filipino people.

In his main conference, the President met with members of the House of Representatives, led by Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr. and House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso. Discussed was the legislative program, with emphasis on bills pending action in Congress.

The President received a number of individual callers as well as delegations from the provinces. Primary object of the calls was consultation on local problems.

Those who called were:

1. Rep. Gregorio Murillo of Surigao del Sur, who accompanied municipal mayors from his province. The group informed the President that road construction projects in the province are being carried out according to schedule. The mayors also stated the further needs of their localities in behalf of development.

2. Deputy Governor Anacleto Vaklez of South Cotabato.

3. Governors Jose Sering of Surigao del Norte and Francisco Nepomuce of Pampanga.

4. Dr. Gil Gadi and his wife, Mayor Emma Gadi of Kidapawan, Cotabato.
5. Mayor Osmundo de Guzman and members of the municipal council of Marikina, Rizal.
6. Reps. Andres Clemente, Ramon Durano, Ali Dimaporo, Constantino Navarro, Pablo Ocampo, Lorenzo Sarmiento and Carlos Imperial.

In other actions, the President:

1. Formally endorsed to the Senate for ratification the agreement establishing the Asian Coconut Community, which includes Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand and the Philippines.
2. Issued a proclamation declaring April 27 (Sunday) Lapu-Lapu Day, in commemoration of the 448th anniversary of Lapu-lapu's victory over Magellan on Mactan Island, Cebu, marking the first successful Filipino armed resistance to external invasion. The President said that the battle of Mactan should be remembered as the first blow struck by Filipinos for self-determination and as a symbol of the Filipino love of freedom.
8. Spelled out the guidelines in the allocation of prefab school-houses to ensure the speedy erection and utilization of the buildings.

April 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the whole morning and part of the afternoon in Pasig, Rizal, where he conferred with local officials, but primarily with the barrio leaders of the province.

On his return to Malacañang early in the afternoon, the President witnessed the hand-over of a diplomatic note from the US embassy agreeing to the Marcos Dollar Plan, as proposed to the US government, which will channel all US government dollar expenditures in the Philippines to this country's foreign exchange reserves.

Present at the delivery of the US note were Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, CB Deputy Gov. Amado Briñas, PNB President Roberto Benedicto, and Minister Jose de Venecia.

In-between these two main activities, the President worked on state papers, including follow-up action on the measures agreed upon during his talks with Rizal barrio leaders and other local officials.

In the evening, the President helped the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos and daughters Imee and Irene prepare for their departure for Rome tomorrow morning, where Mrs. Marcos will attend the investiture of Julio Cardinal Rosales.

The President, who was accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, left Malacañang about 9 a.m. for Pasig.

The barrio captains of Rizal present at the conference numbered 316, excluding barrio leaders from Caloocan and Quezon cities.

With the President in Pasig were Senator Alejandro Almendras, Presidential Executive Assistant Jaime Ferrer, Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, Mayor Macario Asistio of Caloocan and Rep. Frisco San Juan.

Nemesio Yabut, president of the Rizal Federation of Barrio Councils, gave the opening remarks.

After meeting with barrio officials, the President and the First Lady had a late lunch at the office of Gov. Isidro Rodriguez, where the President later conferred with Rizal mayors.

Back in Malacañang, the President while working on state papers, reconstituted the Philippine technical panel which participated in the preliminary talks in Washington last year on the re-negotiation of the Laurel-Langley Agreement.

As reconstituted the RP panel will be composed of Central Bank Deputy Gov. Amado Briñas, chairman, with the following as members: Undersecretary for Industry Juan A. Araneta, Customs Commissioner Rolando Geotina, Dr. Antonio Ayala of the Board of Investments, Ramon Katigbak of the Presidential Economic Staff, Emilio Martinez and Pacifico Garcia of the Department of Foreign Affairs, Roberto Garcia of the Central Bank, Dr. Bernardino Bantegui of the National Economic Council, and Tomas Toledo of the Department of Finance.

The President also issued a proclamation reserving a portion of the public domain in Esperanza, Agusan as the site for settling non-Christian tribes.

The settlement will be under the administration and control of the Commission on National Integration.

In another proclamation, the President reserved as a watershed and also as the site for hydroelectric power facilities a parcel of public land situated in the provinces of Benguet, Ifugao, and Nueva Vizcaya. The site is therefore withdrawn from sale or settlement.

The watershed and hydroelectric reservation is within the Mt. Data National Park and the Central Cordillera forest, both of which are national preserves.

The area proclaimed as reserved will be under the supervision and control of the general manager of the National Power Corporation.

April 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS focused on the drive against graft and corruption in the public service, as he went over reports on the status of the campaign, and ordered a stepped-up pace in investigation and prosecution of cases.

Earlier, the President saw the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and two of their children, off at the Manila International Airport. The First Lady flew off to Rome where she will attend the investiture of Julio Cardinal Rosales as “ninang.”

From the airport, at about 10 a.m., the President motored to Fort Bonifacio where he visited briefly, enroute to the Araneta Coliseum in Quezon City where he was commencement speaker at the graduation of some 4000 students from 14 city high schools.

The President was greeted by Quezon City officials led by Mayor Norberto Amoranto, and was met by a rousing ovation as he entered the coliseum. In his speech, he reiterated support for the youth movement toward greater participation in national affairs and in behalf of reforms in national life. He called upon the young to enter into this participation wholeheartedly and to prepare themselves well for leadership.

On leaving the coliseum, he was given a standing ovation by the estimated 20,000 who attended the commencement exercises. The President congratulated their parents. He was himself given a plaque of appreciation by the parent-teachers associations of the 14 city high schools.

Back in Malacañang, the President concentrated on state papers working alone in his study. He was particularly interested in the status of administrative and criminal cases against erring government personnel, notably those in the foreign office, the justice department and the bureau of posts.

Among the reports he scanned, apart from the graft and corruption cases, were:

1. The final report of Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez on the activities and achievements of the Philippine Mission to the United Nations, from the time the former ambassador assumed the post on September 25, 1964 to March 10, 1969, when he relinquished it to serve as president of the University of the Philippines.
2. The report of President Roberto Benedicto of the Philippine National Bank on the dissolution of the National Cottage Industries Bank (NICB), which the PNB had serviced as official NICE agent.

The President also:

1. Ordered Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo to file both administrative and criminal charges against Virginia Boncan, former finance and property officer of the Philippine embassy in Madrid for malversation.
2. Directed Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, who is the action officer of the Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council (RCPCC), to take appropriate action on the request of Lanao del Sur and Marawi City farmers for direct loans and the release of funds for an irrigation system.
3. Submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the nomination of 28 solicitors. The nominations were promotional and will also serve to fill up existing vacancies in the Department of Justice.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

May 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS chalked up another day full of activities, which started with paperwork in the morning, in the course of which he signed the nominations of 94 new appointees in the government for submission to the Commission on Appointments.

Leading today's nominees was Serafin D. Quiazon, as director of the National Library.

At 11 a.m., the President went to his study where he received Ambassador Olivier Lange of France, who paid him a farewell call.

Another courtesy caller was Malaysian boy scout hero Maud Taib Salamon, who is here to attend the fourth national jamboree of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines being held at Palayan City.

While in Malacañang, the President's son Bongbong played host to the Malaysian boy scout, whom he showed around the palace.

The President then received the officers of the ABACORP Supervisors Union led by Engracio Pesebre, who made representations for the re lease of funds needed in the operation of the abaca corporation.

Following this, the President repaired to the Malacañang reception room where he met with the Postal Inspectors and Legal Officers League, led by its president, Servillano Abad. The group petitioned for the certification of postal reform bills as well as for the release of funds to finance the decentralization of the Bureau of Posts.

Back at his study, the President received a delegation from the Textile Association of the' Philippines, led by Jesus Yujuico, which presented to him the problems of the industry.

Then the President conferred with provincial delegations accompanied by their respective congressmen and governors on problems in their localities. The series of conferences lasted until 2 p.m.

In the afternoon, the President motored to the Manila International Air port, where he led the reception for the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and two of her children, Imee and Irene. They returned from Rome where the First Lady stood sponsor at the investiture of the second Filipino Cardinal, Julio Cardinal Rosales.

They were welcomed by members of the Cabinet, the diplomatic corps, and* Congress and their ladies.

From the airport, the President and the First Lady went directly to the Manila Hotel where the President addressed the 56th anniversary and biennial convention of the National League of Puericulture Centers of the Philippines.

Arriving at Malacañang about 7 p.m., the President and the First Lady played hosts at cocktails in honor of the delegates to the recently concluded convention of the District and City Engineers League and mayors of nearby provinces who led their respective delegations which met the First Lady at the Manila International Airport.

PRESIDENT MARCOS, accompanied by his son, Ferdinand, Jr. (Bong-bong), formally opened the 4th national jamboree of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines in Palayan City (Nueva Ecija).

Addressing the 8,000 boy scouts, the President stressed the need for developing discipline and responsibility in the citizenry, while lauding the Boy Scouts movement as a “valuable ally” in the moulding of the youth.

He said the movement “complement the classroom in bringing to full development the potential of every boy for the strengthening of character and the duties of citizenship.”

The President flew to Palayan City from Clark Air Force Base where he addressed the 49th national convention of the American Legion (Philippine Department).

In his speech before the American Legion, the President asked the veterans to give substance to their “commitment to freedom” demonstrated in war by helping preserve freedom during this time of peace.

The President was introduced by Col. Simeon Medalla, president of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines.

Present at the affair were Lt. Gen. Francis C. Gideon and Maj. Gen. Kenneth Dempster, commander and deputy commander, respectively, of the U.S. 13th Air Force, Minister James Wilson, charge d’affaires of the U.S. embassy in Manila, Pampanga Gov. Francisco Nepomuceno and other prominent Filipino veterans.

The President landed at Clark Air Base about 7:30 a.m., aboard the Presidential plane. He played a nine-hole golf with Gen. Gideon, Assistant Executive Secretary Gilberto Duavit and Manuel Nieto, Jr.

After addressing the American Legion convention, the President toured the base. He visited the Pacific Air Command Jungle Survival School where American soldiers, particularly those assigned for combat duty in Vietnam, are familiarized with the different kinds of mantraps devised by the Vietcongs.

Maj. Fred B. Ewing, commander of the school, briefed the President.

After lunch at the quarters of Gen. Gideon, the President enplaned to Fort Magsaysay in Laur, Nueva Ecija. He had a brief rest in the camp before proceeding by helicopter to Palayan City.

The President was back at Malacañang about 5:30 p.m.

May 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had an unusually busy weekened topped by his conference with foreign affairs and defense officials on the agenda of the forthcoming SEATO conference and the corresponding positions that would be taken by the Philippines.

Those who met with the President were Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata, and Gen Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff.

Colonel Fidel Ramos, presidential assistant on military affairs was also present.

At 11 a.m., the President went out to the Malacañang reception room where he inducted the newly elected officers of the CFI-National Association of Clerks of Court, Inc.

They were Vicente S. Paulido, president; Lorenzo Sta. Ana, executive vice president; Manuel Magistrado, vice president for Luzon; Salvador S. Solis, vice president for Visayas; Eriberto A. Unson, vice president for Mindanao; Pablo P. Dipangco, executive secretary; Aurelio Rivera, assistant secretary; Maria A. del Valle, treasurer; Emma C. Ona, assist ant treasurer; Herminigildo Jimenez, auditor; Francisco Dacanay, Jr., assistant auditor; Jose Hernandez, business manager; Josefina Cruz, PRO; Enrique Casino, sergeant-at-arms; and Aurora Navarette-Recina, Manuela Florendo, Valeriano Concha, Eulalio B. Valencia and Amparo Gomes, directors.

Back in his study after the induction rites, the President received some government and local officials, among whom were Public Works Director Alejandro Deleña and Mayors Isauro Catabay of Anda, Efren Peralta of Bolinao and Josue F. Oreas of Bani, all of Pangasinan.

The Pangasinan mayors apprised the President of their most urgent needs, particularly on rural improvement and community development in their respective municipalities.

The President was closeted in his private study most of the afternoon working on state papers and going over government reports.

Among the other actions taken by the President was his certification of House Bill No. 7324, entitled "An Act to Provide for the Retirement and Separation of Armed Forces Personnel, to Establish an Armed Forces Retirement and Separation Benefits Fund, and for Other Purposes," which seeks to amend Republic Act No. 340 for the purpose of improving and updating the present armed forces retirement law.

Meanwhile, the President sent the following cable to Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman on the victory achieved by the latter's party in the recently concluded general elections.

"HIS EXCELLENCY

PRIME MINISTER TUNKU ABDUL RAHMAN

KUALA LUMPUR

MALAYSIA

MY CORDIAL FELICITATIONS ON THE VICTORY ACHIEVED BY PARTY UNDER YOUR LEADERSHIP AND WISH YOU CONTINUED SUCCESS IN THE YEARS AHEAD STOP

PRESIDENT MARCOS"

May 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS inaugurated today two major projects in Negros Occidental, one, the Bago Irrigation System and, two, the Sagay Sugar Central. In addition, he also inaugurated a number of other public works projects, which if lacking in magnitude were high on practical benefits to the people.

The President landed at the Bacolod airport at 8:45 a.m., along with Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas, Sugar Quota Administrator Ramon Nolan, PNB President Roberto Benedicto, PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, and Manuel Barretto of the National Power Corporation.

He was followed an hour later by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who flew in a separate plane.

A huge and happy crowd gave the President a rousing welcome at the airport. Leading the welcomers were Vice President Fernando Lopez, Gov. Alfredo Montelibano, Jr., Rep. Armando Gustillo, and other provincial and local officials.

From the airport, the President helicoptered to the Bago irrigation project for the inaugural rites. Constructed at the cost of about P17 million, it is the largest current project of the National Irrigation Administration (NIA) outside of Luzon. It will irrigate 18,000 hectares of land.

The system will enable farmers to plant twice a year and, coupled with scientific farming methods, result in the increase in annual yield of 300,000 piculs of sugar and 500,000 cavans of palay valued at P19 million.

In his speech, the President said that he shared the pride of the people there in the irrigation project, adding that after prolonged waiting for the completion of the project, which was promised by other administrations but never pursued, it is now a reality, after a crash construction program which was finished ahead of schedule.

The President also inaugurated other infrastructure projects, including the Talisay-Matabang bridge, completed in less than a month, thus adding to the record of efficiency of the administration.

It was nearly high noon when the President re-boarded the PAF heli copter for Sagay; the short flight deposited him at the sugar central exactly at 12:15 a.m.

It is the 28th central in the country and the third established in line with the crash sugar production program.

The Sagay central can crush 3, 000 tons of sugarcane daily, and will turn out 600,000 piculs of sugar in its initial year of operation.

The President and First Lady had lunch at the central, after which the President conferred with some 440 barrio captains of the province. In Bacolod City, later in the evening, the President inaugurated the first completely integrated provincial communications system, a joint project of the Police Commission and the US-AID, in cooperation with the provincial and local governments of Negros Occidental.

The President expressed the hope that the installation of the communications system will result in more effective coordination not only among law enforcement agencies in Negros Occidental, like the NBI, PC and local police forces, but also among other government offices in the province.

May 13—

ARRIVING in Cebu City aboard the RPS The President at 9:30 in the morning, President Marcos received a tumultuous welcome from enthusiastic Cebuanos and a solid phalanx of labor elements of the province who staged an impromptu rally in support of administration policies.

Upon debarking, the President was escorted to the stage erected at the waterfront, where he delivered brief remarks thanking the people of Cebu for the warm welcome accorded him and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

Immediately after the welcome ceremonies at the Cebu waterfront, the Presidential party motored to nearby San Carlos University where the President addressed the Philippine Dental Association, which opened its 61st annual meeting hosted by Cebu Dental Society.

In his address, the President lauded the association for its efforts in widening the perimeters of dental services throughout the country.

Money and manpower, he said, remain the main problems of the dental services of the government, but he looked forward to increasing the number of dental units in every district of the country, which at present is limited to one for each district.

“To meet these problems,” the President told the dentists, “we must sustain the partnership that has worked so well for both the government and the private sector.”

He stressed, “in short, we must work closer together to meet these problems.”

The President was introduced by Director Emilio Sison, the PDA president-elect and general chairman of the convention.

After his speech, the President was presented with a plaque commemorating his honorary membership in the Philippine Dental Association. Dr. Salvador Escarte made the presentation.

After leaving the PDA meeting, shortly after high noon, the Presidential party reboarded the navy vessel for Danao City where he conferred with provincial and barrio officials.

The President afterward flew back to Manila, arriving early in the evening.

May 14—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of the day closeted in his study working on state papers which pended action during his trip early this week to Cebu and Negros Occidental, notably the clearance of nominees for posts in the judiciary.

Among others, the President studied reports, discussed projects with aides and a number of officials, and sent to the Commission on Appointments more nominations to public posts, notably that of Manuel A. Arranz, as chairman of the Commission on Elections, and about a score of nominations in the judiciary.

The President received no visitors except some officials, including several whom he summoned for consultations. He also forwarded to the Senate the International Sugar Agreement of 1968, for ratification. The Philippines has not yet signed the agreement but is a provisional member, and through the Instrument of Accession will be a party to the agreement.

Except for brief breaks, the President continued to work at his desk through early evening.

May 15—

A FULL DAY of paper work and conferences kept President Marcos close to his desk, which began with a meeting with Senator Dominador Aytona and Rep. Jose M. Alberto, chairmen of the Senate finance committee and of the House appropriations committee, respectively.

After the meeting, which focused on the need to pass the budget within the span of the regular session, the President next received three provincial delegations in succession from Bulacan, Cavite and Sulu, all of whom consulted him on local problems, particularly on urgent development projects.

The Bulacan group was led by Rep. Teodulo Natividad and Gov. Ignacio Santiago, while the Cavite delegation was headed by Undersecretary of Commerce Fernando Campos, and former Governors Dominador Camerino and Leon Guinto. Gov. Murphy Sangkula and Rep. Indanan Anni headed the Sulu delegation.

Following these meetings, the President received members of Congress and local executives, including Reps. Natalio Castillo of Bohol, Carlos Imperial of Albay, Fernando Pajarillo of Camarines Norte, Andres Cosalan and Luis Hora of Mt. Province.

Reps. Pedro C. Medulla of Mindoro Occidental, Salvador Encinas of Sorsogon, Jose Moreno of Romblon, Ricardo Ladrado of Iloilo, Artemio Mate of Leyte, Fernando Veloso of Western Samar.

Governors Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales, Irene Balite of Northern Samar, Samuel F. Reyes of Isabela, Murphy Sangkula of Sulu, and Mayor Omar G. Dianalan of Marawi City.

Other delegations who saw the President were those of the Philippine Public Schools Teachers Association (PPSTA), the Philippine Airconditioning and Refrigeration Society (PARES), and the central council of the Bicutan Settlers Association of Taguig, Rizal.

The PPSTA group, composed of its officials headed by Pascual Santos, invited the President to be their guest speaker at the forthcoming annual meeting of the organization in Calamba, Laguna.

Led by Taguig Mayor Monico Tanyag and Pedro del Rosario, president of the Bicutan Settlers Association, the delegation requested the President to set aside portions of the Fort Bonifacio military reservation as a housing area for civilians, with the present occupants to enjoy priority.

The PARES delegation saw the President to request implementation of the law creating a board of examiners for airconditioning and refrigeration engineers. The law was passed in 1964 but an association of mechanical and electrical engineers filed a suit in court questioning the legality of certain provisions of the law.

The case is now on appeal with the Court of Appeals.

The PARES group requested that the law be implemented since the case was already resolved by the Court of First Instance in favor of the measure.

In the evening, the President was guest of honor and speaker at the Recognition and Awards Dinner of the National 4-H Clubs of the Philip pines and the Agricultural Productivity Commission, held at the Manila Hotel.

While working on state papers and going over reports earlier in the day, the President exonerated Chief of Police Jose Orbe of Iligan City from the charges filed against him alleging maltreatment, conduct unbecoming of a chief of police, grave abuse of authority and drunkenness.

In exonerating the Iligan chief of police, the President noted that none of the alleged victims of abuse or maltreatment mentioned in the charges was a signatory to the complaint, nor were any of them presented as supporting witnesses at the investigation of the case.

The President also submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation his nominations to 55 more positions in the government.

Leading the number of nominees were those for special attorneys in tin-Office of the Agrarian Counsel, assistant city fiscals and municipal judges.

The other nominations were for provincial fiscal, city fiscal, district judge, members of boards of examiners, city and provincial treasurers, register of deeds, membership in the CEPOC board, membership in the board of censors for motion pictures, and state prosecutor.

In a statement issued following President Nixon's address proposing a phased 12-month withdrawal of foreign troops in Vietnam, the President said:

"With his proposal for troop withdrawals from Vietnam, President Nixon has not only articulated a universal desire but also fulfilled an important responsibility to mankind. It is my fervent hope that the communist adversary in Vietnam will respond promptly and sincerely to this historic initiative to end this long and terrible war.

"The American President has offered a peace plan that is constructive, workable and honorable. To the Filipino people, it is especially welcome, because it will make our own present efforts in Vietnam even more meaningful.

"I sincerely wish that when peace in Vietnam comes we shall be able, as the next constructive step, this time towards regional prosperity, to establish a consortium of Western and Asian nations. Such an international alliance should undertake rehabilitation and reconstruction work for both North and South Vietnam and all other countries affected by the war, ensuring lasting peace through shared prosperity.”

President's Week in Review: May 16-22, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

May 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed closely a stiff schedule which included a meeting with leaders of a citizen movement which staged a rally in behalf of certain amendments to the bill calling for a constitutional Convention, and addressed the entire group which gathered at the Malacañang grounds.

The President told the group that they were a bit late in making the request to certify the Pelaez bill which introduces amendments making the coming charter meet more responsive to the popular idea of a nonpartisan convention. He had already certified the bill to Congress.

Other highlights of the President's day were:

2. A meeting with leaders of local veterans organizations, who saw the President to follow-up moves to increase benefits to veterans, during which the President detailed the various steps taken by the government in the veterans' behalf, including certification of bills for that purpose.

Among the veterans leaders with the group were Col. Francisco Offemaria of the Freedom Fighters for Democracy; Col. Simeon Medalla of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines; and Col. Marcos San Agustin (Marking). Also present was Rep. Simeon Valdez, chairman of the House committee on war veterans.

3. A brief visit with Vice Admiral William F. Bringle, US 7th Fleet commander, who paid a courtesy call shortly after making port in Manila.

In-between callers, the President worked on state papers, and issued directives, on various official matters. Among others, he asked for reports from the officials concerned on alleged irregularities in the issuance of titles to certain real estate properties in Baguio City and Bataan.

Other visitors included a delegation from Davao del Sur and Davao del Norte, composed of mayors, and accompanied by Senator Alejandro Almendras; a delegation from Kalinga-Apayao, accompanied by Senator Leonardo Perez; and a delegation of Muslim leaders.

In the evening, the President was guest speaker at the closing ceremonies of the 16th national convention of manufacturers and producers of the Philippines, at the Manila Hotel.

In his speech, the President proposed that local industry turn its sights on competition in world markets.

"We must respond to the challenges of external change," the President emphasized "capitalize on the opportunities presented by the outside world, and develop the strength and the capabilities for doing so."

To do this, he said, local industries must be restructured, adding that the private sector should take the initiative, with the government providing full assistance. (See pp. 5271-5271 for full text of the President's speech)

May 17—

PRESIDENT MARCOS conferred in the morning with Vice President Fernando Lopez on current problems in the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources and on other urgent matters affecting the country as a whole.

On a day which normally leaves the President's schedule free of callers in order that he could concentrate on state papers, the only other caller he received was Senator Helena Benitez, with whom he took up legislative matters including a bill banning certain textile imports, which he certified to Congress.

The President also certified the bill proposing added financing resources for the city of Manila, so that it could meet a number of new responsibilities, including the payment of salaries of city schoolteachers which have been standardized at ₱350 a month.

Leaving his desk work twice briefly during the day, the President also spoke at two outside affairs, first, around lunchtime, at the opening of the convention of the Confederation of Filipino Rice and Corn Associations held at the Manila Hotel, where he pledged continued government support for rice and corn production; and second, at the dinner of the Philippine Military Academy Alumni Association, which formally closed its annual convention today held at the Wack Wack Golf and Country Club.

In his speech before the PMAAA, the President said that until the nations under SEATO "can get together and organize a machinery for their own defense, it is necessary to maintain the existing alliances that have so far prevented the loss of an inch of soil to those who seek to subvert their respective governments and societies."

The President stated that the Philippine representatives will support steps that will enhance the effectiveness of SEATO as a shield in this area under which economic and social development can be carried out unhindered by threats of armed aggression." (See pp. 5277-5281 for full text of the President's speech.)

Earlier, the President ordered the immediate relief of Director Teofilo Santos of the Bureau of Forestry upon recommendation of Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrently secretary of agriculture and natural resources. To take over the office, the President designated Director Jose Viado of the Reforestation Administration who will serve in a concurrent capacity.

The President also directed Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to study the provisions of the law pertaining to the registration of land registration cases, such as those reported recently in Bataan and Baguio City, to reopen these and other similar cases in other places.

Other actions taken by the President in the afternoon, included submission to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation of his nominations to 22 more positions in the judiciary and government boards.

The nominations were for state prosecutor, special attorneys, solicitor, assistant provincial fiscal, municipal judges, register of deeds, and membership in the UNESCO national committee, the board of directors of the Mountain Province Development Authority, the Board of Censors for Motion Pictures, the Board of Medical Examiners, and the Board of Examiners for Civil Engineers.

May 18—

PRESIDENT MAECOS proclaimed a state of emergency in Catbalogan, Western Samar, as reports reached him of the devastation wrought by a runaway fire in that capital town last night.

Apart from this, -the President quietly worked on state, business, although suffering from a high temperature occasioned by laryngitis and flu. He is set, however, to help expedite congressional action on administration bill's now pending before both houses of Congress.

For this purpose, he has ordered his regular schedule of engagements in the next few days, and until Congress adjourns, cancelled. He will devote most of his time to planning with Congress leaders how these pending bills can clear Congress during the current regular session, the adjournment of which is not far off.

In other actions, the President ordered the deportation of Co Chan alias Sonia, a Chinese national convicted of homicide, and confined at the correctional institution for women..

May 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS remained in bed on doctors' orders.

He came down yesterday with laryngitis and influenza, and has since run a high temperature.

Aside from the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, no one has been allowed to see him by his physicians.

As a result of his illness, his plan to survey the fire-ravaged town of Catbalogan, Western Samar, fell through. Instead, Mrs. Marcos, accompanied by Vice President Fernando Lopez, visited the fire area and distributed relief goods and turned over ₱500,000 in checks to support the relief operations.

All of the President's engagements this day and for the next few days have been, cancelled.

May 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to follow his doctors' advice to rest although he was allowed to work sparingly, on urgent state matters

Among other actions, the President:

1. Signed a proclamation declaring the period April 15, 1969 to February 28, 1970 as the term of the local fund drive to generate financial support for the Philippine participation in the World's Fair (Expo '70) in Osaka, Japan.
2. Directed the detail of former acting Forstry Director Teofilo Santos to the office of the secretary of agriculture and natural resources, to work directly under Vice President Fernando Lopez, who is concurrently DANR secretary.
3. Ordered the reassignment of Jesus A. Matic, relieved district land officer of Bataan, to the central office of the Bureau, of Lands.

The President also scanned reports from a number of offices, on various matters, including:

1. Customs Commissioner Rolando Geotina's report on customs collections from May 1 to 18, which registered a margin of ₱3,783,799.09 over collections within the same period last year.
2. General Manager Ramon Ravanzo's report on the operations of the National Power Corporation, which stated that, conditions are back to normal with the improved water delivery to its hydro plants, particularly to installations of the Maria, Cristina complex in Mindanao.

May 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to rest in accordance with his doctors' advice, confining his activities merely to light office work.

He received no visitors, and talked only with aides and officials on urgent state business.

In the course of the day, the President, among others:

1. Ordered Acting Forestry Director Jose Viado to submit to him a list of timber concessionaires who have not complied with forestry regulations on reforestation, in order that proper action may be taken against them.
2. Studied the repeat of Land Authority Governor Conrado Estrella on the 64 towns in Central Luzon which are now land reform areas as proclaimed, and on the first publication of the proclamation set for May 24.

Apart from these measured activities, the President took it easy the rest of the day, showing in the process much progress.

May 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to rest on doctors' orders, attending only to urgent state matters.

He was cheered by a report from Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo on the SEATO council's recognition of the achievements of the administration in land' reform, civic action, rural development, infrastructure, and of Philippine proposals for other initiative to help developing nations attain full stature as viable and stable countries.

In other actions, the President:

1. Set a meeting with Gov. Francisco Nepomuceno of Pampanga and with members of the Angeles City council on the recent flare-up of new violence in the vicinity of the latter community.
2. Called a special session of Congress, certifying the budget measure, and eight other vital administration bills.

For the rest of the day, the President took it easy as he continued to improve from a bout with influenza and laryngitis.

President's Week in Review: May 23-29, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

May 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was well enough to do some light work, but his doctors still advised him to continue resting and refrain from receiving callers.

He therefore asked Vice President Fernando Lopez to work at the presidential study in Malacañang and receive callers on his behalf.

Working in his private study, the President studied a number of urgent reports and took action on other state matters which required his attention.

He swiftly reappointed officials whose nominations were bypassed by the Commission on Appointments, notably the ad interim appointments of Supreme Court Associate Justice-designates Claudio Teehankee and Antonio Barredo; Manuel Arranz and Jaime N. Ferrer as chairman and member, respectively, of the Commission on Elections; and Juan Ponce Enrile as secretary of justice.

Meanwhile, Vice President Lopez received palace visitors, among them a delegation, from Camarines Sur, accompanied by Rep. Felix Fuentebella. The group included Mayor Candido E. Montenegro and Councilor Gloria M. Toralde of Balatan town, and Ricardo Hovellanos, district engineer of the province.

The President, in the course of the day, issued various directives, including orders to the PC to stop highway hijacking of cargo trucks; and the stoppage of all logging activities in watershed areas in Negros Occidental.

In a special message to Congress, the President certified to the urgency of the enactment of two proposed bills on the program for total electrification of the country.

The two measures are Senate Bill No. 1136 authored by Senator Emmanuel Pelaez and House Bill No. 17025 authored by Rep. Frisco San Juan (N-Rizal).

The two measures were included in the presidential proclamation for a special session issued yesterday but due to the rush in preparing the proclamation they were inadvertently left out.

May 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS showed steady progress as he recuperated from the flu, but his doctors, playing it safe, still limited his activity to light office work.

Thus, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, pinch-hit for the President, by representing him at the opening of the Ilagan (Isabela) Cultural, Industrial and Agricultural Fair.

In his private study, however, the President attended to urgent state business, in the process issuing several directives, among them:

1. Full assistance for 250 Badjao families pending their resettlement in a proper area, in the face of the inability of the two Surigao provinces to accommodate them.

2. The participation of the Philippines in the food consumption and general household survey seminar in Moscow in July, which is sponsored by the FAO; and the in-plant training for production engineers in metalwork, also in Moscow, beginning Oct. 6, under the sponsorship of UNIDO.

3. Permission for Isidro T. Lopez and Sisenando Calauag, both of the Central Cooperative Educational Board, to travel to Prague, Czechoslovakia.

4. A study of the NSDB's capability for undertaking the abaca cottonization project.

5. Inclusion of Commissioner Gregorio Bilog, Jr. of the Land Registration Commission in the committee investigating irregularities in land registration cases in Bataan and Baguio City,

6. Consultations with the Bicol Association on any group interested in buying PNR assets, so that initial negotiations may be started.

The President also instructed Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to study the proposals from various quarters, including Congress, for the extension of executive clemency to 10 politburo members of the Hukbalahap movement, in view of their 18-year imprisonment, including the time they were held pending court decisions on their cases, despite the 10-year sentences handed out to each of them.

In a television interview in the evening, the President speaking on the proposed amendment of the Constitution, said that he favored an amendment allowing automatic reappropriation of the existing budget if at the end of the fiscal year, no current budget or appropriation act is approved by Congress.

The President pointed out that this amendment is essential because as past experience has shown the absence of a budget forces the President to appropriate funds without congressional authority.

Other amendments proposed by the Chief Executive were:

1. A six-year presidential term without reelection,

2. Removal of certain presidential powers, such as the power to call a special session of Congress and to certify bills saying that legislation should be the sole responsibility of Congress, and therefore it is up to them to determine the length or period of session, and to choose priorities for bills.

3. The removal of the power of the President to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, saying that it is a most "unusual power."

May 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS limited his activities to taking action on important state papers and a couple of urgent state business.

He was represented by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, at the inauguration of the Chinese General Hospital where he was to be the guest of honor and speaker.

While working on official papers in his private study, the President:

1) Approved the Philippine participation in the post-graduate training course on biology offered in Czechoslovakia, sponsored by the UNESCO and WHO, provided WHO appropriates travel funds for the Philippine trainees.

2) Authorized the participation of Edilberto Cabalfin of the Philippine Atomic Energy Commission in the study-tour on Waste Management Techniques and Programs in, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and the U.S.S.R. The tour is scheduled from July 8, to August 20, 1969.

3) Granted authority for Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles and Mrs. Rosalinda V. Tirona to participate in the meeting of the heads of national secretariats of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), now being held in Indonesia.

On complaints reaching him that certain municipalities of Zamboanga del Sur and Cotabato are imposing toll fees on shipments of rice and corn transported on public roads, the President directed Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, to conduct a probe and to stop the practice if found true.

The President likewise ordered General Raval to immediately take measures to prevent further hijacking of cargo trucks, notably on, the highways between Pampanga and Pangasinan.

In other actions, the President directed:

1). Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo to make representations with the U.S. government for the transfer to the Philippine government of proceeds from the sale of a piece of land in Davao by the U.S. government to the Mindanao Colleges. The property involved an area of about 11,190 square meters located in Davao City, which used to be owned by Haurachi Oya, a Japanese national.

2). The secretary of agriculture and natural resources and the director of forestry to stop all logging operations in the watershed areas of the Bago irrigation system in Negros Occidental, and to cancel all logging permits given earlier covering the area.

3). PARGO to conduct a formal investigation of the administrative complaint filed, against Lt. Gov. Luis, S. Estabañez of Aurora sub-province by Cesar M. Querijeo, a resident of the province. Preliminary findings showed that there is a prima facie case against the official.

4). PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda to inform all barrio captains that program of work shall no longer be required prior to the release of the ₱2000 from the Rural Development Fund for every barrio.

5) Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to circularize all provinces, cities and municipalities informing them of the new financing available for the procurement of irrigation pumps. Loans for the purpose may be secured from the Development Bank of the Philippines.

May 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to progress satisfactorily, after coming down with flu last week, so much so that he had earlier tentatively accepted an appearance as guest speaker at the launching of the SEATO Exercise “Sea Spirit,” in the morning, but to be sure about his complete , recovery, his doctors advised against his participation.

Vice President Fernando Lopez, therefore, proxied for the President, at the ceremonies held at Pier 15, where he delivered the President’s speech calling for the presentation of SEATO as a protective shield against aggression, a principle also held by Mr. Lopez.

While the President was confined to acting on urgent matters only, which he alone could cope with, the Vice President continued to pinch-hit for the President in other essential matters.

On behalf of the President, Mr. Lopez received the following Malacañang callers:

1. The Philippine Association of Public Secondary School Administrators, composed of public high school principals, who called to submit a resolution to the President.

The resolution, unanimously approved at the executive meeting of the delegates and observers of the association during its 14th annual work conference held in Baguio City, sought the inclusion of a fully programmed ₱10 million outlay in the national budget as aid to public high schools all over the country.

The Vice President forthwith endorsed the request to Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco for appropriate action.

2. A group of teachers who sought Malacañang assistance in clearing the way-for teachers to take the forthcoming civil service examinations. The group deplored the sudden closing of applications for the civil service examinations for teachers, as ordered by the Civil Service Commission. The teachers said it was premature.

Mr. Lopez asked Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido to take the necessary action on the request, and to inform the Office of the President on the action taken.

Upon representations made by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the President directed the different relief agencies of the government to continue extending assistance to Siargao, Surigao del Norte, to hasten the rehabilitation of the island which had been almost completely devastated by a recent typhoon.

Mrs. Marcos made a trip to Siargao today on behalf of the President, to assess the damage to the island located some 30 nautical miles off the northeastern coast of Mindanao.

The President also declared May 28 a special public holiday in the Muslim areas in observation of the Muslim feast, "Maulidan-Nabi."

The proclamation of the Muslim holiday was requested by the National Coordinating Council for Islamic Affairs, Inc. who said that to Muslims the day is "the most awaited moment of the year," since it marks the birth of the Prophet Mohammad.

May 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS joined world leaders in congratulating the United States for its most recent space feat, with the successful completion of the dress rehearsal for a moon landing.

In a cable to US President Richard Nixon, the President said that Apollo 10's spectacular voyage "distinctly brings the dream of a moon landing closer to realization, an achievement which will open limitless horizons for mankind."

The message was sent even as the President continued to convalesce from the flu and, with the permission of his doctors, attended to a limited number of state business.

Vice President Fernando Lopez, at the behest of the President, remained at Malacañang to receive presidential callers and confer with 'government officials.

Among those the Vice President received were:

1. Salvador Cardenas, an engineer serving as technician on rice culture with the Mexican ministry of agriculture, who was commissioned by his government to study the techniques of growing the high-yield rice in the Philippines, as well as bring home seedlings of the "miracle rice" variety.

Cardenas was accompanied to Malacañang by" Mexican Ambassador Federico Barrera Fuentes.

Vice President Lopez informed the Mexican officials that in line with President Marcos' policy of sharing with other countries the benefits deriving from the high-yield Philippine rice, this country will gladly help Mexico propagate the high-yield rice varieties.

2. Officials of the Alscope Consolidated, Inc., who offered to conduct feasibility studies on the processing of pulp from Philippine abaca and sugar bagasse.

Accompanied by Ignacio Amador, Philippine foreign trade representative for abaca, the Alscope officials were Herman Walter, Everett Mills, Mayer Buckman and Victor Prescott.

Vice President Lopez advised them to submit an official offer to, the Abaca Development Corporation and to the Philippine Sugar Institute.

Among others who saw the Vice President were RCA Administrator Alfredo Montelibano, Sr., SQA Administrator Ramon Nolan, Chairman Luis Lopez of the Mindanao Development Authority; Rep. William Chiongbian of Misamis Occidental, Govs. Amado Almazan of Kalinga-Apayao, and Alfredo Montelibano, Jr. of Negros Occidental, and Mayor Jose Sison of Surallah, South Cotabato.

May 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS emerged from over a week's confinement to his quarters following a bout with the flu, to work for exactly two hours, during which he reviewed with various officials the status and progress of vital administration projects.

He also signed into law Senate Bill No. 895 (H. No. 17517) which exempts the Press Foundation of Asia from the payment of duties and taxes. He signed the bill in the presence of Senate Majority Floor-leader Arturo M. Tolentino, principal sponsor of the measure.

The President also met with Vice President Fernando Lopez, whom he visited while at work in Malacañang.

Other officials he conferred with included Auditor General Ismael Mathay, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Land Authority Governor Conrado Estrella, and Secretary of Public Works and Communications Antonio Raquiza, High-ways Commissioner, Baltazar Aquino and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave.

Before conferring with these officials, the President ventured into the presidential study where he consulted with Vice President Lopez, who was then quite busy attending to Palace callers and other state matters.

The Vice President has been asked by President Marcos to hold office at Malacañang in the meanwhile that the latter was still restricted by his doctors to light activities.

Pinch-hitting for the President, Mr. Lopez:

1. Received the report of Pampanga Governor Francisco Nepomuceno on the peace and order, situation in his province, which the governor said is generally peaceful except for Angeles City where gunplay proved fatal to five persons.

The Vice President then ordered NBI Director Jolly Bugarin to have the NBI pinpoint the guilty parties, in the process arranging a meeting between Gov. Nepomuceno and the NBI chief.

2. Summoned Director Anacleto Coronel of Bureau of Animal

Industry to Malacañang to formally assign him as officer-in-charge of the agriculture undersecretary's office, which is without a helmsman with the bypassing by the Commission on Appointments of the nomination of Eligio Tavanlar, who was not reappointed to the post.

Among others who saw the President were:

1. Filemon V. Tutay, a staffer of the Philippines Free Press who called for an interview.
2. Rep. Teodulo Natividad of Bulacan, and Rep. Jose Former of Antique.
3. Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile.
4. Gov. Conrado Estrella of Land Authority.
5. Gov. Vicente Cerilles who came with Mayor and Mrs. Francisco L. Peña of Kabasalan, and Mayor German S. Santiago of Margosatubig, all of Zamboanga del Sur; Mayor Ricardo Chua of Cauayan, Negros Occidental; and Mayor and Mrs. Teodorico Esclamado of Padre Burgos, Southern Leyte.

In a speech read for him by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, at afternoon ceremonies commemorating the 31st anniversary of the founding of the PGB, the President stressed the responsibilities of leadership, saying that he was bringing these to the fore because he regards members of the PGB as "potential leaders."

PRESIDENT MARCOS constituted the Philippine team, headed by undersecretary of Finance Roman Cruz, Jr., which will negotiate with its Indonesian counterpart under the RP-RI Joint Commission, an updated version of all bilateral pacts between the two countries.

The joint commission, which was agreed upon by President Marcos and President Suharto of Indonesia last year, would review, update or modify all existing bilateral agreements on economic matters.

The President signed the papers forming the Philippine group, in the process investing it with full powers.

The Philippine panel with Undersecretary for Natural Resources Isosceles Pascual as vice-chairman, has the following as members:

Defense Undersecretary Alejandro Melchor, Philippine Navy Commander, Commodore Ismael Lomibao; Immigration Commissioner Edmundo Reyes, Dr. Urbano Zafra, Francisco Ortigas, Jr., Consul General Cristeta A. Feria, Consul General Emilio Martinez, Roberto Garcia, Col. Rizal L. Umaly, Cayetano Llamado and Vice Consul Samuel Ramel.

The President also named a panel of advisers to the team, headed by Consul General Jose Ira Plana.

Meanwhile, Vice President Fernando Lopez continued to receive callers on behalf of the President. In the afternoon the Vice President flew to Baguio City, again to represent the President, at the Rural Bankers Convention, as guest speaker.

In his speech read by the Vice President, the President said that his administration is trying "to correct the economic and social disparities through credit programs, food production campaigns, and self-help projects."

"Through land reform, we also hope to develop a class of independent farmers who have more incentives to produce because they own the "and they till."

Extolling the role that they have been playing in national development, the President said “rural banks are the vanguards of progress in our countryside and provide the lifeblood of the rural areas.”

In the course of the day, the President:

1. Proclaimed May, 30 a special public holiday in Bohol and Tagbilaran City in honor of Bohol patriot Francisco Dagohoy, who led a stirring revolt against the Spanish colonial government.

The Dagohoy revolt is also remembered in Philippine history as the longest resistance against the colonial regime starting in January, 1744 and ended in August, 1829, or a period of 85 years.

2. Received the report of Commissioner of Public Highways Baltazar Aquino that his technical staff is now engaged in project studies of the proposed highway linking Manila and Cavite City.

The highway, as planned, will be an extension of Roxas boulevard, passing through reclaimed areas along the shore of Manila Bay.

The report was submitted by Aquino in follow-up of instructions given yesterday by the President during a meeting with key officials to review and spark vital government projects.

3. Received the official report of Brig. Gen. Emilio Zerrudo, first PC zone commander, on the recent killings in Angeles City, which squarely placed on Huk elements the responsibility for the new violence in that area.

In his report, Gen. Zerrudo recommended an increase in PC troops in the area, and the establishment of checkpoints at the northern and southern approaches of the city.

Zerrudo also informed the President that he would make representations with Angeles City officials for closer coordination in patrolling the area, possibly through joint PC-police teams.

President's Week in Review: May 30 - June 5, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

PRESIDENT MARCOS resumed normal activity indicating his full recovery from flu. Among other activities, he inaugurated the Manila-Cebu Tropo-Scatter Link in the morning, addressed the gathering which observed Memorial Day at the U. S. Cemetery, and presided at Conferences assessing the Central Luzon situation.

The President also worked on state papers, in the process signing into law Senate Bill No. 1014 (H. B. No. 18098), which amended RA 5448, thus extending to July 15 the period of car registration. The amended bill provides for a 10 per cent reduction in the additional car tax for the science fund, and allows a yearly depreciation of vehicles registered, according to a fixed rate of fees.

All other state and ceremonial matters which the President could not yet tackle were assigned to Vice President Fernando Lopez who maintained a full schedule of visitors with various matters to take up with Malacañang.

Meanwhile, the President, in a speech read by Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, at the annual convention of the Government Prosecutors League, urged government prosecutors to “make your own breakthroughs” in the common effort to enhance the administration of justice and to bring to a successful conclusion the anti-crime drive.

“The President said that “it is time to look forward,” after the gains -made under his administration to instill a new spirit of performance and integrity in the judiciary and in the prosecuting arm of the government.

The present drive for total peace and order, he said, “must succeed in the name of our people.” He added that there “is no other way” to preserve the confidence of the people in the majesty of the law and the processes of democracy.

Earlier, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, on behalf of the President, formally launched the 21st Educational and Fund Campaign of the Community Chest of Greater Manila at Malacañang.

Thanking all those involved in the fund drive, Mrs. Marcos said that “campaign drives of this kind can only be successful when people of ‘ your position and influence in our society will join hands to fill the community chest.”

May 31—

PRESIDENT MARCOS limited his schedule of callers to a few individuals, as his doctors continued to advise him to used his energies cautiously.

Among others, the President received Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Pictures Association of America, who paid his respects to him and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos. Accompanying Valenti was Gov. Benjamin Romualdez of Leyte.

Also in to see the President were the officers of the Government Prosecutors League of the Philippines, who paid a courtesy call in connection with the League convention, held at Palace Balcony.

During the day, the President inducted new officials whose appointments were recently confirmed by the Commission on Appointment-Inducted were:

1. Buenaventura Guerrero, as city judge of Quezon City; Ramon Purugganan, as assistant commissioner of land registration Lope P. Lopez, as provincial fiscal of the sub-province of Quirino; and

2. The Nueva Vizcaya officials: Arsenio Gonong and Justino Vigilia, first and fourth assistant fiscals, respectively; Jose N. Guirnela, Antonio Balut, Pedro Mabunga, Isabelo Ordoñez, Mariano D. Gonzales, and Gaspar C. Camello, municipal judges of Diffun, Kayapa, Santa Fe, Solano, Bagabag, and Cabarroguis, respectively.

Following the inductions, the President sat down with local officials of the provinces to discuss problems of the region. Accompanying them was Sen. Leonardo Perez.

Working only on urgent matters, the President put in a brief stint at his desk. Among other actions, he ordered Secretary of Justice; Juan Ponce Enrile to investigate the delay in the prosecution of a murder case in Las Piñas, involving three local policemen. The victim was a Malacañang security officer.

June 1—

ASIDE FROM SOME snatches of light paper work, President Marcos practically rested the whole day in preparation for resuming full activity tomorrow after completely recovering from a bout with the flu.

The President spent some time in his private study where he pored over some state documents which had piled up on his desk during his illness.

He also went over the copies of nine vital administration bills which he had certified for consideration of Congress during the special session which starts tomorrow.

Among the measures submitted for consideration were the general appropriations bill and the public works bill.

June 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS put in a crowded day's work, following closely his usual heavy schedule of visitors and conferences, as well as working full time at his desk.

He was earlier pronounced completely recovered from the flu by his doctors.

Among other conferences today, the President met with Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo on the forthcoming meeting of ASPAC nations in Canberra, Australia; received the report of Gov. Tito Primicias and other Pangasinan officials on the case of the provincial treasurer and auditor; and considered the problems and progress of the anti-smuggling campaign with Lt. Gen. Pelagio Cruz (ret.), chairman of the ASAC.

The President first received a 19-man trade mission from New Zealand, which proposed a joint venture with Philippine business, in big-scale pulp manufacturing in his country.

The group, led by T. E. Clark, and accompanied by Mrs. Rosita S. Peñera, protocol officer of the Department of Commerce and Industry, paid a courtesy call on the President, following their arrival here for a business survey. The New Zealand businessmen were particularly interested in putting up a joint venture on pulp-making.

In his meeting with Secretary Romulo, who also briefed him on the recently concluded ministerial conference of the SEATO in Bangkok, Thailand, the President also approved the Philippine panel which will attend the ASPAC meeting.

On the anti-smuggling meeting, the President and Gen. Cruz, as well as Bartolome Mapuad, regional director of the ASAC for Eastern Visayas, focused on the problems and accomplishments of the drive in the Eastern Visayas.

A later meeting was with representatives of the local movie industry, during which the President proposed an exploration of joint film-making ventures between local and foreign movie producers, as a way of projecting the Philippines abroad and earning dollars.

With Gov. Primicias, and members of the Pangasinan provincial board, the President examined the background of the charges filed against the provincial treasurer and the provincial auditor of that province, allegedly for malversation.

Other callers at Malacañang were:

1. Rep. Natalio Castillo of Bohol and Rep. James Chiongbian of South Cotabato.
2. Mayors Leticia B. Berces of Tabaco and Marciano Bitara of Malilipot, both municipalities in Albay.
3. Govs. Gualberto Lumaug of Ifugao and Amado B. Almazan of Kalinga-Apayao.
4. Gov. Feliciano Leviste and Mayor Pedro Tolentino of Batangas, Batangas.

To focus attention on the need for the development of sports, the President proclaimed the period from July 1, 1969 to June 30, 1970 as Philippine National Sports Year.

The President underscored the fact that sports development in the country “has been hampered because of lack of public involvement and support”, thus a sports, year may project the need for greater involvement in the effort.

He stressed that sports fosters pride in country, human fellowship and international understanding. It is also vital to youth development health promotion and citizenship training, he added.

By focusing attention on sports, the President pointed out, “public enthusiasm, involvement and support, will be awakened.

The observance of sports year will be under the auspices of the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation.

June 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS sounded an optimistic note for fruitful legislative work when a special committee of Congress called at Malacañang in the morning to officially inform him that the special session of Congress he had called was convened.

The special congressional group was among several delegations which crowded the Malacañang schedule of visitors, the second day of full work for the President since weathering a viral infection.

He received visitors straight through the morning, and until 2 p.m. In-between he worked on state matters, among them the designation of the acting police chief for Baguio City; the nomination of a group of provincial fiscals; issuing an order suspending the provincial treasurer of Pangasinan.

The President also received a report from Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile on the release of four prisoners who belonged to the Huk politburo, after the quartet had served ten years, the term set by the Supreme Court for all politburo members accused of rebellion.

Members of the joint congressional committee who called on the President were Senators Helena Benitez, Magnolia Antonino and Tecla San Andres Ziga; and Reps. Ali Dimaporo, Andres Clemente and Amado Arrieta.

The President asked the committee members to “convey to both houses of Congress my, best wishes for a very productive session.”

Among the provincial visitors the President received were:

1. Macario Tiu, barrio captain of Kanitoan, Initao, Misamis Oriental and president of the Federation of Barrio Captains of the province, who apprised the President of rural development problems in the said localities. Tiu also sought the early payment of the ₱3,000 deriving from the insurance policy of Tirso Galarpe, barrio captain of Oguis, Initao, who died recently.
2. A delegation of provincial board members from Cebu headed by Gov. Rene Espina, who called to report on the progress of public works projects in the province.
3. Mayors from Camiguin province accompanied by Gov. Jose P. Neri, who sought the relief of the district engineer in that province for various irregularities.

Other delegations who saw the President included one from Misamis Occidental headed by Rep. William Chiongbian; and one from Bataan led by Rep. Pablo Roman.

Earlier, the President signed into law House Bill No. 17837 declaring 1969 as General Emilio Aguinaldo Centennial Year and appropriating ₱500,000 for underwriting all activities authorized for the purpose.

The President previously issued a proclamation declaring the centennial year for General Aguinaldo. General Aguinaldo was born on March 22, 1869.

In his proclamation, the President stressed the debt of the country to General Aguinaldo, who was the President of the First Republic, and for the patriotic band of revolutionaries who set up the first democratic government in Asia.

This year marks the 71st anniversary of the establishment of the short-lived Philippine Republic, which history recognizes as the first representative and democratic government in Asia.

The First Republic was inaugurated in Malolos, Bulacan on January 23, 1899.

The President also underscored the need to “perpetuate, the heroic deeds, the sacrifices, the unquestioned patriotism and the sublime idealism” of Aguinaldo and the heroes of the revolution.

In his proclamation, the President constituted the Centennial Commission composed of Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata as Chairman; with Senator Genaro F. Magsaysay, chairman of the Senate committee on national defense; Rep. Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte, chairman of the House committee on national defense; and Rep. Justiniano Montano of Cavite, as vice chairmen.

June 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS capped his activities with a working dinner, held at Malacañang, to discuss how the legislative work may be speeded up with Senate President Gil J. Puyat and Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr.

During the day, the President also discussed other areas of concern, such as the proposed rice experiment farms which Vice President Fernando Lopez will take up with Japanese officials; and sports for the barrios, with Felipe Monserrat, president of the PAAF.

Other activities included the awarding of citations to five private companies in Mindanao and the induction of two new officials.

The President in the morning signed the instrumentalities giving full powers and the authority to Vice President Lopez to act for the Philippine government in any agreement reached with Japan on the setting up here of two pilot projects in rice culture, under the economic assistance proposal endorsed by President Marcos and Prime Minister Sato in 1966.

While working on state papers, the President also:

1. Approved the grant of visas to Evgeny Ivanov, Malov Alexander Philippovich and Levtonova Yulia Olegovna, all Russian nationals, who wish to spend two weeks on a study-visit in the Philippines.
2. Signed the consular commissions of Rafael Gonzales as Consul to Hongkong; Bonifacio Arribas as Vice Consul to Djakarta; Tom Fitzgerald as honorary Consul to Hobart, Tasmania; and affirmed the credentials of George Proctor as Consul General of Panama in Manila.

The President's other activities included:

1. Award of plaques of appreciation to five private firms in Surigao del Sur for assisting in the implementation Of the infrastructure program. Commended for contributing materials, the use of equipment and labor were the Yusynco Logging, Paper Industries of the Philippines, Lianga Bay Logging Co., Arasasan Tiber Co. and Bislig Bay Logging Corporation.
2. In his meeting, with the PAAF president, the proposed barrio Olympics as part of the observance of Philippine National Sports Year, was discussed.
3. The induction of Zosimo Angeles and Antonio Buban, district prosecutor for the Bicol region and 5th assistant provincial fiscal of Albay, respectively, which was witnessed by Rep. Fernando Pajarillo, relatives and friends of the new officials.

The President received callers until 2:30 pm., among whom were:

1. Mayor Luis Lardizabal of Baguio who sought a site for a proposed community center and social welfare center in his city;
2. Delegations from Zamboanga del Sur headed by Gov. Vicente Cerilles and Vice Governor Bienvenido Ebarle; from Ifugao led by Gov. Gualberto Lumauig and Rep. Luis Hora, from Zambales led by Vice Gov. Antonio Diaz; from Agusan led by Gov. Consuelo V. Calo and Rep. Jose Aquino; from Northern Samar led by Gov. Irene Balite; and a group led by Chairman Joaquin Ortega of the San Fernando (La Union) Port Authority.

June 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS again had a varied schedule, which included a speech at the 18th anniversary program of the Bureau of Soils, and a courtesy call from Australia's Foreign Minister Gordon Freeth.

Gov. Alfonso Calalang also called, along with other officials, to show the President samples of the checks with "lipstick" markings, which will be exclusively used to cover U.S. government expenditures in the Philippines, as means of preventing the black-marketing of dollars.

The President, and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, received Foreign Minister Freeth and Mrs. Freeth, who came to pay their respects.

Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo accompanied the visitors, including Lance Joseph, charge d'affaires of the Australian embassy here; Malcolm Booker and Andrew Farran, officials of the external affairs department and Gordon Bilney, also of the local Australian embassy.

Gov. Calalang, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, Secretary Romulo and Minister James Wilson of the U. S. Embassy come together to show the President two sample checks with the “lipstick” markings. The checks are cashable only in agent “banks of the Central Bank, thus preventing their going into the black-market.

At about noon, the President motored to the Alta Vista, on Roxas boulevard, where he was the guest of honor and principal speaker at the anniversary celebration of the Bureau of Soils.

The President was fetched from Malacañang by Director of Soils Atanacio Simon and Animal Industry Director Anacleto Coronel, who is also the officer-in-charge of the office of undersecretary of agriculture.

The President extolled the Bureau of Soils for its extraordinary efforts to enhance soil conservation and its contributions to agriculture and the rice production breakthrough.

The President worked on state papers and conferred with various officials the rest of the day.

Earlier, the President submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation his nominations for four chiefs of mission, a city treasurer, and an assistant provincial fiscal.

The President also designated Teodoro K. Beltran as acting prosecutor under the Department of Justice.

Nominated as chiefs of mission, class III, were Carmen A. Buyson, Anastacio Bartolome, Carlos Faustino and Rodolfo Severino, Sr.

The other nominees were Arturo S. Pamintuan, for city treasurer of Angeles City, and Jose P. Bondoc, for assistant provincial fiscal of Pampanga.

President's Week in Review: June 6-12, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

June 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, honored at breakfast in Malacañang Australia's Minister of External Affairs Gordon Freeth and Mrs. Freeth, who are here on a brief stopover enroute to Tokyo for the meeting of the Asian Pacific Council.

Other guests, at the breakfast were Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, Undersecretary and Mrs. Jose D. Ingles, Undersecretary Manuel Collantes, Lance Joseph, charge d'affaires of the local Australian embassy; Mrs. Lance Joseph, Mrs. Mariles C. Romulo, Jr., daughter-in-law of Secretary Romulo; Malcolm Booker and Andrew Farran, members of Minister Freeth's official party; and Gordon Bilney of the Australian embassy here.

The President worked on state papers most of the day, acting among others on nominations of existing vacancies in the judiciary, which he promptly submitted to the Commission on Appointments.

As usual, he had a full schedule of callers, among whom were:

1. A delegation from-Nueva Vizcaya, accompanied by Senator Leonardo Perez, which included Mayors Nolasco Mandac of Aglipay, Dionisio Sarandi of Maddela, Leandro Ardenas of Saguday and Antonio Aquino of Villa Verde.
2. Governors Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal, Jose Esteves of Albay, Eduardo Cojuangco of Tarlac, Carlos Fortich of Bukidnon, Tito Primicias of Pangasinan and Gualberto Lumaig of Ifugao, who consulted him on problems in their constituencies.
3. Senators Alejandro Almendras and Dominador Aytona; Reps. Simeon Valdez, Eusebio Moore and James Chiongbian; Mayor Elias Lopez of Davao City, and Mayor and Mrs. Salvador B. Dimson of Lubao, Pampanga.

The President, in the course of his workday, held consultations with key officials, notably Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, PARGO Chairman Ramon Bagatsing, Undersecretary of Justice Ramon Fernandez and Undersecretary of Defense Alejandro Melchor.

In a speech, the President urged the government's bureau directors to boldly make decisions in dealing with official matters, saying that he considered decision-making the key to leadership.

Speaking through Asst. Executive Secretary Flores Bayot, who read his message at the dinner closing the 7th annual convention of the Bureau Directors Association (BUDIRAS), held at the Sheraton Hotel in the evening, the President said that "the importance of any decision lies in its timeliness" and bureau directors who lead government workers should not hesitate to make decisions.

He stressed, "I would prefer that you make the wrong decision at the right time than not make any decision at all."

"Now, I am sure," he declared, "you can understand the tone of urgency in my message to you during your last convention," adding that he sought to spur the directors towards "greater efficiency, towards higher performance, and towards the rapid achievement of the goals of our administration."

June 7—

EXCEPT for a delegation from Zambales and Olongapo City, led by Vice Gov. Antonio M. Diaz and Mayor Amelia Gordon, President Marcos today received no callers, choosing to devote much of his workday to state papers.

Among other actions, he submitted to the Commission on Appointments more nominees to government positions mostly to posts in the judiciary.

The Zambales delegation, which included seven municipal mayors, apprised the President of the progress of on-going infrastructure projects in the region, including bridges, roads and irrigation systems. The Zambales officials also requested funding assistance to new development and community projects, and additional prefabricated Marcos-type school buildings.

With the Zambales delegation were Mayors Rodrigo Trimor of Castillejos, Augusto Dantes of Cabangan, Oscar Gonzales of Iba, Silverio Edquid of Candelaria, Melanio Ledina of Palauig, Francisco Galvez, Jr. of San Narciso, and Zosimo Pascacio of San Antonio.

(Mayor Gordon and three Olongapo City councilors, namely, Edgardo Padiernos, Eduardo Guanga and Leopoldo Federico, took up with the, President. urgent development projects in the city.

They emphasized the need for more prefabricated school buildings, in view of the expected increase in enrollment this coming school year.

In a speech read for him by Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile at Batangas, Batangas, which highlighted the inauguration of the pipeline system for oil products, the President said that “our days of small thinking are over” and that the Filipinos today can equal or exceed the achievements of other people “in terms of development and the uplift of human life.”

Recounting how the Meralco, under the leadership of Don Eugenio Lopez; generated the funds to build the pipeline, through its own resources and loans from financing institutions abroad, the President said that the investments of foreign financiers in the project “reflect the heightened confidence and faith” in Filipino business and in the “stability of the government economy and society.”

June 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS worked on state papers, conferred with government officials, and towards noon he was guest speaker at the national convention of the League of Women Voters at the Manila Hotel.

At mid-morning, he met with Chairman Manuel Arranz of the Commission on Elections who tendered his resignation because of the insinuations that he (Arranz) intended to subvert the popular will in November.

The President accepted Arranz’s resignation but appointed him immediately associate justice of the Court of Appeals.

To replace Arranz as chairman of the Comelec, the President appointed Commissioner Jaime Ferrer who was named to the commission recently.

After meeting with Arranz, the President also conferred with Northern Samar Gov. Irene Balite, House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso and Rep. Artemio Mate of Leyte on various matters.

At the League convention, the President placed all the facilities of the government behind the efforts to get every citizen to participate in the coming elections.

He deplored the present system of political campaigns, branding it as “too rough, too dirty corrupted and already the activity of the irresponsible, the almost insane.”

He also went after administration critics, and recalled that in contrast, some chiefs of state whom he met during the funeral of the late President Eisenhower, congratulated him for starting the rice revolution ” thus giving hope to the millions who usually go hungry in Asia, Africa, and many other places.

The President also indicated that he intends to appoint more women to government positions, saying a “woman’s touch” is needed especially during these times.

The President spent the rest of the day poring over papers on state affairs, retiring early for a full schedule tomorrow.

He approved the commission of 151 officers in the armed forces and the Philippine Merchant Marine Academy (PMMA) and the promotion of 273 others in the reserve and regular rosters of the armed forces.

The President also submitted to the Commission on Appointments the nominations of Rogelio Morales and Roberto Moreno III, the incumbent superintendent and executive officer, respectively, of the PMMA to the Navy rank of captain.

He approved the commission of 70 faculty members of the PMMA on recommendation of Secretary of Commerce and industry Leonides S. Virata, ex-officio chairman of the PMMA Board.

The PMMA was formerly the Philippine Nautical School until it was elevated to a merchant marine college pursuant to RA No. 3680.

June 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS focused on the Central Luzon situation in the latest of a continuing series of assessments of the status of the programs aimed at stabilizing conditions in that region, particularly the peace and order drive now being carried on with local officials at the helm.

Apart from his regular consultations with the officials and aides on various state matters, the President received several provincial delegations. He, however, conferred with congressional officials on the budget bill, and met other members of Congress.

He had no private callers. The rest of his working day was devoted to desk work, with various reports and official matters getting his attention.

At the meeting with AFP and PC brass, it was decided that the constraint laid on military operations in Central Luzon is for the moment to be followed. Meanwhile, the periodic assessment of the situation in the region will continue.

Among those present at the conference were Gen. Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff; Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief; Brig. Gen. Emilio Zerrudo, first PC zone commander; Brig. Gen. Rizalino Garcia, deputy PC chief; Brig. Gen. Rafael Ilete, AFP deputy chief of staff; Col. Wilfredo Encarnacion, PC intelligence chief; and Col. Zosimo Paredes, PC personnel chief.

One of the provincial groups first to see him was that of Mt. Province and Benguet, which took up with the President current local problems. Among those at the meeting were Reps. Luis Hora and Andres Cosalan, Gov. Ben Palispis of Benguet, Mayor Luis Lardizabal of Baguio City, Vice Gov. Timothy Choakas of Mt. Province, former Gov. Bado Dangwa, former Sep. Juan Bondad and former Board Member Teofilo Pilando.

Late in the afternoon, Senator Dominador Aytona and Rep. Jose Alberto, co-chairmen of the joint congressional conference committee working on the budget bill, reported that the work of ironing out the provisions of the measure is going apace. They said that the committee will finish the work in 24 hours.

Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, who was present at the talks, briefed the President on the present form of the measure, which both Houses had passed virtually intact.

The President also found time to make a public statement on the troop withdrawal ordered by US President Richard Nixon in Vietnam. He said the order will serve to accelerate the peace talks in Paris, and should properly get an equally substantive response from North Vietnam. Among those who saw the President today were:

1. Gov. Anacleto Alcala of Quezon, who led a delegation from his province to consult on local problems with the President.
2. Rep. Constantino Navarro, who also accompanied a delegation from Surigao del Norte.
3. Rep. Jose Moreno and Dr. Florencio Tamesis, who made representations in behalf of the Medicare bill.
4. Rep. Nicanor Yniguez and his wife, Gov. Salvacion Yñiguez, leaders of Southern Leyte.
5. Reps. James Ghiongbian and Ramon Durano; Gov. Vicente Cerilles of Zamboanga del Sur and Vice-Gov. Guardson Lood of Misamis Occidental.

Meanwhile, Vice President Fernando Lopez and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, in representation of President Marcos, inaugurated the ₱8.9-million Buntun bridge in the Cagayan Valley, and visited the Kalinga-Apayao area where they talked with the people and local officials on current problems.

The completion of the Buntun bridge, longest in the Philippines at 1.1 kms., links for the first time through the easy access it provides the western and eastern parts of Cagayan province.

The First Lady, assisted by Vice President Lopez and other officials, formally cut the ribbon to open the Buntun bridge to the public.

Among those who participated in the inaugural rites were PACD Secretary and Mrs. Ernesto Maceda, Mayor and Mrs. Apolonio Reyes of Tuguegarao, Vice-Gov. David Puzon of Cagayan and Highways Commissioner and Mrs. Baltazar Aquino.

June 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a long list of visitors, a special ceremony to attend, and four bills to sign, which he did at separate rites, with those interested in the measure present to witness the signing.

Among other visitors, he received Dr. Fanny Aldaba Lim and Jose Soriano, president of the San Miguel Corporation, who presented him with a book on juvenile delinquency authored by Dr. Lim.

He also received Rep. Constancio Maglana of Davao Oriental who presented him with a slim volume on Sabah and the Philippines.

Late in the afternoon, he was guest speaker at the Civic Assembly of Women's award rites. He presented the awards to: Juan D. Nepomuceno & Family (Family Solidarity), Dr. Paz P. Mendez (Education), Dr. Juan Salcedo, Jr. (Science), Mrs. Paz Reyes (Community Service), Iñigo Ed. Regalado (Literature), Sec. Ernesto Maceda (Rural Development), Eugenio Lopez, Sr. (Economic Leadership) and Gil Lopez Kabayao (Music).

The four bills he signed were:

1. H. B. No. 18919 which converts the capital town of Batangas province into Batangas City. Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Gov. Feliciano Leviste, Mayor Pedro Tolentino of Batangas, former Executive Secretary Fortunato de Leon, and Reps. Indanan Anni and Ernesto Bascon.

2. H. B. No. 16516 which makes the town of Mariveles, in Bataan, a free port of entry and creates a foreign trade zone authority. Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Rep. Pablo Roman, Auditor General Ismael Mathay and local officials of Bataan province, including Mariveles Mayor Carlos L. Sarreal and Gov. Guillermo Arcenas.

3. S. B. No. 271 which amended Act No. 3815, the arson law, to give teeth to the law. Among the principal authors of the bill who witnessed the ceremony were Reps. Melanio Singson and Carlos Imperial.

4 S. B. No. 813 (HB 16772) which amended the Home Financing Act to increase the chances of low income group to build homes on their own lots. Among those who witnessed the ceremony were HFC Chairman-General Manager Otilio Gorospe, Senator Helena Benitez, and Reps. Ernesto Bascon and Pablo Roman.

June 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS again stole a march on the celebrators of Independence Day with his participation in the Republic Cultural Heritage Awards, as guest speaker, when the awards were given in the morning at Malacañang. Yesterday, he was also the main speaker at the CAWP awards, which was also related, to the Independence Day rites.

In the afternoon, he was the central figure once more at the ceremonies turning over the Rizal Park and the Japanese Garden to the government. Officially handing the Garden over to the Philippines was former Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi of Japan.

In-between, the President coped with his usual callers, a long line which kept him busy till 2:30 p.m., and with his unabated desk work.

In his speech at the Republic Cultural Heritage Awards, the President called on Filipino artists and scientists to identify with the masses and with the national experience in development.

He conferred the awards on:

1. Dionisio M. Birosel—in technology and research—who was cited for his pioneering work in plant oils, and for perfecting a method now adopted in research on such oils, especially coconut oil, as well as in research into other by-products of the coconut;

2. Magdalena G. Jalandoni—in literature—for her writings in the Hiligaynon magazine, mainly on challenging themes.

Miss Jalandoni, living in Iloilo, could not come for the ceremony due to old age; she was represented by her niece, Mrs. Ofelia L. Jalandoni Jardenil.

8. Dr. Nicolas Zafra—in history—for his contributions to the enrichment of the nation's cultural heritage in the field of Philippine history and culture.

4. Samahan sa Sining ng Pilipinas (Association of Filipino Artists) —in the arts—represented by the association president, Leonides Benesa, for its singular efforts in propagating Philippine contemporary arts in the last 20 years, and for helping in the development and promotion of creative arts through the aid of modern media.

The President likewise asked Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to set aside ₱500,000 to finance historical research, the collection and collation of documents bearing on the country's history, as well as on the writing of history.

He directed Commissioner Sy-Changco to release the amount immediately, specifying that the outlay is subject to augmentation whenever necessary.

Late in the afternoon, the President was guest of honor at the formal turnover of the Rizal Park to the government, at ceremonies held in the open air auditorium of the park.

Before the park turnover, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, in her capacity as chairman of the National Parks Development Committee, received from the Philippine Society of Japan the newly completed Japanese Garden, which she formally opened to the public.

After inaugurating the Japanese Garden, Mrs. Marcos handed over the Rizal Park to the national government, represented by the President.

During the day, the President, received, among others:

1. Former Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi of Japan who paid his respects at Malacañang shortly after arriving here to attend the formal inauguration, and turnover of the Japanese Garden.

Mr. Kishi was accompanied by Japanese Ambassador Takeshi Yasukawa and Tamotsu Shiohara, managing director of the Philippine Society of Japan.

2. PANAMIN Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr., Commissioner Mamintal Tamano of National Integration and Hadji Kamlon. The group brought before the President the problems of Muslim pilgrims stranded at Mecca, after having run out of funds.

Kanilon, who was paroled by the President last year after 17 years in prison for rebellion, also came to thank the President for the successful eye operation he underwent and for the treatment of his other ailments, with the assistance of PANAMIN.

Also with Secretary Elizalde were Mayor Titina Anni of Siasi, Sulu and some relatives of Kamlon.

Other visitors the President received were Governors Teresa Dupaya of Cagayan and Vicente Cerilles of Zamboanga del Sur; Gov. and Mrs. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal, who accompanied a select team of women Softball players, dubbed the Philippine Blue Girls, who will represent the Philippines in a series of Softball games in the United States; and former Gov. Dominador Camerino of Cavite and Mayor Macario B. Peña of Naic, Cavite.

The President worked on state papers the rest of the day.

Among other actions, the President—

1. Signed into law House Bill No. 18345, which authorized the appropriation of ₱28 million to defray the expenses of the national elections in November;
2. Forwarded to the Commission on Appointments his 39 nominees to vacancies in the judiciary and other offices of the government for confirmation.

On the eve of Independence Day, the President issued the following-message in Pilipino.

“Kailangang maging mapayapa ang pagbabagong hinahangad natin, ngunit ito’y darating ngayon sa oras na ito sa buhay ng ating bansa, sapagkat ang labi ng kahapon ay hindi na natin mababata.

“Ang kabataan ay lakas na nakapagbabago, kung ito lamang ay may kakayahang. mamamalas ang bagong daigdig ang mga unang salinlahi marahil ay maghahanda sa kabutihan ng ating mga ninuno na may matatag, at subok nang kaugalian.

Ngayo’y nadarama hatin iang pagbabago ng bansa, kahit naisin pa nating baguhin ang anyo nito, upang mapawi ang dating pangamba, upang itanim sa isipan ng ating mamamayan ang bagong diwa ng pagsasagawa, at ang bagong paninindigang mahango tayo sa matandang pamahiin at masidhing paniniwala na walang kaugnayan sa kasalukuyan.

“Ang kailangan natin sa hinaharap na pakikipagtulungan sa kabataan ay puspusang paglilingkod sa kapakanan ng ating bayan na nakahihigit sa mga nagawa nang ating kapanahunan, mula sa kasarinlang ipinagdiriwang natin ngayon, ang mithiin, ang katangian ang kabayanihang ipinamalas nang araw na yaon 71 taon na ang lumipas, nang ang Unang Republika ay ipahayag sa Kawit. Nang araw na yaon nagkaroon tayo ng sariling paninindigan at layunin bilang malayang mamamayan. Ito’y kinakailangan lamang nating maisakatuparan.”

Meanwhile, the Office of the President held an early morning special flag raising ceremony in connection with the Independence Day celebration, featuring the recitation by Malacañang employees of the Oath of Allegiance to the Flag.

The ceremony marked the beginning of a yearly recitation of the Oath of Allegiance to the Flag on the eve of Independence Day.

The Oath of Allegiance to the Flag follows:

“Ako’y							nanunumpa
Na			mananatiling				matapat
Sa		Republika		ng			Pilipinas
At	sa	Watawat	ng	Araw	at	Tatlong	Bituin
Na		sagisag		ng			Kadakilaan,

Sa biyaya ng Dios.”

June 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS ushered in today’s nationwide observance of the 71st anniversary of the First Philippine Republic by taking the lead in the solemn flag-raising ceremony held at the Rizal Park at 7 a.m.

He later laid a wreath at the foot of the Rizal monument. The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and children Imee, Bongbong and Irene joined in the Rizal Park rites.

Vice President Fernando Lopez, meanwhile, officiated at the Independence Day rites at Kawit, Cavite, where the First-Republic was proclaimed by General Emilio Aguinaldo 71 years ago.

The Rizal Park (formerly Luneta) ceremonies were attended by Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., members of the Cabinet and military top brass. Representatives from the Muslim community were conspicuous in their colorful costumes.

Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, acting for Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo who is abroad on an official mission, performed the duties of the national committee chairman, which included escorting the President throughout the Rizal Park ceremonies.

The President and his family arrived at the park just before 7 a.m. He was given military honors by a company of Philippine Military Academy cadets on arrival. Then he hoisted the national colors on the giant flagpole fronting the Rizal monument, as the National Anthem was played.

Assisting him in raising the flag were Mrs. Marcos and their children, and several PMA cadets.

After the flag-raising rite, the President and his family were escorted by Secretary Aspiras to the Rizal monument.

There, the President laid a wreath in honor of the national hero.

As taps was sounded, the President, his family, high officials and the crowd that had gathered around the monument stood hushed in solemn prayer. Only the mournful notes of the bugle and the subdued ruffle of drums were heard in the park.

Shortly afterwards, the President and his family returned to Malacañang.

At 2:15 p.m., the First Family left Malacañang again, this time for the Independence Memorial Grandstand at Rizal Park, where a civic-military parade highlighted the Independence Day festivities. It was capped by the President's address to the nation. (See pp. 6121-6126 for full text of the President's Independence Day address)

In the evening, the President and the First Lady were hosts at the traditional reception in Malacañang, where members of the diplomatic corps personally conveyed the greetings of their governments to the President.

Earlier, the President forwarded to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the nominations of Colonels Gonzalo L. Batac and Restituto B. Sarcos, for promotion to the rank of brigadier general in the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Batac and Sarcos belong to Class '41 of the Philippine Military Academy. Batac is the commanding officer of the first military area, an assignment he has held since November 18, 1968; while Sarcos has been commander of the fourth military area since January 31, 1969.

The President also granted executive clemency to 556 prisoners in accordance with the practice on Independence Day.

Of the prisoners extended executive clemency, four were granted special absolute pardon, 52 absolute pardons, six conditional pardon, 371 conditional pardon with parole conditions, and 123 commutation of sentences.

The grant of executive clemency to these prisoners was made by the President upon the recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Parole.

Meanwhile, messages of felicitations from heads of state and foreign dignitaries flowed steadily into Malacañang.

Among the first messages received by President Marcos were those of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, prime minister of Cambodia; President Richard Nixon of the United States, President Juan Carlos Onganía of Argentina, President Cevdet Sunay of Turkey, and King Baudouin of Belgium.

King Baudouin's greetings were conveyed by R. Van de Velde, charge d'affaires of the local Belgian embassy.

President Nixon's wire to the President follows:

"On the occasion of your Independence Day, I take great pleasure in conveying to you my personal greetings and the best wishes of the people of the United States of America for the increasing prosperity of your country and the continuance of friendly relations between our two nations. We are confident that our two governments will continue their efforts for the cause of peace and freedom throughout the World."

More messages arrived at Malacañang later in the day, including those from:

- 1) Queen Elizabeth of the United Kingdom saying, "I have much pleasure in sending to Your Excellency my warm congratulations and best wishes for the prosperity of the Philippine people."
- 2) President Mahendra of Nepal, who wired: "On the happy occasion of the Independence Day of the Philippines we have great pleasure in expressing to. Your Excellency and to the people of the Philippines our cordial felicitations and best wishes for your personal happiness and for the continuous progress and prosperity of your people."
- 3) King Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Shah of Iran, who recently played host to the First Lady, who said: "My sincere congratulations together with my best wishes for your personal good health and happiness as well as for the increasing prosperity of the Filipino people."
- 4) King Olav of Norway, with the message: "On the occasion of the National Day I extend to Your Excellency and to the people of the Philippines my sincere congratulations."
- 5) Chairman Ne Win of the Revolutionary Council of the Union of Burma, expressed "great pleasure in extending to Your Excellency warm congratulations and sincere good wishes of the people of the Union of Burma and of myself for your health and happiness and for the progress and prosperity of the people of the Philippines."
- 6) Senate President Alain Poher of France, interim caretaker of the government, who expressed best wishes.
- 7) Queen Juliana of the Netherlands who wired. "Your Excellency, my very best Wishes for the happiness and prosperity of the people of the Philippines."
- 8) Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain, who expressed his "sincere felicitations."
- 9) Lt. Gen. Francis C. Gideon, commander of the U.S. 13th Air Force, who wired from Clark Air Base, saying the officers and airmen of his command "join me in extending best wishes on the anniversary of this historic occasion."

Among other well-wishers were Philippine honorary Consul General Alfred Roch D. Hotelans and honorary Consul Francois Terret of the Philippine consulate in Monaco.

President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic wired President Marcos "our most heartfelt felicitations wishing you an abundance of health and happiness and the people of the Philippines all progress and. prosperity."

Others who wired their greetings included Emperor Hirohito of Japan, President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz of Mexico, King Bhumibol of Thailand, Governor Manuel F. L. Guerrero of Guam, President Ludwig Von Moos of Switzerland, and Ambassador Moltke Hansen of Norway.

President Charles Helou of Lebanon, President Joaquin Balaguer of the Dominican Republic, President Sabah Alsalem Alsabah Amir of Kuwait, President Mohammad Zaher of Afghanistan, President J. M. Velasco Ibarra of Ecuador, President Qahtan Mohamed Alshaabi of the People's Republic of Southern Yemen, Prime Minister Gustaf Adolf of Sweden, and President Urho Kekkonen of the Republic of Finland.

President Arthur da Costa E. Silva of Brazil also sent his best wishes for the President's "personal well-being and the happiness of your country"

President Rafael Caldera of Venezuela sent in similar greetings (in Spanish).

President's Week in Review: June 13-19, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

June 13.—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted most of his time to desk work, following a hectic day yesterday when he had to leave his desk several times to attend to his duties in connection with the Independence Day rites.

One of the highlights of his day was his signing of the private security agency bill at a formal ceremony held at the Executive Hall. The ceremony was witnessed by representatives of private security and detective agencies.

Also present were Sen. Alejandro Almendras and Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief.

At mid-morning the President received Minister of State Paul Henry Spaak of Belgium, who paid a courtesy call following his arrival on a private visit to the country.

The Belgian dignitary, who was formerly Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs of his country, was accompanied to Malacañang by Consul Mariano Ruiz of the foreign office.

Also with Minister Spaak were Robert van Ole Velde, charge d'affaires of the Belgian embassy here; Eugene, van Dyke, deputy managing director of the Bell Telephone Manufacturing Company of Antwerp; Roberto Piccus, president of ITT, Far East; and Duncan Hallock, executive vice-president of ITT (Phil.).

During the day, the President also:

1. Submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the nomination of Manila CFI Judge Arsenio Solidum, as associate justice of the Court of Appeals.
2. Nominated CFI Judge Amuerfina Herrera of Lucena City as CFI judge of Manila.
3. Signed the promotion of 38 reserve officers on active duty with the Armed Forces of the Philippines, all of whom are in the technical services.
4. Authorized Professor Napoleon T. Vergara, consultant on forestry of the Presidential Economic Staff, to go on a study tour of Russia, for two-weeks starting June 19.

Among the President's callers today were Senator Wenceslao R. Lagumbay, who accompanied a delegation of mayors from Laguna; Mayors Luis de Castro of Bulan and Melchor H. Aquino of Donsol, both from Sorsogon; Commerce Undersecretary Fernando Campos with Mayor Nieves Alvarez of Noveleta, Cavite and Myrna Santiago, also of Cavite; and another delegation of local officials from Eastern Samar headed by Gov. Victor A. Amasa.

June 14.—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was up early for the rites commemorating the Fall of Bessang Pass, which started at about 7 a.m. with honors paid to the fallen soldiers of World War II at the Libingan Ng Mga Bayani at Fort Bonifacio.

The President was accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, to the military cemetery site and participated in the ceremonies.

From the Libingan, the President and the First Lady went on to Camp Aguinaldo where the main program celebrating the decisive battle of Bessang Pass was held.

The program was highlighted by the President's speech which called for intensified efforts to record the military history of the country, and by the awards to outstanding guerrilla leaders, guerrilla units, and wartime military governors and mayors. (See pp. 6390-A to 6390-H for full text of the President's speech.)

After the program, the President proceeded to Makati, where he joined the NP Junta meeting, held at the Manila Banking Corporation building on Ayala Avenue.

Plans were finalized by the Junta for the June 21 NP national convention at the Manila Hotel. The Junta, however, will meet again on Tuesday, June 17, with NP provincial delegates attending.

In the afternoon, the President concentrated on state papers.

He found time as well to write to the barrio council of Tamak, municipality of Padre Garcia, Batangas, acknowledging the council's resolution of gratitude for the ₱2,000 given to the barrio from the rural development fund, which the barrio folks used to build a footbridge which leads to the highway.

In his letter, the President said that the project justified his faith in the capacity of barrio folk to choose what is best for their welfare and to pursue it successfully.

June 15.—

PRESIDENT MARCOS officiated in a series of oath taking ceremonies held at the Malacañang reception hall about noon and worked on pending state papers the rest of the day, after conferring with officials called to the Palace.

The President was up very early, and engrossed himself reading weekend magazines and the daily newspapers. At about 10 a.m., he met Vice President Fernando Lopez.

Later, he inducted:

1. Secretary of Public Works and Communications Antonio Raquiza as chairman of the Infrastructure Operations Center and Presidential adviser on public works, with Cabinet rank;
2. Governor Rene Espina of Cebu as Secretary of Public Works and Communications, to take over from Secretary Raquiza;
3. Jaime N. Ferrer and Lino Patajo as chairman and member, respectively, of the Commission on Elections.
4. Guillermo C. Nakar, Jr. as solicitor in the prosecution staff of the Department of Justice.

After the ceremonies, the President met with several groups of officials.

He met with Secretaries Raquiza and Espina, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Commissioner Baltazar Aquino of Public Highways on public works matters.

Among others who saw the President were Gov. Teresa Dupaya and Vice Gov. David Puzon of Cagayan; Gov. Juvenal Guerrero of La Union together with Chairman Joaquin Ortega of the San Fernando Port Authority; Gov. Murphy Sangkula of Sulu, Rep. Alberto Q. Ubay, Vice Gov. Guardson Lood and former Gov. Felipe Ascuña of Zamboanga del Norte.

The President and his family heard Mass at the Malacañang chapel late in the afternoon.

June 16.—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had conferences with varied groups, conferred; a prestigious award on a ranking US military official, inducted a judge, and generally adhered to a crowded schedule of desk work and visitors.

Among other actions, the President forwarded to the Commission on Appointments the nomination of Judge Andres Reyes, CFI judge of Rizal, as associate justice of the Court of Appeals.

At the same time, the President nominated Vice Gov. Guardson Lood of Zamboanga del Norte to the post Judge Reyes will, vacate.

Later in the morning, the President conferred the Philippine Legion of Honor, degree of commander, to Admiral John S. McCain, Jr., commander-in-chief of the US Pacific forces, at a simple ceremony in Malacañang.

Witnessing the rites, among others, were the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, Mrs. McCain, and Philippine and US officials, led by Defense Undersecretary Alejandro Melchor, Gen. Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff; and Minister James Wilson, charge d'affaires of the US embassy here.

In another ceremony, held at his study, the President inducted Judge Venicio Escolin, as judge of the court of first instance covering Leyte and the cities of Tacloban and Ormoc.

Among the President's conferences was that with Sulu officials led by Rep. Indanan Anni, Gov. Murphy Sangkula, and including the deputy governor and municipal mayors of the province.

Notable among other callers at Malacañang today were Mayor Macario Peña of Naic, Cavite; and Mayor Tirso Ramos of Lobo, Batangas, who came with Ceferino Hernandez, municipal treasurer of the same town; Misses Margaret Rose Montinola and Gloria Diaz, newly proclaimed "Miss Philippines" and "Binibining Pilipinas," respectively.

Miss Montinola, who will represent the Philippines in the Miss International pageant; and Miss Diaz, who will compete as Philippine representative in the Miss Universe contest called on the President to pay their respects before leaving for the international beauty tilts.

Meanwhile, the President advocated substantial change in the country's schools to undertake the task of "not only advancing knowledge but of changing the old patterns and old values that have kept our people in bondage and poverty, and our country from moving forward."

In a speech delivered for him by Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz at the opening of the third annual session of the Philippine Association of State Universities and Colleges, at Zamboanga City, the President said that it is toward such change that he endorsed the idea of youth sharing in the decisions in schools and in the nation's councils. (See pp. 6390-1 to 63'90-L for full text of the President's speech.)

June 17.—

PRESIDENT MARCOS held a conference with provincial governors, congressmen and city mayors who called at Malacañang to apprise him of the latest political developments in their respective localities.

The President was also guest speaker at the 15th national convention of the Association of Filipino Retailers during which he reaffirmed his faith in the ability of the Filipinos to chart the economic course of the nation.

Held at the Fiesta Pavilion of the Manila Hotel, the convention was delighted to hear the President congratulate the members of the association for their successful efforts to attain the objectives of the retail trade nationalization law.

In his conference with local officials who will be chairmen of their respective delegations to the Nacionalista Party convention scheduled for June 21, the President gave a briefing on the plans agreed upon by party leaders for the conduct of an orderly convention at the Manila Hotel.

The President left the Palace for the retailers' convention at 12:30 p.m. He was fetched by Mrs. Polly Cayetano, association president.

Back at Malacañang about 2 p.m., the President resumed his conference with local officials.

Meanwhile, an agreement between the Philippines and Japan to set up two pilot rice farms in the Philippines[^] as show windows of modern rice culture, was signed in Malacañang.

Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrently Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources, signed for the Philippine government, while Japanese Ambassador Takeshi Yasukawa signed for his government.

Under the agreement, two pilot farms of 100 hectares each will be set up, one in Naujan, Oriental Mindoro, the other in the San Miguel-Alangalang area in Leyte.

The Philippines and Japan Will jointly set up the pilot projects, specifically in the:

- 1) Construction of roads, irrigation and drainage facilities within the project, to serve directly the farms;
- 2) Improvement of techniques of rice cultivation, storage and processing through research and extensive field work; and
- 3). Technical training for Filipinos in Japan and on the pilot f arms;

June 18.—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took in stride another heavy schedule with numerous, callers and a sheaf of bills passed during the last regular session of Congress to study and act on, as well as conferences and ceremonials requiring his attention.

The President started the day with a conference with Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo who called to say good-bye before departing for Quebec, Canada to attend the annual meeting of former presidents of the United Nations General Assembly, scheduled for June 20 to June 24.

Following the conference, the President received the credentials of two new ambassadors to the Philippines, namely, Ambassador Ly Chinly of Cambodia and Ambassador Nicolas de Berri Flecha Torres of Paraguay, at formal ceremonies in Malacañang.

Delegates from 10 countries participating in the 15th Asian Film Festival, composed of movie producers, directors, actors and actresses, later called to pay their respects to the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

Receiving them at the state dining hall, the President told the industry leaders and movie queens that they are just about the best ambassadors one country can send to another. He expressed confidence that their visit here will result in even closer ties among Asian nations.

The President received callers up to 2 p.m. The Palace visitors consisted mostly of senators, representatives, and provincial, city and-municipal officials.

In-between callers, the President concentrated on his desk work, notably the bills passed during the last regular session of Congress.

Among the measures he “signed into law were House Bill No. 18774” appropriating ₱5 million for the implementation of the educational benefits program for veterans and their dependents, and for the payment of veterans’ pensions and death gratuities.

The President also approved House Bill No. 18977 providing for the construction of the ₱400-million multi-purpose hydro-electric project in the upper Pampanga river in Nueva Ecija.

Earlier, the President declared June 19, Thursday, a special public holiday in Calamba, Laguna, the birthplace of the national hero, Dr. Jose Rizal.

In issuing the proclamation, the President said it is fitting and proper that the residents of Calamba be given full opportunity to make the 108th birthday of Rizal with ceremonies in keeping with the hero’s ideals and teachings.

Meanwhile, Vice President Fernando Lopez formally informed the President of the tremendous strides made by the administration, under the impetus and guidance exerted by Rice and Corn Production Coordinating Council (RCPCC), towards making the country self-sufficient in food products.

The Vice President, concurrent Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources and RCPCC chairman, specified an 82 per cent increase in areas planted to high yielding rice over the 1967 hectareage.

June 19.—

PRESIDENT MARCOS motored to Calamba, Laguna, birthplace of Dr. Jose Rizal, where he joined the townspeople in commemorating the 108th birth anniversary of the national hero.

The President had proclaimed a special public holiday in Calamba to give the townsfolk ample opportunity to observe the hero’s birthday with fitting ceremony.

Earlier in Malacañang, the President met with provincial, city and municipal officials, the second day he has sat down with local leaders who are in Manila as heads of their respective delegations to the Nacionalista Party convention, which is scheduled at the Manila Hotel on Saturday, June 21.

The delegations, which started arriving in the city two days ago from all over the country, invariably called on the President to pay their respects and consult him on local problems.

Shortly before noon, the President emerged from his office to address a group of tenants, numbering some 500, who came to request government aid in the purchase of the Tambunting Estate in Manila, where they had set up their homes.

Accompanied by Reps. Joaquin Roces and Pablo Ocampo of Manila, the delegation petitioned the President to initiate the acquisition of the estate by the government, so that the 6,000 or so families occupying the property may be able to buy their homesites.

The President directed the People’s Homesite and Housing Corporation to survey the estate and take immediate steps toward the purchase of the property.

At 3 p.m., the President left by car for Calamba, to participate in the rites honoring Dr. Rizal. He was accompanied by Senator Helena Benitez and his immediate aides.

In remarks before thousands of pilgrims who came from various parts of the country to honor the hero, the President said he came as well to submit a “spiritual report” to Rizal.

The gist of his report, the President said, is that most of the hero’s dreams for his country and people have now been fulfilled.

His report emphasized the following:

1. Birth of the “New Filipino,” with the remolding of his character to adhere closer to /the measure of the Filipinos of the Philippine Revolution.
2. The constant threat of hunger over the people has been dissipated, with the people now better assured of sustenance, both physically and spiritually.
3. Rizal’s visions in his tract on the “Philippines, A Century Hence,” where he foresaw the sprouting of factories and dispersal of the engines of progress, has come true.
4. The new breed of Filipinos which Rizal had conjured is now emerging, despite the fact that some people have sought to deride this idea.

Today’s observance, the President said, should also underscore the fact that Rizal laid the moral basis for the revolution which resulted in the founding of the first republic in Asia, and in a way presaged the emergence of free nations, in this region of the world.

He added that Rizal’s birth made possible the flowering of the Filipino intelligentsia, who called themselves “Indios Bravos” and brought about the uprooting of the tyrannical colonial regime.

President's Week in Review: June 20-26, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

June 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed a schedule rather more hectic than usual, as he met with separate delegations to the NP convention from all parts of the country, beginning early in the morning and lasting up to 5:30 p.m. In addition, he was guest of honor at two occasions in the evening.

The President, along with Vice President Fernando Lopez, received not only NPs, but also LPs who formally affiliated with the administration party. At 4:30 p.m., he swore them in as Nacionalistas, including governors, mayors, councilors and provincial board members at a mass oath taking ceremony held at the Malacañang reception hall.

At 5:30 p.m., the President left Malacañang to be guest speaker at the 24th annual national convention of the Philippine Veterans Legion, held at the GSIS social hall.

The President again stepped out at about 8 p.m., to speak as guest of honor at the awards ceremony of the 15th Film Festival in Asia, held at the Philamlife auditorium.

He pledged the support of the Philippine government to the objectives of the federation of Asian filmmakers, particularly in the enhancement of Asian culture and the expansion of the export potential of Asian films.

Emphasizing the impact of movies as an art form and as a social force, he asked Asian moviemakers to make films “a window on Asia” for the rest of the world, and to use this medium such that more Asians will become “aware of what they are, and of what they must seek” in life.”

The new NP converts included independent NP members aside from out-and-out LPs; among the prominent names were Governors Petronilo Seares of Abra, Francisco Nepomuceno of Pampanga and Consuelo Calo of Agusan; Mayor Eugenio Suarez of Angeles City; former Labor Undersecretary Apolonio Rivera; and incumbent officials and former officials from the provinces of Abra, Pangasinan, Zambales, Pampanga, Aklan, Kalinga-Apayao, Misamis Occidental, Camiguin, South Cotabato, Cotabato, Zamboanga del Sur; and the cities of Caloocan, Angeles and Olongapo.

Earlier, the President approved the promotion of 165 officers in the reserves of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, all on inactive status, in line with the build-up of the country's reserve force.

Prominent among those promoted is Rep. Frisco San Juan of Rizal, who has been raised to the rank of lieutenant colonel. Three others were promoted to the same rank, with 49 raised to major, 58 to captain, and 54 to first lieutenant.

All the promotions were made in accordance with requirements, including fulfillment of annual active duty training, “time-in-grade and time-in-service specifications, as prescribed in Executive Order No. 138, series of 1968.

June 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of the morning in his study, as he put the finishing touches to his speech at the convention, in anticipation of a party draft for a second term.

He received from time to time party leaders, who came to consult with him on various matters. Some officials also called on the President, among them PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave.

Later in the morning, the President received a group of Tarlac officials, accompanied by Gov. Eduardo Cojuangco and SSS Administrator Gilberto Teodoro. The local officials were there to take their baths as new Nacionalista Party members. All of them were LP leaders in Tarlac.

Those who took their oaths were former Tarlac Board Member Rosehdo Tomas, and Mayors Vicente Gabriel, of San Clemente, Catalino Cruz of Anao, Manuel Cabrera of Camiling, Catalino S. Modomo of Sta. Ignacia, Federico Peralta of San Manuel; and Venustiano G. Martinez of La Paz.

Early in the afternoon, the President motored to the Manila Hotel for the NP convention. He arrived at the hotel with Vice President Fernando Lopez at about 3:30 p.m.

On entering the convention hall, the President and the Vice President were engulfed in a tumultuous welcome by the convention delegates, party leaders, and guests. The ovation lasted for so long that the convention chairman, former President Carlos P. Garcia, had to rap for order.

The President braved the heat of the afternoon, which had everybody waving fans, to sit out the proceedings. He listened to the speeches and conversed with the party faithful. The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, was also very much present at the convention, with more than her share of attention and admiration.

After the President was nominated by Senate President Gil J. Puyat, and the delegates affirmed the nomination by a tremendous acclamation, the President made a brief but fighting speech of acceptance.

He pledged the meaningful, extension of the administration's present program of development in all areas of national life, to fulfill the vision of the Filipino people of a free, viable, progressive, and proud nation.

After his speech, the convention was shortly adjourned by former President Garcia. The President lingered for a little longer, as well-wishers and party leaders gathered around him.

He was back in Malacañang about an hour later.

June 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had an unusually busy Sunday.

He was guest speaker at the 12th annual assembly of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines earlier this morning and towards noon he received a 500-man delegation of government prosecutors. Early in the afternoon he conferred with delegates to the Nacionalista Party convention who called at Malacañang for further consultations before returning to their respective provinces.

He addressed the convention of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines at the Veterans Center in Fort Bonifacio.

He was presented the "Golden Kris" plaque, the highest VFP award, for his "continuing concern" for the welfare of veterans, their dependents, widows and orphans.

The government prosecutors group was headed by Juan Reyes, provincial fiscal of Cebu and League president. Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile accompanied the government prosecutors who are presently on a two-day conference in Manila.

During their call, Nicolas Gallang and Senen Urquiola took their oaths as state prosecutors. Also sworn into office were Cesar G. Abaya and Constante Caridad as first and third assistant fiscals of Laoag City, respectively; and Bartolome Avanceña as assistant provincial fiscal of Cebu.

The President received callers until 4 p.m.

Among the NP national convention delegates who called at Malacañang were those from Negros Occidental and from the six provinces and three cities of the Bicol region, namely, Camarines Norte, Camarines Sur, Albay, Sorsogon, Catanduanes and Masbate, and the cities of Naga, Legazpi, and Iriga.

June 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS prodded local officials from Mindanao and the Visayas who called on him to speed up the completion of ongoing projects in their respective jurisdictions in order to avail of additional aid from the national government.

The President met provincial delegations in the morning and in the afternoon, who called prior to departing for home, after attending the Nacionalista Party convention last Saturday.

In-between meeting the delegations, the President worked on state papers.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Issued a proclamation declaring June 24 a special public holiday in Manila, to mark the city's 398th foundation anniversary.
2. Sent to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation 27 nominations to posts in the judiciary, most of which were promotional appointments.
3. Signed an executive order declaring 16 municipal districts as new municipalities, classifying 15 others in accordance with their revenue intakes, and giving tentative classification to four districts which four years ago did not exist.
4. Signed into law House Bill No. 13854, which created the town of Balabagan in Lanao del Sur.
5. Approved another bill (H. 671) converting the Caromatan Agricultural School in Caromatan, Lanao del Norte into Lanao del Norte Agricultural College, and appropriating a budget of ₱300,000.
6. Issued a series of directives to meet urgent problems, notably an order calling for the immediate investigation of alleged land-grabbing reports in Quezon province and of illegal logging operations at the Mt. Apo national park.

In another area of concern, the President asked Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas to take immediate action on alleged violations by the National Shipyard and Steel Corporation (NASSCO) of regulations on the operation of its bulldozer on a public land in Mariveles, Bataan.

Earlier, the President was guest speaker at the 14th annual convention of the Philippine Association of Vocational Education, held at the Girl Scouts of the Philippines auditorium, where he pledged support to the broadening of vocational education and the manpower training, program.

In an extemporaneous speech, the President said that because of the tie-up envisioned in his development plan between vocational training and private industry, the vocational schools are important elements in the overall development of the nation.

He told the educators that the private sector is willing to become an active partner of the government in the broadening of the manpower training program, which is also tied up to vocational schools, to the extent that it would contribute material resources.

June 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received local officials and provincial leaders all through the day, even as he buckled down to state business which included signing a new bill and flashing the green light for developing South Cotabato with Italian government assistance.

The provincial officials and leaders continued to troop to Malacañang to take up with the President local problems, particularly pet projects within their jurisdictions. Many of those, who saw the President were delegates to the recently concluded NP convention, who hoped to follow up development projects before returning to their bailiwicks.

In the course of his conferences with the local officials, the President signed the authority granting Gov. Sergio Morales of South Cotabato the powers to conclude an agreement with the Italian government on assistance to the development of that province. Present at the signing were Gov. Morales himself and Rep. James Chiongbian of that province.

The President also signed into law House Bill No. 18008, which increased from 20 to 26 the assistant provincial fiscals in Pangasinan.

The signing of the bill was witnessed by a big delegation from Pangasinan. led by Gov. Tito Primicias, Rep. Aguedo Agbayani, Gov. Conrado Estrella of the Land Authority and former Rep. Tuciano Millan.

The President also issued a proclamation declaring Thursday. (July 1) a special public holiday in Southern Leyte, upon the request of Gov. Salvacion Yñiguez and the provincial board. The proclamation will enable the people of the province to celebrate properly the ninth anniversary of the provincial charter.

The delegations the President met which included those from the Bicol region, and Northern Luzon, shortly after he conferred with Rep. Gregorio Murillo, Gov. Recaredo Castillo and all the mayors of Surigao del Sur.

At about 1:30 p.m., the President, while having a late lunch, was interviewed by newsman Nick Joaquin.

June 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS coped with another heavy schedule as he continued to receive NP delegates from various provinces who consulted with him on local problems before returning home after attending the NP national convention last Saturday.

The President also inducted officers of the League of Women Voters of the Philippines and the Amateur Softball Association of the Philippines, in between receiving callers, conferences and desk work.

In the morning, the President had as breakfast guest Tristan B. Platt, president of Manufacturers Hanover and Trust Company of New York. Also at the breakfast were Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, CB Governor Alfonso Calalang, DBP Chairman Gregorio Licaros, PNB President Roberto Benedicto and a number of leading local bankers.

Inducted officers of the Amateur Softball Association were Gov. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal, president; Agustin Cailao, Fr. Nicanor Lana, Alfredo Reyes and Emmanuel Ledesma, first, second, third and fourth vice-president, respectively; and Fr. Edgardo Martin, Domingo Luna, Mamerto Lumibaw, Manuel Cruz, Mayor Macario Asistio of Caloocan City and Edgardo Umali, board members; Fernando Bautista, auditor; Felix "Jun" Ledda, executive secretary-treasurer; Ramon Romero, PRO; and Alejandro Cruz, assistant PRO.

In the afternoon, the President received members of the Board of Industries.

In other actions, the President:

1. Appealed to sugar industry leaders to give workers in the sugar centrals the “amelioration bonus” earlier given to plantation workers. The President made the appeal in response to representations of the National Sugar Workers Union (PAFLU), La Carlota City chapter.
2. Directed NBI Director Jolly Bugarin to immediately inquire into the involvement of two of his agents in a shooting incident in a Manila night club.
3. Ordered separated from the service Domado Alonto, city treasurer of Marawi, who had been administratively charged for maladministration, misfeasance, favoritism and neglect in the performance of his duties.

The President also reenacted the signing of the bill which will allow new voters to participate in the coming November elections, arising from their failure to register within 60 days after reaching the age of 21 years.

New voters may henceforth register beyond the 60-day limit of registration set by the election code, with the approval of Senate Bill No. 967 by the President which gives more time for 21-year olds to file their applications for registration.

This latest amendment to the election code however still requires that new voters should register “not later than 60 days before the day of any regular election and not later than 30 days before the day of any special election.”

June 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS once again was fully engaged by urgent paper work and a spate of visitors, many of them on official business.

Notable among his official actuations was the setting aside of 11 forest reserves in various parts of the country, with a total of 1,227,687 hectares, as watersheds.

Set aside were:

1. The Magat River forest reserve in Nueva Vizcaya, with an area of 430,860 hectares.
2. The Chico River forest reserve in the Mountain Province, with an area of 333, 176 hectares.
3. The Abulug River forest reserve in Cagayan, with an area, of 195,659 hectares.
4. The Peñaranda River forest reserve in Nueva Ecija, with an area of 14,888 hectares;
5. The Angat River-Bustos Dam forest reserve in Bulacan, with an area of 28,550 hectares.
6. The Ambayawan River forest reserve in Pangasinan, with an area of 33,688 hectares.
7. The Umiray River forest reserve in Quezon, with an area of 21,362 hectares.
8. The Kaliwara River forest reserve also in Quezon, with an area of 35,150 hectares.
9. The Caliraya-Lumot River forest reserve in Laguna, with an area of 10,771 hectares.
10. The Barit River-Lake Buhi forest reserve in Camarines Sur, with an area of 18,380 hectares.

11. The Jalaur River forest reserve in Iloilo, with an area of 105,203 hectares.

The President successively conferred with key government leaders, and officials at Malacañang all through the day. While engaged in paper work, the President:

1. Submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation 14 more nominations to vacant posts in the judiciary.
2. Declared in separate proclamations” the period from July 1 to August 15 this year as national fund and membership campaign for the Boy Scouts of the Philippines, and the Community Chest of Cebu, Inc.
3. Designated Luis P. Vera and Vicente Gorre as acting chairman and acting member, respectively, of the Board of Accountancy.
4. Approved the recommendation of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs to grant entry visas to Emil Nikolav Razlogov and Ella Nedelcheve, both Bulgarian nationals.
5. Authorized the issuance of temporary visitor’s visa to seven nationals of communist countries, namely: Franjo Sepic of Yugoslavia, Laszlo Csuth and Zoltan Harsanyi of Hungary, Stancho Stanchev of Bulgaria, Jerzy Kukla and Helena Kukla of Poland, and Orsolya Eva, Hungarian-born but stateless.

Among those the President met with were Vice President Fernando Lopez, Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Minister Samson Sabalones, consul general at San Francisco; PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz, Secretary of Public Works and Communications Rene Espina, Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople, Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras and Dean Dioscoro Umali of the U.P. College of Agriculture.

The President also received Gov. Ignacio Santiago of Bulacan, Mayor Guillermo Sanchez of Butuan City, Joseph Estrada of San Juan, Rizal, and NAWASA General Manager Antonio Menor.

Meanwhile, the President, in a speech read by Assistant Executive Secretary Gilberto Duavit at the opening of the 10th annual convention of the Confederation of Government Employes Organizations (COGEO) in Baguio City, said that he will support the organization’s efforts to amend the Civil Service Act toward further boosting and strengthening the merit system.

The President affirmed that he will continue to “fight for the standardization of the salaries of all government employees toward the total “eradication of discrimination in salaries and benefits in. all other matters, among the employees of the civil service.”

Pointing out that as civil servants, the terms and conditions of their employment are not subject to collective bargaining, he said that the law which’ denies the right to strike to government employees provides security of employment, “a right not available to employees outside the civil service.”

President's Week in Review: June 27 - July 3, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

June 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS focused his attention on desk work, receiving mostly only provincial leaders and officials who came, to discuss urgent state business.

He, therefore, received few private callers. The only private group who called was that composed of three visiting Russian scholars.

Later, he received former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong and his brother, former Rep. Francisco Sumulong.

Two members of Congress came to consult the President on certain problems, namely, Senators Wenceslao Lagumbay and Salvador Laurel.

The provincial leaders who called included Gov. Murphy Sangkula, Rep. Indanan Anni, both from Sulu, as well as a number of municipal mayors of that province.

The President also discussed local matters, including those on education, with Gov. Linang Mandangan of Lanao del Sur; and Mayor Hilarion Ramiro of Ozamis City.

The President pointed out that his approval of House Bill No. 18717, which sets aside ₱38,187,940, will expand educational services throughout the country.

The new law authorizes the organization of 8,700; extension classes, for which ₱31,450,500 of the total appropriation had been earmarked.

The three Russian visitors came to Malacañang to pay their respects to the President. On meeting them, the President invited the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, to meet the visitors as well, saying that the First Lady was keenly interested in promoting cultural activities.

The Russian visitors were Dr. Alexander Maloy Philippovich, Madame Yulia Levtonova Olegovna, and Dr. Evgeny Ivanov.

During the call, the President and the First Lady received gifts from the Russians, among them a book of paintings and a set of watercolors depicting Russian scenes and life.

The First Couple in turn presented the three visitors with copies of the President's biography, written by Hartzell Spence; their autographed pictures, and other tokens of the trio's visit here.

Accompanying the Russian were Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, and Reps. Carmelo Barbero and Constantino Navarro, and Josefina Barbero, daughter of Rep. Barbero, who will study at the University of Moscow.

While at work on official papers in his private study, the President approved the retirement of seven brigadier generals, upon the recommendation of Defense Secretary Ernesto Mata and Gen. Manuel Yan, Armed Forces chief of staff.

Those retired were Brigadier Generals Ruben Maglaya, Philippine Army commander; Sergio Isada, commander of the 51st Engineer Brigade; Gonzalo Batac, first military area commander; Castor Buenaflor. AFP inspector general; Restituto Sarcos, fourth military area commander; Emilio Zerrudo, first PC zone commander, and Onofre T. Ramos, chief of the AFP Supply Center.

The retirees called on the President in the evening during which he thanked them “for their efficient and faithful service to the country.”

June 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS kept close to his office to polish off the week’s paper work and attend to other urgent state matters.

An unexpected break in the day’s routine concerns was a radio message received from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India who sent here “good wishes for a healthier prosperity” of the people and country as she flew over the Philippines enroute to Singapore from Tokyo.

Among, other actions today, the President proclaimed July 14-20 as National Science and Technology Week, to focus attention on the need of enlarging the role of science in national development.

He also issued orders to the Parks and Wildlife Office to ban hunting in four additional areas in Mindoro, primarily to insure the conservation of the diminished herds of tamaraw, as well as to preserve other valuable Philippine wildlife.

The President did not receive any callers, preferring to devote his full time to desk work since he is scheduled to leave for a five-day provincial trip.

June 29—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children Imee, Bongbong and Irene left for Tacloban City on board the RPS 777 a little past 10 a.m.

Before leaving, the President asked Vice-President Fernando Lopez to hold office at the former’s Malacañang study, to attend to routine business, and also receive his callers.

The President at the same time sent a wire to Pope Paul VI congratulating him on the 6th anniversary of his coronation as Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church.

In his message, sent by cable to the Vatican, the President said that “it is our prayer that even as you strive for a renewal of the Church, your words counselling mankind to come together in peace, justice and brotherhood under God will be heard and heeded.”

The President is expected in Tacloban City about noon Monday. He and his family have been invited to be special guests at the Feast of the Sto. Niño de Tacloban, they being the city’s adopted children.

At last year’s festivities, the President presided as the “Hermano Mayor.” This year’s hermano is Finance Secretary Eduardo Z. Romualdez.

June 30—

PRESIDENT and Mrs. MARCOS arrived in Tacloban City on their annual pilgrimage to pay homage to the city’s patron saint, the Sto. Niño de Tacloban.

Accompanied by their children, Imee, Bongbong and Irene, the President and First Lady landed at the city wharf about 4:30 p.m. aboard the RPS 777 after arriving in time to join Tacloben in the colorful fluvial parade which started at San Juanico Strait.

The fluvial parade was composed of numerous vessel of various types and sizes. At the head of the traditional procession of seacraft was a gaily decorated launch carrying the holy image of the patron saint.

Aboard the launch was a group of local officials. Finance Secretary Eduardo Z. Romualdez, the “Hermano Mayor” of this year’s festivities in the city, led the parade.

The President was accorded full military honors upon debarking at the wharf. He and his family then joined the procession which snaked through the city streets, terminating two hours later at the Sto. Niño shrine in the city cathedral.

Earlier the President directed Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to take steps insuring that government operations are not disrupted while the national budget for the new fiscal year pends formal approval.

The President informed the budget commissioner that he had already gone over the general features of the budget bill approved only last Saturday by Congress and that he has approved it in principle.

The President pointed out that since the printing of the bill cannot be finished before the new fiscal year takes effect July 1, the Budget Commission must take appropriate action to insure that government operations continue without any hitch.

Meanwhile, in a speech read for him by Vice-President Fernando Lopez, at the opening ceremonies of the ISSA third regional conference for Asia and Oceania, the President said that despite the differences in approach and ideology, Asian nations ultimately share the aim of alleviating the human condition.

The President stated that the peace for the world lies in the “improvement of the living conditions of the laboring, teeming millions of Asia.”

One of the keys to world peace, he continued, is social security. “Upon air of us lies the burden of establishing not only the confidence but also the effectiveness of the labor systems in our respective societies.” (See pp. 6838-A to 6838-D for full text of the President’s speech.)

July 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS landed in Maasin, Southern Leyte early in the morning after sailing overnight from Tacloban City aboard the RPS 777 to fulfill his promise to join in the celebration of the 9th anniversary of the province.

The President was later joined by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who flew by helicopter from Olot in Tolosa, Leyte.

The President also met local officials to inquire into the current problems of the province.

He checked into the progress of various on-going projects in the provinces for which funds from the national government have been released with the aim of hastening the development of the relatively new province.

Accompanied by Gov. Salvacion Yñiguez and Rep. Nicanor Yñiguez, the President saw a newly completed ₱400,000 bridge, the construction of which has for years pended despite the fact that it is considered a vital link between the capital town and the rest of the province.

Gov. Yñiguez showed the President other projects in various stages of construction, like the provincial hospital and a number of roads being concreted.

The President examined the plans of the projected ₱800,000 provincial capitol. The provincial governor is presently holding office in an old building which used to house the extension office in Maasin of the Bureau of Fisheries.

The Presidential ship dropped anchor at Maasin at 7.30 a.m. A fleet of gaily decorated boats escorted the ship as it steamed toward the capital town.

Taking one of the ship's motorboats, the President then landed right on the beach where huge crowd received him, and tagged along to the cathedral for Te Deum.

After a tour of the various construction projects, the President met with national, provincial and barrio officials at the local memorial athletic stadium, where the First Lady landed in a helicopter. The First Couple then greeted the people together.

The people, in turn, sang "Happy Birthday" to the First Lady.

The presidential party reboarded the Navy ship at 2 p.m. for the return trip to Tolosa, Leyte, where Mrs. Marcos intends to spend her birthday with relatives and friends.

July 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS started the day by attending a Mass with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, in connection with the latter's birthday.

Friends and relatives of the First Couple, both resident of Tolosa and coming from Manila and elsewhere, as well as public officials who arrived in Barrio Olot to felicitate the First Lady, also attended the Mass.

Apart from playing host to the guests who came to extend best wishes to the First Lady, the President found time to confer with officials, both local and national, and to do some paperwork brought by aides from Malacañang.

Notable among the officials who took the opportunity to confer with the President were Vice President Fernando Lopez and Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, who reported on his recent trip abroad.

In his talk with Secretary Romulo, the President also discussed the forthcoming visit of President Richard Nixon sometime this month.

The President also conferred with General Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff; Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief; and Commodore. Ismael Lomibao, PN flag officer in command.

Other officials the President talked with included Justice Secretary Juan Ponce Enrile, Labor Secretary Blas F. Ople, Land Authority Gov. Conrado Estrella, GSIS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, and PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr.

The President also took up local and congressional matters with Govs. Jose Sering of Surigao del Norte, Rene Espina of Cebu, and Jose Roño of Western Samar; Reps. Marcelino Veloso, House majority floorleader; Reps. Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte, Fernando Veloso of Western Samar, Artemio Mate and Salud Parrefio of Leyte.

Shortly after lunch, the President rested briefly, then in mid-afternoon-started going over official papers.

July 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of his time conferring with officials of Samar, whom he had scheduled for conferences on urgent problems of the province.

Apart from this, he studied reports and acted on state matters which required his immediate attention.

The President, on the eve of Republic Day and Philippine-American Friendship Day issued the following message to the nation;

“I believe that to many Filipinos, July 4 this year, which we celebrate as Philippine Republic Day, is more meaningful because of the energetic strides made in recent years to mold our young Republic closer to the image we envisioned for the nation which emerged in 1946.

“Our gains today is properly attributable to the “achieving Filipino,” the productive, well-motivated, and devoted citizen who will ultimately move our nation beyond mere survival, toward the fulfillment of our hopes for a better life, now and in the generations to come.

“Even as July 4 is celebrated in the United States as its own Independence Day, the Filipino people look forward to many more years of close cooperation and comradeship with the American people, born out of respect and understanding, and a deep devotion to common ideals and aspiration. Truly, Philippine-American friendship which we emphasize also in our observance of July 4 has never been so sturdy and so filled with new promise than it is today.

“This milestone in our history will remain meaningful to us only if we keep faith with the second Republic founded on this day 23 years ago, and prove true to the rare friendship which sets apart from the rest of the world the Filipino and American peoples.”

Early in the morning, the President officiated at the inauguration of the San Juanico golf course.

While still at the golf course the President met with Manila newsmen who were with him in the current trip.

Toward noon, the President conferred with Samar officials headed by Gov. Jose Roño and Rep. Fernando Veloso.

Matters taken up centered on the province’s urgent needs, particularly in the area of infrastructure and community development.

In the course of his conference, the President ordered all public works and highway engineers to open their books to municipal mayors.

The President took this action as a safeguard against the misuse of funds allocated for construction of feeder roads and other projects, particularly against the fact that in the past such funds have been used to promote election campaigns.

He asked the highway and public works engineers to give municipal mayors complete access to their records, including payrolls and other expenditures of funds.

The President devoted the whole afternoon in paper work, in the course of which he dispatched a cablegram to President Nixon felicitating him and the American people on the occasion of their independence day.

His message to President Nixon follows:

“It is my great pleasure to express the hope of the Filipino people that your Independence Day today will mark an even greater era of progress and prosperity for the United States, and that our country and America will remain staunch partners in the search for peace and the cause of freedom. The special ties our two nations value is in fact celebrated here this day as Philippine-American Friendship Day. Let me extend as well my personal best wishes to you and your countrymen.”

In the evening, the President boarded the presidential yacht RPS 777 and sailed on to Mindanao where he is to fulfill engagements starting tomorrow.

President's Week in Review: July 4-8, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

July 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, landed at Tandag, Surigao del Sur at 9 a.m. after an oversight voyage from Tolosa, Leyte aboard the RPS 777.

Looking refreshed and hale, the First Couple acknowledged the warm reception given by a sizable crowd composed of local people and delegations from the two Surigao provinces.

Leading the welcomers were Gov. Recaredo Castillo and Rep. Gregorio Murillo of Surigao del Sur, and Gov. Jose Sering and Rep. Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte. Also with the welcomers was Cebu Gov. Rene Espina, who is also the acting secretary of public works and communications,

After the Te Deum at the town church the President motored to Barrio Tago, some seven kilometers away, where he inaugurated the new 88-km. highway. It links the capital town of Tandag to 10 municipalities which in the past were accessible only by means of small watercraft.

The new road was started in 1966 as a subsidiary of the projected Pan-Philippine Highway. Built at a cost of ₱2.7 million, the road cuts across vast tracts of virgin land the development of which is now possible, and is seen as a future boost to agricultural production in the region.

Returning to Tandag shortly before noon, the President conferred with national, provincial, municipal and barrio officials. During the conference, he was presented with a plaque of appreciation "for making rural development the foundation of his administration."

The President also administered the oath to a number of mayors and councilors of the two Surigao provinces, formerly with the opposition who formally affiliated with the Nacionalista Party.

After a late lunch at the town hall, the President and the First Lady returned to the ship anchored about a mile from the shore for the trip to Butuan City.

Among those in the presidential party were Gov. Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales, Gov. Eduardo Cojuangco of Tarlac and PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda.

Also aboard were Ambassador and Mrs. Luis Gonzales, who were complimented by the group on their wedding anniversary.

Earlier, the President sent a wire congratulating Ricardo Cuenca, saying that his feat is "in the tradition of the Filipino spirit of winning."

The 34-year old Parañaque (Rizal) jeepney driver reached the Luneta seawall at approximately 7:45 o'clock in the morning after swimming continuously for 47 hours, starting at Fortune Island off Nasugbu, Batangas.

July 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS congratulated the people of Butuan City for the many projects they had initiated and completed by force of civic spirit alone, without government assistance.

The President was impressed by the number of projects completed and still being undertaken in the city and in many parts of Agusan.

He was particularly impressed by the fact-that the completion of the projects were accelerated by contributions from citizens and other private individuals.

These projects include the cementing of streets, the establishment of parks and playgrounds, which he noted was in line with the beautification program of the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

The President said that the example set by the people in the region is “worthy of emulation by other cities and provinces in the-country.”

He said that “people who can initiate and carry out projects without waiting for government assistance deserve every encouragement.”

The President and the First Lady received a rousing welcome on arrival in Butuan. Hundreds of people jammed the small wharf at Nasipit, where the presidential party landed at 8:30 a.m., from the RPS 777.

From that port, the presidential party motored to Butuan City, where the President conferred with national, provincial, municipal and barrio officials of the two Agusan provinces.

Meanwhile, the First Lady inaugurated two parks in the city, one in front of the capitol building, and the other in front of the St. Joseph Cathedral, where Te Deum was sung in honor of the First Couple.

An impromptu rally developed after the President noticed the enthusiasm of the sizable crowd which kept milling around him and the First Lady. He then decided to address the people, at Freedom Park which was finished just a few days ago.

Civic organizations rushed the completion of the park, in time for the President’s visit.

The President met the local official at the city’s gymnasium, where the presidential party, also had lunch. After the meeting, the President and the First Lady returned to Nasipit. Aboard the RPS 777, the President had another round of conferences with officials.

In the evening, the President sailed for Cagayan de Oro.

July 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and the First Lady arrived in Cagayan de Oro City about 8:30 a.m. aboard the RPS 777 following an overnight voyage from Butuan City.

The First Couple motored to Camp 12 in Manolo Fortich, Bukidnon, where the President met with national, provincial, municipal and barrio officials of the province.

While there he was presented with a scroll of gratitude unanimously approved by provincial officials and barrio captains “for dignifying the participation of the rural communities in the overall development of the country.”

Enroute to Bukidnon, the President inaugurated a marker at the boundary between that province and Misamis Oriental and a number Marcos-type schoolhouses set up along the way in time for the opening of the new school year.

After meeting the Bukidnon officials, the President motored back to Cagayan de Oro where he inspected the experimental farms of the Javier University college of agriculture.

He was accompanied by Senator Emmanuel Pelaez, Gov. Pedro Roa of Misamis Oriental, Gov. Carlos Fortich of Bukidnon, Mayor Jesus Serina of Cagayan de Oro, as well as officials from Misamis Occidental.

July 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, were accorded one of the most rousing receptions of their weeklong trip to the Visayas and Mindanao, upon arrival in Tagbilaran City.

In spite of the slight drizzle which developed in the morning over Tagbilaran and persisted throughout the eight-hour visit there, a big crowd of people from all walks of life showed up for the First Couple's visit, and followed them wherever they went.

Accompanied by Gov. Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales, Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, who is the concurrent secretary of public works and communications Gov. Carlos Fortich of Bukidnon, and PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, the President and the First Lady arrived at Tagbilaran City 8:30 a.m., after an overnight voyage from Cagayan de Oro City.

Following Te Deum sang at the city cathedral, the President's party proceeded to the city athletic stadium where he met, after the rally, with national, provincial, municipal and barrio officials headed by Gov. Lino Chatto, and Reps. Natalio Castillo, Jose Zafra, and Teodora Galagar.

The RPS 777 bearing the President's party shoved off at 3 p.m. from Tagbilaran City for the return trip to Manila.

On the way to Bohol, and shortly after weighing anchor, the President worked on state-papers.

Among other actions, he designated Finance Undersecretary Pedro Almanzor acting secretary of finance, in the absence of Secretary Eduardo Romualdez who has a mission abroad to accomplish.

He also, studied reports and followed up on other urgent administration concerns.

July 8—

ABOARD THE RPS 777, President Marcos, spent most of the day in his cabin where he went over state papers, studied reports, and anticipated the immediate concerns awaiting him at Malacañang.

He also had a round of conferences with officials aboard the ship, and during the day had an informal huddle with newsmen covering him.

In an informal assessment of his ten-day trip to the Eastern Visayas and Mindanao, he said that it was fruitful on both the political and the government fronts.

In the last ten days, he covered a vast arc of towns and provinces, from Leyte to Bukidnon, to Agusan, to Bohol. He visited barrios and on-going projects, inaugurated completed projects, conferred with local officials at all levels, and carried on a dialogue with the people at public rallies.

He said that from his observations, the people are on the side of the administration program of government and will handily support his bid for reelection.

He also stated that from his assessment of local situations, he came away with helpful ideas of expediting rural and general development, and adding to the projects now being pushed, new initiatives designed to enlarge, the gains already made in improving the lives of the majority of the people.

July 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS concentrated on state papers in his private study, as he caught up with his desk work after a, ten-day trip-to the South.

He received no outside visitors, except officials with urgent business to take up, and aides with whom he consulted as he worked.

By telephone, he talked with Senate President Gil J. Puyat and OEG Administrator Constancio Castañeda, who consulted him on party matters. The President was informed of the decision to postpone the NP national directorate meeting to July 21, to give enough time for the directorate members to come to Manila.

July 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to work in seclusion in his private study, as he coped with an unceasing flow of state papers.

As usual, he conferred with aides but received only officials with urgent official matters to take up with him.

Among other actions, he:

1. Proclaimed July 11 an official public holiday in Valenzuela, Bulacan, so that the townmates of revolutionary hero Dr. Pio Valenzuela can celebrate properly the illustrious Filipino's centenary.
2. Ordered LTC Commissioner Romeo Edu to expedite the licensing of motorized tricycles used as public conveyances, and if possible allow them to ply routes without franchises.

In the evening, the President left his desk work to address the inaugural meeting and induction of officers of the Manila Rotary Club, at the-Manila Hotel.

In his speech, he emphasized the need for Filipinos to support the efforts of the administration to affirm the dignity of the Philippines as a free country and to advance the efforts toward progress and prosperity.

President's Week in Review: July 11-17, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

July 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to work mostly in his study uninterrupted by visitors, while consulting with administration leaders on various problems.

Among other concerns, he studied reports on important government programs and made decisions on urgent matters. He -also announced the replacement of Acting NAWASA General Manager Antonio Menor by Brig. Gen. Sergio Isada (ret.), former commander of the AFP engineer brigade.

Menor has long been on sick leave after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage.

The President also issued a proclamation, setting aside July 14-20 as Blood Donors' Week, to honor the volunteers who are the mainstay of the Philippine National Red Cross Blood Program. The special week highlights the foundation anniversary of the PNRC on July 17.

He worked alone at the desk through the evening, but remained available to other leaders for consultations.

Meanwhile, the President asked the Filipinos to be guided by the examples of illustrious Filipinos like Dr. Pio Valenzuela, a founding member of the Katipunan, in brief remarks at ceremonies in Valenzuela, Bulacan commemorating the centenary of the patriot after whom his hometown was named.

In a short speech in Pilipino read by Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople, the President said that in meeting present challenges the nation can take inspiration from the country's heroic past.

The valuable legacy of the Filipino, race, he said, may be gleaned from the numerous events which had glorified Filipino ideals, from the valor of Lapu-Lapu to the other heroic acts of great Filipinos.

The challenges and difficulties facing the country, he said, can be overcome if "we remember always that our forefathers made great sacrifices and even gave up their lives to free our country from bondage."

July 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS bent closely to the desk work at hand, leaving it only once during the day when he addressed the closing session of the joint seminar put up by the FAO, ECAFE, and ILO, at the WHO building on United Nations Avenue.

As is his wont on weekends, the President confined his workday to studying state papers and otherwise doing desk work. He received only officials with urgent matter's to take up, but consulted freely with aides.

He motored to the WHO building in the morning for his speaking engagement, accompanied by Land Authority Gov, Conrado Estrella, and Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief.

In his speech, the President emphasized the importance of land reform in Asian countries, as an essential agent in effecting change and in buttressing national stability. He projected the Philippines' own efforts in this field, asserting that substantial gains have been made in land reform since its initial and limited; implementation by the past administration.

From the seminar, the President returned straight to Malacañang where he resumed his paper work.

Early in the evening, the President, along with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, left for the Plaza Restaurant in Makati, to attend the celebration of the silver wedding anniversary of Colonel and Mrs. Fabian Ver. Col. Ver is the commander of the Presidential Guard Battalion:

July 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent a quiet weekend, devoting most of his time in his study.

He devoted the early morning hours to reading then joined the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children, Imee, Bongbong and Irene, to inquire into the children's studies.

The only officials who saw the President included Assistant Executive Secretaries Jose J. Leido, Jr. and Gilberto Duavit, and Dr. Guillermo de Vega of the Executive Office.

In the evening, the President and the family hear Mass at the Palace chapel.

The President worked on state papers until late at night.

July 14

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a full day of conferences and visitors as well as of continuing desk work.

Among other actions, he formed a committee to investigate the charges of malversation against Licerio Sendaydiego, provincial treasurer of Pangasinan, and several others; extended the fund drive of the Elks Cerebral Palsy project; and asked the Department of Justice to keep hands off the case of Senator Sergio Osmeña, Jr., who is facing graft charges and others, in order to avoid any taint of political persecution. The President conferred with a number of top officials, including Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Manuel Collantes, Assistant Executive Secretary Gilberto Duavit and Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave; Immigration Commissioner Edmundo Reyes, Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, and Governor Conrado Estrella of the Land Authority.

Other/ callers were:

1. Senator Alejandro Almendras, Rep. Constancio Maglana and Gov. Leopoldo Lopez of Davao Oriental; Gov. Verulo Boiser and Vice Gov. Geeilia A. de la Paz of Davao del Norte.

4. Rep. Andres Cosalan of Mt. Province and Councilors Jose Florendo and Ruben Ayson of Baguio City.
5. Luis Narciso and Mac Fabian, national chairman and executive secretary, respectively, of the Farmers Agrarian Reform Movement (FARM), who were accompanied by Dean Jeremias Montemayor, president of the Federation of Free Farmers; and Chairman Raoul Beloso of the Small Farmers Commission.

They discussed the means of speeding up the implementation of land reform.

6. Marinduque mayors headed by Dominador Leonida, president of the Mayors League.
7. Eastern Samar mayors accompanied by Rep. Felipe Abrigo.
8. Mayor Jose Luciano of Makati, Rizal, who was accompanied by Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido.

The President issued a proclamation extending the national educational and fund campaign of the Elks Cerebral Palsy Project, Inc. up to September 30 this year. The organization was originally authorized to conduct a drive from May 1 to June 30, under Proclamation No. 520 issued on February 12, 1969.

The President also ordered the Presidential Investigation Committee headed by Dr. Gaudencio Garcia to inquire immediately into the charges. against the officials of the Games and Amusements Board filed by the Philippine Racing Club, Inc., by one Carlos H. Reyes, and by the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office.

The charges range from fixing of races, falsification, usurpation .of official functions, oppressive exercise of authority, gross insubordination and wilful violation of a lawful order.

July 15—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had several conferences, notably with, top Nacionalista leaders headed by Senate President Gil J. Puyat, NP president, during which the NP leaders said the national directorate meeting of the NP will be held on July 27, in deference to the crowded schedule of officials just before and during the visit of US President Richard Nixon.

Others at the meeting with NP leaders were Secretary Constancio Castaneda, NP secretary-general; Senator Alejandro Almendras, Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, and Gov. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal.

Meanwhile, in between, conferences the President worked at his desk. Among other actions, he ordered the Department of Foreign Affairs and the Bureau of Immigration to allow the entry of Larry Tractman, an American who seeks to operate a business here. The US national was denied entry by officials of the two offices ostensibly because of derogatory information on the American entrepreneur's previous business activities here; as well as directed the Department of National Defense to begin paying veterans' claims for certain/benefits amounting to ₱5000 plus.

The President also reenacted the signing of two bills which interested parties requested him to do. The bills are the amended backpay measure,, which now extends benefits to guerrillas previously unrecognized; and. the bill establishing Mandaue City in Cebu.

Notable callers during the day included Princess Tarhata Kiram, accompanied by Sultan Mohammad Esmail, Kiram of Sulu; and a., group of officials from Southern Leyte, accompanied by Rep. Nicanor Yñiguez. The President conferred with the group- on problems in the province.

July 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had as usual a schedule crowded with a variety of activities, including a television interview with a Japanese team of newsmen and a meeting with Senator Ambrosio Padilla who came with provincial political leaders.

Other activities included receiving a steady flow of callers, sitting down for conferences, and doing the usual indispensable paper work. Again, he reenacted for interested parties the signing of a bill.

Early in the morning, the President received Senator Padilla who called along with a group of .his political supporters from the Liberal Party.

Those who came with the Senator were former Governor Alfredo Bantug; Mayors Gavino Lim of Liloan, Edgarino Espina of Maasin, Leonor Galdo of Macrohon, Maximino Tidalgo, Jr. of Malitbog and Perfecto A. Lim of Pintuyan, all from the province of Southern Leyte.

At 9:30 a.m., the President sat down with representatives of the Nippon Hosokai of Japan for a televised interview.

Working on state papers in-between callers, the President, among other actions, proclaimed July 23 as Mabini Day in the province of Batangas and the cities of Batangas and Lipa, to give people in those places ample opportunity to honor the Sublime Paralytic, on his birthday and signed 12 ad interim appointments to various posts in the government.

He also reenacted later in the morning the signing into law of House Bill No. 2902, which sets up the charter creating Dipolog City.

Witnessing the signing were Gov. Virginio Lacaya and Rep. Alberto Ubay of Zamboanga del Norte, Dipolog Mayor Felicisimo Herrera, Provincial Engineer Conrado Romero, Solicitor Carlos W. Ortega, and Segundo Cortes, provincial social welfare director.

Among other callers were former Senator Estanislao Fernandez; a delegation from Agusan headed by Rep. Jose Aquino and Gov. Consuelo Calo; a delegation from Cotabato led by Datu Abdullah Sangki; Rep. Lamberto Macias of Negros Oriental; Governors Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales and Vicente Cerillos of Zamboanga del Sur.

July 17—

PRESIDENT MARCOS helicoptered to Nieves, San Leonardo, Nueva Ecija early in the morning where he was guest of honor at the mid-year conference and 17th anniversary of the Philippine Rural Reconstruction Movement.

The President, accompanied by PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Gov. Eduardo Cojuangco of Tarlac, Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief; and Brig. Gen. Hanz Menzi, his senior aide, arrived at the PRRM center at 10:45 a.m., after a 35-minute flight.

The President's party was met on landing by Chairman Manuel Manahan of the Central Luzon Study Commission, who is also the PRRM president; Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio Feliciano, Rep. Angel Concepcion of Nueva Ecija and Mayor Tagumpay Nagano of San Leonardo.

He was given full military honors by a guard of honor. On emerging from the helicopter, enthusiastic welcomers carried him on their shoulders.

At the PRRM center, the President greeted the rural workers who came from various parts of the country to participate in the PRRM fete.

Among the honor guests were some 27 barrio captains from Batanes province, the northernmost region of the Philippines.

Prominent among others present were Dean Conrado Benitez, chairman of the PRRM Board of Trustees; Senator Helena Benitez, and Brig. Gen. Felizardo Tanabe, First PC zone commander.

During the ceremonies, the President conferred service awards to 32 rural reconstruction workers. Radio Station DZCI of Cabanatuan City was among the awardees.

Secretaries Maceda and Feliciano were also special awardees, the first receiving a PRRM plaque of gratitude, while the DSW chief received the Order-of Sikatuna, rank of Lakan, for distinguished service in the promotion of rural reconstruction.

Chairman Manahan rendered a report on the accomplishments of PRRM, While also pinpointing the movement's problems.

To dramatize public support for the movement, President Marcos announced he was giving ₱5,000 from his personal funds as donation to PRRM, and further pledged government assistance in the amount of ₱100,000 to the movement “if the law allows it.”

The President joined the guests at a luncheon- after the ceremonies. He then flew back to Malacañang at 1:50 p.m.

Before flying to Nueva Ecija, the President directed the People’s Home-site and Housing Corporation (PHHC) to pay the salaries of its employees immediately.

He issued the-order through Assistant Executive Secretary Flores Bayot, upon; receiving a wire in the morning from Armando Malay, president of the PHHC Supervisors’ Union, reporting the non-payment of employees’ salaries since last month.

He told PHHC General Manager Sebastian Santiago to pay all employees’ salaries up to the 15th of this month.

The President worked on state papers in the afternoon and through the evening.

President's Week in Review: July 18-24, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

July 18—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received a new ambassador to the Philippines, attended to everyone listed on his official schedule of callers, and capped the day with; a speech at the 10th anniversary celebration of the Joint Legislative-Executive Tax Commission in the evening, as guest of honor.

At the Pangarap guesthouse this morning, the President conferred briefly with DBP Chairman Gregorio Licaros and PAL President Benigno Toda, Jr., and later with Central Bank Gov. Alfonso Calalang.

A little past 10 a.m., the President crossed the Pasig river to the Palace where he received the credentials of Ambassador Bob J. L. Lebacqz, the new envoy of Belgium to the Philippines.

After the rites, the President conferred with PANAMIN Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr.; Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Labor Secretary Bias F. Ople and Assistant Executive Secretary Jose J. Leido, Jr.

The President, then met with a delegation of local officials from Capiz, led by Gov. Cornelio Villareal, Jr. and Vice-Gov. Carolina N. Bayot. Also at the meeting was Assistant Executive Secretary Fibres Bayot, husband of the vice governor.

The Capiz officials informed the President that both Nacionalistas and Liberals in their province will close ranks to support his re-election bid.

Another group who called to pledge solid support was composed of the officers of the Manila Market Vendors Association, accompanied by Mrs. Polly Cayetano, president of the Chamber of Filipino Retailers.

Local officials, all Liberals, from the hometown of former President Macapagal also called to offer the President their support. The group from Lubao, Pampanga, was headed by Mayor Salvador B. Dimson.

Among the President's other callers were Senator Ambrosio Padilla; former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong and his brother Ex-Rep. Francisco Sumulong; Rep. Nicanor Yñiguez of Southern Leyte who came with former Gov. Alfonso Bantug, a Liberal; and a delegation from Zamboanga City led by Mayor Joaquin F. Enriquez, Jr. also a Liberal.

Other callers received by the President were:

1. Rep. Pablo Roman, Gov. Guillermo Arcenas and former Rep. Jose Nuguid of Bataan.
2. Gov. Eduardo Cojuangco of Tarlac and Mayor Eugenio Suarez of Angeles City.
3. Reps. Luis Hora, Ali Dimaporo and Pedro Medalla. Rep. Dimaporo was accompanied by Gov. Linang Mandangan of Lanao del Sur and Mayor Omar Diattalan of Marawi City; while Rep. Medalla brought along Mayors Apolinario Zoleta of Abra de Hog and Nestor Abeleda of Sta. Cruz, Mindoro.
4. A delegation of leaders from Cotabato led by former Rep. and Mrs. Blah Sinsuat.
5. Governors Virginio Lacaya of Zamboanga del Norte and Henry Regalado of Misamis Occidental; and Mayor Faustino Dy of Cauayan, Isabela.

July 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS contrary to his week-end norm received a full quota of callers, mostly delegations. Still, he put in enough desk work in order to clear urgent official business.

This morning, the President received a delegation of mayors, both

Nacionalistas and Liberals, from Cavite who apprised him of the priority needs of their municipalities especially in community development.

Accompanied by former Gov. Dominador Camerino and Provincial Board Member Juanito Remulla, the mayors who saw the President were Ernesto T. Genuino of General Trias, Calixto Enrique of Rosario, Telesforo Unas of Maragondon, Benigno Guinto of Bacoor, Macario Pena of Naic;

Jose Jamir of Imus, Eusebio Leachon of Aniadeo, Adelardo Rosanes of Alfonso, Fulgencio Guevara of Indang, Timoteo Boealan of Tanza, Cesar Casal of Carmona: and Florentino Bautista of Kawit.

After the meeting with the Cavite mayors, the President received at the Executive Building some 800 provincial, municipal and barrio officials of Tarlac led by Gov. Eduardo Cojuangco, Jr.

The Tarlac officials reported to the President on the progress of various infrastructure and community development projects, for which they expressed thanks.

Comparing the national aid given and local achievements made during the present and previous administrations, the officials said that what had been accomplished by the present administration for the province in three and a half years dwarfed the combined records of previous administrations, particularly in infrastructure and public works projects, notably in cement and asphalt roads, bridges and feeder roads.

Both NP and LP mayors present were one in crediting the provincial government and the administration for the considerable improvements in their localities.

In mid-afternoon, the President received the officers of the National Congress of Union in the Sugar Industry of the Philippine (NACUSIP).

The NACUSIP officials petitioned the President for his help in assigning more equitable quotas to new or small sugarcane planters.

They also asked the President's intercession toward the adoption and wider implementation of the social amelioration program in the sugar industry, to the end that ₱3 per picul of the net share of sugar centrals on domestic sugar production be given to workers as cash bonuses, beginning with crop year 1968-69.

The President said that the challenge of providing food for the expanding population of the Philippines must be taken up through accelerated development. The President urged Filipino scientists and technologists to do more and better if this nation is to move forward, stressing particularly the need for aggressive action toward meeting the problems of food population, which he said can be squarely met by science and technology.

In a speech read for him in the afternoon by Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz, at the ceremonies ending National Science and Technology Week, held at the Manila Hotel, the President said that the key to development is science and technology.

Citing the coincidence between the Apollo 11 voyage and the observance here of Science and Technology Week, he said that this epochal event enhances the purpose of the observance which is to promote science consciousness among Our people. (See pp. 7663-7666 for full text of the President's speech.)

Among other actions, the President proclaimed Monday, July 21, a special public holiday in the Philippines to enable the people to witness the historic landing on the moon of Apollo 11.

In his proclamation, the President said that the “people of the Philippines share with the rest of the world the jubilation” over this historic event.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, honored at dinner Princess Butha Dedi and her party.

The Princess is the daughter of Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia.

July 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met with top leaders of the Nacionalista Party with whom he discussed preparations for the N.P. national directorate meeting set for July 27 at the Manila Hotel.

At 9:30 a.m., the President received Rodolfo G. Tupas, editor of the Sunday Times Magazine, who interviewed him at the Pangarap guesthouse.

Among those present at the meeting were Senate President Gil J. Puyat also NP president, Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo Tolentino, Senate President Protempore Jose Roy, Senators Alejandro Almendras and Jose W. Diokno, OEC Administrator Constancio Castaneda, Governors Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal, Rafael Palmares of Iloilo and Benjamin Romualdez of Leyte; RCA Chairman Alfredo Montelibano, Sr., Mayor Leroy Brown of Basilan City, former SWA Administrator Francisco E. F. Remotigue, and J. Antonio Araneta; and Legislative Secretary Ariel Bocobo.

Returning to Malacañang the President then transmitted to Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile for consideration the petition of the Cebu Lawyers League seeking the transfer of the pending graft charges against -Senator Sergio Osmeña, Jr., from the Cebu Court of First Instance to the Cebu Circuit Criminal Court.

The Cebu Lawyers League, through Emerito Calderon and Board Member

Pablo Garcia, had asked for the transfer of the case in order to speed up its trial.

He also sent congratulations to Miss Gloria Diaz, who was selected “Miss Universe” in the beauty tilt held at Miami Beach, Florida, U.S.A.

The President’s message follows:

“The Filipino people are very much elated and proud of your winning the Miss Universe contest. You brought honor not only to yourself but to your country as well. On their behalf and our own the First Lady and I extend to you our sincerest congratulations.”

Miss Diaz comes from Paranaque, Rizal. She won the Miss Philippine tilt this year.

This was the second time in five years that a Filipino won in an International beauty contest. The first was when Miss Gemma Cruz (no Mrs. Antonio Araneta) won the “Miss International” title in 1964.

At 6 p.m., the President was interviewed by Carl Eowan.

Later in the evening, the President and his family heard Mass at the Malacañang chapel.

July 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was virtually glued to the television set as he followed the progress of Apollo 11, and closely took in the historic landing on the moon.

Starting his watch late last night, along with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their three children, Irene, Imee and Bongbong, the President was still going strong throughout most of the morning up to early afternoon.

In an interview over the phone with local media men, the President complimented the local networks for the clear telecast, and expressed the hope that the US will, also lead in bringing men together in enduring peace.

In a message he issued shortly after Astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin, Jr. touched down on the moon, the President hailed the space feat as a; triumphant milestone in the conquest of space which augurs greater achievements in the broadening of man's vision and the fulfillment of a larger destiny."

At about half past 1 p.m., the President received Ambassador Ernesto Lagdameo, Philippine envoy to Washington, with whom he discussed the preparations for the visit here of President Richard Nixon on Saturday, July 26.

Ambassador Lagdameo planed in from the United States expressly to help in the arrangements for the US President's visit.

After a brief rest in the afternoon, the President worked on state papers.

In the evening, he motored to the Manila Hilton where he addressed the convention of Filipino businessmen.

July 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS restricted his callers, in order to study position papers relating, to his talks with U.S. President Richard M. Nixon during the latter's visit here come the weekend.

The President also sought to participate-more fully in finalizing the preparations for the U.S. President's visit.

In any case, he was kept busy the whole morning by activities which included conferences with various national officials, among them Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez, PACD Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Highways Commissioner Baltazar Aquino and Chairman Gregorio Abad of the Reparations Commission.

In the afternoon, however, the President received provincial delegations; which chore kept him occupied until 4 p.m.

Gov. Carlos Fortich of Bukidnon saw the President on the expansion and improvement of the airport in Malaybalay, so that it can cope better with the increasing volume of air traffic in the region.

With the Bukidnon governor was Mayor Espiridion Abello of Talakag ho took his oath of affiliation to the Nacionalista Party before the resident.

Delegations of mayors also called to consult with the President on various improvement projects in their respective localities. Among the callers were the groups accompanied by Gov. Henry Regalado and Rep. William Chiongbian of Misamis Occidental; Gov. Tito Primicias of Pangasinan; Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo; and Princess Tarhata Kir am of Sulu. The President also found time to attend to some desk work. Among other official actions, the President:

1. Approved the request of Rep. Joaquin P. Roces, chairman of the Press Foundation of Asia, for the admission into the country of three journalists who will serve with their Filipino counterparts in that press body. Those given temporary permits were Tarzie Vittachi of Ceylon, Amitabha Chowdhury, of India and Alan B. Chalkley of England.

2. Authorized the retention of the savings of the office of the Presidential Assistant on Housing and Resettlement Agency, which will be used to maintain the roads and other improvements, as well as social services, in the Carmona resettlement community for squatters. Secretary Esteban Bernido recommended the retention of the savings for these purposes.

3. Approved the promotion of some 300 reserve AFP officers in various services, to fill vacancies in the officer ranks.

4. Proclaimed the period from August 1 to December 31 this year for fund raising campaign of the Girl Scouts of the Philippines.

July 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS again concentrated on conferences with various officials notably Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, on the preparations for the visit of US President Richard Nixon. The President continued reviewing position papers relating to the likely topics he may take up with President Nixon. He also looked into the arrangements for the American President and his official party, as well as for the sizable press corps which will cover the visit. Otherwise, the President worked on urgent state matters, confining himself to his private study for the purpose. He received no outside visitors, except a group of sugar industry leaders.

The only action mentioned by his office pertained to the directive issued to Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to conduct immediately rigid tests to ascertain whether Manila taxi companies are complying with the requirements set by the PSC in consideration of the hike in cab fares.

Mayor Romeo Guanzon of Bacolod City, who went to Malacanang in the company of sugar industry leaders took his oath of affiliation with the Nacionalista Party before the President.

Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Rep. Armando Gustilo of Negros Occidental, Roberto Benedicto, PNB president; Chairman Ramon Nolan of the Sugar Quota Administration, and Carlos Ledesma, president of the Federation of Sugarcane Planters of the Philippines. Earlier, the President signed Senate Bill No. 1046 (HB No. 19050), creating a fund for the payment of depositors in banks closed down by the Central Bank and prohibited from doing further business.

The sum of ₱15 million, as recommended by the Deposit Insurance Corporation, will be set aside by the Monetary Board from the profits of the Central Bank to institute the fund created under the new law.

As approved, the law also provides that payments shall not exceed ₱10,000 per individual depositor.

July 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS conferred with various officials and met with leaders of his party, while coping in-between with the inevitable paper work flowing to his desk.

Early in the morning, the President attended a meeting of the NP junta held at the Pangarap guesthouse in Malacañang Park. Among the decisions reached at this meeting, was the proclamation of NP national candidates, to be held in a centrally located city in the South, on July 31.

Present at the junta meeting were Senate President Gil J. Puyat, who is also the NP president; Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Senate President Protempore Jose Roy, Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo M. Tolentino, House

Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso, Senator Alejandro Almendras, OEC Administrator Gonstancio Castaneda, Rizal Gov. Isidro Rodriguez, Basilan Mayor Leroy Brown, RCA Chairman Alfredo Montelibano, and J. Antonio Araneta.

Back at the Palace about 11 a.m., the President met with publishers and other representatives of national publications, and later with a number of provincial governors.

Others who conferred with him were Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos

P. Romulo, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, Ambassador Ernesto Lagdameo, PES Director General Placido Mapa, Jr., Chairman Cesar E. A. Virata of the Board of Investments, Undersecretary of National Defense Alejandro Melchor, Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Jose Ingles and U.P. President Salvador P. Lopez.

The President also accepted the resignation of Executive Secretary Rafael M. Salas.

Secretary Salas saw the President shortly after submitting his letter of resignation, to explain that he was anxious to accept a job offered to him by the United Nations because it concerned a vital world problem, the control of population in underdeveloped countries.

Salas' resignation was accepted after the President was convinced that Salas' new position would bring him as well as the Philippines itself added honor and prestige.

Immediately after accepting the resignation of Salas, the President appointed Secretary Ernesto Maceda executive secretary.

Maceda has been the head of the Presidential Arm on Community Development since President Marcos took over the reins of the administration on December 30, 1965.

In the afternoon, the President administered the oath to Judge Andres Reyes as associate justice of the Court of Appeals.

Earlier, the President signed Senate Bill No. 657, fixing the new salary rate for judges of the courts of first instance, presiding justice and associate justices of the Court of Appeals.

As approved, the new law sets the annual salary of CFI judges at ₱23,000; that of the associate justices of the Court of Appeals at ₱28,000; and the appellate court's presiding justice at ₱30,000.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

August 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrived in Surigao del Norte late in the afternoon after a brief Stopover at Dinagat island, enroute from Tagbilaran City.

The President, along with Vice President Fernando Lopez, and Surigao leaders led by Rep. Constantino Navarro and Gov. Jose Sering, stopped at Dinagat to attend a rally which local leaders had put up.

Small though the island is, the President and party got a rousing welcome from a crowd which was never seen there, both in size or enthusiasm.

After that exhilarating experience, the President and his party crossed over to the Mindanao mainland, to the capital town of Surigao where the massive public rally prepared for days in advance was already perking, started early in the afternoon by the spearhead group of NP senatorial candidates led by Senate President Gil J. Puyat.

The turnout at the rally amazed even local people. There was great animation in the crowd as the NP stalwarts, led by the President, assailed the opposition even as they raised another notch the popular support for the administration and the NP candidates.

Shortly after arrival in Surigao, the President broke the ground for the P1-million airport improvement project expected to hasten the development of its natural resources.

After the ground-breaking ceremony at the airport, the President addressed a special convocation at the Northeastern Mindanao Colleges, where he discussed his administration's program for youth.

August 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and his party arrived in Tacloban City late in the afternoon from Ormoc City. He arrived about 11 a.m. in Ormoc on board the RPS 777 after an overnight voyage from Surigao.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and NP leaders led by Vice President Fernando Lopez and Senate President Gil J. Puyat were welcomed at Ormoc by a big crowd led by Gov. Benjamin Romualdez of Leyte, and Ormoc Mayor Iñaki Larrazabal.

After Te Deum at the city's parish church, the President and the NP leaders made for the public plaza where the NP candidates were proclaimed.

In Tacloban as in Ormoc the NP team was reenforced by a gathering of leaders from all over the Visayas and Mindanao, with several making it from Luzon points.

Proclaimed once more at the two spirited rallies were re-electionists President Marcos and Vice President Lopez, Senate President Lai J. Puyat, Senators Arturo Tolentino, Jose W. Diokno and Ambrosio Padilla; CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, Public Works Secretary and Cebu Gov. Rene Espina, Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo, and former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong.

The NP powerhouse again charged full tilt against the LP ticket, with Senator Sergio Osmeña, Jr., opposition standard bearer, absorbing the brunt of the assault.

The President took off for Tacloban from Ormoc at 3 p.m. in a helicopter. A huge crowd was on hand to give him and his party a warm welcome. He went straight to the governor's residence, then proceeded to the city plaza for the proclamation rally.

August 3—

AFTER A HECTIC four-day campaign in several Eastern Visayas and Northern Mindanao provinces, President Marcos is more firmly convinced than ever that he and the entire Nacionalista Party ticket will win by an overwhelming victory in the November polls.

The President was at Guiuan, Samar in the morning and made side trips to the towns of Oras and Borongan in the afternoon together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, Vice President Fernando Lopez and the eight-man NP senatorial ticket headed by Senate President Gil J. Puyat.

Also in the group were Senators Arturo Tolentino, Jose W. Diokno and Ambrosio Padilla; former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, Public Works Secretary Rene Espina and Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo.

The group, at times traveling in two teams, was spearheaded by Governor Victor Amasa of Eastern Samar, a Liberal.

Meanwhile, in a brief speech read for him by Dr. Pacilico Marcos at the opening of this year's NCAA basketball series held at the Loyola Center in Quezon City, the President reminded the participants of the meaning of sportsmanship, a human quality which may be developed through athletics.

The President said that in pursuing a national program of sports, his administration has begun a 10-year program for the construction of sports centers.

As a matter of fact, he said, he has already provided P1 million for athletic facilities for interscholastics and up to P400, 000 for regional meets spread through the nation.

This is as it should be, the President said, because outstanding athletes who bring honor to their country are developed not in any single court or stadium but in some provincial court or athletic field.

It was for this reason, he said, that he has encouraged the development of athletics throughout the country since his assumption of the presidency in 1966.

August 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS relaxed on board the RPS 777 following the end of a four-day campaign swing in the Visayas and Mindanao. Also aboard are the other Nacionalista Party candidates.

The President stayed in his cabin the whole morning.

Towards noon, he started working on state papers at his desk aboard ship.

Earlier in the afternoon, the President started planning the next campaign swing of the Nacionalista Party team with other NP leaders aboard.

Aside from consulting with NP leaders traveling with him to Manila, he also got in touch with leaders now in Manila by radiophone, through Executive Secretary Ernesto M. Maceda.

The President and his party arrived in Manila in the evening.

Back in Malacañang, the Chief Executive immediately proceeded to his Study where he signed into law House Bill No. 18676, which appropriates P3.3 billion for government operations for fiscal year 1969-1970.

The budget as approved by Congress is P925,445,085 short of the President's line-item budget proposal of P4,249,144,000.

Except for the current operating expenditures under the special funds which got an increase of P2,108,774, all the proposed funds were pruned by Congress.

As approved by Congress, the General Fund totals P2,866,021,527 instead of P3,789,914,000 as originally proposed by the President; the Special Fund is P447,368,774 instead of P448,910,000 as proposed; the Reparations Fund totals P2,664,280 instead of the proposed P2,665,000; and the Fiduciary Fund is P7,644,334 instead of P7,655,000 as proposed by the President.

Among those who witnessed the signing of the bill were Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Finance Secretary Eduardo Romualdez, Rep. Jose Alberto of Catanduanes, chairman of the House committee on appropriations; Antonio C. de la Cruz and Ramon Maza, Jr. of the appropriations technical staff.

August 5—

DESPITE a badly needed respite after completing a rigorous trip to the Visayas and Mindanao, President Marcos held office as usual, working at his desk in the morning in-between consultations with national and local leaders and close aides.

In the afternoon, he received several waves of callers, beginning with a group from La Union, accompanied by Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, and including Gov. Juvenal Guerrero, Chairman Joaquin Ortega of the San Fernando Port Authority; and other provincial officials, as well as nine mayors from the first congressional district of the province.

Others with the La Union delegations were Vice Gov. Ramon R. Villalon, Jr., Board Members David D. Aguila and Anacleto B. Alzate; Mayors Lorenzo Dacanay of San Fernando, Antonio Aquino of San Juan, Mauro Nicha of Balaoan, Timoteo Sta. Iloana of Luna, Avelino Pascua of Bangar, Jose Macusi of Sudipen and Bartolome Dumaoang of San Gabriel; and Vice Mayor Pablo Saluta of Bacnotan.

The group from Tarlac next saw the President, composed of the municipal council of Tarlac, the capital town, led by Mayor Lino David, including all 79 barrio captains from the municipality. The Tarlac group asked for the conversion of the town into a city, reconstruction of the public market, and for assistance in completing rural improvement projects.

Regarding their desire for cityhood, the President said he would first consult with all the leaders of the province, both Nacionalista and Liberal, as well as other sectors, to sound out their views on the effect of such a move on the income capability of the province.

Gov. Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales and former Gov. Manuel Barretto came with a delegation of mayors from their province, also to present their problems.

Other callers on the President were Gov. Vicente Cerilles of Zamboanga del Sur; Reps. William Chiongbian of Misamis Occidental, and Jose Briones of Cebu.

The President steadily worked on state papers throughout the day, among others, directing the:

1. Amendment of existing orders to exempt visiting aliens not expressly banned by the Department of Foreign Affairs from the requirement of a transit visa if their stay here is not more than seven days.
2. POLCOM, PC and NBI to coordinate functions as delineated by his office, in the training and inspection of local police forces.

August 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of his time at his desk working on state papers, with one trip out of Malacañang, to preside as guest of honor at the ceremonies celebrating the 68th anniversary of the Philippine Constabulary, at Camp Crame in Quezon City.

He cleared his desk prior to taking off for the Northern Luzon region and part of Central Luzon, in the second phase of the NP drive in connection with the November polls.

In his speech at the PC celebration, the President reiterated to armed forces personnel his order for all men in uniform to stay clear of partisan activities in the election campaign. He said he had ordered the AFP chief of staff to court-martial all those culpable for violation of this order.

He also:

1. Announced the implementation of Republic Act No. 5254, the law which authorized the payment of a daily P3.50 subsistence allowance to Armed Forces officers and men in the active service, effective last July 1.

- 2.. Thanked the children of former Justice Secretary Jose Yulo for donating 20 hectares of the family property in Canlubang to the Philippine Constabulary, which parcel is now the site of the second PC zone headquarters.

Jose Yulo, Jr. signed the deed of donation of the parcel of land during the PC ceremonies, with the President as witness.

3. Thanked the United States government, through Major Gen George Pikett, Jr., JUSMAG chief, for the donation of laboratory equipment to the PC, which is being used in the fight against crime, and has contributed to the professionalization of police services.

4. Asked the PC to keep up its “vigilance and diligence” in the fight against crime and all kinds of lawlessness.

After the Camp Crame speech, the President returned straight to Malacañang where he resumed his desk work. He received no visitors except officials with problems to take up with him, and palace aides.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Transferred the administration of the reservation for the Higa-onon tribe of Mindanao, from the Department of National Defense to the Commission on National Integration and the provincial government of Agusan.
2. Endorsed the project conceived by business executive Domingo Guevara, Jr., to traverse the entire length of the Philippine-Japan Friendship Highway by car, to prove that the highway is “now a reality.”
3. Issued a proclamation setting August 14, as the day of formal organization of the city government of Mandawe in Cebu.

August 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived in Batac, Ilocos Norte in the evening after a spirited rally in Laoag City where it had seemed the entire Ilocano electorate had converged.

The President left Malacañang very early in the morning for the dash to San Fernando, La Union, by motorcar.

From that capital town, he boarded a plane for the flight to Laoag City, the starting point of the Northern Luzon NP campaign rallies.

His plane touched down at the Gabu airport at about 9 a.m., and because of the weight of the welcoming throng, the presidential party did not move out for the ride to the capital city till over half an hour later.

After Te Deum at the Cathedral of St. Williams, the President and the First Lady went to the rally held in front of the capitol building.

The enthusiastic crowd packed the wide open spaces around the speaker's platform, and spilled out into other streets in the vicinity. The full NP slate, led by the President and Vice President Fernando Lopez, got waves of ovation from the crowd as they assailed the opposition and spelled out the widened program of the government of the present administration.

From that rally, the President and the NP candidates went to Batac, already off schedule because of the enthusiasm in Laoag. Here, another huge demonstration of popular support was given by the President's townmates.

This hometown of the President really turned out for its favorite son and adopted First Lady. The rally, held at the town plaza, was the biggest seen so far in this locality.

After the rally, the President again whisked back to Laoag, where he had luncheon with the candidates and the leaders in this region. He conferred with the leaders afterward, including barrio captains and councilmen.

It was way past 7 p.m. when he and the First Lady returned to Batac for a quiet dinner and a spell of relaxation.

President's Week in Review: August 8-14, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

August 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS led the rally of the Nacionalista Party in San Fernando, La Union after taking a roundabout way to get to this capital town.

Leaving Laoag City early this morning in the PAP plane "The President," he and his party flew to this town's airport, but after fruitlessly trying to find a hole in the overcast his pilot decided to land at Clark Air Base.

From there, the President and his party motored to this city, bypassing Baguio meanwhile, which was to have been his next stop from Laoag.

The rousing welcome given the President and his party here duplicated if not surpassed earlier reception in this region. Despite the continuing threat of heavy rain, the La Union electorate turned en masse to greet the President.

The rally later was a picture of mass attendance. The President concentrated on the record of the LP standard bearer in Congress, which was described as empty, particularly in supporting legislation aimed, at improving the lot of the poor.

With the President in this area were Senator Ambrosio Padilla, CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, Public Works Secretary Rene Espina, Rep. Jose Briones of Cebu, Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda and Gov. Francisco Nepomuceno of Pampanga.

From San Fernando, the President and his group motored to Agoo, where again the NP national candidates addressed a public rally remarkable for the enthusiasm and numbers of the crowd.

Meanwhile, the President called on all enlisted personnel of the armed, services to "carry on" the government drive against poverty, hunger, disease and ignorance so that the "momentum of progress" already set by the administration will continue.

In a speech read for him by Commodore Santiago Nuval at the inauguration of the Enlisted Personnel Association Center (EPAC) at Camp Aguinaldo, the President said that he has precisely harnessed the AFP to civic action projects for this very purpose.

In another speech read by Secretary of Education O. D. Corpuz at the La Salle College convocation held on the Green Hills campus in Mandaluyong, Rizal, the President called on the youth to consider/constructive ways of helping the nation."

He asked the youth to get more directly involved in concrete tasks to help build a nation, saying that the future belongs to the young.

August 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS joined the Nacionalista candidates for national office in Dagupan City, after motoring with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, from Poro Point.

The President and the First Lady, both of whom spent the night at Poro Point, had an early start in order to arrive in Dagupan in time for the public rallies scheduled in several towns, including that city.

The presidential party was met at the La Union-Pangasinan boundary by local leaders and sizeable delegations from all points of the province, led by Gov. Tito Primicias.

The President and his party motored first to Urdaneta, where they heard Te Deum in the town's as yet uncompleted church, which is being renovated:

Moved by the enthusiasm and the friendliness of the crowd which lined both sides of the streets of the town, in places ten deep, the President and the First Lady left their car to acknowledge the cheers and good wishes of the people. They walked the rest of the one kilometer distance to the church, all the while waving, talking with the people and shaking hands.

The President, along with Gov. Primicias, and the NP candidates and other leaders attended rallies in Alcala, A]aminos, Lingayen and Dagupan.

Everywhere the President and the First Lady went, they were received by outsize crowds, and were the object of admiration, encouragement, and popular, support.

After the rally in Alcala, the President inspected the damage caused by the recent typhoon on the river control dam in the area. The dam was about to be completed, with the President set to inaugurate it during his visit in Pangasinan at this time.

Between rallies, the President inaugurated several, projects already finished in the province, mostly irrigation dams and other facilities, at San Quintin, San Nicolas, and San Fabian.

The President and First Lady had dinner m Lingayen, at the Urduja Guest House before going on to the rally in Dagupan.

Meanwhile, the President underscored the need for expanding the nation's trade operations, saying that it is necessary if "we are to maintain the momentum of growth generated in the past few years."

In a speech read by SSS Administrator Gilberto Teodoro for him, at the joint induction ceremonies of the Quezon City Chamber of Commerce and Chamberettes, held at the SSS building, the President said that the prime consideration in economic development at this time is to "drive forward well past self-sufficiency in essential needs," such that the Philippines can claim its "share of the brisk world trade building up other economies."

In one of his directives, the President asked the Presidential Economic Staff (PES) and the Board of Investments (BOI) to jointly furnish the Private Development Corporation of the Philippines (PDCP) with appropriate supplementary list of priority industries qualified to receive loans from the proceeds of the third development corporation loan.

The lists are in addition to the previous lists of industries specified in the approved Investment Priorities Plan.

August 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, now on the fourth day of his campaign swing – to Northern Luzon with the rest of the Nacionalista Party ticket, arrived in Cabanatuan City about noontime.

He said he came to those regions precisely to see for himself the conditions in the areas he visited "at their worst," so he could act immediately on the most urgent needs especially as the Northern Luzon region has recently been hit by typhoon.

The President said it would entail an expense of about ₱35 million to rehabilitate the places damaged. He has released about P5 million already, he said. This includes the ₱100,000 he ordered released by Budget Commissioner

Faustino Sy-Changco for the asphaltting of the airport in Lingayen, Pangasinan, which worn-off condition he personally saw the previous day.

Meanwhile, the President directed acting Civil Aeronautics Administrator Federico Ablan to investigate the reported padding of payrolls in the construction of the airport in Pagadian City.

The President was in Lingayen the whole morning, where he worked on reports on government matters.

One such report was the alleged tie-up with the Huks of a certain ranking member of the opposition party, about which the President said he directed the gathering of sufficient evidence for a formal investigation.

The President took off from Lingayen 11 a.m. aboard an airforce plane, and landed at Laur, Nueva Ecija 25 minutes later.

His party proceeded to Cabanatuan with the President hearing a t, noontime Mass at the city cathedral upon arrival. His party then | had lunch at the residence of City Mayor Amado G. Espino.

From Cabanatuan, the President motored north, to attend rallies-first in Munoz, then in the new City of San Jose at which formal inauguration he was also guest of honor; and later in Talavera down south on the way back to the city.

Today's major rally was held in Cabanatuan, where the President formally presented to the electorate of the province the entire NF slate, led by himself and Vice President Fernando Lopez, together with the eight senatorial candidates.

The eight proclaimed in the Senate slate were Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Senators Arturo Tolentino, Jose W. Diokno and 2 Ambrosic Padilla, former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, CNI Commissioner Mafnintal Tamano, Public Works Secretary and Cebu Gov. Rene Espina, and Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iioilo.

The President and his party scent the night at the First Tabak Division headquarters in Laur.

August 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS led the Nacionalista campaign team in an energetic drive which leaped from one province to another, from one town to the next.

Everywhere the President and party went, the crowds set new records in size and enthusiasm. Most observers asserted that the crowds surpassed others in past campaigns.

The enthusiasm for the President and the other NP candidates were such that rallies scheduled for one or two hours often overflowed to five hours or even more.

Unwearied by the exacting demand on their time and energies, the NP team captained by the President followed the region's schedule without let-up.

The President flew on a PAF plane from Laur, Nueva Ecija to Bagabag, Nueva Vizcaya early in the morning. After a rally in that town, he helicoptered to Lagawe, Ifugao for another rousing public meeting; after which he reboarded the copter to fly to Bayombong.

From Bayombong, he again hopped by air to the town of Solana.

At every rally, placards from the crowd thanked the President for the improvements in the locality and region. The people themselves volunteered to state the achievements of the administration.

The President was accompanied on all the sorties by Vice President Fernando Lopez, and the NP senatorial bets, namely, Senate President-Gil J. Puyat, Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo Tolentino, Senators Jose W. Diokno and Ambrosio Padilla; former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, Cebu Gov. Rene Espina, the concurrent secretary of public works and communications; and Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo.

August 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS and the NP national candidates ended their six-day swing through the Northern Luzon region with a rally that properly accented the triumphant NP campaign in the area.

The President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and all of the NP candidates were received in Tuguegarao, Cagayan with great enthusiasm and by massive crowds. Fireworks enlivened this welcome, lending a festive air to the occasion.

In the morning the President and the NP team visited the province of Kalinga-Apayao, with the President going all the way to the mountain town of La win, one of his operating bases as a resistance leader. Many of the people he knew there were on hand to greet him, including women guerrillas, now a bit elderly, and there was a palpable emotional charge to the reunion.

From La win he flew in a helicopter to Tuguegarao in the afternoon. Both he and the First Lady were received with great affection by the people. Some observers described the reception of the NP team as “overwhelming.”

All the candidates, from the President to Vice President Fernando Lopez, and the eight senatorial bets, spoke at the rally. The President and his party returned to Manila on board the presidential plane in the evening.

August 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS concentrated on his homework, after completing a six-day swing through Northern Luzon, as head of the NP team of national candidates.

He devoted his working hours mostly to state-papers and state matters, among others directing Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to look into the case of four newsmen jailed in Cadiz City, after being fingered by captured Huks as subversives.

The President asked Secretary Enrile to ensure that the rights of the newsmen and others arrested in the same case are respected.

The President also ordered the wider use of Pilipino in all official communications and transactions of the government, starting with the observance of National Language Week and thereafter.

National Language Week starts today, ending August 19.

The President's order was issued to all departments, bureaus, offices and agencies of the government, specifying that as far as practicable Pilipino must be used by the government.

In issuing the order, the President emphasized that the development and propagation of a single national language as provided under the Constitution and Commonwealth Act No. 570 is one of the primary objectives of his administration.

The President pointed out that the development and propagation of the national language should be pursued more vigorously inasmuch as “our national language, which is generally accepted and now known to all as ‘Pilipino’, is one of the valuable elements of nationalism that could thrust our nation towards greater progress, peace, and unity.”

In the course of the day, the President received A few officials on urgent business, and constantly consulted with close aides, notably Executive Secretary Ernesto M. Maceda.

Among those who saw the President were Secretary Enrile, Senator Dominador Aytona, Rep. Fernando Pajarillo of Camarines Norte, and Governor Jose Esteves of Albay.

August 14—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a lively day of conferences, ceremonies, and the inescapable desk work to act on state papers and consider other urgent matters.

Among others, he:

1. Conferred the Presidential Golden Plow Award for 1969 on former Senator Raul Manglapus for the latter's brilliant and dedicated work to make land reform a reality.
2. Reenacted for a big crowd of school teachers and Manila officials the signing of House Bill No. 18834 which, among others, raised the basic pay and authorized a longevity pay for Manila s public schoolteachers.
3. Witnessed the affiliation of former Speaker Cornelio Villareal, in a splashy ceremony at the Manila Hotel, attended by a horde of LP followers of the former speaker, and where a group of LPs also affiliated with the NP.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Proclaimed August 19 a special public holiday in Quezon City, Quezon province and Lucena City, in connection with, the 91st birth anniversary of the late President Manuel L. Quezon.

August 19 is also observed every year as Citizenship Day, by virtue of Proclamation No. 331, dated August 4, 1952.

2. Proclaimed the fund drive of the Philippine Tuberculosis Society, from August 19 to December 31, 1969.

The Anti-TB fund drive, traditionally starting on August 19, is also connoted with Quezon, who supported the Philippine Tuberculosis Society and waged a life-long war against TB.

3. Directed Highways Commissioner Baltazar Aquino to expedite the repair work on all damaged streets in Manila.

The President had earlier authorized the release of an initial ₱300,000 to start the repair work. He asked the Bureau of Public Highways to supply the equipment, asphalt, gasoline and other materials needed by the work teams from the 51st Engineer Brigade of the Philippine Army, the Manila city engineer's office, and the bureau of public highways from the ceremony at the Manila Hotel, the President returned to Malacañang to continue his desk work at his study, during which he consulted freely with aides and other officials.

President's Week in Review: August 15-21, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

August 15—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received a full quota of visitors, notably United States Senator Mike Mansfield, and several officials and provincial delegations who came to consult him on urgent problems.

Preparing for another foray into the provinces, the President attended at length to papers on his desk and other urgent matters requiring his attention.

Towards noon, he motored to the Central Bank building in Intramuros, where he officiated at the ceremony launching the operations of the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corporation (PDIC), handing out checks in the process to depositors in defunct local banks in token of the payments, up to a maximum of P10,000 per depositor, the PDIC will make all depositors who lost their savings in the ill-fated banks.

Returning to Malacañang, the President alternated desk work with feting visitors, and reenacted the signing into law of a bill.

The President reenacted the signing of House Bill No. 18598 which amended R. A. 4734, the law which created the sub-province of Quirino within the province of Nueva Vizcaya. The reenactment was made before a group of citizens from the new sub-province accompanied by Senator Perez.

Among other visitors, he received Mayor Amelia Gordon of Olongapo City, who came with a group of local officials and constituents; Ambassador Gregorio Abad of the Reparations Commission; Reps. Constantino Navarro and Teodulo Natividad, the latter accompanying a group from Bulacan, and Solicitor General Felix Makasiar.

Late in the afternoon, the President received Senator Mike Mansfield, majority floor leader of the United States Senate, who paid a courtesy call in the course of his visit here. Senator Mansfield was accompanied by Frank Vale, Secretary of the United States Senate. Also present during the call was the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

Earlier in the afternoon, the President also received Minister James Wilson, charge d'affaires of the U. S. embassy.

The President concentrated fully on his desk work the rest of the evening.

August 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed a crowded schedule of activities, highlighted by his induction into office of new appointees to various key positions in Malacañang.

In the whole morning, President Marcos cleared his desk of urgent official state papers preparatory to another campaign trip, this time Zamboanga del Sur, Ozamis City and Zamboanga del Norte.

He had a brief rest after lunch, and then attended to his callers later in the afternoon, which included a delegation from Zambales and Olongapo City led by Gov. Vicente Magsaysay and Mayor Amelia Gordon.

The President, in between callers, swore into office his new appointees to Malacañang posts, namely:

1) Manila Bulletin staff member Francisco S. Tatad, as Acting Press Secretary, vice Jose D. Aspiras, who has resigned to run for Congress in the second district of La Union;

- 2) Assistant Press Secretary Jacobo C. Clave as Presidential Executive Assistant, vice Jaime N. Ferrer who is now COMELEC chairman;
- 3) Ponciano Mathay, as Assistant Executive Secretary, vice Jose Leido, Jr. who is running for Congress in the lone district of Mindoro Oriental;
- 4) Lorenzo Cruz, Manila Bureau Chief of the Asia Magazine, as Assistant Press Secretary, vice Jacobo C. Clave;
- 5) Juan C. Tuvera as Presidential Assistant (with the rank of undersecretary); and
- 6) Guillermo C. de Vega, as Presidential Assistant (with the rank of undersecretary).

Among those present at the induction ceremonies held at the President's study were the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, former Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Executive Secretary Ernesto M. Maceda, former Assistant Executive Secretary Jose Leido, Jr., Auditor General Ismael Mathay, Commissioner Mamintal Taroano of National Integration, and members of the families and close friends of the inductees.

Following the induction rites, the President repaired to the Executive Building where he reenacted his signing into law of House Bill No. 15936 appropriating P1 million for the establishment of scholarship in arts, sciences and letters by the University of the Philippines.

UP President Salvador P. Lopez and a large delegation of student leaders witnessed the reenactment ceremony.

The President also reenacted his approval of Senate Bill No. 815 (H. No. 1323) prohibiting the collection of contributions from pupils, students, and teachers of public and private schools, colleges and universities.

In the evening, the President and the the First Lady tendered a formal dinner in honor of U. S. Senate Majority Floor Leader Mike Mansfield and his wife.

August 17—

PRESIDENT MARCOS flew to Mindanao to lead the Nacionalista Party candidates in a two-day campaign.

He was accompanied by Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo Tolentino, Sen. Ambrosio Padilla, former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, Commissioner on National Integration Mamintal Tamano, Cebu Gov. Rene Espina and Acting Press Secretary Francisco S. Tatad.

They left Manila shortly before 7 a.m. for Ozamis City and arrived there at 8:50 a.m. From Ozamis, the President flew by helicopter to Pagadian City (Zamboanga del Sur). He addressed rallies there and in nearby towns.

The President's party was joined in Pagadian by Vice President Fer- 'I nando Lopez, Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Sen. Jose W. Diokno and ' _ Uoilo Gov. Rafael Palmares.

They returned to Ozamis in the afternoon, and attended several rallies there, and in adjoining towns and cities.

The President's party and the other NP candidates addressed a rally in Oroquieta where they stayed for the night.

Before leaving Malacañang the President issued four proclamations declaring a special public holiday in as many localities, on respective dates of historic significance in those places.

The special holidays declared are:

1. August 28 (Saturday) in the cities of Caloocan and Quezon, to give the people there full opportunity to celebrate the “Cry of Pugad Lawin;”
2. August 29 (Friday) in San Juan, Rizal, in commemoration of the 73rd anniversary of the Battle of Pinaglabanan;
3. Also on August 29, in Cotabato City., which marks the 10th anniversary of the city’s founding; and
4. September 1 (Monday) the 60th anniversary of Baguio City

The President also announced that he had ratified the Philippine agreement to the establishment of the Asian Coconut Community.

The instrument was concurred in by the Senate in its Resolution No. 59, adopted last May 19, in accordance with Article VII, Section 10(7) of the Constitution.

The agreement, thus bind the Philippines with Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, and Thailand in establishing the ACC.

The regional grouping was conceived to develop a well-planned program of concerted action to solve common problems, and to mobilize resources to promote the coconut industry in the region, and ensure its rapid development.

August 18—

PRESIDENT MARCOS ended a two-day sortie to western Mindanao, brimming with confidence that the predominantly Cebuano-speaking region go Nacionalista in the November elections.

In public rallies the people turned out en masse to hear the President, Vice President Fernando Lopez, and all the NP candidates for the “Senate present the Nacionalista program of government.

The crowds at the rallies roared approval for the continuation of the massive development projects of the administration launched in the region and in other parts of the country.

The President was further bouyed by the assurances of local leaders that the people of Dipolog will support the NPs in both the polls and in continuing their plan of development.

The leaders said that the people appreciate the projects which are transforming the Mindanao countryside.

Starting at Pagadian, the presidential team covered in two days some 400 kilometers, winding up with a grand rally in Dipolog, which parted in the evening and lasted till the early morning hours.

Crossing over from Misamis Occidental to Zamboanga del Norte shortly before noon, the President took time out from the stumping stint to with the folks of Baliangao, for which he made a detour.

Baliangao is a small fishing village in Misamis where the President once sojourned during the war on a mission to contact resistance leaders in Mindanao on behalf of Luzon guerrillas. He made the trip on a sailboat in 1943.

Meanwhile, the President extended ad interim appointments to four judiciary officials, and designated three more to fill other ranking posts in the government.

Appointed by the President were:

1. Carmelo Molleda as clerk of court in the Libmanan branch of the Camarines Sur Court of First Instance;

2. Agileo S. de Villa as municipal judge in San Jose, Batangas;
3. Miguel V. Roca as municipal judge in Santa Fe, Leyte; and
4. Ernesto A. Atienza as senior special attorney in the Office of the Agrarian Counsel, Naga City regional office.

Those designated were:

1. Dr. Jose R. Perez as acting chairman of the board of directors of the Manila Hotel Company;
2. Anastacio Martinez as acting member of the board of directors of the Philippine National Railways; and
3. Tomas G. Caingat as acting provincial treasurer of Tarlac.

The President also announced that he had ratified a treaty with Sweden to avoid double taxation and prevent fiscal evasion with respect to 3 taxes on income and capital.

The tax treaty, which was concluded in Manila April 12, 1966, was concurred in by the Senate May 19, 1969, in accordance with Section 10(7), Article VII of the Constitution, under Senate Resolution No. 60.

The Convention, in general, relieves residents of the contracting states of double taxation on the same income, and prevents or minimizes fiscal evasion through exchange of tax information.

August 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS hit the road again in the afternoon to address a veterans convention in Tiaong, Quezon and rallies in Lucena and San Pablo cities, after attending to important official papers.

The President was back at 10 o'clock in the morning from Dipolog City where he addressed the last of the rallies in his two-day sortie to the Zamboanga provinces.

While still in Dipolog, the President had a brief conference with local officials at the residence of Gov. Virginio B. Lacaya of Zamboanga del Norte. He left the city for Manila at 8 a.m.

The President proceeded direct to Quezon City upon landing at the Nichols Air Base, where he was guest of honor and speaker at the commemoration of the 91st birth anniversary of the late President Manuel L. Quezon.

He arrived at the Quezon Memorial Circle aboard an air force helicopter. The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, joined him there.

Gov. Isidro Rodriguez and Rep. Frisco San Juan of Rizal, Quezon City officials led by Mayor Norberto Amoranto and Vice Mayor Ismael Mathay, Jr. were on band to meet the First Couple.

The Pangkat Kawayan of the Aurora Quezon Elementary School, with its native bamboo musical instruments, greeted the presidential party with the rendition of the Ilocano ditty "Pamulinawen."

In his speech, the President paid tribute to President Quezon as one of the country's heroes and patriots who fashioned the Filipino into a "more militant and assertive citizen," and who taught him the value of commitment and the virtue of excellence.

The President prefaced his prepared English speech in extemporaneous Pilipino, saying that his administration has done everything possible to help in the rapid development of Quezon City as the nation's capital.

He recalled that as of 1967, he had directed the Budget Commissioner and requested the Development Bank of the Philippines to give preference to all projects connected with the construction of public buildings at the government center.

At the close of the commemorative rites, the President reenacted the signing into law of two bills affecting Quezon City, namely:

1) House Bill No. 17110, which establishes a Filipino War Memorial in Quezon City, with an appropriation of P1 million, and

2) Senate Bill No. 696 (H. No. 13277), which amends the Revised Barrio Charter (R. A. 3590).

At about 4 p.m., the President and the First Lady, left for San Pablo City on board a helicopter where the President joined Vice President Fernando Lopez and the NP senatorial bets in addressing a huge rally.

The President then proceeded to Tiaong, Quezon where he addressed the annual convention of the President Quezon's Own Guerillas Veterans Association.

He later motored to Lucena City to rejoin the other NP national candidates in another rally.

Before flying to San Pablo City, the President directed Commerce and Industry Secretary Leonides S. Virata, CAB chairman; and CAA Director Federico Ablan to process the application of an alleged supporter of LP standard bearer, Senator Sergio Osmeña, Jr., to buy a plane from the Philippine Air Lines.

The President issued the order following reports that the Civil Aeronautics Board has deferred action on the projected sale by the PAL of a DC-3 plane to Antonio M. Garcia, a Quezon City businessman, and supposed to be associated with the Liberal Party.

The President said decision on the application should not be motivated by political considerations but should be based purely on merit.

The President also ordered an immediate investigation into published delegations by Opposition circles that alterations have been made on the omnibus tax bill allegedly to benefit certain parties.

The said the investigation should not spare "anyone who is guilty," and should not tolerate any irregularity from any party especially if such irregularity meant to sabotage the administration by exposing it to unjust calumny.

August 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, upon his return from Lucena City at 5:30 a.m., took time out from the hectic campaign trail to attend to state papers.

With no callers on his schedule, the President, after a brief rest, whittled down steadily the papers which had piled up on his desk.

In-between, he had conferences with government officials who came to consult him on problems, and in turn consulted with close aides on the priority matters to be acted on.

Among other actions, the President ordered implemented the plan to pay the teachers their salaries through the Philippine National Bank. The new plan eliminates the delay caused by physically transporting pay checks.

Instead, school superintendents can draw out the amount needed to pay salaries from a fund deposited with the PNB by the Bureau of Public Schools. Then, salaries will be disbursed through local government treasurers.

The President also directed that ₱100,000 be released to the Philippine College of Commerce, as initial aid toward the expansion and improvement of school facilities. The order was given in response to the plea of PCC students aired during a rally at Malacañang in the afternoon.

The President continued to work at his desk through the evening.

August 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted most of his workday to conferences with various officials who consulted him on administrative matters and problems in their respective departments.

First conference was with NP Congress leaders with whom he discussed campaign strategy of party candidates for congressional posts.

Present at the conference were Senate and NP President Gil J. Puyat, Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Senate President Protempore Jose Roy, Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo M. Tolentino and House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso.

The President then held a series of meetings with close advisers on specific state matters.

Among those who sat down with the President were Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio M. Feliciano, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, Governor Alfonso Calalang of the Central Bank, PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., Undersecretary of Finance Roman Cruz, Jr. and PNB President Roberto Benedicto.

In-between these conferences, the President took time out to receive a number of provincial delegations who updated him on the status of Infrastructure projects in their localities.

These groups included those from Bohol headed by Gov. Lino Chatto, from Zamboanga del Sur led by Gov. Vicente M. Cerilles, from Bacolod City headed by Mayor Romeo G. Guanzon, and from newly constituted Pagadian City led by Mayor Benjamin F. Arao.

Doing some desk work besides, the President, among other things, approved:

1. The nomination by the National Economic Council of Chairman

Cesar E. A. Virata of the Board of Investments as chief delegate of the Philippines to the Top Management Symposium of the Asian Productivity Organization, which will be held in Hong Kong and Japan, from October 22 to November 1 this year.

2. The participation of Chairman Virata in the 13th Governing Council of the Asian Institute of Economic Development and Planning, to be held in Bangkok from August 28 to 29.

Official Week in Review: August 22 – August 28, 1969

August 22—

TODAY'S WORKING day for President Marcos covered a full range of special concerns touching on national development in the economic area as well as in improving those sectors aimed at the life of the citizen.

Normal in his day's routine, the President's actions were however uncommon in the way they covered so many problems and met urgent requirements.

Except for a few callers whom he received, the President focused on state matters, and through Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda directed:

1. The Mindanao Development Authority, the Civic Action Corps, the Department of National Defense and all other agencies concerned, to assess the progress of work in the establishment of refrigeration plants, especially in the Mindanao and Sulu areas. The President has given importance to this project, since the lack of such facilities has constricted the development of the fishing industry.

2. The Land Authority to consider the petition of settlers in Salug Valley, Zamboanga del Sur to bring that area into the land reform program, and to submit recommendations. In accordance with his policy, the President is anxious to widen land reform as much and as speedy as possible.

3. That an inquiry be made into the complaints against logging in the forest areas of Molave, Zamboanga del Sur. He said that such operations will adversely affect irrigation systems there, which farmers need to hike production. He added that if necessary, all logging operations should be stopped.

4. The immediate release of P500,000 to the Philippine Tobacco Administration, to prop up the agency's fiscal position, specifying that the amount should be spent only for tobacco trading. The PTA is the prime mover in the development of the tobacco industry on which most of the families in Northern Luzon depend for a livelihood.

5. Commissioner Baltazar Aquino of Public Highways to check on the progress of bridge construction in Isabela, especially those in Gamu and Mallig. The President said that if the projects have not been started yet, the project engineers concerned should be relieved immediately. He expressed concern for the communities in the area who had long pleaded for such facilities.

6. The release of P60,000 by the National Electrification Administration to the municipal government of Tambulig, Zamboanga del Sur, for putting up an electric plant to service the community, in line with the administrations program aimed at spreading the benefits of electrification.

7. The Philippine Veterans Bank to consider the proposal of veterans groups in Laguna and Quezon to set up a PVB branch in San Pablo City.

The President also received in the morning about 100 officers of the Self-Help Mutual Aid Association of the Philippines, who had requested him to induct them into office.

The President's mother, Mrs. Josefa Edralin Marcos, accompanied the association officers who were led by Jose R. de Silva and Valerio P. Tria, president and vice-president, respectively.

Notable among the other visitors the President received were Senators Alejandro Almendras and Dominador Aytona, Reps. Lorenzo Sarmiento of Davao del Norte, Gloria Tabiana of Iloilo and Jose Alberto of Catanduanes; and Mrs. Adelina Rodriguez, wife of Gov. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal.

The President discussed with them both local government problems and the political situation in their respective bailiwicks.

In the afternoon, the President mapped out with government monetary and fiscal officials new moves to conserve dollars, even as Malacañang was formally apprised of the steady gain in the country's dollar position.

The President gave full support to the dollar pool plan of the Central Bank and the Development Bank of the Philippines, which seeks to syphon into the country's foreign exchange reserves dollars earned abroad by Filipinos.

The President also approved the promotion of 11 reserve officers in the active service and four inactive reserve officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

He likewise approved the commissioning of 94 personnel in the AFP reserve force, and the temporary promotion of a Philippine Constabulary officer.

The promotions were made to fill existing vacancies in the grades of major and lieutenant colonel, pursuant to the AFP Personnel Act and the AFP reserve build-up.

August 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived in Bacolod City at 10 a.m. after an hour's flight from Manila. The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, was with him.

A rousing welcome was given the First Couple by sizable delegations from all over the province, led by Gov. Alfredo Montelibano, Jr., and other local officials.

Notable among the welcomers were top officials of the Philippine National Bank, headed by Roberto Benedicto, president.

The high-spirited and enthusiastic crowd carried placards which spelled out support for the administration's development program, particularly as it affected the region. Other placards welcomed the expanded activities of the PNB in the area.

From the airport, the President and the First Lady went to Silay City, where they were special guests at the inauguration of the extension office of the PNB Bacolod branch.

Then returning to Bacolod, the President officiated at the inauguration of the PNB branch office, one of the handsomest buildings in the city. It stands just across the provincial capitol. The rites lasted till 3 p.m.

After the inaugural, the President had a brief conference with newsmen covering him. Then he had lunch and a brief rest.

In the afternoon, he and other NP national candidates went to Kabangkalan for the first rally. The receptiveness of the people as usual was impressive. After the rally, the presidential party motored back to Bacolod, with brief stops at towns along the way, notably La Carlota and Bago.

The President ended the day with the massive rally at the public plaza, where he expressed once more his support for the sugar industry, both as a premier national industry and as the source of livelihood of thousands of common workers.

He told the people that in helping the industry realize its full potentials, his administration also seeks to improve the lot of the small workers. He said that a start has been made with the agreement his administration has effected with sugar industry leaders to share new profits with the workers under a social amelioration plan.

Earlier in the morning, before the President took off at about 9 a.m., he directed:

1. The Philippine Constabulary to lift PC control over the police force of Tangub City;
2. Fisheries Commissioner Andres Mane to stop or suspend purse seine operations in the coastal fishing grounds of Masbate, and to recommend to the secretary of agriculture and natural resources appropriate specifications to go into the administrative order for the purpose stated; and
3. Highways Commissioner Baltazar Aquino to complete the San Pedro road in the area of Caraga, Davao Oriental.

August 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS led the Nacionalista Party candidates in a campaign in seven Negros Oriental towns, as well as in San Carlos City and in Inampulungan Island off Guimaras.

In speeches in rallies, the President told the sugarlandia people of the “many benefits” for the sugar industry that his Administration has worked for, which include the setting up of new mills as well as added income for farm and central workers.

With Vice President Fernando Lopez and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and joined by all the NP senate slate, the President’s party left Bacolod City at 4 a.m. for San Carlos City, arriving there at 10 a.m. From San Carlos, he had helicopter hops in the towns of Guihulngan, Bindoy, Mabinay, and in the island of Inampulungan, before proceeding to Dumaguete.

August 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS led Nacionalista candidates, including Vice President Fernando Lopez, in addressing a huge rally in Iligan City, which started early in the evening lasting till early morning.

The President and his party, along with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrived in Iligan early in the morning, after sailing overnight on board the RPS 777 from Dumaguete City. The Navy vessel docked at the Iligan Steel Mill pier. The President suffered a sprained ankle during the hectic stump in Negros Occidental, but he did not feel any discomfort until he arrived at Dumaguete City.

The President and the NP candidates almost immediately left for Marawi City, with the former flying in a helicopter. The NP leaders addressed a massive rally in Marawi, with the President taking on the added chore of inaugurating several infrastructure projects in the area.

Later, the President met with local leaders at Camp Keithley to discuss development problems and other official matters. He assured the officials that his administration will continue to give high priority to development projects in Mindanao and Sulu, and that every effort will be made to give better opportunities to Muslims in improving their lives and in participating in national affairs.

The President inaugurated projects such as bridges, concrete roads and irrigation systems in several Lanao del Norte towns.

The welcome given the President and the First Lady in Marawi and Iligan was indicative of the First Couple’s wide popularity in the region. Despite the bad weather, the people of Marawi City turned out in their colorful Muslim costumes and transformed the city into a festive setting of arches, buntings, and flower-bedecked buildings.

In Iligan, the same festive spirit characterized the welcome to the Presidential party.

During his meeting with local leaders, the latter vowed to give him a resounding victory in the region, in keeping with its reputation as the “Batac of the South.”

August 26—

A SPRAINED ANKLE forced President Marcos to skip a day-long overland swing through the coastal towns of Misamis Oriental from Iligan City.

He instead asked Vice President Fernando Lopez and the First Lady Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, along with the NP senatorial candidates to proceed with the 92-kilometer trip to Cagayan de Oro City

The President then boarded the RPS 777 in time to rendezvous with his party in Cagayan de Oro where a grand rally was scheduled in the evening.

The President was advised in Iligan city in the morning by his physician to refrain from going through with his scheduled overland swing through Misamis Oriental to insure quick recovery from his sprained ankle.

The First Lady explained to the people at the rallies the inability of the Chief Executive to join the tour.

The President twisted his ankle shortly after alighting from his helicopter in Kabankalan, Negros Occidental Saturday afternoon.

He hurried out of the aircraft upon seeing a big crowd rushing to his helicopter in an effort to meet his enthusiastic welcomers before they could go any nearer the still rotor blades.

The President however devoted his time going over government reports working on official papers in his cabin while enroute to Cagayan de Oro for the grand rally in the evening.

August 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived at mid-morning from a four-day stump of Western Visayas and Northern Mindanao cities and towns, then was off again in the afternoon to attend the rally proclaiming the candidacy of Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr. for the 3rd district of Batangas.

Leaving Cagayan de Oro City early in the morning, the President flew to Manila in high spirits after seeing the enthusiastic response of the electorate in the regions visited. He predicted that the NPs will enjoy some 2 million votes majority over the opposition.

During the fast-paced tour, the President focused on the development plans for Mindanao, particularly on the expansion of the industrial capabilities of that region. He also underlined the administration efforts to support the sugar industry, it being one of the high dollar earners among local industries, as well as a source of livelihood for thousands of common workers.

He pledged the escalation of development efforts in Mindanao, including the full electrification of the big island, as well as the strengthening of its industrial base through new power sources and infrastructure facilities.

Enroute to Manila, the President settled down to a sustained session with state papers. He went over reports and studied problems brought to his attention. He worked with aides during the entire flight to Manila.

Arriving 10:30 a.m. at Nichols Air Base, the President went straight to Malacañang. He rested briefly, then resumed his paper work. He received no visitors except officials with state problems to discuss.

At 3:45 p.m., the President left for Batangas, again flying in an air force plane. The proclamation rally was a full-dress campaign meeting as well, with the NP national candidates attending.

The President returned to Manila after the rally.

In a message issued before leaving for Batangas, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, expressed their best wishes to Miss Margaret Rose Montinola, "Miss Philippines of 1969," who enplaned for Tokyo for the Miss International beauty contest.

"It is our people's hope that Miss Montinola will succeed both in shining as an individual and as an ambassador of goodwill for the Philippines," the First Couple said.

August 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of the morning at his desk, working on state papers and other problems brought to his attention.

He was particularly concerned about reports of the harassment of top LP candidates in Cadiz City, and ordered Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to "get to the bottom" of the case, sparing none of those found guilty of breaching the law and other regulations on this matter.

The President stated that his administration is committed to uphold every citizen's right to express ideas and opinions.

In the course of the day, the President:

1. Ordered the Department of Education to study further how the cost of high school education in public schools may be reduced, after book rentals have been abolished.
2. Directed the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Bureau of Immigration and the Bureau of Customs to allow all foreign media men unimpeded entry into the country for coverage of the elections.
3. Directed Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release P600,000 for the construction of various development and community projects in a number of cities and municipalities in Western Visayas and Northern Mindanao.

Ordered released by the President were P200,000 for projects in Bacolod City; P250,000 for the completion of several public works projects in San Carlos City, P100,000 for the construction of feeder roads in Bais; and P40,000 for the nationalization of the provincial high school in Baroy, Lanao del Norte.

At about noon, the President motored to his San Juan, Rizal, residence, where he officiated at the formal affiliation of top LP leaders in Bulacan to the Nacionalista Party. Leading the Bulacan group was former Vice Governor Salvador Santiago.

In the afternoon, the President received several officials who consulted him on local problems. Among those who called on the President were Rep. Andres Cosalan of Benguet; Mayor Luis Lardizabal of Baguio City; and ex-Gov. Bado Dangwa of Mt. Province.

Later, he conferred with Gov. Samuel Reyes of Isabela on development projects and other local concerns.

He worked at this desk through the evening.

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

August 29—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a checkered day, highlighted by a rousing rally held at about 3 p.m. at the Yellow Taxicab Co. compound on Arlegui, where thousands of cabbies had converged to pledge full support to the President's bid for reelection.

He started the day with the usual desk work early in the morning, then at 10 a.m. broke off to receive the credentials of the new US envoy to the Philippines, Ambassador Henry Byroade.

In brief remarks during the ceremony, the President reiterated the will of the Filipino people to uphold self-reliance in nation-building.

He also noted American support for this new ethic, and welcomed the unfolding era of RP-US relations based on dignity, independence, and cooperation.

In the afternoon, the President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, went to the aforesaid rally on Arlegui street, where he urged equal support for Vice President Fernando Lopez and all of the NP national candidates, saying that it is the best way to carry on the gains made in development under the present administration.

At 5 p.m., the President was off again, this time to attend as special guest at the installation of Dean Stephen Fuller as president of the Asian Institute of Management, at the Ateneo Law School auditorium on Padre Faura.

From this gathering, the President proceeded to the G. E. Antonino building where he officiated at the inauguration of the microwave network of the Sarmiento Telecommunications firm, which for the first time brings to the country advanced facilities for transmitting messages.

In addition, throughout the day, the President:

1) Received callers, among them a provincial delegation from Cotabato headed by Datu Blah Sinsuat. The group made representations for the opening of additional public school classes in the province.

Other callers included Senator Magnolia W. Antonino who came with the mayors of the first district of La Union; Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Reps. Nicanor Yñiguez, Ramon Durano, Natalio Castillo; Senator Dominador Aytona, Gov. Irene Balite of Northern Samar, and Vice Gov. Manuel Sandoval of Palawan.

2) Made operational the Foreign Trade Zone Authority when he named Customs Commissioner Rolando Geotina acting chairman, and Dioscoro L. Manrique and Mrs. Eugenia B. Jose as members of the new body created by Republic Act No. 5490.

The designation of Commissioner Geotina as head of the free trade zone body was done to establish effective coordination between the Bureau of Customs and the Foreign Trade Zone Authority, in the spirit of the law creating it.

3) Announced the ad interim appointment of Pablo V. Flores as register of deeds of Northern Samar; and the designations of Clodoveo Soriano as acting member of the board of examiners for mechanical engineering, and of Jose Fabila as acting provincial treasurer of Antique.

4) Approved the promotion of 93 reserve officers in the inactive service of the armed forces.

The promotions were authorized to fill up existing vacancies in the different branches of service of the reserve force.

5) Proclaimed August 30 as a special public holiday in the province of Bulacan in commemoration of the 119th birth anniversary of Marcelo H. del Pilar.

Del Pilar was born on August 30, 1850 in Bulacan, Bulacan. The editor of the famed La Solidaridad, he became known as “Plaridel” (his nom de plume) for his fiery articles and editorials assailing the Spanish colonial government in the country.

August 30—

PRESIDENT MARCOS left Manila early aboard the presidential plane, along with close aides and some members of the NP campaign team, arriving in Cebu City shortly, after 10 a.m.

He landed at the Mactan air base, and was joined minutes later by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

The President’s first engagement after being ferried from Mactan to Cebu City was the VIMCONTU convention. Democrito Mendoza, VIM-CONTU president, presented Mr. Marcos with a resolution pledging the all-out support of the 250,000 members of the confederation.

In his speech, the President recounted his consistent fight in Congress to enhance the rights and freedom, the opportunities and the welfare of workers, as well as of organized labor. He cited his vigorous support of such progressive labor legislation as the Magna Carta of Labor, the Minimum Wage Law, the Land Reform Code, and the Anti-Scab Law.

The President, in acknowledging the support pledged by VIMCONTU, said that he welcomes this support “on the basis of a partnership between the government and the free labor movement towards recreating our society in the image of our common vision—society based on dignity, social justice and on the primacy of human rights.”

He pledge that as long as he is President “the rights of the democratic labor movement will never be impaired.”

The President also reenacted at the convention the signing of two bills benefiting workers and barrio officials, namely:

1. House Bill No. 17593 (S. N. 866), which amended R. A. 4694 to allow the confederation to lease out the land or improvements thereon, as a means of generating funds to further promote the welfare of its members.
2. Senate Bill No. 840 which extends to barrio treasurers and barrio secretaries insurance coverage hitherto enjoyed only by barrio captains and councilmen.

From Cebu City, the President flew by helicopter for Sibonga, where the first rally was held. From there, he motored to Carcar, making whistle-stops along the way. Other rallies he attended were in San Fernando and Naga.

In Naga, Mayor Vicente Mendiola told the President that the town has consistently backed him, giving him majorities in all of the elections in which the President had figured. In this town, the President proclaimed Eddie Gullas as NP official candidate in the 3rd congressional district of Cebu.

By helicopter, the President kept his engagement at Mandaue late in the afternoon, somewhat off schedule because of the enthusiasm of the large crowds at the rallies. He inaugurated the new city and inducted the city officials.

After the inaugural rites in Mandaue, the President and the NP team raced back to Cebu City for the major rally of the day.

The President was not disappointed by the turnout of Cebu City citizens, indeed was nearly awed by the massive crowd which continually swelled in size during the rally.

Before leaving for Cebu, the President directed the Board of Travel and Tourist Industry (BTTI) and the Philippine Tourist and Travel Association (PTTA), to exercise only those functions specified by their respective charters.

Generally, these are:

1. The BTTI should limit its functions to- purely supervisory and policy activities, as intended by Congress and embodied in the Divisions of Republic Act No. 1478, as amended by Republic Act No. 2627.
2. The PTTA, as the instrumentality of the BTTI, should carry out all implementing functions in accordance with Section 9 of Republic Act No. 1478, as amended.

The directive was transmitted by Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda to acting Tourism Commissioner Gregorio Araneta II.

August 31—

PRESIDENT MARCOS wound up in the evening his two-day drive in Cebu province, convinced that the Nacionalista Party will beat the opposition in their own homeground.

The President was visibly impressed by the warmth and enthusiasm with which he was received all over the province particularly in Cebu City, where a grand rally lasting until dawn was held Saturday.

Touched by the cheers of the huge crowds which overflowed the spacious Osmeña Boulevard and spilled out into the side streets in front of the Capitol building where the grand rally was held, the President said: "This is one of the biggest rallies that I have ever seen. It makes me feel as though I am in my home province."

The President was roundly applauded when he presented to the Cebu electorate Vice President Fernando Lopez and all of the NP senatorial candidates.

At the rally were provincial, city, and municipal officials from Mindanao and Visayan provinces who also converged in Cebu to witness the inauguration of Mandaue City yesterday.

At the Mandaue inauguration, Councilor Amadeo Seno of the new city who introduced the President to another overflowing crowd that witnessed the ceremony, said: "President Marcos needs no introduction because we Mandaueños already know him, love him, and are grateful to him."

He continued: "We love him because he loves us, and love begets love. We are grateful to him because no other President has done more for Mandaue."

The President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, started his stump in Cebu the previous day, first as guest of honor at the third biennial conference of the Visayas-Mindanao Confederation of Trade Unions (VIMCONTU) held at its main headquarters in Cebu City.

Moving by car and helicopter, the President and his party, which included re-electionist Vice President Lopez and all the other NP candidates, covered all the seven congressional districts of the province in two days, holding public rallies in urban centers and making whistle-stops in the rural areas.

Despite the heavy downpour hundreds of people gathered at the grand rally site in Cebu City, some with umbrellas, others with only newspapers over their head.

More people flowed into the plaza when President Marcos and the First Lady arrived. As if on cue, the rain stopped in time for the President's arrival.

The President and his party started the sortie at Daanbantayan, an island municipality at Cebu's northern tip.

Moving alternately by car and helicopter, the President covered many towns, including Hagnaya, Bogo, Tubuan, Balamban and Barili.

On top of this barnstorming tour in the so-called opposition bailiwick was a grand rally in Toledo City on the western coast.

Following the rally, the President and his party boarded the Navy flagship, RPS 777, for Masbate.

In a speech read by his brother, Dr. Pacifico Marcos, at the close of Turismo Pilipino '69, highlighted by a program at the Rizal Park, the President congratulated the promoters and participants of the cross-country motor tour, saying that the project served as a trail-blazer for others who may want to see the country by car, adding that the tour anticipated the completion of the Philippine-Japan Friendship Highway.

The President said that a highway such as the Philippine-Japan Friendship Highway is "worthy of a fast developing country like ours."

He stressed, "We need this highway not only to promote tourism but also to accelerate commerce and trade and thereby the material progress of the Philippines."

September 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived in Masbate, Masbate at about 10 a.m. after sailing from Cebu province almost at daybreak.

Relaxed aboard ship after the hectic two-day drive in Cebu, the President exuded confidence that the NP performance will take Cebu away from the opposition in November.

Abroad RPS 777, the President caught up with some paper work, in the process proclaiming two special holidays, in the cities of Iriga and Gen. Santos, both of which will celebrate their foundation days.

He also directed police personnel all over the country to observe courtesy at all times, particularly in dealing with opposition candidates and followers.

Arriving first on Ticao island; the President and the NP team got a rousing reception. He rode a jeepney into the town, and was promptly slowed down by hordes of townsfolk, including schoolgirls, who sought to shake his hand.

Through the day, the President and the NP team hopped from one town to the next, by car and helicopter, to attend scheduled rallies, with the big rally in the capital town of Masbate in the evening.

At ceremonies marking the 68th anniversary of the Bureau of Lands, the President, in a speech read by Senator Leonardo Perez, said that social change has been the essence of his administration from the start.

Central to this policy is land reform, he said, which aims at producing independent and self-reliant farmers, whose support will strengthen the base of Philippine democracy.

The overall policy, of course, the President said, "is to provide land for the masses."

September 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS completed a swift and comprehensive tour of Sorsogon province, during which he and members of the NP performance team won the huge crowds attending the rallies with a forthright discussion of national issues and problems, and the projection of the Nacionalista plan for advancing the progress and development of the country.

In his speeches at rallies in Sorsogon and meetings with local leaders, at the capital town and in such population centers as Irosin, Bulan, and Magallanes, the President stressed the administration's projects launched or blueprinted aimed at developing the abaca industry, through diversification and total utilization of the abaca fiber; and the promotion of Bicolandia, which abounds in scenic spots, into a thriving tourist center.

On another front, the President, in a speech read by Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople, at the opening of the ILO Asian Roundtable for labor administration and development planning, held at the WHO building, said "labor administration will become increasingly important in each of our countries, not only for the enforcement of labor laws, but also as a direct instrument for the promotion of economic and social development."

He stated that in pursuing full employment, a goal of every government he noted, the administration of labor must be given full access to the planning board with sights set on employment targets and development objectives.

The President cited the fact that under his administration the National Youth and Manpower Council was created to ensure that the country's manpower objectives were "fully reflected in our development planning." (See pp. 9286-Q to 9286-T for full text of the President's speech.)

September 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS wound up a whirlwind tour of three Bicol provinces with a rally at Legaspi City.

The rally, lasting till dawn, properly capped two days of unprecedented turnouts of Bicolanos everywhere the President and the NP performance team held forth in the provinces of Sorsogon, Camarines Sur and Albay.

The tremendous response to the President and the Nacionalista campaign bandwagon was explained by Senator Dominador Aytona, one of the region's leaders, as a manifestation of the region's total support of the administration's program of government, which has remarkably developed this potentially rich peninsula.

Leaping from one province to the next by car and helicopter, the President proved personally magnetic to all types of crowds, beginning with the youngsters and going all the way to the most venerable oldsters. In many places, his party was received with brass bands and festive fireworks.

Completing a tour of Sorsogon in the morning, the President leapfrogged in a helicopter to Iriga City, to participate in its first anniversary fete. From there, he covered by car the thriving towns of Nabua and Bato, then crossed over to stump in Albay, beginning with the town of Polangui, then moving on to Oas, Ligao, and Tabaco. In Albay as in Sorsogon and Camarines Sur, the President was received with warmth and a continuous wave of cheers.

September 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned in the morning from a four-day sortie to Cebu, Masbate and the Bicol peninsula, highly confident that the Nacionalista Party performance ticket will get a new mandate from the people in the coming elections.

The President arrived shortly before 10 a.m. at Malacañang, from a flight direct from Legaspi City where he passed the night.

Upon arrival, the President almost immediately started working on official papers on his desk, and in-between conferred with key aides and government officials on various public matters.

As the day wore on, he received political leaders with whom he discussed the grand proclamation rally of NP candidates at Plaza Miranda on September 7.

Towards evening, the President had a pleasant respite from work when the newly proclaimed Miss Philippines of 1970, Feliza Teresa. Santos Miro of Isabela and La Union, called on him.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Miro, the 17-year old beauty will represent the Philippines in the “Miss World” beauty tilt to be held in London early next year.

Miss Miro was accompanied by Ferdinand S. Villar, franchise holder of the contest for Miss Philippines; Mrs. Aida M. Bernardino, national chairman of the nationwide beauty contest; Elizabeth Sales, Miss Mindanao of 1970; Nenita Victoria Guilatco, Miss Manila for 1970; and Maria Lourdes Reyes, Miss Friendship of 1970.

After the call, the President resumed his desk work.

Official Week in Review: September 5 – September 11, 1969

September 5 —

PRESIDENT MARCOS highlighted his activities with a meeting with his Cabinet to discuss, among other things, the release of funds for state colleges and universities, as well as measures that will ensure peak efficiency of the whole government machinery during the electoral campaign period.

One result of the meeting, which lasted from 12:15 p.m. to about 3 p.m., was the Presidential directive to Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz to meet on the priorities for release of funds to state colleges and universities. Deserving projects, he said, must get primary attention.

In the morning, the President, together with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, motored to the University of Santo Tomas where he addressed the seminar on rural medicine, attended by provincial health officers and chiefs of provincial and city hospitals, PACD workers, and representatives of the Civic Action Corps of the Department of National Defense.

In his speech, the President said that the rural health program will continue to enjoy the highest possible priority. (See pp. 9594-A to 9594-D for full text of the President's speech.)

The President was introduced to the seminar delegates by Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz.

Father Rector Jesus Diaz, who welcomed the delegates, extended advanced "Happy Birthday" greetings to the President, who marks his birth anniversary on September 11.

Back in Malacañang at 11 a.m., the President and the First Lady received world famous opera star Beverly Sills who made a courtesy call. Miss Sills won many admirers here after singing at the MeraJco theatre.

With Miss Sills were the diva's mother, Mrs. Shirlev Silverman, daughter Muffy, and husband Peter Greenough.

The President then repaired to the State Dining Hall for the Cabinet meeting.

Among those present were Vice President Fernando Lopez, who is also Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources; Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata, Press Secretary Francisco S. Tatad, CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz;

Secretary of Public Works and Communications Rene Espina, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles, Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople, NEC Chairman Marcelo Balatbat, BOI Chairman Cesar E. A. Virata, PANAMIN Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr., Undersecretary of General Services Dominador Chipeco, Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio Feliciano, OEC Administrator Constancio Castaneda, and Land Authority Gov. Conrado Estrella.

Following the Cabinet meeting, the President rested briefly. Refreshed, he began receiving provincial delegations. Among the first groups to see him was the Bicolano contingent led by Senator Dominador Aytona, Rep. Jose Alberto and Gov. Vicente Alberto of Catanduanes. He then met in succession Gov. Amado Almazan of Kalinga-Apayao, Sen. Ambrosio Padilla, and Rep. Angel Concepcion of Nueva Ecija.

The local officials reported to the President on various projects in their localities, and apprised him of other urgent needs.

The President later formally inducted into the Nacionalista Party 19 Liberal Party leaders from Eastern Samar, led by Gov. Victor Amasa.

The mass affiliation was sponsored by Rep. Felipe Abrigo, who accompanied the group to Malacañang.

Others sworn in were Mayors Cornelio M. Sison of Guiuan, Luis A. Capito of Borongan, Hospicio R. Rivera of Dolores, Gregorio B. Anguren of Quinapondan, Felix K. Morallos of San Policarpio, Rufilo L. Tan of Llorente, Felix P. Doligon of San Julian, Guillermo M. Altar of Gen. MacArthur, Pedro E. Candido of Hernani, Pio Pinangay of Arteche, Jesus B. Rediang of Mercedes, Gerundio C. Lira of Balangkayan. Francisco Cabugawan of Salcedo, Isidro M. Campomanes of Maslog, and Lucas M. Lomuntad of Jipapad, Vice Mayor Gil A. Corado of Maydolong, Dr. Roberto L. Tan. Jr. of Llorente, and Jaime Opinion of Oras.

In the evening the President was guest of honor at the opening of the convention of the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources Employees Association (DANREA), held at the Manila Hotel.

The President emphasized in his speech the two major tasks of government in agriculture, namely, to achieve self-sufficiency in food—which has been realized—and to produce surpluses for export.

In an executive order amending Executive Order No. 182-A which created the National Social Action Council, the President specified the full membership of the body.

As stated in the amendatory order, the Council shall be composed of the chairman of the Manpower Development Council, the secretary of education, the secretary of the PACD, the commissioner on national integration, the secretary-general of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines;

The chairman of the Social Action Committee of the Federation of Christian Family Movement, the executive secretary of the National Council of Churches of the Philippines, the president of the Philippine Rural Reconstruction Movement, and the presidents of the Philippine Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Philippine Medical Association and the Philippine Bar Association.

The council will elect a chairman and a vice-chairman from among themselves.

September 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had another dialogue with student leaders this time from the University of the Philippines, who have been agitating for the release of P10 million, an unprogrammed outlay earmarked for projects of state colleges and Universities.

The President told them that he will release Monday part of the unprogrammed outlay to fund specified projects, but emphasized that he was doing this not because of pressure from any source, least of all the threat of student protest, but because it was feasible and there are deserving projects which need immediate funding.

Also present at the meeting were Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz and Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco.

Following his meeting with the student leaders, the President conferred with Director of Public Works Alejandro Delena on the progress of the construction of prefabricated schoolbuildings.

Deleña also submitted a report on the allocation of prefab schoolbuildings to provinces, cities and towns, throughout the country.

In the afternoon, the President received Gov. Samuel F. Reyes of Isabela and Rep. Andres Cosalan of Mt. Province, who took up local problems with him.

He later received some 400 foresters from all over the country who called to pay their respects following the opening of their five-day convention at the SSS social hall.

In brief remarks before the foresters, the President announced that he had vetoed certain provisions of the consolidated tax bill, including the transfer from the Bureau of Forestry to the Bureau of Internal Revenue the invoicing and collection of forest charges, and the abolition of inspection fees.

The President said he vetoed the provision on the fees upon previous representations of the forestry bureau, which said that it would lose annually some ₱47 million.

The foresters were accompanied to Malacañang by Reforestation Administrator and acting Director of Forestry Jose Viado.

The President spent the rest of the afternoon in his study going over government reports and working on other official papers.

In the evening, the President was guest of honor at the induction of officers of the Philippine Alliance of Government Employees held at the Manila Hotel.

September 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was occupied the whole day with the preparation of his speech for the proclamation later in the evening of the entire Nacionalista Party ticket at Plaza Miranda.

The President meticulously went over all documents before finalizing his speech which was highlighted by a listing of some of his proposed programs for the seventies.

He was also in close touch with all the senatorial candidates who were going over their own speeches.

Despite the heavy downpour, the Chief Executive directed his aids to go ahead with the preparations for the Plaza Miranda proclamation.

In the evening, the President motored to the rally site where Vice President Lopez and the entire NP senatorial ticket headed by Senate President Gil J. Puyat were already drawing the crowds.

The other senatorial candidates proclaimed were Senators Arturo Tolentino, Jose W. Diokno, and Ambrosio Padiila; former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, Commissioner Mamintal Tamano of National Integration, Governors Rene Espina of Cebu and Rafael Palmares of Iloilo.

September 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS figured centrally in a meeting with two groups both of which related to areas of great concern to him, for both are meaningful in the building of a nation.

He was guest speaker at the initial Balagtas Memorial Awards ceremonies, and he formally received the newly elected officers of the National Federation of the Association of Barrio Councils, who paid a courtesy call at Malacañang.

For the greater part of the day, the President worked on state papers, and focused on other official matters.

At about noontime, he met with Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Assistant Executive Secretary Gilberto Duavit to discuss student problems and the requirements of state schools.

At 4 p.m., the President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, went to the Malacañang Heroes Hall for the first Balagtas Memorial Awards in Pilipino literature and journalism.

The President declared he wanted to see the nation's leaders and more of the people, including the youth, using the national language on a wider scale.

He also expressed the hope that succeeding national leaders and the generations to come will continue to support the development of Philippine arts and literature.

Amado V. Hernandez, well known poet-journalist, won the first prize of P5,000 and was presented with an accompanying plaque for his epic poem, Ang Bayang Malaya.

After the awards ceremonies, the President met the new officers of the barrio councils federation.

During the call the President discussed the problems of barrio development and the important of barrio leaders in bettering the lot of the masses

The officers are: Jaenito Madamba of Capiz, president; Vic Delloro of Camarines Sur, executive vice president; Monico Cervera of Antique and Juliana Lozada of Cebu, executive secretary, and assistant executive secretary, respectively; Glicerio A Lim of Lanao del Norte, treasurer; Arcio Casing of Misamis Occidental, auditor; Charlie Neque of Davao del Sur, PRO;

The regional vice presidents for the seven regions are Mauricio Alcantara from La Union, Cesar V. Jorge from Bataan, Nonilon Gases from Sorsogon, Elias R. Inocando, Jr. from Negros Oriental, Eduardo Maravilla from Iloilo, Columbus Jaucian from Agusan del Sur, and Paul Khingslay Koh from Sulu;

Regional secretaries; Evangelista Raceia of Zambales, Teodoro Agtay of Oriental Mindoro, Marcelo Aguilar of Catanduanes, Juliana Lozada of Cebu, Ernesto Benares of Occidental Negros, Macario Tin of Oriental Misamis, and Arsenio Madayag of Davao del Norte.

While attending to official papers, the President signed a proclamation declaring September 9 a special public holiday in Cebu province and in the cities of Cebu, Danao, Lapu-Lapu, Mandaue and Toledo; and Wednesday, September 10, also a public holiday in Bais City to give the people full opportunity to celebrate the events with appropriate ceremonies.

September 9 marks the birthday of the late Don Sergio Osmeña, Sr., second President of the Commonwealth, patriot, statesman and staunch advocate of nationalism and Philippine independence.

September 10 marks the first anniversary of the founding of the city of Bais.

In other proclamations, the President declared September 19 as "Law Day," and the period from September 15 to 21 as "Savings and Home Loan Week."

He likewise authorized the Knights of Rizal to conduct a national educational and fund campaign during the period September 1, 1969 to April 30, 1970.

In proclaiming "Law Day," the President stressed that the administration of justice is indispensable to a sound and vigorous democracy, and that it is fitting that the important role played by lawyers in the administration of justice and in enhancing the rule of law in a democratic society be duly brought to the attention of the people.

The President also underscored the vital role of savings and loan associations in channelling savings and in financing the construction of homes, particularly to benefit low-income families.

The President authorized the Knights of Rizal to conduct a nationwide educational and fund campaign from September 1, 1969 to April 30, 1970 in order to give “meaning, substance, and reality to the patriotic aims and purposes” of the group.

The Order of the Knights of Rizal is involved in the training and molding of Filipino youth to promote character, dynamic citizenship, civic consciousness, dedicated and democratic leadership and enlightened nationalism.

It likewise seeks to preserve and propagate the ideals and teachings of Rizal.

September 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a full schedule of conferences and desk work, padded further by two speaking engagements.

On trips outside Malacañang, the President attended:

1. The ceremony awarding former Senator Quintin Paredes the Order of Kalantiao, in token of the nation’s appreciation of more than 60 years of exemplary public service.

The Order of Kalantiao is a presidential decoration instituted last year by President Marcos, and primarily intended for distinguished jurists.

2. The investiture and formal installation of former Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez as president of the University of the Philippines, at the U.P. campus in Diliman, Quezon City.

In Malacañang in the morning, the President met both individual and group callers, among the latter a delegation from the Philippine Railways Association of Cebu led by Francisco Pintor; a big delegation from Cavite headed by Commerce Undersecretary Fernando Campos; and a group of mayors from Camiguin province accompanied by Senator Emmanuel Pelaez.

In the evening, President and Mrs. Marcos had Governor and Mrs. Ronald Reagan of California, and their two children, as guests at dinner in Malacañang.

The American governor arrived this afternoon as personal representative of U.S. President Richard Nixon at the inaugural of the Cultural Center of the Philippines.

September 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS again followed a full schedule of activities, which included three trips outside of Malacañang, in-between attending to his usual desk work and the usual conferences with aides and officials, as well as the usual meetings with visitors.

Early in the morning, the President visited unannounced the Philippine College of Commerce campus, where he viewed for himself conditions in the school. He was informed that the campus is inundated by every little flurry of rain. During the visit, he was warmly received by the students who wished him happy birthday in song, and vied with each other to shake his hand.

During the meeting with PCC officials and student leaders, the President disclosed several directives he issued to help meet the problems of the PCC, as well as of other state schools.

Later in the morning, the President went to Camp Aguinaldo where he received the salute of the armed forces and their pledge of loyalty. It is a traditional affair, usually held on the eve of the President's birthday. (See pp. 9594-E to 9594-J for full text of the President's speech.)

At luncheon, the President was guest of honor of the Rural Bankers Association of the Philippines. The affair was held at The Plaza in Makati, in connection with the induction of the incoming officers of the organization.

The President announced at the occasion the early establishment of the Industrial Development Commission, which he deemed an important element in the nation's pursuit of a balanced agro-industrial economy.

Just before going to The Plaza, the President passed by the offices of the Bureau of Public Highways, to congratulate the BPH personnel on their record of achievements. He also reenacted his signing of the bill increasing the salaries of bureau personnel, which he said they fully deserved.

Among the visitors the President received through the day were the Citizens National Electoral Assembly, headed by Msgr. Mariano Gaviola, assembly chairman, who paid a courtesy call.

With Bishop Gaviola were Mrs. Leticia P. de Guzman, vice chairman; Charito L. Planas, executive secretary; Tomas "Ching" Santos, coordinator of Operation Quick Count (OQC); Baldomero T. Clivera of the Public Relations Society of the Philippines, Bishop Jose Yap of the United Council of Christian Churches, Dr. Beatriz Ronquillo of the League of Women Voters of the Philippines, Sylvia Alejandro Wiloci, Dr. Ceferina Manalo of the Jayceerettes, Serafin Benaldo of the National Social Action Council, Ben Salvidia of the Pasay Jaycees, Susan Kabanao of the Students Chapter of Manila, and Greg Fabros and Ramon Barrientos of MRA.

Later in the evening, President and Mrs. Marcos gave a dinner in honor of the guests at the inaugural of the Cultural Center of the Philippines.

The President, on the eve of his 52nd birthday, issued the following message:

On this occasion, I should like to thank all for all their support and encouragement to ensure an effective exercise of the Presidency.

These have been years of deep personal happiness for me, for I have seen the success not merely of my personal endeavors, but above all the emergence of a nation more determined in purpose and secure in its resolve.

At no other time in our recent history, has the Presidency received the nation's generous support.

Our work is unfinished, our goals are larger than what we have accomplished. We face a new decade of rising demands and expectations. The essence of our cause requires a reassertion of our national unity and courage as we travel into modernity.

There are forces that will continue to seek to divide us and voices that will sow discord rather than unity. The duty of us all is to preserve our unity.

September 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS' 52nd birthday, marked simply was highlighted by an estimated 100,000 well-wishers, who trooped to Malacañang from morning till well into evening.

One of his first visitors was California Governor Ronald Reagan and his family, who paid a farewell call prior to their return to the United States. The American official was here as the personal representative of US President Richard Nixon at the formal inauguration yesterday of the Cultural Center of the Philippines.

Shortly after this call, the President began receiving birthday well-wishers, with the local diplomatic corps, following tradition, formally greeting him as a group.

At 8 a.m., the First Family heard Mass celebrated at the Executive Building by Fr. Jose A. Cruz of the Ateneo University.

Among the notables present at the Mass were Vice President and Mrs. Fernando Lopez, former President and Mrs. Carlos P. Garcia, and Senate President Gil J. Puyat. Close relatives and friends of the First Family also attended.

The President and his family joined the guests at breakfast after Mass, served at the Heroes Hall.

Shortly after 3 a.m., the President started receiving the public, including government officials and other VIPs. The Malacañang ceremonial hall was initially the scene of the reception. Then it was moved to the balcony when the rush of well-wishers thickened.

The President paused at noontime, to formally commission the first ferrocement Patrol Craft Fast (POF 317) of the Philippine Navy, which the Navy itself built in line with its research and development program.

The development of fast, light vessels by the Navy was conceived by President Marcos, to add muscle to the unilateral defense plan of the country. He specified in his order to the Navy on the research and development of watercraft to build ships adapted to Philippine navigational conditions.

The President had a late lunch, and after a brief rest resumed receiving well-wishers at the Executive Building.

He stood at his post until early evening.

Following tradition, the President granted executive clemency to 124 deserving prisoners on the recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Parole.

Of the 124 prisoners extended clemency, 19 were granted absolute pardon, three special absolute pardon, three conditional pardon, one conditional pardon with deportation, 53 conditional pardon with parole conditions, and 45 commutation of sentence.

President's Week in Review: September 19-25, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

September 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS covered eight towns and one city in a fast-stepping drive through South Cotabato, leading the NP performance team, plus former Speaker Cornelio Villareal, at public rallies which drew thousands of enthusiastic citizens.

The President stressed the needs of development in Mindanao, and called for harmony among landowners and settlers, who have long been locked in land disputes. The President said that development will be faster if peace reigned in the region.

He also emphasized the importance of roads in the area, pointing to the vast virgin lands yet to be developed. Only roads, he told rally audiences there, will open up these lands.

The President in his speeches in rallies in the province skirted political issues, choosing to preach development in recognition of the primary importance to this region of aggressive economic build-up.

Following a well-planned schedule, the President visited the municipalities of Surallah, Banga, Norala, Tantangan, Tupi, Tampakan, Koronadal (Marbel), and Polomolok; and Gen. Santos City.

Among those in his party were Vice President Fernando Lopez, Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo Tolentino, former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, former CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, former Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, and former Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo.

Others in the NP group with the President were former Speaker Cornelio Villareal, Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave; Rep. James Chiongbian and Gov. Sergio Morales of South Cotabato, as well as other local leaders in the province.

While campaigning in the province, the president was informed by acting Secretary of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles that an outlay of P22,500,000 in capital aid to the Philippines has been approved by the German government.

The Department of Foreign Affairs also reported that funds for shipping and general purposes, out of a total of P65,500,000 applied for were still pending approval.

September 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS ranged the length and breadth of Davao del Norte continually buoyed by the warm welcome and unrestrained enthusiasm of the people in all the places he and other NP candidates visited in eastern and southern Mindanao.

Up early in the morning after only about four hours of sleep, following the huge rally in General Santos City (Cotabato) which lasted till 2 a.m., the President addressed another overflow morning rally in Glan before proceeding to Davao del Norte on board the presidential plane.

An enthusiastic crowd, which included labor and veterans groups, bearing "thank you" placards for the administration's various projects in the province, surged forward to welcome the President on arrival at the Davao City airport at mid-morning.

Following military honors at the airport, the President went to Samal Island for the first rally in Davao del Norte. While there the President officiated at the inauguration of Samal's new municipal building.

The President's next stop was Maco where he again inaugurated another infrastructure project—the Hijo bridge and addressed a big rally held at the Aguinaldo Development Corporation gymnasium. He had a brief rest after lunch in Maco, and then breezed through the towns of Nabunturan, Sto. Tomas and Panabo on the way to Tagum for the final rally of the day.

It was a heart-warming tour for the President as people turned out en masse at every stop to welcome him and his party.

Through the placards they carried, the people expressed appreciation for the countless development projects undertaken by the administration to speed up the development of the province.

The outside crowd that had gathered in the town to welcome and hear him speak, mainly on the need to pursue the multifarious tasks of development, provided a pleasant climax for a day of public demonstration in support of the government's build-up program for Mindanao.

September 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS directed the Philippine Constabulary to "follow to the letter" all recommendations of the Commission on Elections designed to promote a clean, orderly and peaceful election.

In speeches delivered in Davao del Sur, the President said he will approve all measures recommended by the COMELEC to bring about an orderly polls on November II.

"I would like to get re-elected in a peaceful and orderly election," the President said, amid the cheers of large crowds which heard him in public rallies held in that predominantly Cebuano-populated province.

The President in the morning issued a directive to the PC to prohibit the carrying of firearms by non-members of law enforcement agencies, whether licensed or not, not only in Ilocos Sur but all over the country, until after the elections.

Accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who had flown from Manila in the morning, the President covered no less than 10 towns of Davao del Sur. Most of them are coastal municipalities along the Davao Gulf heretofore accessible only by slow water transportation, but which had been connected by brand new roads constructed under the Marcos administration.

Senator Alejandro Almendras, who hails from this area accompanied the President's party in the tour of southern Mindanao.

The President started the fourth day of his stump of the region by addressing the first Mindanao Abaca and Other Fibers Planters Association's convention at the Insular Hotel in Davao City.

The President pledged that abaca, ramie and other Philippine fibers will be subject to intensive research and will receive full government support in order to promote them in the world market.

The President also told the abaca planters to avail of a new lending policy under which the Development Bank of the Philippines grants loans to abaca farmers at the maximum of P1,500 per hectare.

He distributed brochures showing the farmers how they can avail of this policy and how to use the money to better purpose.

The President also said that on the basis of the findings of the French, German and Japanese scientists, high grade pulp and paper can be manufactured from poor grade abaca fibers, and this is a boon to the abaca industry because heretofore there was almost no market for poor grade abaca.

After a brief conference with the local press and radio representatives, the President started south, reaching as far as Jose Abad Santos town on the southern tip of Davao del Sur.

September 22—

THE LAST LAP of President Marcos' tour of the Davao provinces covered four towns winding up in Mati, Davao Oriental, where a huge rally put a proper ending to the whirlwind campaign.

The same spontaneous turnout of people experienced in the other provinces of southern and eastern Mindanao featured the last leg of the campaign in the region by the President and members of the NP performance team.

Covered by the President and the NP team were the towns of Lupon, Cateel, Banganga, and Mati.

In Mati, after the fast-paced sortie through the other towns, the presidential party had lunch just before the wind-up rally. The rally itself proved to be a warm and rousing affair, with the President and the First Lady obviously the favorite of the crowd.

At about 4 p.m., the President enplaned for Manila, arriving back in Malacañang at around 6 p.m. refreshed and brimming with optimism about an NP sweep in the Mindanao region visited.

September 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS called to a conference all the leaders of the warring factions in Ilocos Sur and Lanao del Sur as he viewed with deep concern the proclivities of certain partisans to engage in violence.

The meeting, underscoring the President's interest in keeping the election campaign and the election itself peaceful, free and orderly, took all of three hours and more, beginning at 1:30 p.m. at the Pangarap in Malacañang park.

Earlier in the day, the President devoted most of his time to paper work, so that he would have enough time in the afternoon to thresh out the differences between the opposing groups in the two sensitive provinces. A third group composed of political partisans in Cotabato failed to show at the meeting.

The Ilocos Sur leaders present were, for the NP, Rep. Floro Crisologo and Gov. Carmeling Crisologo, while the LP was represented by Luis "Chavit" Singson, official LP candidates for congressman, and Antonio Villanueva, LP provincial chairman.

The NP group in Lanao del Sur was represented by Rep. Ali Dimaporo, who sat for his brother, Macacuna Dimaporo, official NP bet for representative in Lanao del Sur, while the LP was represented by Princess Tarhata Lucman, who sat for her husband Rep. Rascid Lucman.

Later in the afternoon, the President received the leaders of the National Federated Movement for Social Justice and Reform, led by Manuel Arrejola, the organization president. The group had been demonstrating far sometime in front of the Bureau of Lands, seeking redress of grievances arising from land disputes.

Before meeting the leaders of the demonstration, the President inducted the officers of the Marcos-Lopez Coordinating Secretariat (COSEC), held at the Executive Hall of Malacanang. In the simple program, speakers were the President, Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, and Dr. Guillermo Vega, presidential assistant, who was also master of ceremonies. The President delivered brief remarks after inducting the COSEC coordinators and directors, headed by Mario R. Reyes, director-general.

September 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a particularly engrossing day, as he both followed routine and deviated from it, while coping with various important concerns.

In the morning, he was up early and focused first on his paper work, particularly on follow-up of various problems he assayed as urgent from his conferences with local leaders in the regions he visited the previous week. Before flying off to Canlubang, he fired off several directives to meet the problems of funds for projects, the needs of certain towns and barrios in Mindanao, such as schools, roads, and flood control, among others.

Towards noon, he and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, flew to the Canlubang estate of former Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo, where the President conferred the Order of Kalantiao on the venerable statesman, in recognition of a long and distinguished public career, which spanned three decades and covered the three major branches of the government.

In the afternoon, about 4 p.m., the President was back in Malacañang and resumed his paper work. Then he met with the leaders of the major political factions of Cotabato, to iron out their differences. Calling on the leaders to cooperate in insuring a peaceful and free elections, the President received the full support of the leaders in behalf of this goal.

Among those at the meeting were Datu Blah Sinsuat, NP official candidate for congressman; and reelectionist Rep. Salipada Pendatun. Also at the meeting were Datu Abdullah Sangki, Mayor Emma Gaddi of Kiclapawan, and Commissioner Datu Mama Sinsuat of National Integration, all representing the NP. With Pendatun were Rene Farrales, his brother-in-law; and Datu Don Ampatuan.

Late in the afternoon, the President received the prime movers of four youth groups who had pledged their support for the national candidates of the NP. The youth leaders presented the President with a "Manifesto of Faith." This is the second big aggregation of political activists to pledge support for the President and Vice President Fernando Lopez and the NP ticket.

The first to come forward with a resolution affirming support of the NP election stand and the NP candidates was the Manila Voters Movement.

After these meetings, the President returned to his desk work. He saw no other visitors, but frequently consulted with various officials and close palace aides.

September 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took to the campaign trail once again, covering two provinces in the southern Tagalog region.

Leaving Manila early in the morning, he first stopped at Nasugbu, Batangas, where a huge crowd indicated the order of the day.

The province lived up to its reputation as an NP stronghold as mammoth crowds turned out at every rally during the day, which included the towns of Cuenca, Taal, Bauan, Ibaan, San Juan and Batangas City. In the latter place, the President officiated at the inauguration of the city.

An important mission of the President in Batangas, apart from the rallies, was to confer with officials on the need for a concerted effort toward insuring a peaceful, free and orderly elections.

In all his talks with leaders, the President emphasized the desirability of peaceful elections, as basic to a democracy. He said that he will not countenance any violations of law and order, or of the election code.

In the rallies, the President and the NP team, including Vice President Fernando Lopez, and the NP senatorial hopefuls, namely, Senator Arturo Tolentino, former CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, former Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo, and former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, stressed the issue of performance.

Batangas leaders with the President were Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Sen. Salvador Laurel and Ambassador Jose Laurel III.

The President finished his drive in Batangas late in the evening. Then he and the NP team proceeded to Canlubang, Laguna for a conference with local leaders, and the scheduled rallies in the towns of Calamba and Biñan.

He returned Malacañang late in the night, after a satisfying but rigorous campaign drive which observers with the team termed a per-by voters in support of the Nacionalistas.

On another front, the President in brief remarks read by Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido at the opening ceremonies of the 14th Executive Council Meeting of the Eastern Region Organization for Public Administration (EROPA), held at the Luna Hall of the Department of Foreign Affairs on Padre Faura, lauded the EROPA for giving shape to the “common dream of living and working together in harmony” of the Asian region.

The dream of harmony envisaged by Asian peoples, he said, has been to reality by dint of EROPA’s “unflagging endeavors, and functional, which have paved the way to full development” of the Asian region.

The presence of EROPA leaders at the conference, he said, many of them high dignitaries of their countries, was “further testimony of the forward-looking spirit of the organization, manifested in its efforts to continually improve its services, and to pursue the total realization of international harmony.”

President's Week in Review: September 26 - October 2, 1969

President's Week in Review: October 3-9, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

October 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS swung through four towns of the vote-rich province of Rizal, covering in half a day the entire second congressional district.

Leaving Malacañang at mid-morning, the President and his party first stopped at Tanay, where Rizaleños led by Gov. Isidro Rodriguez gave him and the NP candidates, including Vice President Fernando Lopez, a rousing welcome.

In Baras, the next stop, the same enthusiasm was duplicated by the big throng which turned out for the rally; and in Morong, the President had the added satisfaction of getting a rollicking welcome from schoolchildren at the town public school. He made a stopover at the school to inspect new facilities, including a gymnasium, a home economics building and a pre-fab classroom annex.

The kids gave the President a literally touching welcome, when many of them sought, and succeeded, in caressing his face. The President asked the youngsters to study hard and perhaps become leaders of their people.

The NP team had lunch at Morong, with local officials as hosts. Later, the President had an informal session with newsmen covering him, and also took time out to listen to petitions of local residents as well as conferred with Rizal officials on problems. Out of these meetings, the President ordered steps taken to isolate Laguna Lake, which gives irrigation water to contiguous ricelands, from Manila Bay waters. The, salt water has worked adversely against rice crops.

The President also appealed to political partisans to desist from relying on smear tactics during the campaign, and to adhere closely to the valid issues in the elections and to fair play.

The last stop of the Rizal drive was Teresa, after which the President returned to Malacañang for a breather.

In the evening, he was again on the road, this time to Taguig, where he was guest of honor at the inauguration of the Elizalde Rolling Steel Mills.

The President in his speech at the inauguration of the Elizalde Rolling Mills said that "as your industry grows your responsibility increases; please take care of the interests of your employees and the workers."

He said that with enterprises like Elizalde's "we will be able to gradually solve our unemployment problem." He added the government has given emphasis on the manpower training and development to meet the labor demands of the growing industry in the country.

October 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was in and out of Malacañang as he continued stumping Rizal towns, without unduly disrupting scheduled activities in the Palace, and worked as well on official papers which could not await action.

At mid-morning, the President left for Marikina to resume his barn storming tour of Rizal's second congressional district. With him were his running mate, Vice President Fernando Lopez, and former CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, one of the NP senatorial, bets.

On hand to meet him on his arrival in Marikina at 10 a.m. were Gov. Isidro Rodriguez, Rep. Frisco San Juan, and former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, NP senatorial candidate who is a native of the province.

In his speech in Marikina, the President pledged continuing support to the shoe industry adding that it is not only providing the nation with comparatively inexpensive quality shoes and giving a source of livelihood to millions of people, but is also gaining markets abroad.

The President had earlier issued a proclamation declaring October 4 Shoe Industry Day throughout the Philippines in recognition of the industry's contributions to the economic development of the nation.

The three-day First Philippine Shoe Festival was held at the Hotel Inter-Continental in Makati, Rizal. The Festival sought to project the significant strides taken by the Marikina shoe industry and its contributions to the national economy.

From Marikina, the presidential party proceeded to Binangonan where the fierce noonday sun failed to discourage an impressive turnout at the public rally.

The President's next stop was Cardona, where the President addressed another enthusiastic crowd before returning to Malacañang early in the afternoon.

During the tour, the President was reassured by Rizal leaders, Nacionalistas as well as Liberals, that the province will go overwhelmingly for the NP candidates in the November polls.

Large crowds which attended the public rallies cheered as Gov. Rodriguez enumerated the massive development projects undertaken by the Marcos administration which have transformed the province into a lively industrial and trade center.

The President was back in Malacañang at 2:30 p.m. for second wind before tackling other scheduled activities.

At 4:15 p.m. the President sat down at the Maharlika Hall for a full-dress press conference.

During the conference, the President discussed the conduct of government during the current political campaign period, reported on the performance of the administration in the past three-and-a-half years, and answered questions on national and international affairs propounded by newsmen.

Following the press conference, which lasted up to 5:30 p.m. the President went back to his desk work.

In the evening, the President led the NP public rallies in Pasay City and Mandaluyong, the last one starting late and continuing until the early hours of Sunday.

October 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS addressed public rallies in the Rizal towns as he resumed his whirlwind sorties of the province's second congressional district.

The President said in his speeches that the continuation of the Nacionalista Party administration would mean the completion of the varied development projects being undertaken by the national government not only in Rizal but in the whole country as well.

Rizal Gov. Isidro Rodriguez in turn assured the President that the NP will win with an overwhelming majority in his province in the November polls.

Leaving Malacañang shortly before 11 a.m., the President first motored to Pasig, Rizal where he administered the oath of affiliation to about a hundred barrio captains and other leaders from Laguna, Quezon and Rizal.

From there, he proceeded to Montalban where he and members of his party had lunch, and then to San Mateo, Cainta and Taytay.

Back in Malacañang early in the evening, the President found a large delegation of students headed by Roger Santos, chairman of the Students Movement for Osmeña, who informed the President they were renaming their organization Students Movement for Marcos.

Santos said that their organization, with a membership of 4,957 from 26 universities and colleges in the country, had been “disillusioned” and “disenchanted” with the Opposition standard bearer.

Working on state papers in his Malacañang study later in the evening, the President:

1. Extended ad interim appointments to Severino C. Trocino as clerk of court of the Leyte CFI, Burauen branch; and Fred O. Japzon also as clerk of court of the Eastern Samar CFI, Oras branch.
2. Reappointed Filomeno Biscocho as acting member of the board of directors of the Philippine National Railways.
3. Designated Gov. Anacleto C. Alcala of Quezon province as acting member of the board of directors of the Manila Hotel Company.
4. Set aside some 12.7 hectares from the Quezon Memorial Park in Quezon City, and proclaimed it as the site of the Philippine Science High School.

The President signed the proclamation reserving the science high school site, thus amending Proclamation No. 42 of 1954, which established the Quezon Park; and Proclamation No. 481 of 1968, which established the National Government center.

The President himself is scheduled to officiate at the cornerstone laying of the PSHS building complex tomorrow.

October 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, disturbed by persistent reports of violence in Ilocandia, flew to Vigan, Ilocos Sur, to look into the situation.

The President left the Nichols Air Base at 7:30 a.m. and arrived at Vigan an hour later, accompanied by publishers of Manila dailies.

With the President were publishers Joaquin Roces of the Manila Times, Sebastian Ugarte of the Philippines Herald, Gen. Hans Menzi of the Manila Daily Bulletin, and Prudencio T. Europa, editor of the Evening News, representing Manolo Elizalde, publisher.

Upon arriving at Vigan, the President attended a Te Deum at the three-century-old cathedral of St. Paul.

Later, he addressed his fellow Ilocanos on the need to keep the peace.

Then the President proceeded to the provincial capitol to confer with all political leaders, including senators, representatives, governors, mayors and vice mayors from the five Ilocos provinces—Ilocos Sur, Ilocos Norte, La Union, Abra, and Benguet.

In quick succession, the President:

1. Ordered the Constabulary to beef up its force in Ilocos Sur, specifying that the unit assigned to Vigan, the capital, be doubled within three days.
2. Held the provincial commander personally responsible for further violent incidents that may arise from the PC's failure to follow his orders.
3. Created a special body, composed of the secretary of justice, the solicitor general and the state prosecutor, or their representatives, to hear complaints, publicly or privately, from people who heretofore had been afraid to come out in the open and denounce the abuses of some politicians.
4. Directed the Constabulary to immediately improve its image in Ilocos Sur in order to restore the people's faith in law enforcement agencies.

The President also had a confrontation with the Crisologo and Singson groups of Ilocos Sur and got them to pledge to respect the September 2 agreement banning gun-toting in the province.

After directing the fiscals to start prosecution of guilty parties, the President flew back to Manila, arriving at 4 p.m.

Once in Malacañang, the President received several foreign correspondents for an interview.

The correspondents were Miss Carol Goldstein of the Keystone Press Agency, William Hartley of Wall Street Journal, Neil Jilitt of the Age Melbourne and the Canberra Times, J. Claude Pomonti of Le Monde, and Ajit Singh Rye of the Hindustan Times.

The President also issued an executive order putting into effect the administration plan to create a far-reaching organization for promoting and accelerating the country's industrial development.

The order established the Council for Industrial Development and three subsidiary arms, the Industrial Planning Committee, the Industrial Research Committee, and the Loans and Investments Committee.

The President said that these organizations "will bring the different government agencies and the different segments of the private sector into one grand unified effort—a conspiracy, even—to accelerate the country's industrial development."

He pointed out that "the operation of these new bodies will lead, not to a multiplicity of directions, but to the convergence of government and private sector efforts towards the same set of objectives."

The President appointed Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata as chairman and Finance Undersecretary Roman A. Cruz, Jr. as secretary-general and action officer of the Council for Industrial Development.

Also appointed were Sixto K. Roxas, prominent economist and president of Bancom Development Corporation, as chairman of the Industrial Planning Committee. The Industrial Research Committee will be headed by Dr. Juan Salcedo, Jr., NSDB chairman; and the Loans and Investments Committee by Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez. The last two are ex-officio positions.

Also established by the presidential executive order was a Business Economic Staff to provide technical staff support to the three agencies.

October 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS stumped Bataan and Olongapo City with several of the NP senatorial candidates, and leaders of that province and of Zambales.

The reception accorded the President at all the stops and rallies duplicated if not rivalled similar welcomes at other points in the country.

Scoring with his delineation of the administration's development program, the President was highly believable in Bataan and Olongapo City where the many infrastructure and development projects of the administration are visible and apparently paying off in better living for the people.

The President and his party arrived about 10 a.m. at Olongapo City, first stop of the peninsula drive, with Gov. Vicente Magsaysay, nephew of the LP vice presidential candidate, on hand to lead the rousing welcome.

The sizable crowd followed the President's car all the way to the city plaza for the- first rally of the day. From Olongapo the President crossed over to Bataan where he was met by two of the province's top leaders, Gov. Guillermo Arcenas and Rep. Pablo Roman, both of whom joined the NP stump.

Highlight of the Olongapo rally was the President's swearing in of the city mayor, Mrs. Amelia Gordon, and City Councilors Remigio Tierro and Abner de Guia, all ranking LP leaders turned Nacionalista.

Mayor Gordon told the President that Zambales will give him an even wider margin of victory this election- year than four years ago, with the many projects in the province virtually campaigning for his re election.

Moving fast and fairly close to schedule, the President and the NP team rallied the people to the administration side in the towns of Orion, Balanga, Orani, Hermosa and Dinalupihan. Everywhere the NP team went, there was an instant festive atmosphere, with the crowds as usual besieging the President for handshakes.

With the President were Senate Majority Leader Arturo Tolentino, former Senator Lorenzo Sumulong, former Governors Rene Espina and Rafael Palmares, and former Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, all on the NP senatorial ticket.

The President returned to Malacañang at about 6 p.m. after what he deemed a most fruitful day of barnstorming.

Earlier in the morning, before he left for the Bataan drive, the President received several callers, notably the delegations from Isabel, Pangasinan and Sorsogon, who discussed local problems with him.

October 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS stumped the second congressional district of Bulacan, visiting five towns, all' except one confirmed LP strongholds, with LP mayors and officials.

But judging from the reception the President got at all the towns, where welcomers came out in impressive numbers, led by their officials, LP or NP, the Nacionalistas can expect a major showing in the Bulacan polls.

Provincial leaders, notably Gov. Ignacio Santiago, assured the President that Bulacan will go all-out in November to give him and the NP national candidates a resounding majority.

The President was mobbed at every stop, with people including youngsters tagging after him, and tugging at him for a handshake. The towns he visited were San Miguel, San Ildefonso, Angat, San Jose and Meycauayan. All have LP mayors, except San Jose.

The stump which went smoothly, ended in Meycauayan about 5:30 p.m., after which the President proceeded direct to the GSIS Hospital in Quezon City to inaugurate the edifice.

Among those who attended the inaugural rites were Executive Secretary Ernesto Macecla, former Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, Justice Secretary Juan Ponce Enrile, Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave, Mrs. Carlos P. Garcia, and Quezon City Vice Mayor Ismael Mathay.

He was back in Malacañang about 7 p.m.

Acting on the request of Customs Commissioner Rolando G. Geotina, the President ordered the NBI to enter the investigation of the smuggled firearms intercepted at the MIA.

Geotina said that the NBI's assistance will be needed in making a thorough probe of all aspects of the smuggling attempts, including the identification of all persons involved. He added that it was also necessary to determine whether the aborted smuggling was part of the operations of a gun-running syndicate.

Geotina's preliminary report to the President on the case carried a breakdown of the 112 seized firearms, as follows: Armalite rifle AR-15—91; AK-47—1; Chinese automatic rifle—1; automatic carbine—6; Thompson submachinegun—1; grease gun submachinegun—1; pistols: .45 cal.—2; .38 Cal.—7 and .357 cal.—1; and one Swiss-made rifle.

Pending the termination of the investigation, Geotina said, the confiscated firearms will remain in the Bureau of Customs vault for safekeeping.

October 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS flew off to Oriental Mindoro for a quick campaign swing without necessarily setting aside official chores, which went on as usual, including receiving delegations and individual callers as scheduled, and taking up state papers and problems as they came to his desk.

Up quite early this morning, not at all an unusual thing for him, the President had time to work at his desk before moving out to the airport for the short flight to Calapan, where he and his party landed at about 9:45 a.m.

Two rallies were scheduled for the NP team headed by the President and Vice President Fernando Lopez. The two places were some 68 kilometers apart, but they were central points, and as it turned out both rallies registered crowds which were the largest seen in these parts.

On arrival at Calapan, the mood of the NP rallies was immediately set, with the welcomers, led by Gov. Alfonso Umali, big in numbers and eager in spirit. The President was almost immediately mobbed on setting foot on solid ground, with the friendly welcomers offering handshakes and reaching out to touch him.

The enthusiastic welcome delayed the President from heading direct to the Te Deum set for him at the Calapan church.

After the services, the President and the NP team addressed the crowd which had swelled at the public plaza.

On the platform with him were Vice President Lopez, former CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano, and Rizal Gov. Isidro Rodriguez, NP national campaign manager, among others.

The rally broke up around 11:30 a.m., because the President had to hop to Pinamalayan for another rally. Despite the inconvenient hour, the crowd that greeted him and the NP team in that town was impressive.

The rally was spirited enough to last till 1:40 p.m., with many in the audience going without lunch for the whole period. The response to the President's presentation of the issues in the elections was more than enthusiastic.

The President flew back to Manila direct from Calapan, and after a brief rest was back at his desk.

Among other callers he received was a delegation from Cagayan, led by Gov. Teresita Dupaya and her husband, Rep. Tito Dupaya, who consulted him on local problems.

President's Week in Review: October 10-16, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

October 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS stumped Negros Oriental, including Siquijor Island, with obvious success, as the people responded not only in large numbers but with parades and fireworks.

Arriving at about 9 a.m. at Dumaguete City after an uneventful flight the President and Vice President Lopez were immediately swamped by well-wishers. On hand to give them welcome were local leaders, including Gov. Mariano Perdices, Rep. Lamberto Macias and Senator Lorenzo Teves.

From the rally in the city, the President moved swiftly to Valencia, Bayawan, where the whole group of campaigners lunched, then on to Santa Catalina, Siaton and Zamboanguita.

Crossing on the RPS 777 to Siquijor, the President had a breather from the fast pace of the drive, then was once again engulfed by popular clamor for a personal greeting from him, through handshakes or a word or two.

Late in the afternoon and toward early evening, the President rounded out the campaign in the province with rallies at Larena and Lazi. Then he reboarded the RPS 777 for the overnight trip to Bukidnon.

While working on state papers on board the ship, the President:

1. Directed National Land Reform Council Chairman Conrado F. Estrella to proclaim Jala-Jala, Rizal a land reform area. The President had promised the Jala-Jala farmers when he visited Rizal province recently that he would include the town in the land reform coverage.

The Land Reform Council had earlier announced the proclamation bringing 10 towns in Cavite under land reform. With Jala-Jala added, a total of 134 towns in 13 provinces had thus far been brought under land reform.

Three estates, namely, Hacienda Poblacion, Hacienda Punta, and Hacienda Bagombong, each 1,348 hectares in area, comprise the new farm lands included in the land reform coverage.

2. Ordered a nationwide manhunt for the killers of nine security men in Tarlac, telling the Philippine Constabulary and other law enforcement agencies "not to rest until all the killers are apprehended."

The President issued the directive to Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, specifying that all steps be taken, including harnessing the military and other government police agencies if necessary.

He specified that "no effort be spared in tracking down and apprehending the killers." The government, he said, should "not compromise in enforcing the law."

3. Directed the Department of Foreign Affairs to prepare a request asking the U.S. government for the early renegotiation of the U.S. military bases agreement.

At the same time, the President directed Acting Secretary of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles to lodge a strong diplomatic protest on the acquittal of American serviceman Michael Moomey by a courtmartial which heard the charges against the serviceman.

Moomey was accused of the slaying of Filipino national Glicerio Amor inside the Subic Naval base. The serviceman was acquitted on the theory that the slaying was accidental. At the time, Moomey was off-duty.

The President instructed Secretary Ingles to lodge the protest on the basis of “comity,” allowing Philippine courts to try Moomey.

October 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS travelled more than 350 kilometers through the Sayre highway for a day-long stump of Bukidnon where he visited 12 towns in all most of them not on his itinerary.

The President landed in Cagayan de Oro City in the morning after being ferried by a naval vessel from Siquijor Island. The big crowd of welcomers was led by Gov. Carlos Fortich, Cagayan de Oro City Mayor Jesus Serina, Gov. Pedro Roa of Misamis Oriental, and former Rep. Cesar Fortich.

From Cagayan de Oro the President motored to Don Carlos in Bukidnon for the first rally. He then proceeded to Kibawe for the next rally, where he and his party also had lunch. Afterward, the NP team breezed through 10 other towns of the province, on the insistence of people in those localities.

Because of the large turnout of townspeople who met him all along the route the President had to stop and address them. In the afternoon and evening he led the rallies in Valencia and Malaybalay.

Gov. Fortich informed the President that the huge turnout of people affirmed his belief that the Nacionalistas will carry the province as they had in the past.

Gov. Fortich added that his province had always voted Nacionalista, and will surely vote the same way again because of the development projects of the administration which have considerably improved the region.

Because the President had to travel long distances overland, the rallies were held in the afternoon instead of in the morning as originally scheduled. But despite the sudden change in his timetable, people waited patiently for the President and his party to arrive at the rallies.

The President interrupted his campaign schedule to issue directives to ail appropriate agencies of the government to assist those affected by the Kanlaon Volcano eruption in Negros Occidental, alerting them to possible disaster relief operations following receipt of information on the volcano’s eruption.

Initial reports said a pillar of dark, ash-laden cloud was observed early in the morning rising to about 4,000 feet above the summit of the volcano.

The report also stated that the areas immediately affected were Kanlaon City and the suburbs of La Carlota City, and that more than 6,000 persons had been evacuated to La Castellana, Isabela, Murcia and La Carlota City, proper.

October 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS came back from a two-day stump of Visayan and Mindanao provinces confident more than ever that he will be the first reelected President.

“There is no turning back the clock of progress,” the President said, as he explained why he thought he would win in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao.

“The people have seen what partnership between the people and government can do to achieve positive results. They are not willing to gamble away the gains so painstakingly achieved in the last few years,” the President said, in assessing the two-day stump of Negros Oriental, Bukidnon and Butuan City.

One of the official actions taken by the President upon arrival in Malacañang was to direct the Department of Foreign Affairs to seek immediate discussions with the United States government on the revision of the Philippine-United States military bases agreement of 1947 in order to correct existing inequities and imperfections.

The President told Acting Secretary of Foreign Affairs Jose D. Ingles, that it has become necessary for the Philippine government to enjoy the same rights enjoyed by other countries where there are American military bases, such as Japan and Spain.

These governments are known to exercise wider jurisdiction over offenses committed by American servicemen assigned in the American bases in the countries mentioned.

The President also ordered Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile and Defense Undersecretary Alejandro Melchor to go down to the scene of the Sta. Lucia, Capas, Tarlac killings of October 8 and dig into the bottom of the incident.

The President ordered the presidential special team to spare no one who may have participated in the incident. No effort should be spared to bring the killers to justice, he pointed out.

The President also ordered the team to extend maximum police protection to the families of the victims and three reported survivors of the carnage.

In a speech thanking organized labor for its support for his reelection bid and that of Vice President Lopez, the President outlined the program he will follow for the workingmen should he be reelected to a second term.

The resolution was presented to the President by the Labor Unity Convention meeting at the Manila Hotel.

President Marcos' proposed program includes:

1. Setting up of a Worker's Bank.
2. Establishment of an unemployment insurance system which shall cover all members of the GSIS and the SSS.
3. Low-cost housing program on easy installment for the low-wage earners.
4. Full development of the present medicare program to assure free medical care to every Filipino, particularly the indigent.
5. To carry on the present manpower training program on a more massive scale to equip job applicants with useful skills.
6. Continued encouragement of the growth of trade unionism, labor unification and the development of industry-wide collective bargaining.
7. Enforcement of labor laws, especially for the protection of the sacadas, household help and other underprivileged and unorganized workers.

The President called on the gathered representatives of more than one million organized workers to work with him and the Vice President in the meeting of these objectives.

October 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS flew north early in the morning for a day-long drive in La Union, and to promote an equally important concern of his, which is to rally the people to an orderly and peaceful elections.

Compelled by prior events of overzealous partisan rivalry, in some places exploding into violence, the President underscored in his speeches that it is not enough that the NPs will win overwhelmingly in these elections; it is imperative that the administration should gain victory in a free, honest and orderly polls.

Before taking off for San Fernando, the capital town, the President issued directives from Malacañang, including:

1. To the public works director, in connection with the allocation of 13 units of prefab schools to Pinamalayan, Mindoro Oriental, saying that this should be programmed new but released after the elections;
2. To RCA Chairman Alfredo Montelibano, also the rice agency's general manager, asking him to inquire into reports that the RCA is not buying palay directly from local farmers;
3. To Secretary of Labor Blas Ople, instructing him to probe reports that alien loggers in Agusan are exploiting workers, particularly by delaying payrolls and underpaying workers.
4. To officials of the National Irrigation Administration and the Irrigation Service Unit, asking them to study the possibility of constructing an irrigation system in Santa Catalina, Negros Oriental, and possibly to give it priority; and
5. To the Land Authority governor, asking him to look into the problems of settlers on the Don Caspar estate in Negros Oriental.

The NP team covered eight big towns in the first and second congressional districts of La Union, and made brief stops at several other towns in-between when big crowds virtually blocked the path of the presidential party in order to get the President to speak.

During the swing through this province, the President also formally proclaimed the candidacies under the NP banner of Joaquin Ortega in the first district, and of Jose D. Aspiras in the second district.

After arrival at the airport in San Fernando, the President drove direct to Bangar for the first rally, then doubled back to stump Balaoan, Bacnotan, and this town.

He had lunch at the Poro Point naval base, after which he was back on the road to speak at Aringay, Bauang, Naguilian and Rosario. His whole schedule, however, was thrown off by the whistle-stop speeches in the towns in-between, setting back the timetable by as much as two hours.

Accompanying the President throughout the tour, aside from the NP team, were local officials led by Gov. Juvenal Guerrero.

Later in the evening, the President issued a proclamation declaring Wednesday, October 29, as ILO Day, and created a Philippine committee to take charge of activities insuring its proper observance.

In issuing the proclamation, the President stated that the Philippines recognizes its solemn obligation to the ILO to help promote universal lasting peace based on social justice.

He also issued an administrative order creating a technical committee to study the establishment of free ports in the country.

The President said that a free port or ports in the Philippines will enhance possibilities for increasing foreign trade and will also stimulate activity in other Philippine ports and domestic shipping, as well as develop the processing industries.

October 14—

PRESIDENT MARCOS pressed the NP drive to solidify North Luzon votes, as he went on the third day of a campaign swing in the region, with a sortie to Nueva Ecija, touching some eight towns.

He flew from Baguio City in the morning to Laur, lump-off point of the drive. Before leaving Baguio, he conferred with provincial and city officials there, notably Baguio City Mayor Luis Lardizabal, Benguet Gov. Ben Palispis, Rep. Andres Cosalan, and former Gov. Bado Dangwa. Also present at the meeting were Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Press Secretary Francisco S. Tatad, and Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave.

Arriving at Laur 9:30 a.m., the President pushed off shortly after for the rallies at the towns of Bongabong and Rizal, which took him and the NP team straight through to high noon. The presidential party had a late lunch in Rizal.

After a brief rest, the President once again led the Nacionalista Party performance team in the public rallies at the towns of Lupao, Cuyapo, Guimba, Cabiao, and San Isidro, each of which bloomed with colorful and vast crowds which exhibited robust enthusiasm for the President and other NP candidates.

The NP stumpers had dinner at San Isidro, before proceeding to Gapan to cap the day's successful sorties with a mammoth rally.

October 15—

PRESIDENT MARCOS held a series of meetings on various national problems the whole day.

Early in the day, he had brief consultations with Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, and Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio Feliciano on state matters affecting their departments.

Shortly before 10 a.m., he motored to Pasig, Rizal where he had two more conferences.

The first was with the representatives of the Inter-Island Deep-Sea Fishing Association, who presented the problems of the fishing industry. The President, recognizing the reasonableness of the requests and urgency of the problems, acted on-the-spot to meet the needs of the industry, by giving specific orders to the government officials concerned.

Among other directives, the President ordered:

1. Customs Commissioner Rolando Geotina to set aside Pier 14 for the use of deep-sea fishermen, and that improvements and repairs needed by the pier be immediately attended to; including better lighting facilities and an efficient water system.
2. Fisheries Commissioner Andres Mane to study the feasibility of returning to the Fisheries Commission the supervision of fishing vessels. The Philippine Coast Guard was recently authorized to exercise this function.
3. The Fisheries Market Administration to recognize the joint chairmanship of Mayor Felipe del Rosario of Navotas and the Fisheries Commissioner.
4. Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata to conduct an investigation of reported negligence in the maintenance and operation of the lighthouse on Apo Reef, located at a point between Mindoro Occidental and Buswanga in Palawan.

According to fishermen the lighthouse is often out of commission causing hazards to fishermen who must sail without the navigational aid provided by the installation.

5. Director Deleña of Public Works to assign immediately a crew to dredge the Navotas River in Malabon.

The second conference was with provincial, municipal and barrio officials of Rizal's first district. The President threshed out with these officials their most pressing problems. The group also pledged full support for the President's bid for a second term.

The President's conferences in Pasig lasted until about 12:30 p.m. He then returned to Malacañang, proceeding straight to the Pangarap guesthouse, where another series of conferences awaited him. This time congressmen, provincial governors, and several congressional candidates composed the conferees.

Among those present were Governors Samuel Reyes of Isabela, Vicente Cerilles of Zamboanga del Sur, Moises Espinosa of Masbate, Anacleto Alcala of Quezon, Jose Evangelista of Ilocos Norte, Tito Primicias of Pangasinan, Sergio Morales of South Cotabato;

Former Gov. Eduardo Cojuangco of Tarlac, Vice Gov. Guardson Lood of Misamis Occidental, Datu and Mrs. Blah Sinsuat of Cotabato, Mr. and Mrs. Rafael Aquino of Sorsogon, Mayor Jose Escribano of Tacurong, Cotabato;

Mayor Elias Lopez of Davao City, Reps. Floro Crisologo of Ilocos Sur, Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte, Ali Dimaporo of Lanao del Norte, Ramon Durano of Cebu, Leopoldo Diaz and Angel Concepcion of Nueva Ecija, and Teodulo Natividad of Bulacan.

The President later met with former Gov. Rene Espina, former Press Secretary Jose D. Aspiras, and Commissioner Jack Arroyo of the Social Security System.

Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda and Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave were present at all the President's meetings, as his immediate aides;

Late in the afternoon, the President was interviewed for radio and television jointly by Nick Joaquin of the Philippines Free Press, Edward Tipton of DZHP, and Ronnie Nathanielz of Channel 13.

In-between desk work, the President continued to receive visitors at his Malacañang study till late in the evening.

In a speech read for him by Board of Investments Chairman Cesar Virata, at the opening of the first national convention of the League of Administration Executives, held at the GSIS social hall, the President appealed to government executives to realize the "urgency of raising" efficiency and competence in government, thus making government services "more responsive to the needs of the people."

The President stressed, "we must, above all, attend with dispatch to the problems of the poor." He said this is imperative because it is the poor who are "in most need of assistance from the government."

October 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS put in a full day's work at Malacañang with the only political rally he attended held right in Manila, in the heart of the city's second district.

For the rest, the President attended to his homework and presided at a round of conferences with local and national officials, covering a wide spectrum of subjects.

So many provincial groups representing political and governmental concerns flowed through the President's office, Malacañang aides had a hard time keeping track of them.

Early in the day, the President received the credentials of Ambassador Haji bin Mohamed, the first Singapore envoy to be accredited to the Philippines as a resident diplomat.

At the usual ceremony, the President responded to the high hopes of the diplomat for an energized regional grouping by affirming his faith in the eventual growth and effectiveness of ASEAN. Both expressed the wish that closer relations between Singapore and the Philippines will grow with the establishment of Singapore's diplomatic mission here.

Up to the time he left Malacañang for the rally in Manila's second district, the President worked on papers in his study, in-between receiving visitors and official groups from all over who came to consult him on various matters.

Among other actions, the President issued two proclamations: one declaring the third week of October of every year as Credit Union Week, the other proclaiming the last week of November of every year as Philatelic Week.

In issuing the proclamations, the President pointed out that credit unions help enhance the dignity of man and strengthen his spirit of self-reliance, while philately fosters international understanding and friendship and promotes patriotism, interest in the arts, culture and science.

The President was in fine form at the San Nicolas rally, with the crowd which filled the rally site and nearby streets highly responsive to the NP explication of issues.

The President told the second district electorate that Manila in this election will break the oppositionist mold of the past and vote the incumbent administration back to office, in appreciation of its achievements in development and in the revitalization of the government.

President's Week in Review: October 17-23, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

October 17—

CAVITE CITY turned out for the Nacionalista rally and for President Marcos, who campaigned with Vice President Lopez and the NP senatorial bets in Cavite beginning early in the afternoon.

The President in the morning followed his usual schedule at Malacañang, rising early and working before breakfast. Then he buckled down to his desk work before receiving callers.

Among others, the President received Sen. Alejandro Almendras and Rep. Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte. Most of his callers were public officials whom he summoned for consultations, or officials with urgent problems to take up with the President.

Just before the President left for the Cavite campaign, he sat down with Maximo Soliven of the Manila Times for an interview.

The President's first target in the Cavite sortie was Indang, where a warm welcome awaited him from residents and local NP leaders headed by former Undersecretary of Commerce Fernando Campos, who is running for congressman under the NP banner.

Accompanying the President were Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave and Assistant Press Secretary Lorenzo J. Cruz, among others.

The President had lunch in Indang and a brief conference with leaders in the locality, then led the NP rally at the public plaza. The enthusiasm of the crowd signalled the unexpectedly responsive audiences in other towns on the NP team's itinerary.

From Indang, the President and NP candidates rallied the electorate in Dasmarinas, Bacoor, and other Cavite towns not on the schedule. The President emphasized the historic role of the province in the struggle for independence, stating that the same heroic spirit is needed to advance national development and make a strong and creative nation.

In behalf of this goal, the President told the Caviteños, his administration will continue to provide ample assistance to all towns-and provinces seeking to enlarge their development, regardless of partisan affiliations. The rally in Cavite City which started in the early evening lasted longer than scheduled because of the enthusiasm of the people.

From Cavite on his return trip, the President attended rallies set in Las Piñas and Parañaque (Rizal), which kept the NP team up till midnight.

October 18—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived in Santa Cruz late in the afternoon, after a successful stump of several municipalities of Laguna, at which he scored with the large crowds attending the NP rallies.

His first stop was at Siniloan, where he arrived at 10:15 a.m. Mayor Arcadio Releñas headed a lively crowd which gave the President a warm welcome.

Afterward, with the town officials as guide, the President toured the place, with a special eye for the 4-km, concrete road recently finished for which he had given the town the funds needed.

After viewing other completed projects, the President addressed the big crowd that had gathered at the town plaza for the rally.

Mayor Releñas pledged the full support of the town for the President and other NP candidates, saying that with their concern and assistance the town made unprecedented progress.

From Siniloan, the President and the NP team hopped to Famy, then to Paete, making whistle stops at Pangil and Pakil. The outsize crowd at Paete was again led by the town mayor, Severino, Villarin, an LP. Informed of the damaged water system of the town, the President ordered the release of ₱50,000 for its repair.

From Paete, the President and his party proceeded to Santa Maria and Pagsanjan; at the latter the President received waves of ovation as he outlined the development of the town as a center of tourism. He had lunch at the residence of Minister Cesar Lanuza.

In the afternoon, the President and the NP team breezed through Luisiana, Majayjay, Nagcarlan, ending up at the Capital town of Sta. Cruz. The President then proceeded to Los Baños and Santa Rosa for scheduled rallies late in the evening.

At the program celebrating the 13th anniversary of the Self-Help Mutual Aid Association, held at the Camp Aguinaldo Officers Club in Quezon City, the President, in a speech read for him by Mrs. Josefa Edralin Marcos, his mother, declared that his administration is committed to “intensify the support that the government is giving to rural communities in terms of initial capitalization, credit facilities and technical assistance.”

He recalled that since 1965, his administration has given emphasis to the program of community development, which, he pointed out, is basically a program of self-help.”

The administration subscribes to the “idea that the government in community development will provide the initial capital, say ₱2,000 for a rural community, to enable the citizens themselves to finish a community project such as an artesian well, an irrigation project, a cottage industry, a community center,” the President said.

October 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed a hectic schedule addressing the Federation of Free Farmers in the morning, and flying to the Visayas towards noon.

The President was guest of honor at the 16th national convention of the FFF, held at the San Beda College gymnasium, where he revealed that vested political groups tried but failed to pressure him into foregoing the implementation of land reform.

Leaving the FFF convention about 10:30 a.m., the President motored straight to the airport and enplaned for Sta. Cruz, Marinduque, where he officiated at the inauguration of the $40 million Marcopper Mining plant there.

Speaking at the inauguration ceremonies, the President said the new mining plant was a testament to “the wisdom of a nationalist-oriented economic policy as it applies to foreign investments.”

“We have shown here,” said the President, “that we welcome capital, that we even invite it, so long as it respects our desires and it respects our rights.”

The President emphasized that the presence of foreign investments should provide true cooperation and partnership to the recipient of such investments, and not merely exploit for the gain of foreign investors.

The President was in Marinduque from 11:50 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. when he left for Iloilo City. The President's party arrived in Iloilo at about 3:30 p.m., and proceeded to the site of the Calinog-Lambunao Sugar Central, arriving there an hour later, to inaugurate the new sugar mill.

The President also officiated at the cornerstone laying of the Passi Sugar Central in Passi town, before proceeding to the other towns of Dingle and Janiuay, where he led the Nacionalista performance team in addressing popular public rallies.

The President boarded the RPS 777 for Leyte.

October 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was at Red Beach in Palo, Leyte to lead the nation in the observance of the 25th anniversary of the historic landing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's liberation forces.

The President used the occasion to make a solemn appeal to his countrymen to reexamine "old ties and old assumptions," at the same time, reaffirming friendship with the United States based not on "reminiscences and sentimentality," but on "mutual respect and mutual achievement."

The President was introduced by General Carlos P. Romulo, secretary of foreign

In his brief remarks, Romulo, declared that "liberation is freedom, and freedom is meaningless without sovereignty."

U.S. Ambassador Henry Byroade represented his government at the gathering.

The President landed in Tacloban City shortly before noon accompanied -by Vice President Lopez. They arrived from Iloilo City where they stumped with several NP senatorial candidates.

October 21—

LEYTEÑOS continued to give President Marcos an exuberant demonstration of support and appreciation as he and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, traversed the western region of Leyte to solidify the NP position in the area and to return the people's obvious preference for the administration candidates.

Shoving off for the day's rallies from Ulot, a barrio of Tolosa, and the homeplace of the First Lady, the President first touched down at Naval town, where a big crowd gave him a royal welcome.

Then, proceeding on a well-planned schedule, the President and the NP team, including former Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, and a reinforced platoon of local officials and political leaders, notably House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso, sparked up the rallies in Calubian, San Isidro, Villaba, Palompon, Gigantangan, and Ormoc City, where a mammoth gathering gave the NP team a heartwarming reception.

Leyte proved its affection for the President and the First Lady by turning the rallies into fiestas, with bells heralding the arrival of the couple, and fireworks lighting up the skies, even as brass bands signaled instant parades of townspeople.

Though the western coastal towns are populated mostly by Cebuano-speaking people, the President's visit proved that he is the man who will take precedence in Leyte in the November polls. Rep. Veloso categorically stated that not one of the 17 towns in the 4th district will give the opposition enough votes to make a dent in the region.

From Ormoc, the President proceeded to Baybay, where he boarded the RPS 777 for Agusan.

In a letter to Vice Mayor Felicisimo Cabigao, who presides over the board, the President took the initiative in resolving the impasse among city officials in regard to the early implementation of the pay increases and benefits authorized by law for Manila public schoolteachers, by urging the municipal board to pass the ordinances or resolution needed to generate the total outlay for meeting the problem.

The President also indicated to the municipal board that the national government will assist in meeting any difficulties the city may experience by applying the authority given by R. A. 6053. This will be in the form of extending ₱4 million from the special education fund.

October 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned from a three-day trip to the South, and immediately buckled down to his office work.

Concerned about a report that a PANAMIN medical camp was under siege by a band of goons in Kamato, Surallah, South Cotabato, he ordered rescue teams to the site.

In another order, issued through Assistant Executive Secretary Ponciano Mathay, the President set aside 100 hectares of the Tala reservation in Caloocan City as permanent site of the Central Luzon Sanitarium.

By this order, the President revoked an earlier directive, issued in September, 1968, to transfer the Tala Sanitarium to another site, so that the reservation could be transformed by the National Housing Corporation into a housing project.

The President returned to Malacañang 2 p.m. today from a campaign trip to the provinces of Iloilo, Leyte and Agusan.

In a speech at the inauguration of the Cantilan River Irrigation Project in Surigao del Sur, read by Infrastructure Chairman Antonio D. Raquiza, the President stated that it is often his thought that “our salvation from the tragic waste of our colonial years, from the decades of dependence on others, lies in the ethic of self-help,” asserting that “the citizen who relies on self-help is an involved citizen” in the “very act of creating a nation.”

Stating that the new irrigation system is “not just a technological breakthrough” but touches both the past and the future of the country, he explained that the new irrigation system will increase crop and thus benefit more people.

“In other words,” the President said, “this single project will energize commerce, quicken agricultural progress, and contribute to Surigao del Sur’s prosperity.”

October 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS concentrated on his desk work, among others filling up vacant posts, acting on urgent state papers, and as usual holding consultations with aides and officials, while also coping with his schedule of visitors.

At least a couple of delegations called on the President, both in behalf of the present election race, one composed of a group representing a former third party; the other NP diehards from Caloocan City.

The President also received the new Filipino boxing champion, Bernabe Villacampo, who wrested the WBA flyweight crown recently from the Japanese, titlist.

Appointed by the President were:

1. Victor D. Pagayuna, as member of the provincial board of Palawan, to fill the third slot in the provincial body, which was created following the reclassification of Palawan from 4th to 2nd class province.

The Department of Finance issued Department Order No. 23 last Sept. 23 reclassifying Palawan province.

Pagayuna garnered the 3rd highest number of votes in the last elections for board members in that province.

2. Urbano Caldoza as member of the Board of Liquidators, to fill the post vacated by Lumen Policarpio who resigned to run for Congress representing Sorsogon.

Among the President's callers were:

1. A delegation of some 50 national, regional, and provincial coordinators of the Progressive Party of the Philippines (PPP) led by Nick Santos Estrella, who pledged the full support of the party members for the Marcos-Lopez team and the entire NP senatorial ticket.

2. A delegation from Caloocan City composed of local NP leaders and coordinators.

3. Bernabe Villacampo who paid his respects after returning from Osaka, Japan where he won the world flyweight boxing title from the Japanese title-holder.

The President continued to work at his desk through the evening.

Official Week in Review: October 24 – October 30, 1969

October 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had quite a busy day with a long list of callers to cope with, beginning in the morning straight through to about 2 p.m., and with three speaking engagements at as many major Manila universities.

The President's first caller was Ambassador Heinrich Roehreke of West Germany, who paid a farewell call. The German envoy has completed his tour of duty here, and has been reassigned to Tokyo.

A big delegation called on the President consisting of aged retirees from government service.

The President informed the group that he had already approved House Bill No. 17084 which extends additional benefits to government retirees, who left the service on or before June 16, 1951.

In a brief meeting with Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople, the President discussed the plans for the establishment of a National Manpower Development Center. The site of the Center was pinpointed during the meeting.

Among the President's other callers were Rep. Jose Fornier, Gov. Julian Pacificador, and Mrs. Lolita Cadio of Antique; Gov. Virginio Lacaya and Vice Gov. Guardson Lood of Zamboanga del Norte; Gov. Ignacio Santiago of Bulacan and RCA Chairman-General Manager Alfredo Montelibano.

At 4 p.m., the President motored to the University of the East, his first appointment with students, who had him as guest of honor at a popular campus rally.

From the U.E., the President moved on to the University of Manila, then to the Far Eastern University. In both schools, the President was also guest of honor at student convocations.

In an unprecedented series of addresses at these universities, the President sharply etched the administration's efforts to deepen the sense of nationalism of the people and to give it meaning by making it part of government policy—in economic development, foreign affairs, and in education.

"Nationalism is the vital issue of our times," the President said, stressing that it "gives dimension to all our acts and it will shape the future of this country."

"Our foreign policy now is dictated solely by our national interest," he said, adding that it is shaped by "our own ends and for our own purposes."

The President also informed the students that he had directed the Social Security Commission (SSC) to work out a system of loans to enable deserving but needy students to pursue college studies on funds borrowed from the Social Security System.

As conceived, the President said, the student loan shall be "payable on a long-term basis subject to the most liberal and practical terms and conditions."

In the allocation of SSS funds, the President directed the SSC that it is "necessary to give top priority to the Student Assistance Fund of the System in order to effect this scheme of student assistance immediately."

The President also directed the SSS commissioners "to adopt such other measures and steps within the bounds of the charter of the Commission as may contribute to the furtherance of the welfare of our studentry."

October 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS set out for a two-day high intensity drive through Pangasinan by flying to the capital town of Lingayen, where he jumped off for the countryside.

But first he presided at the inauguration of the ₱5-million Ambayaoan irrigation dam in San Nicolas as guest of honor. After the rites, he buckled down to the campaign trail in earnest.

San Nicolas, the first rally site of the day, proved a fine choice. The townspeople, reinforced by crowds from nearby barrios and towns, turned out for the President, Vice President Lopez, and a batch of NP senate bets.

Then the President deflected his course to be guest of honor once more at the inauguration of the ₱1.5 million De Palo irrigation system in San Quintin.

The Ambayaoan and De Palo irrigation projects will service a total of some 15,000 hectares in the municipalities of San Nicolas, Natividad, Tayug, Sta. Maria and San Quintin. They are expected to boost rice yield in the area by at least 500,000 cavanese.

From the inaugural, the President joined the NP team at Tayug, thence to Asingan, where both rallies teemed with what looked like entire populations rooting for the NP.

After these rallies, the President took a breather; when the NP cavalcade moved again, it was to virtually race through Calasiao, Malasiqui. San Carlos City and Binmaley, because of the disrupted timetable, caused by insistent crowds along the way, between rallies, who clamored for a presidential handshake of a few words of greeting.

The rallies at all the stops were persuasive signs of a Pangasinan mandate for the President and his running mate. Also great crowd pleasers were NP senatorial candidates Ambrosio Padilla, a native son; Arturo Tolentino, Rene Espina, Mamintal Tamano and Rafael Palmares.

The day's exhilarating work ended up in Lingayen, where the biggest gathering yet seen gave the rally an awesome dimension.

In another front, the President, in a speech read for him by Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, at the closing ceremonies and presentation of awards of the First Constitutional Youth Convention of the Philippines, held at the Lyceum of the Philippines in the evening, pointed out that nationalism, an issue which is central to this year's elections, will be the most important issue in the constitutional convention in 1971.

"The decision on whether we mean to be self-reliant, as demanded by nationalists, or to be dependent for all time on other countries, as proposed by the colonialists, will be decisive for our future," the President said.

Stating that the true character of any administration is defined by its policies, the President said that with the consent of the people, he has pursued policies which are essentially nationalistic.

He averred that it has been his concern to protect the Filipino investor and to encourage his larger participation in the economic development of the country without however slamming the door against foreign investors in areas where Filipinos can not compete.

"I invite them on terms which do not prejudice Filipino interests," he added.

In the crucial matter of foreign policy, the President said, "I have sought to re-establish our dignity as a sovereign people, to abolish the "special relations" which in the past had characterized our relations with the United States, and to open our eyes to the possibilities of commercial intercourse with countries of different ideological persuasion, if by this the national interest will be served."

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned to Manila about 3 p.m. from a hectic two-day barnstorming tour of Pangasinan towns in time to address members of the Manila Overseas Press Club.

After spending the night at the Urduja Mansion in Lingayen, following a whole-day stump of 10 major towns the day before, the President early in the morning heard Mass at the famous pilgrimage town of Manaoag.

Then, accompanied by Vice President Lopez, his reelectionist running-mate, the President stumped in several towns, including Pozorrubio, Mangaldan and Bugallon.

In Bugallon, the President noticed that the municipal building used to be the headquarters of the 21st Infantry Division under then Col. Mateo Capinpin. The President served in that outfit as second lieutenant in 1941.

“This is where I learned soldiering,” the President recalled.

The President promised to renovate the dilapidated building after his reelection.

Also with the presidential party were NP senatorial candidates former Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, former Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo and former CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano.

In the evening, the President, in a major policy speech, offered the electorate clear choices in the November elections. “My antagonist offers the bondage of the past,” he said, “I offer the liberation of the future.”

The President spoke at a dinner hosted by the Manila Overseas Press Club of the Philippines.

President Marcos presented the nation with alternatives on domestic and foreign policies, social reform and political levels.

“To begin with,” the President said, “where the Nacionalista is the party of independence, the Liberal Party is the party of colonial dependence.” The President noted that it was the Nacionalista Party which had opposed the parity amendment to the Philippine Constitution, while it was the Liberal Party which upheld it. (See pp. 11992 to 12002 for full text of the President’s speech.)

October 27—

IT WAS A DAY of speeches for President Marcos, as he moved from one occasion to another, mostly as guest of honor.

The first speech he made was at the turnover of command of the ROTC, held at the Philamlife auditorium, where he emphasized the role of the corps in making soldiers out of youths.

Then returning to Malacañang after fulfilling another appointment outside, he made brief remarks at the awards ceremony, after conferring decorations on the outgoing German envoy to the Philippines, Ambassador Heinrich Roehreke; and on World War II hero, Col. Jesus Villamor, who led Filipino pilots against Japanese warplanes despite being outnumbered and outgunned.

Ambassador Roehreke, who is leaving Manila after completing his tour of duty here, was awarded the Order of Sikatuna, rank of Lakan, “for outstanding services in the field of international relations.”

The German envoy has represented his country in the Philippines since November 17, 1967.

Col. Villamor was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Star (with bronze anahaw leaf) and the Distinguished Aviation Cross for his daring exploits during the defense of the Philippines against the Japanese invaders.

Back at his study near noon, the President began receiving callers, including local officials, and private individuals. After lunch, he rested briefly then worked on state papers till mid-afternoon.

Then, at 4 p.m., he was off again to attend as guest of honor the cornerstone-laying rites at the Fort Bonifacio site of the Greater Manila Terminal Food Market.

The President, enroute to the GMTFM, passed by Hulo, in Mandaluyong, Rizal, where he witnessed the formal signing of the contract selling some property of the Philippine National Railway to the provincial government of Rizal.

The property consists of 16 hectares mortgaged to the PNB. The provincial government which had requested the sale of the property, will use the land to provide a low-cost housing project for the public.

From Hulo, the President proceeded to Fort Bonifacio. In his remarks, the President said that the GMTFM fulfills his desire to thresh out the conflicting interests of diverse groups engaged in food production and merchandising, such that more people will be benefited.

“The stepped-up food production campaign and the promotion of export crops, for example, will be self-defeating unless we provide a marketing system that will allow the proper and economical handling, packing, transport collection, storage and distribution of perishable food products,” the President explained.

The disappointing results of past efforts to increase food production, he said, were due to limited marketing and storage facilities. The GMTFM is the answer to this problem, he continued, for it will minimize loss and wastage, while its various other projects and operations will reduce distribution costs and thus narrow the gap between farm and consumer prices.

On one hand, he pointed out, farm producers will have a greater share of the price and on the other, consumers will pay less for fresh foodstuff.

More than just a trading place, he said, the GMTFM will also go into “the root of the problem of sharp imbalances between food supply and demand in our country.”

After the GMTFM rites, the President went on to the Philippine Air Lines compound where he officiated at the formal induction of the new officers of the PAL Employees Association (PALEA).

On his return to Malacañang, he resumed his desk work, punctuated by conferences with aides and officials.

October 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived in Bacolod City at about 2 p.m., via Lipa City where he headlined the NP rally, which was attended not only by an outsize crowd of residents but also by delegations from nearby towns.

Arriving in the city early in the afternoon, the President had a round of talks with local leaders, then an hour later showed up at Kabankalan, where he inaugurated the new sugar mill of the Southern Negros Development Corporation.

In his speech, the President noted the need for improving the lot of the common workers, and asked sugar industry leaders to lead the way in bringing social justice to workers.

In the evening, the President once again led the NP candidates in a grand rally in Bacolod City. As before, the city turned out for the President in impressive numbers.

Besides the President, other NP stalwarts including Vice President Fernando Lopez, sparked the rally.

After the rally, the President boarded the RPS 777 for Barili, Cebu.

The President, in a memorandum to the Board of Liquidators, directed the Board to take over the assets and liabilities of the multi-million peso National Marketing Corporation (NAMARCO).

The skeleton force existing in the NAMARCO will continue to perform its duties and functions but it will be under the administrative supervision of the Board of Liquidators.

With the approval of the President, the Board of Liquidators will sell or otherwise dispose of the properties and other assets of the marketing firm.

The proceeds of such sale shall be used to settle all outstanding accounts of the NAMARCO, including operational expenses, in accordance with the priorities established by law.

October 29—

PRESIDENT MARCOS landed at Toledo City in the morning, after an overnight voyage on a naval boat from Bacolod City.

In uncertain weather, with showers interspersing with spells of unrelieved heat, the President led a kilometer-long motorcade through 50 km. mountain road along the southern coast of Cebu to keep appointment with the people of barili, where the first popular rally of the day was set.

Along the way, the President was pleasantly surprised by the big clusters people who lined the road to hail him as he passed. He was informed that it was indeed surprising since the people were not informed of the presidential route. Many of those at the roadsides flashed the victory sign as the President passed by.

Another heartwarming sight for the President was that of the proliferation of NP and Marcos-Lopez posters and stickers, as well as billboards, along the way. Most of the houses displayed NP campaign posters on their walls.

Gov. Osmundo Rama told the President that the people themselves can be credited for this display since they had not been told beforehand about the President's coming, and in any case the posters appeared to have been put up long ago.

Reflecting the same warmth noted in Barili were the receptions given the President and the NP team at the other rallies in no less than 10 towns in that southern part of the province. The towns visited by the President, where huge crowds waited patiently for his appearance, included Malabuyoc, Santander, Argao, San Fernando, Naga and Minglanilla.

Arriving in Cebu City long after nightfall, quite behind schedule, the President first rested then held a press conference with the local media, including press, radio and TV representatives. The conference was held at the VIP room of the Mactan air terminal.

After the grand rally in Cebu City in the evening the President and the NP candidates then prepared for their return trip to Manila.

The President, in a speech read by Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople at the ceremonies celebrating International Labor Organization Day, held at The Plaza, in Makati, Rizal, said that the Philippines seeks national development based on social justice benefiting not just a few but all of the people, such that the fruits of development are shared as equitably as possible.

This sharing, he said, is “at the very heart of social justice.”

“We in the Philippines feel a vacarious sense of triumph” he said, “for we have always closely supported the varied ILO programs for the common man.”

The ILO, he pointed out, has always stood for ‘the cause of world peace based on social justice.’”

He added that the ILO ideal of peace based on social justice “encapsulates the whole purpose and spirit of the United Nations itself.”

In the spirit of the national ideology of liberty and social justice, and of the ILO’s guiding principles the President said, “we are carrying out far-reaching reforms in our society, designed to liberate the energies and talents of our people.” (See pp. 12003 to 12006 for full text of the President’s speech.)

October 30—

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned from his three-day trip to the Visayas, and immediately proceeded to Tanay, Rizal, for the turnover rites of the Madrigal Village.

He joined at Camp Capinpin, site of the village, in Barrio Sampaloc, Tanay, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who had arrived earlier.

The President formally received from the First Lady, the 18-hectare Vicente Madrigal Training School for Boys, the fifth project completed under Mrs. Marcos’ integrated social welfare program aimed at assisting the administration’s youth and manpower development program.

After the turnover, the President returned to Malacañang, arriving there about 1 p.m. He rested briefly in the afternoon, then went back into harness, first receiving Quezon City officials headed by Mayor Norberto Amoranto and Vice Mayor Ismael Mathay, Jr. For the rest of the afternoon and well into evening, the President worked on states papers.

At about 7:30 p.m., the President left for Pasig, Rizal, where he was to lead the Nacionalista Party performance team in a public rally.

From Pasig, the President moved on to another NP popular rally in Marikina town.

At the graduation exercises of the military trainees of the First Infantry (Tabak) Division, at Fort Magsaysay in Laur, the President, in a speech read for him by Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata, posed the new challenge facing the country and the AFP in particular as the world shrinks and the Philippines grows closer to its neighbors.

The President said that the country’s Asian neighbors can no longer be ignored and Filipinos should learn to live with them.

“In this lies” a new frontier,” the President stated.

However, he pointed out, any AFP reorganization “should be aimed at providing immediate and effective response to the needs or challenges of the times.”

The key to such a reorganization should be simplicity of structure, unity of command and flexibility in coping with any situation, he said.

Today, the AFP is “as good a builder as it is a fighter,” the President said, adding that “it is as it should be, for we seek ever more to avoid war.”

He congratulated the men responsible for the transformation of the AFP into “a large creative force for our social and economic development.” He said that the military has been “a strong catalyst in our drive to build and change our society.”

Earlier in the day, the President issued a proclamation declaring Nov. 1, a special public holiday to give the people ample opportunity to mark the day (All Saints Day) properly, particularly in remembering with prayers departed loved ones.

The President informed the group that he had already approved House Bill No. 17084 which extends additional benefits to government retirees, who left the service on or before June 16, 1951.

Among the President's other callers were Rep. Jose Fornier, Gov. Julian Pacificador, and Mrs. Lolita Cadio of Antique; Gov. Virginio Lacaya and Vice Gov. Guardson Lood of Zamboanga del Norte; Gov. Ignacio Santiago of Bulacan and RCA Chairman-General Manager Alfredo Montelibano.

At 4 p.m., the President motored to the University of the East, his first appointment with students, who had him as guest of honor at a popular campus rally.

From the U.E., the President moved on to the University of Manila, then to the Far Eastern University. In both schools, the President was also guest of honor at student convocations.

In an unprecedented series of addresses at these universities, the President sharply etched the administration's efforts to deepen the sense of nationalism of the people and to give it meaning by making it part of government policy—in economic development, foreign affairs, and in education.

"Nationalism is the vital issue of our times," the President said, stressing that it "gives dimension to all our acts and it will shape the future of this country."

"Our foreign policy now is dictated solely by our national interest," he said, adding that it is shaped by "our own ends and for our own purposes."

The President also informed the students that he had directed the Social Security Commission (SSC) to work out a system of loans to enable deserving but needy students to pursue college studies on funds borrowed from the Social Security System.

As conceived, the President said, the student loan shall be "payable on a long-term basis subject to the most liberal and practical terms and conditions."

In the allocation of SSS funds, the President directed the SSC that it is "necessary to give top priority to the Student Assistance Fund of the System in order to effect this scheme of student assistance immediately."

The President also directed the SSS commissioners "to adopt such other measures and steps within the bounds of the charter of the Commission as may contribute to the furtherance of the welfare of our studentry."

October 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS set out for a two-day high intensity drive through Pangasinan by flying to the capital town of Lingayen, where he jumped off for the countryside.

But first he presided at the inauguration of the ₱5-million Ambayaoan irrigation dam in San Nicolas as guest of honor. After the rites, he buckled down to the campaign trail in earnest.

San Nicolas, the first rally site of the day, proved a fine choice. The townspeople, reinforced by crowds from nearby barrios and towns, turned out for the President, Vice President Lopez, and a batch of NP senate bets.

Then the President deflected his course to be guest of honor once more at the inauguration of the ₱1.5 million De Palo irrigation system in San Quintin.

The Ambayaoan and De Palo irrigation projects will service a total of some 15,000 hectares in the municipalities of San Nicolas, Natividad, Tayug, Sta. Maria and San Quintin. They are expected to boost rice yield in the area by at least 500,000 cavanese.

From the inaugural, the President joined the NP team at Tayug, thence to Asingan, where both rallies teemed with what looked like entire populations rooting for the NP.

After these rallies, the President took a breather; when the NP cavalcade moved again, it was to virtually race through Calasiao, Malasiqui. San Carlos City and Binmaley, because of the disrupted timetable, caused by insistent crowds along the way, between rallies, who clamored for a presidential handshake of a few words of greeting.

The rallies at all the stops were persuasive signs of a Pangasinan mandate for the President and his running mate. Also great crowd pleasers were NP senatorial candidates Ambrosio Padilla, a native son; Arturo Tolentino, Rene Espina, Mamintal Tamano and Rafael Palmares.

The day's exhilarating work ended up in Lingayen, where the biggest gathering yet seen gave the rally an awesome dimension.

In another front, the President, in a speech read for him by Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, at the closing ceremonies and presentation of awards of the First Constitutional Youth Convention of the Philippines, held at the Lyceum of the Philippines in the evening, pointed out that nationalism, an issue which is central to this year's elections, will be the most important issue in the constitutional convention in 1971.

"The decision on whether we mean to be self-reliant, as demanded by nationalists, or to be dependent for all time on other countries, as proposed by the colonialists, will be decisive for our future," the President said.

Stating that the true character of any administration is defined by its policies, the President said that with the consent of the people, he has pursued policies which are essentially nationalistic.

He averred that it has been his concern to protect the Filipino investor and to encourage his larger participation in the economic development of the country without however slamming the door against foreign investors in areas where Filipinos can not compete.

"I invite them on terms which do not prejudice Filipino interests," he added.

In the crucial matter of foreign policy, the President said, "I have sought to re-establish our dignity as a sovereign people, to abolish the "special relations" which in the past had characterized our relations with the United States, and to open our eyes to the possibilities of commercial intercourse with countries of different ideological persuasion, if by this the national interest will be served."

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned to Manila about 3 p.m. from a hectic two-day barnstorming tour of Pangasinan towns in time to address members of the Manila Overseas Press Club.

After spending the night at the Urduja Mansion in Lingayen, following a whole-day stump of 10 major towns the day before, the President early in the morning heard Mass at the famous pilgrimage town of Manaoag.

Then, accompanied by Vice President Lopez, his reelectionist running-mate, the President stumped in several towns, including Pozorrubio, Mangaldan and Bugallon.

In Bugallon, the President noticed that the municipal building used to be the headquarters of the 21st Infantry Division under then Col. Mateo Capinpin. The President served in that outfit as second lieutenant in 1941.

“This is where I learned soldiering,” the President recalled.

The President promised to renovate the dilapidated building after his reelection.

Also with the presidential party were NP senatorial candidates former Gov. Rene Espina of Cebu, former Gov. Rafael Palmares of Iloilo and former CNI Commissioner Mamintal Tamano.

In the evening, the President, in a major policy speech, offered the electorate clear choices in the November elections. “My antagonist offers the bondage of the past,” he said, “I offer the liberation of the future.”

The President spoke at a dinner hosted by the Manila Overseas Press Club of the Philippines.

President Marcos presented the nation with alternatives on domestic and foreign policies, social reform and political levels.

“To begin with,” the President said, “where the Nacionalista is the party of independence, the Liberal Party is the party of colonial dependence.” The President noted that it was the Nacionalista Party which had opposed the parity amendment to the Philippine Constitution, while it was the Liberal Party which upheld it. (See pp. 11992 to 12002 for full text of the President’s speech.)

October 27—

IT WAS A DAY of speeches for President Marcos, as he moved from one occasion to another, mostly as guest of honor.

The first speech he made was at the turnover of command of the ROTC, held at the Philamlife auditorium, where he emphasized the role of the corps in making soldiers out of youths.

Then returning to Malacañang after fulfilling another appointment outside, he made brief remarks at the awards ceremony, after conferring decorations on the outgoing German envoy to the Philippines, Ambassador Heinrich Roehreke; and on World War II hero, Col. Jesus Villamor, who led Filipino pilots against Japanese warplanes despite being outnumbered and outgunned.

Ambassador Roehreke, who is leaving Manila after completing his tour of duty here, was awarded the Order of Sikatuna, rank of Lakan, “for outstanding services in the field of international relations.”

The German envoy has represented his country in the Philippines since November 17, 1967.

Col. Villamor was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Star (with bronze anahaw leaf) and the Distinguished Aviation Cross for his daring exploits during the defense of the Philippines against the Japanese invaders.

Back at his study near noon, the President began receiving callers, including local officials, and private individuals. After lunch, he rested briefly then worked on state papers till mid-afternoon.

Then, at 4 p.m., he was off again to attend as guest of honor the cornerstone-laying rites at the Fort Bonifacio site of the Greater Manila Terminal Food Market.

The President, enroute to the GMTFM, passed by Hulo, in Mandaluyong, Rizal, where he witnessed the formal signing of the contract selling some property of the Philippine National Railway to the provincial government of Rizal.

The property consists of 16 hectares mortgaged to the PNB. The provincial government which had requested the sale of the property, will use the land to provide a low-cost housing project for the public.

From Hulo, the President proceeded to Fort Bonifacio. In his remarks, the President said that the GMTFM fulfills his desire to thresh out the conflicting interests of diverse groups engaged in food production and merchandising, such that more people will be benefited.

“The stepped-up food production campaign and the promotion of export crops, for example, will be self-defeating unless we provide a marketing system that will allow the proper and economical handling, packing, transport collection, storage and distribution of perishable food products,” the President explained.

The disappointing results of past efforts to increase food production, he said, were due to limited marketing and storage facilities. The GMTFM is the answer to this problem, he continued, for it will minimize loss and wastage, while its various other projects and operations will reduce distribution costs and thus narrow the gap between farm and consumer prices.

On one hand, he pointed out, farm producers will have a greater share of the price and on the other, consumers will pay less for fresh foodstuff.

More than just a trading place, he said, the GMTFM will also go into “the root of the problem of sharp imbalances between food supply and demand in our country.”

After the GMTFM rites, the President went on to the Philippine Air Lines compound where he officiated at the formal induction of the new officers of the PAL Employees Association (PALEA).

On his return to Malacañang, he resumed his desk work, punctuated by conferences with aides and officials.

October 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived in Bacolod City at about 2 p.m., via Lipa City where he headlined the NP rally, which was attended not only by an outsize crowd of residents but also by delegations from nearby towns.

Arriving in the city early in the afternoon, the President had a round of talks with local leaders, then an hour later showed up at Kabankalan, where he inaugurated the new sugar mill of the Southern Negros Development Corporation.

In his speech, the President noted the need for improving the lot of the common workers, and asked sugar industry leaders to lead the way in bringing social justice to workers.

In the evening, the President once again led the NP candidates in a grand rally in Bacolod City. As before, the city turned out for the President in impressive numbers.

Besides the President, other NP stalwarts including Vice President Fernando Lopez, sparked the rally.

After the rally, the President boarded the RPS 777 for Barili, Cebu.

The President, in a memorandum to the Board of Liquidators, directed the Board to take over the assets and liabilities of the multi-million peso National Marketing Corporation (NAMARCO).

The skeleton force existing in the NAMARCO will continue to perform its duties and functions but it will be under the administrative supervision of the Board of Liquidators.

With the approval of the President, the Board of Liquidators will sell or otherwise dispose of the properties and other assets of the marketing firm.

The proceeds of such sale shall be used to settle all outstanding accounts of the NAMARCO, including operational expenses, in accordance with the priorities established by law.

October 29—

PRESIDENT MARCOS landed at Toledo City in the morning, after an overnight voyage on a naval boat from Bacolod City.

In uncertain weather, with showers interspersing with spells of unrelieved heat, the President led a kilometer-long motorcade through 50 km. mountain road along the southern coast of Cebu to keep appointment with the people of barili, where the first popular rally of the day was set.

Along the way, the President was pleasantly surprised by the big clusters people who lined the road to hail him as he passed. He was informed that it was indeed surprising since the people were not informed of the presidential route. Many of those at the roadsides flashed the victory sign as the President passed by.

Another heartwarming sight for the President was that of the proliferation of NP and Marcos-Lopez posters and stickers, as well as billboards, along the way. Most of the houses displayed NP campaign posters on their walls.

Gov. Osmundo Rama told the President that the people themselves can be credited for this display since they had not been told beforehand about the President's coming, and in any case the posters appeared to have been put up long ago.

Reflecting the same warmth noted in Barili were the receptions given the President and the NP team at the other rallies in no less than 10 towns in that southern part of the province. The towns visited by the President, where huge crowds waited patiently for his appearance, included Malabuyoc, Santander, Argao, San Fernando, Naga and Minglanilla.

Arriving in Cebu City long after nightfall, quite behind schedule, the President first rested then held a press conference with the local media, including press, radio and TV representatives. The conference was held at the VIP room of the Mactan air terminal.

After the grand rally in Cebu City in the evening the President and the NP candidates then prepared for their return trip to Manila.

The President, in a speech read by Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople at the ceremonies celebrating International Labor Organization Day, held at The Plaza, in Makati, Rizal, said that the Philippines seeks national development based on social justice benefiting not just a few but all of the people, such that the fruits of development are shared as equitably as possible.

This sharing, he said, is “at the very heart of social justice.”

“We in the Philippines feel a vacarious sense of triumph” he said, “for we have always closely supported the varied ILO programs for the common man.”

The ILO, he pointed out, has always stood for ‘the cause of world peace based on social justice.’”

He added that the ILO ideal of peace based on social justice “encapsulates the whole purpose and spirit of the United Nations itself.”

In the spirit of the national ideology of liberty and social justice, and of the ILO’s guiding principles the President said, “we are carrying out far-reaching reforms in our society, designed to liberate the energies and talents of our people.” (See pp. 12003 to 12006 for full text of the President’s speech.)

October 30—

PRESIDENT MARCOS returned from his three-day trip to the Visayas, and immediately proceeded to Tanay, Rizal, for the turnover rites of the Madrigal Village.

He joined at Camp Capinpin, site of the village, in Barrio Sampaloc, Tanay, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who had arrived earlier.

The President formally received from the First Lady, the 18-hectare Vicente Madrigal Training School for Boys, the fifth project completed under Mrs. Marcos’ integrated social welfare program aimed at assisting the administration’s youth and manpower development program.

After the turnover, the President returned to Malacañang, arriving there about 1 p.m. He rested briefly in the afternoon, then went back into harness, first receiving Quezon City officials headed by Mayor Norberto Amoranto and Vice Mayor Ismael Mathay, Jr. For the rest of the afternoon and well into evening, the President worked on states papers.

At about 7:30 p.m., the President left for Pasig, Rizal, where he was to lead the Nacionalista Party performance team in a public rally.

From Pasig, the President moved on to another NP popular rally in Marikina town.

At the graduation exercises of the military trainees of the First Infantry (Tabak) Division, at Fort Magsaysay in Laur, the President, in a speech read for him by Secretary of Defense Ernesto Mata, posed the new challenge facing the country and the AFP in particular as the world shrinks and the Philippines grows closer to its neighbors.

The President said that the country’s Asian neighbors can no longer be ignored and Filipinos should learn to live with them.

“In this lies” a new frontier,” the President stated.

However, he pointed out, any AFP reorganization “should be aimed at providing immediate and effective response to the needs or challenges of the times.”

The key to such a reorganization should be simplicity of structure, unity of command and flexibility in coping with any situation, he said.

Today, the AFP is “as good a builder as it is a fighter,” the President said, adding that “it is as it should be, for we seek ever more to avoid war.”

He congratulated the men responsible for the transformation of the AFP into “a large creative force for our social and economic development.” He said that the military has been “a strong catalyst in our drive to build and change our society.”

Earlier in the day, the President issued a proclamation declaring Nov. 1, a special public holiday to give the people ample opportunity to mark the day (All Saints Day) properly, particularly in remembering with prayers departed loved ones.

President's Week in Review: October 31 - November 6, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

October 31—

PRESIDENT MARCOS at about 3 a.m. was just returning from an all night rally at Taytay, Rizal to Malacañang, after leading two other NP rallies in that province.

But only with a few hours rest, the President was refreshed enough to be at his study for the day's official chores, including receiving callers.

After working for a time at his desk, he received the officers of the Federated Movement for Social Justice and Reforms, who petitioned him for the proclamation of 10 provinces as land reform areas.

The President took under consideration the request, asking that proper study and preparation should first be undertaken before such a proclamation can be made. However, he said that he is for the plan in principle.

Earmarked for early proclamation are three provinces out of the 10, which will be done after a report on the areas eyed is turned in by a group he named.

Among those in the delegation were Manuel Arejola, FMSJR coordinator, Dean Jeremias U. Montemayor and Edgardo M. Virina, president and executive vice president, respectively, of the Federation of Free Farmers (FFF), and Charles Abila, also of the FMSJR. On the government side were Land Bank Chairman Benjamin del Rosario, Agricultural Productivity Commissioner Francisco Saguituit, Justice Undersecretary Felix Antonio, Land Authority Governor Conrado Estrella, and Dean Dioscoro Umali of the UP College of Agriculture.

In the afternoon, the President met with Nacionalista leaders in the Manila area, and discussed with them the homestretch campaign in the city.

The President also received several students of the University of the Philippines Institute of Mass Communications. The group interviewed him in connection with their course in political science.

The rest of the day, the President worked on state papers.

November 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the day quietly with his family in Malacañang, in keeping with the solemn mood of All Saints Day.

He paid homage to departed national leaders and heroes by posting honor guards at their graves.

He ordered the Presidential Guard Battalion to post honor guards at the mausoleums of past Presidents and at the Libingan Ng Mga Bayani in Fort Bonifacio, and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the Memorial for Defenders and Martyrs, both in San Fernando, La Union.

Presidential mausoleums at which honor guards stand 24-hour vigils were those of Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo in Kawit, Cavite; Dr. Jose P. Laurel, Sr. in Tanauan, Batangas; Elpidio Quirino at the Manila South Cemetery; and Manuel L. Quezon, Sergio Osmeña, Sr., Manuel Roxas, and Ramon Magsaysay, all in the Manila North Cemetery.

November 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS stayed in the Palace the whole day today and devoted himself to the official business at hand. He did not receive scheduled callers but was available to public officials with urgent matters to take up with him.

November 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS went through a rather subdued day compared to the strenuous weeks behind him in the last couple of months.

Concentrating on his deskwork, the President went through the official concerns of the day as though there was no election campaign about to wind up.

He consulted with aides and officials as problems came up, but otherwise worked steadily at his desk. He received few visitors.

He also found time to spend a longer interval with his family than other days. But for the most part, the President bent down to the work at hand.

November 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the greater part of today on the campaign trail, as he thrust into Quezon province to strengthen further the NP position in the coming polls.

All morning, the President worked in his study to whittle down state papers on his desk. At the same time, he received officials who came to consult him on official problems. He did not see many private callers.

Early in the afternoon, the President left Malacañang for the scheduled rallies in Quezon province. On his itinerary were three central points of the region, namely, Candelaria, Sariaya and Lucena City.

Arriving at Candelaria about 3 p.m., the President was buoyed immediately by the big and surging crowd that welcomed him. The crowd was further augmented at the rally site, prompting local observers to remark that it was a gathering never before equalled in size in the town.

After the rally, the President immediately proceeded to Sariaya, again meeting such a warm and spirited reception that he perceptively grew in vigor as he acknowledged the cheers and talked to the highly responsive audience.

The main rally was held in Lucena, where again the outpouring of citizens was phenomenal. Many took advantage of vantage points at the rally site to get a better view of the proceedings. People climbed trees, roofs and filled windows near the rally site. The President was accompanied by NP Senate bet Mamintal Tamano, and on the local side, by Gov. Anacleto Alcala and former Gov. Claro Robles.

While at work in his study this morning, the President issued an administrative order condoning the penalties amounting to ₱4,560,170.58 for which tenants and vendees are liable, in connection with the acquisition of estates under the Land Reform program.

The President issued the order in appreciation of the fact that tenants failed to meet their obligations on time because of setbacks suffered from drought, typhoon and pest infestations.

The President noted that the condonation would not adversely affect government investments in the acquisition of the landed estates.

Affected by the condonation order are estates under the jurisdiction of the Land Authority, namely:

1. The Buenavista, Coloong, Panginay and Polo agricultural estates; Bautista, Tibaguin and Taal residential estates under the Bulacan Resettlement Agency;
2. Viola, San Luis, Roma, and Felicidad Intal agricultural estates in Isabela;
3. Toledo, Chipeco, Sabanilla, Divisoria, Kaledian, Sta. Maria, Katubusan, Bahay Pare, and Ma. Alicia Leuterio agricultural estates; and Quitangil, Gutierrez-Morales, Mabalacat, San Angelo, Sandico, and Henson residential estates in Pampanga;
4. Calatagan and Lian agricultural estates; and Lian residential estates in Batangas;
5. Marikina, Baclaran, La Faja del Mar, Pateros, Longos, Tambobong, Maysilo, and Protacio residential estates under the Rizal Resettlement Agency;
6. Dinalupihan and Barretto agricultural estates; and Dinalupihan residential estate in Bataan;
7. Causip, Hacienda Uy, Quitang, and Lirag agricultural estates in Camarines Sur;
8. Caguray agricultural estate in Mindoro;
9. Luisa agricultural estates, and Muñoz residential estate under the Leyte-Samar resettlement agency;
10. Garcia residential estate in Davao;
11. Bongao Island agricultural estate in Cotabato;
12. Luisita, Valdez, Laoang, and Armando Lim agricultural estates; Lim-Sioco, Lim-Bautista, Tizon, and Castillo residential estates in Tarlac;
13. J. Ongsiako, Halili, Lichauco, De Leon, and Crisostomo, and Del Rosario residential and agricultural estates in Nueva Ecija;
14. Hacienda Esperanza, Nable Jose, and El Porvenir agricultural estates; and Chito Gonzales residential estate in Pangasinan;
15. Greymar residential estate in Lanao del Norte;
16. Calawan, Marfori, Philippine Sugar, Yaptinchay, Ambulong, and Laguna Project agricultural estates; Tunasan, Numeriano Reyes, and Lipa residential estates under the Laguna resettlement agency;
17. De Guia, Sande, Tondo Foreshore, Sta. Clara (Old), Sta. Clara (New), Fabie, Ana Sarmiento, Tuason I & II, Barretto, San Nicolas, Mabini, Guido, and Punta, Sta. Ana residential estates in Manila and Suburbs.

November 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met his Cabinet for the last time before the elections, in what was described by those attending as one of the most relaxed sessions they had with the President, who himself was in an expansive mood.

Meeting at 12 noon, the core of government leadership discussed with the President the most urgent state matters at this time, including the coming elections.

The President, notably, set the tone for his administration in the next four years, in anticipation of a new mandate from the people. It will be a government even more-closely attuned to development needs, and particularly focused on the new challenges of the coming decade.

The President told his Cabinet that the aftermath of the elections should not color any actions of government, particularly insofar as recriminations and retaliation against opposition elements or oppositionist thinking is concerned.

Topping the list of topics discussed at the meeting was the funding of priority projects of the government. He asked the fiscal policy committee to sit down with him next November 15 for a thorough discussion of this subject.

He also asked the other department officials to submit to him immediately their priority requirements for the rest of the current fiscal year.

Other major matters discussed were:

1. The intensification of the nations export drive, relative to which the President asked the Department of Commerce and Industry to organize the mechanics for the exportation of local products, especially products of cottage industries.

2. The preparation of next year's budget.

3. The immediate needs in financing of the government reorganization, as provided by law. On this point the President asked Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to submit to him after the elections the budgetary requirements on this.

4. The move to effect the immediate repatriation of 39 Filipino sailors detained by the Saudi Arabian government. He asked the Department of Finance to pay the $90,000 indebtedness of Rep. Rascid Lucman to the Saudi Arabian government, and collect later from Lucman.

In this connection, the Cabinet recommended a study of the feasibility of attaching the properties of Rep, Lucman, as a means of compelling him to settle his obligation with the Saudi Arabian government.

5. The legislative program for the next year, on which the President asked the Cabinet to make studies on the creation of a special fund for peace and order through legislation.

6. The follow-up moves on the rural electrification program.

7. The tourist industry, on which the President instructed Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata to report on the financial requirements of a crash program on tourism. "We should be preparing for Exposition 70 in Osaka" he said.

8. The establishment of farmers' cooperatives, to prepare farmers fully for the benefits accruing from land reform.

The President said one of the main problems in the implementation of land reform is the tendency of tenants to revert to their old status as mere cultivators for rich landowners, because of lack of training in land management.

9. The postal problems, on which the President directed Transportation and Communications Undersecretary Manuel B. Syquio to act immediately in meeting the expected mail jam during the Christmas season.

10. The financing of irrigation pumps, which he asked the Development Bank of the Philippines to take charge of, including purchase and distribution to farmers needing them, all over the country.

During the meeting, the President also exhorted the Cabinet officials to use their influence and moral power to encourage all employees of the government in fully exercising their right of suffrage.

For this reason, he issued a proclamation making Nov. 7 and 10 public holidays, so that employees and other workers in and out of government may be able to trek to home provinces where they are registered as voters.

Earlier in the day, the President had a series of brief meetings with Manila leaders and with private groups, notably officials of the Philippine Chamber of Wood Industries.

In the afternoon, the President did some desk work and as usual consulted with officials, among them RCA Chairman and General Manager Alfredo Montelibano.

Late in the afternoon, he motored to Quezon City to attend a rally held by public school teachers.

Back in Malacañang, the President resumed his desk work, remaining in his study through the evening.

November 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was virtually besieged by media men for interviews in connection with the elections on November 11. He graciously submitted to all requests, which included taping sessions for radio-TV.

Among the radio-TV programs which will feature interviews with the President were the "Let's Talk Business," "Encounter," and the Tri-Media presentation with a panel composed of newsmen Nestor Mata, Ronnie Nathanielz, and Eduardo Lachica.

Others who had tapping sessions with the President were Jose E. Romero, Jr., Alfio Locsin, and Ralph Tagle for the "Let's Talk Business" program; and Marita Manuel and Jorge Arago of "Encounter."

At lunch way after the lunch hour, the President had yet another interview for TV, this time with the Elizalde Tri-Media team, composed of staffers and executives of the Elizalde media organization. The luncheon meeting was held at the Casino Español.

At this meeting, the President pointed out that the government and the economy have worked together to maintain the strength of the peso, and therefore devaluation is a remote possibility in the immediate future.

Other points made by the President include the determination of the NP leadership to develop a strong middle class in the country and to increasingly turn outward to other friendly states with the aim of expanding the export trade of the Philippines.

The development of a strong middle class in the Philippines will be one of the main objectives of his administration in the next four years, he said, if given a new mandate by the people in the coming polls.

In-between these interviews, the President kept pretty much to his usual schedule, working at his desk and receiving callers, notably U.S. Ambassador Henry Byroade, who was in Malacañang briefly.

The rest of the President's workday was devoted to state matters and consultations with close aides and public officials with problems to take up.

Earlier, the President proclaimed Saturday, November 8, a special put holiday in order to give personnel of private firms the same opportunity to vote in their home provinces, as given government employees.

The president has already proclaimed Friday, November 7, and Monday, November 10, as special public holidays.

President's Week in Review: November 7-13, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

November 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS topped his day with a marathon speech at Plaza Miranda where he led the Nationalista Party's miting de avance.

Earlier in the day, after putting in some work at Malacañang, the President went out to address the demonstrators representing the Federated Movement for Social Justice and Reforms, at the Agrifina Circle, on the invitation of the group itself, as it prepared to wind up the demonstration.

From that engagement, the President proceeded to the Manila International Airport area, where he was guest of honor at the preview of the Philippine Village, a project of the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, which depicts through typical Filipino edifices the cultural history of the nation.

The President described the project as "a touchstone of our identity and of our ceaseless search for such identity."

From the village, the President fulfilled private engagements, and conferred with NP leaders. Back at Malacañang, he worked on state matters, and received officials who came to consult him on various problems. Then he concentrated on polishing the speech he was to deliver at the Plaza Miranda rally.

In the evening, he led a triumphal parade to the Quiapo rally site, and began a long and rousing night which was marked by the biggest crowd ever seen at a political meeting in Manila.

November 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS kept close to the palace, as he devoted himself to the official business at hand. He did not receive scheduled callers but was available to public officials with urgent matters to take up with him.

With the elections virtually over, the President did not make plans for any political activity, but kept in touch with his leaders in the field through reports, and acted on the problems submitted to him.

In the evening the President went out to the Manila Hotel where he attended a gathering hosted by the Manila Jaycees, to which the leaders of prominent civic and business organizations were invited, including Rotarians and Lions.

In his speech, the President, who was guest of honor, spelled out the primary issues in the current elections, bearing down hard on the lack of program of the LPs, and their antagonistic attitude toward nationalism.

Returning to Malacañang, the President continued to work at his desk and consult with officials who came in from time to time.

November 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted the greater part of the day clearing his desk of urgent state papers. He set aside his usual schedule of callers so that he could immediately attend to problems, especially those having to do with the national elections, as they came in.

Among the more important actions taken by the President was the issuance of a proclamation postponing the elections in Magsaysay, Lanao del Sur to November 22 in order to "preserve the sanctity of the ballot."

Basis of the President's proclamation was Resolution No. 682 of the Comelec (See pp. 12411-A to 12411-D of the Nov. 10, 1969 issue, vol. 65, no. 45 for full text of the Resolution), promulgated on November 7, 1969, which declared the registry of precinct books in the seven precincts of Magsaysay, null and void.

The President likewise fixed the last day for registration of qualified voters in said municipality to November 15.

The postponement of elections in Magsaysay town was prompted by the "statistical improbability, with no satisfactory explanation offered, for the increase in the number of registered voters from 1,174 in the 1967 election to 6,003 for this 1969 election."

The above figures represent more than 600 per cent increase in the number of registered voters for 1969 over those of 1967.

November 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS kept close to his office in Malacañang where he carried on with government matters. He was available however for consultations with various officials, and kept close tabs on the situation all over the country as the nation prepared to go to the polls.

The President was aroused earlier by reports of violence from Ilocos Sur, but later confirmation of the press stories on the alleged trouble there showed that the incident was of a different hue and was well under control by government authorities.

Nevertheless, the President sat down to write an appeal to the people, calling for all-out effort in keeping the elections peaceful, honest and free. At the same time, he warned against what he called the desperate tactics of the Opposition, involving rampant falsehoods to agitate the voters and sow confusion.

Early in the afternoon, the President met the Malacañang press corps to brief the newsmen on the current situation and to answer all questions they may have on the campaign and the prospects for voting.

The President continued to work at his study through the evening, keeping open, however, his schedule for any special activities that might require his attention or participation.

November 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the entire day in the Ilocos provinces, first to cast his ballot in his hometown, second to further look into the peace and order situation in Ilocos Sur, and third to confer with local leaders. Leaving Manila by car shortly after midnight, the President motored all the way to Ilocos Norte, with a brief stop in La Union and a longer stay in Ilocos Sur.

Arriving in La Union early in the morning, he conferred with local leaders, particularly on the arrangements ensuring an orderly polling. Then he proceeded to Vigan where he brought together once more the warring factions which have made the congressional race in the first district of the province a very touchy thing.

The President made no bones about his determination to keep the polls peaceful in Ilocos Sur and sternly ordered the PC command in the province to uphold the law in all cases of violence and other lawlessness.

Assured that he had damped down any prospect of a hot election day in Ilocos Sur, the President went on to Batac, arriving there well past noon. He first headed for the town church to offer a prayer before casting his ballot in the town schoolhouse. It was 1:47 p.m. when he finished voting.

In brief remarks, he called on the people to come together in unity the better to meet the challenges of the new critical years of the nation.

After a late lunch, the President received local leaders, then motored to the capital city of Laoag, where he boarded the plane which flew him back to Manila. He arrived in Malacañang about 4:30 in the afternoon.

An hour later, the President repaired to his private study and worked on official papers, in the course of which he signed an administrative order suspending from office District Judge Tito V. Tizon of the court of first instance of Balanga, Bataan, pending investigation of administrative charges filed against him.

The suspension of Judge Tizon was recommended by the Supreme Court. Judge Tizon was charged in an administrative case filed with the Supreme Court by the Secretary of Justice with serious misconduct and gross inefficiency in office.

The bill of particulars against the Judge included dishonesty (extortion, bribery, exaction and oppression), gross misconduct, falsification of public documents, violation of laws and regulations, inefficiency and incompetence, and scandalous behavior.

Aside from these charges, the Department of Justice also cited as basis for suspension specific acts of intimidation, pressure and harassment employed by the respondent against the witnesses for the government.

The Secretary of Justice further stated that the efforts of the prosecution agencies to file charges against the respondent's associates and confederates have been obstructed by the respondent.

The rest of the evening, the President kept watch on the election returns, just like the rest of the nation.

November 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had his first opportunity to unwind after months on the campaign trail and unabated involvement with multi-faceted problems which included the election drive.

Sitting up all night last night and well into the next morning, he finally retired at 4 p.m. But it was a restive attempt to court sleep for he was up a couple of time to talk with friends and family. He had breakfast, then again sought to take in some rest.

In the afternoon, he was refreshed enough to do some steady work in his study, even as he received well-wishers. He also sat down with a group of newsmen for a relaxed interview. Early in the evening, he received Vice President Fernando Lopez who came calling.

For the rest of the evening, the President intermittently worked on state business and received visitors.

Earlier, the President congratulated the Filipino people for a peaceful election.

He cited particularly the various civic and tri-media groups, as well as law enforcement agencies and the Commission on Elections, for having worked together to insure a generally clean and peaceful polls.

November 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS held his first press conference after the elections in the afternoon, and later conferred with his financial advisers, which were the main features of his working day.

Apart from these, he worked as usual on state papers, met visitors, including the Philippine basketball team competing in Bangkok; and well-wishers.

The President conferred with Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez and Central Bank Governor Alfonso Calalang on financial matters, during which he announced, among others, that there will be no devaluation of the peso or licensing of dollars, and that the parity of the peso will be defended with every conceivable measure.

He also directed the Governor of the Central Bank and the Secretary of Finance, concurrently chairman of the Monetary Board, to:

1. Negotiate trade credits with the Philippines' trading partners, the United States, Japan, Germany, Australia, the United Kingdom, Italy, Netherlands and Switzerland.
2. Enforce more strictly the limitations on dollar availability for travel.
3. Restrict non-essential imports.

Among his well-wishers was a group of women who congratulated him on his reelection. The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, was on hand to share in the congratulations.

The President was also enthused with the call of the cage team of the Philippines who bade him goodbye. The group was headed by Councilor Lito Puyat of Manila, Coach Lauro Mumar and trainer Margarito Baruel. The team will compete in the Asian Basketball Confederation games in Bangkok, Thailand, as defending champion.

President's Week in Review: November 14-20, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

November 14—

PRESIDENT MARCOS convened his first important official meeting since the elections, when he called the highest advisory body on foreign affairs—the bipartisan Foreign Policy Council—to consider urgent questions.

The meeting, which lasted two hours, focused on the Philcag and the renegotiations of agreements with the United States. The decision reached was to pull out the Philcag, and to start the negotiations with the U.S. as soon as possible.

In a later meeting, the President threshed out with a small group the mechanics of the Philcag pullout from Vietnam, as well as the composition of the Philippine panel which will sit with its US counterpart on the renegotiation of the RP-US agreements, notably the Laurel-Langley Agreement.

The President, acting on a recommendation by the Foreign Policy Council, designated Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo as chairman of the two panels, to be assisted by Senator Emmanuel Pelaez on the military bases negotiations, and by Chairman Cesar E. A. Virata of the Board of Investments on the Laurel-Langley negotiations.

Former President Diosdado Macapagal was asked to act as adviser to the two panels, along with Former President Carlos P. Garcia. Mr. Macapagal accepted his designation, saying "I am happy to do anything to help."

The two panels are each to be made up of nine members.

In the course of his desk work, the President, among others, directed the Central Bank and other monetary authorities to continue stock arbitrage, that is, the free movement of shares of stocks in and out of the country; and suspended two more judges for irregularities.

Suspended were:

1. Santiago Catane, city judge of Ozamis City, for three months without pay. Judge Catane was found guilty of falsification of public documents and wilful neglect in the performance of official duty.
2. Manuel Javelona, city judge of Bago City, for six months without pay. Judge Javelona was found guilty of ignorance of the law and gross negligence in sentencing an accused to a prison term of only 20 days "despite the evidence on record that the physical injuries constituting the offense were serious."

The President received few visitors, but consulted with officials and aides as he worked. He remained at his desk through the evening.

November 15—

PRESIDENT MARCOS turned his attention to the problem of speedy administration of justice, initially the clearing of clogged court dockets, following yesterday's decisions on foreign affairs.

In coping with the problem, the President also considered, among other things, the setting up of fixed standards on the qualifications of prospective judges, including those for the courts of first instance; and the streamlining of court procedures, such as the data recording system.

In the course of the day, the President also held conferences with provincial delegations which have been flocking to the Palace since election day to report on the poll outcome in their respective areas.

Many of the delegations were accompanied by NP reelectionist congressmen who were either winning or teetering in the current poll tabulations. But even more people came just to felicitate the President on his victory, and to reaffirm support for his policies.

Among the congressmen who came to the Palace were Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte, Gregorio Murillo of Surigao del Sur, Salvador Encinas of Sorsogon and Jose Alberto of Catanduanes.

In the evening, the President also conferred with a number of ranking executive officials who consulted him on problems of their departments.

November 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received a manifesto from the Bulacan Marcos-Lopez Movement which called on the leaders of the Liberal Party “to respect the will of the Filipino people.”

At the same time, the President was informed by Labor Relations Director Amado Inciong that the heads of 24 labor federations in the country have appealed to Senator Sergio Osmeña, Jr. to concede the President’s victory in the last elections.

The labor leaders, Inciong said, sounded the appeal in order to “ease political tensions generated by the last election campaign,” and to strengthen the unity of the entire nation.

In its manifesto sent to the President, the Bulacan Marcos-Lopez Movement emphasized that the Filipino people’s will to reelect President Marcos “has been expressed clearly, unequivocally and forcefully in the November 11 national elections.”

The President, with his family, heard Mass at the Malacañang chapel about noontime.

The rest of the day was devoted by the President to studying state papers.

November 17—

PRESIDENT MARCOS went into the third of a series of policy and action meetings with ranking officials and top advisers, with the conference this noon at Malacañang with members of the Peace and Order Council.

Tackled at the meeting were the problems of the anti-crime drive, including the weaknesses of the current program, recommendations for excising these weaknesses and strengthening the drive.

It was observed during the conference that the hitherto untouched gambling joints have been the main spawning grounds of organized violence and other forms of criminality, especially in the urban centers.

The President then told the police chiefs present, particularly Francisco Villa of Pasay City, that if he fails to close in a week the gambling dens pointed out as enjoying protection from influential officials, “I will be going after you.”

The President continued to set the foundations of his second term as national leader, even as congratulatory messages steadily piled up at Malacañang from world leaders and from all sectors within the country.

Among the foreign dignitaries who had cabled congratulations were U.S. President Richard M. Nixon, General Prapass Charusathiara, Deputy Prime Minister of Thailand; Governor Ronald Reagan of California, Governor John

A. Burns of Hawaii, former Mayor Gordon A. Clinton of Seattle, and Vietnamese Ambassador Pham Dang Lam, who is now in Paris.

He also received various callers, notably former President Carlos P. Garcia, who discussed with the President the current political developments in the country; Ambassador Gerardus Johannes Dissevelt of Netherlands, who paid a farewell call following the completion of his three-year tour of duty here. He is set to leave for his home office for reassignment.

In the afternoon, the President was guest of honor at the inauguration of the Department of Social Welfare building, on Gastambide St., Sampaloc, Manila.

The President was back at his desk about 6 p.m., where he continued to work through the evening.

In connection with the anti-crime drive and the social justice program, the President called on the various responsible sectors of the national community to help in filling up existing vacancies in the judiciary by forwarding to Malacañang their recommendations of able men of probity to occupy these posts.

The vacancies include one seat in the Supreme Court, six in the Court of Appeals, and about 120 Court of First Instance judges and provincial fiscals.

The President specifically directed his appeal to the Supreme Court itself, and the other courts; the bar associations, civic groups, church leaders and leading educators. He asked these sources for recommendees to existing court vacancies.

He had also asked Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to coordinate with Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile on the funding of the CFI salas recently created by law. Financing will include facilities for both the clerical and technical staffs of the judges.

November 18—

PRESIDENT MARCOS sat down with his fiscal policy advisers to assess high priority concerns of government in this area, with the promotion of Philippine export products given high emphasis.

Continuing his series of meetings with top level government officials, the President discussed with Cabinetmen concerned and other advisers on fiscal matters general government operations in connection with fiscal policies.

The President observed that “our present export pattern does not reflect the most efficient and most advantageous use of our resources.” He urged, “We must develop new export products from our existing raw materials.”

Aside from export promotion, which was the main focus of the fiscal policy meeting, the imperatives of more efficient government operations were also taken up.

The other topics taken up include:

1. The implementation of on-going projects and programs. The President asked that these be pressed. In this connection, he also said that no new projects will be initiated until the existing priorities have been restudied and reestablished.
2. The measures the Development Bank of the Philippines should take to insure the payment of overdue accounts from subscribers of reparations goods, with the President directing the bank to foreclose and take possession of properties obtained from reparations by delinquent end-users.

3. Strict implementation of the restrictions on local and foreign travel by government personnel. The President also ordered that no new purchases of equipment, especially vehicles, and no filling up of vacancies and/or promotions will be made in the meantime.

Among those at the meeting were Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., NEC Chairman Marcelo Balatbat, GSIS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, SSS Administrator Gilberto Teodoro, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides Virata, DBP Chairman Gregorio Licaros, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, Central Bank Deputy Governor Amado Briñas, and PNB Vice President Eusebio Villatuya.

Earlier the President conferred the Order of Sikatuna on the outgoing Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Takeshu Yasukawa, who has completed his tour of duty here. The award was given for distinguished service in international relations.

The President also received a number of callers, among them Vittorio Vacarri, vice chairman of Alitalia airlines. But for most of the time, he concentrated on desk work.

At lunchtime, he had as guests the staff members of the NP headquarters to thank them for their share of the work in bringing about the successful election campaign.

In the afternoon, after a brief rest, the President was back at his desk.

The President directed Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, to saturate Porac, Pampanga with government troops and bring to justice those responsible for the raid on that town which resulted in seven townspeople dead and 15 wounded.

The President gave the order on receipt of a report from Gen. Raval on the raid. The report said that armed men riding in three jeeps, and believed to be Huks under Commander Tony and Fonting, raided Porac, firing indiscriminately at persons in the streets and at houses.

The President also dismissed four municipal judges and suspended one other for two months.

The drastic action taken by the President was in line with the policy of the administration to purge the public service of corrupt and unscrupulous officials and employees.

Removed from the service were:

1. Juan Bayuga, municipal judge of Flora, Kalinga-Apayao, who was found guilty of oppression and abuse of power, and ignorance of the law.
2. Dionilo Marfil, municipal judge of Esperanza, Masbate, who was found guilty of misappropriation.
3. Felix Saniel, municipal judge of Makilala, Cotabato, who was found guilty of bribery and/or extortion, and defiance and/or disobedience of the law.
4. Cezar Zayas, municipal judge of Lugait, Misamis Oriental, who was found culpable for gross indiscretion and injudicious conduct "tantamount to improper performance of his official duties."

Suspended for two months without pay was Municipal Judge Mariano C. Rosales of Cortes, Surigao del Sur, who was found guilty of abuse of authority and of partiality.

The President continued to receive messages of congratulations on his reelection. Among the notables who felicitated him were Prime Minister Keith Holyoake of New Zealand and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, President of Cambodia.

November 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS stayed close to his office as he worked through the pile of state papers on his desk, and received a stream of visitors.

He took a break for a taped interview with Luis Beltran who conducts a TV public service program, “Straight from the Shoulder.” Also in the interview were newsmen Maximo Soliven and Prudencio Europa.

Gov. Cornelio Villareal, Jr. of Capiz called on the President to report on the election day ambush in the town of President Roxas, during which the governor asked that the incident be thoroughly probed by the PC. The President then directed the CIS to undertake the investigation, particularly in the face of Gov. Villareal’s findings that the ambush was sprung not by NP partisans but followers of Senator Gerardo Roxas.

The President also conferred with various officials, who came to consult him on problems in their spheres of responsibility. Among them were Ambassador Vicente Arenas, Philippine envoy to the Vatican; Senator Helena Benitez, and Mayor Amado Espino of Cabanatuan City.

Private callers included Sebastian Ugarte, Jose Soriano and Andres Soriano, Jr., Jesus and Jacobo Cabarrus of MARCOPPER; Jose P. Marcelo, and Domingo Guevarra, all prominent businessmen.

Later, mostly in the afternoon, more visitors saw the President, among them House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso, Reps. Ramon Durano, Natalio Castillo, Lamberto Macias, Teodoro Galagar and William Chiongbian; and Representatives-elect Joaquin Chipeco of Laguna’s 1st district; Eduardo Guiles, Emerito Calderon, Manuel Zosa, and Celestino Sybico of the 3rd, 5th, 6th and 7th district, respectively, of Cebu,

November 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted most of his working hours to state papers, but welcomed the relief of callers, particularly the courtesy call of the 40 receptionists of the Philippine pavilion at Expo ’70 which the city of Osaka is set to open in March next year.

The President also received the 19-man trade mission from Norway, who likewise paid a courtesy call. The group was here to sound out local business and industrial leaders on possible trade ties.

Others who called were outgoing Korean Ambassador S. H. Yun, to bid the President goodbye after completing his tour of duty; and a group representing local film, producers and film exchanges.

The President had a lighthearted moment with the 40 attractive Filipinas who will receive visitors to the Philippine booth. Noting their expertise, the President said that the group will help promote local exports and tourism, as indeed will the overall Philippine participation in the exposition.

For the rest of the day, the President interspersed paper work with official staff consultations and with receiving callers. He also took time off at mid-day to tape an interview for the TV program “Encounter.”

President's Week in Review: November 21-27, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

November 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS mapped out with his Cabinet the broad plans of the administration in the next four years at a two-hour meeting held at noon in Malacañang, based on the principle of maximum public service at minimum cost to the people.

He stressed that the guiding principle of the administration is “what is correct and what is right, what is moral and legal.”

The Cabinet agreed on giving emphasis to the strengthening of the country's dollar position, primarily by tapping substantially the country's export potentials.

The President required the heads of all departments to submit to him their specific plans for the next four years; especially those pertaining to the reorganization of their offices, as required by law; national targets, their fiscal positions and the problems to be met.

Among others, the President asked the Cabinet officials to:

1. Draft legislative proposals affecting their offices intended for presidential certification to Congress, as well as list pending bills the passage of which is considered urgent.
2. List all vacancies and proposed new positions.
3. Prepare recommendations for bolder incentives to prospective exporters; tourism promotion and industrialization; for improving the educational system; manpower training and land reform implementation.

The President told the Cabinet officials that they have till the end of this month to submit all their papers and recommendations.

During the meeting, Vice President Fernando Lopez, who was asked by the other members of the Cabinet to speak for them, conveyed to the President the desire of the Cabinet to resign en masse, to give him a free hand in reorganizing the executive branch leadership.

The President rejected the proposed resignation outright, saying that since the Cabinet's “performance was good” he could not see any reason for a Cabinet shakeup.

Before meeting with his Cabinet, the President received callers in his study.

Among the President's visitors were:

1. A group representing the University of the Philippines Alumni Association headed by Eduardo Escobar, who invited the President to attend the alumni reunion early next year.
2. Senator Lionel Murphy of Australia, and his wife, Ingrid, who are on a visit to this country. They paid a courtesy call. Senator and Mrs. Murphy informed the President they were newly married, and the President delightedly remarked, “So, you're having your honeymoon here!”

The President also met with Central Bank Governor Alfonso Calalang, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., Chairman Cesar E. A. Virata of the Board of Investments, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, and GSIS General Manager Benjamin del Rosario.

The President took up with his fiscal advisers further measures to conserve the country's dollars, by approving the plan to restrict dollar allocations for travel abroad and for the importation of non-essential commodities.

On the other hand, the President made available dollars for the importation of raw materials in the manufacture of prime commodities.

If necessary, the President said, dollars will also be provided for the importation of canned foods and other prime commodities in order to ensure a steady supply of these, with no prejudice, however, to local manufacturers.

On another front, the President ordered a crackdown on the unauthorized use of government vehicles by officials and employees of the government.

The President gave all government offices a week's notice before rigid implementation of this ruling is carried out. Violators of existing regulations on the use of government vehicles will be sternly dealt with, he said, after the notice runs out.

He then directed Acting PARGO Chairman Quirico Evangelista to strictly enforce the regulations a week hence.

November 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the day in Malacañang working on state papers in his private study.

He did not receive any caller.

Among the papers he worked on were drafts of proposed measures submitted by different government agencies for possible inclusion in the administration's legislative program when Congress opens its regular session in January.

The President also went over records of administrative cases most of which involved erring municipal judges and government prosecutors stationed in different parts of the country.

He signed administrative orders dismissing Assistant Provincial Fiscal Jose P. Santos of Rizal who was found guilty of dishonesty and grave misconduct in office.

The President also ordered the suspension of two additional municipal judges charged of various infractions committed in office.

Suspended were Ciriaco C. Barte, municipal judge of Bato, Leyte and Paccual S. Valera, municipal judge of Barotac Nuevo, for various infractions committed in office.

Just recently, the President fired four municipal judges and suspended one other in his drive to set a high standard of morality in the administration of justice.

In the evening, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, motored to Makati, Rizal where they headed the list of principal sponsors at the wedding of Eloisa A. Garcia and Ramon B. Guevarra solemnized at the St. Andrew de Apostle Church.

November 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS kept himself busy in his study poring over a pile of state papers.

In the afternoon, the President found time to be with his family, and talked a great deal with his children, Imee, Bongbong and Irene, a rare occasion indeed.

While at work in his study, the President issued instructions to key government officials in pursuance of policies laid down earlier.

The President directed, among others:

1. Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez to study which areas of business are overcrowded, with the view to withdrawing government funding assistance from such business ventures now considered capable of moving on without government help.
2. Economic advisers of the administration to study the possibility of the government launching an unprecedented export tax incentives program to boost its massive export promotion drive all around the world.

The President meanwhile received a wire from Fernando Borres, husband of the late Libertad Borres who was shot to death last election day allegedly by bodyguards of Senator Gerardo Roxas.

Borres thanked the President for his personal concern in ordering investigation of Mrs. Borres' death.

Mrs. Borres, then president of the Marcos-Lopez Women's Chapter of President Roxas town, was shot, according to her husband, while distributing sample ballots.

Borres said in his wire: "We who are poor and unknown cannot avail of TV, radio and newspapers to air the truth against the false and concocted lies being aired against my poor wife and her companions. Congratulations. Your victory is the victory of the poor Filipinos like me."

November 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received several delegations, all the more interesting for their diversity, while also putting in a full day's work on state matters.

After polishing off urgent papers from early morning to about 10 a.m., the President began receiving scheduled callers.

Among them:

1. The family of Municipal Treasurer Rodolfo Salae of Candaba, who was slain by Huks for resisting their pressure to alter election returns. The President asked the family to Malacañang in order that he may personally extend his sympathies. In the process, he ordered the PC to give full protection to the family in the face of threats from the dissidents.
- 2; Representatives of the Philippine Press Institute and other prime movers of the forthcoming "One Asia" conference, led by Manila Times Publisher Chino Roces and U.P. President S.P. Lopez.
3. Members of the Expo '70 caravan from Osaka, to promote that city's international fair, which is set to open in March. Led by Eiji Hamanaka, deputy secretary general of the Japan

Exposition Association, the group paid a courtesy call and presented the President with a replica of the Osaka tower.

4. The members of the ABS-CBN telethon staff, which reported the election returns round the clock for two straight days. The group paid a courtesy call.

5. A delegation of Quezon City Jaycees, accompanied by QC Vice

Mayor Ismael Mathay, Jr., who paid a courtesy call prior to the departure of a goodwill team of Jaycees which will tour Southeast Asia, and promote broader trade between the Philippines and its neighbors.

6. A group of officials and residents of the newly established San Jose City (Nueva Ecija), led by Mayor Arturo Pascual. During the call, the President announced his designations of the officials to administer the city.

Other callers included Justice Francisco Capistrano of the Supreme Court.

Late in the afternoon, the President relaxed at the Malacañang Park golf course, with former President Diosdado Macapagal as guest. The former President was also in Malacañang the previous week to participate in the meeting of the Foreign Policy Council.

In the course of the day, the President directed Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo to verify reports indicating that the security of employment of Filipino workers overseas is threatened by third country nationals.

The President instructed Secretary Romulo to bring said reports, if confirmed, to the attention of the United States government "for immediate remedial measures" to protect the interests of Filipinos working with American contractors abroad.

This matter was brought to the President's attention by Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople who pointed to the serious threat to Filipino workers posed by underpaid South Koreans in U.S. trust territories, notably Guam.

November 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the day mostly close to his desk, as he coped with the paper work at hand and mapped out the priorities in government concerns for the immediate future.

In-between long sessions of desk work, he received callers, among them businessmen, foreign visitors, and public officials.-'

The President also considered such problems as the country's dollar reserves and the logging industry, which he felt should now give way to extractive mining which offers enormous potentials for development.

Among the President's callers were:

1. Duncan Ballantine, World Bank official, who paid his respects in the course of a visit here to discuss a WB loan in connection with the survey of the country's educational system to be conducted by the Ford Foundation.

Ballantine was accompanied by Clark Bloom, Reuben Frodin and Arthur Hill of Asia Foundation, and Hugh Philip of the Masquarie University of Australia.

2. Senator Jose W. Diokno; Dr. Cayetano R. Oca, administrator of the National Orthopedic Hospital; Governors Carlos Fortich of Bukidnon and Osmundo Rama of Cebu; former Rep. Cesar Fortich, and Mayor Demetrio Cortez of Mandaue City.

3. A group of staffers of the Kanlaon Broadcasting Service led by Benjamin Benedicto, and including Buddy Tan and George Biduya.

4. Stephen Fuller and Fr. Pacifico Ortiz of Ateneo University.

November 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS focused on the economic measures taken by the government to buttress the dollar position of the country and its monetary stability in general.

In this connection, he held a conference with his fiscal advisers, with publishers, economic writers and editors even as he appealed to the nation for all-out support to the steps taken. He also met with a group of rural bankers.

The President took time out to confer an award on Dean Conrado Benitez, the Rizal Pro-Patria Award, in recognition of distinguished achievements in the fields of education, economics and social reform, which have “immeasurably contributed to the elevation of the quality of life in our country.”

The award, given to distinguished achievers in perpetuation of the ideals of the national hero, Dr. Jose Rizal, was presented to coincide with the 80th birthday of Dean Benitez.

Held at the Malacañang ceremonial hall in the morning, the award ceremony was witnessed by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and members of the honoree’s family and close friends,

The President reserved the morning for his noontime chores and received callers, notably Lt. Gen. Julian Ewell, commander of the II Field Forces of the US military command in “Vietnam.

Early in the afternoon, he began his round of meetings, ending with the late afternoon conference with newspaper leaders and writers.

Afterward, the President went back to his paper work.

November 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the whole day virtually closeted in his study, working on state papers. He did not receive any private visitors, but consulted frequently with officials on various matters. He conferred, for instance, with Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, and at another time with Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda.

Among others, the President took up the renewed drive against smuggling, given urgency by reports that big time operators are set to resume activities, particularly with the Christmas season in the offing. He said however that government men are ready to intensify the war against smuggling.

He also moved to investigate all charges of election law violations, particularly reports of terrorism and fraud. For this purpose, he formed a special investigating committee, headed by the secretary of justice. He asked the committee to begin the inquiry immediately, and to take court action against all those confirmed as responsible for violation of the law.

The President worked steadily in his office till evening. He broke off only to attend, with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the reception given by Vice President Fernando Lopez, in celebration of the NP victory.

President's Week in Review: November 28 - December 4, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

November 28—

PEESIDENT MARCOS again worked steadily on state matters at his study, as he continued to anticipate the priority concerns of the next four years and cope with immediate problems.

Among others, the President communicated his new plans relating to the peace and order drive, particularly in areas where dissidence is active and agrarian problems are complex. He announced that the people themselves will be trained to deal with lawlessness, with government forces acting only in support of citizen initiatives.

The few callers he received included members of the Radio-TV Federation of the Philippines, headed by Leon O. Ty, who paid a courtesy call; former Ambassador Emilio Abello, and industrialist J. Antonio Araneta.

The President also officiated at the ceremonies conferring awards to envoys who had completed their tour of duty here.

The Order of Sikatuna, rank of Lakan, was presented by the President to Ambassador H. S. Yun of South Korea, and Ambassador Gerardus Johannes Gissevelt of the Netherlands.

The two envoys were cited for "meritorious services in the field of international relations."

The joint award ceremonies were held at the Malacañang ceremonial hall. Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo led other members of the Cabinet, members of the diplomatic corps and their wives, and members of embassy staffs in paying honors to the outgoing ambassadors.

The President continued to work at his desk through the evening.

In a statement issued earlier in the day, the President assured that sufficient funds are available for both peso and dollar funding of international obligations and local requirements for production and employment, as he announced complementary measures planned to stabilize prices and meet other urgent needs.

The Chief Executive said that he approved the two new Central Bank circulars prescribing new regulations and restrictions on the use of foreign exchange as the first of a series of systematic and coordinated steps to redirect effectively efforts to solve the country's critical balance of payments problems.

CB Circulars Nos. 281 and 282, the President explained, are measures aimed at insuring full inflow of dollar-earnings, reduction of unnecessary dollar disbursements, curtailment of non-essential imports, and maintenance of the country's international credit standing.

November 29—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent a full day at his desk doing his homework, which focused mainly on the continuing response to the problems of foreign reserves and the immediate priorities in development for the coming year.

.Among other activities, he had a last meeting with Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez on the tasks the latter has to accomplish in the United States, for which he departed in the afternoon; signed proclamations setting aside sites for the proposed free trade zone and industrial estates in Bataan; and followed up on the other requirements arising from the recent measures adopted by the Central Bank to shore up dollar outflow.

The President had a pleasant break from work when a group of young Russians, composing the cultural troupe which will present ballet performances and folk dances in several cities here, called to pay their respects.

He expressed pleasure at meeting the young artists, and complimented them for their talent, diplomacy and good looks. In turn, the troupe invited the President to visit Russia, promising a warm welcome to offset the bitter Russian winter.

Aside from this visit and consultations with aides and other officials, the President worked on uninterrupted in his study through the afternoon and evening.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Directed both the Development Bank of the Philippines and the Philippine National Bank, through the Governor of the Central Bank, to temporarily stop guarantees extended by said institutions or their subsidiaries to cover the foreign obligations of local borrowers.

The President also directed all government financial institutions, including the PNB, DBP, SSS and GSIS, to stop granting commercial loans pending the establishment of priorities in the grant of loans.

This move was taken to assure that the extension of such guarantees is in accordance with proper priorities relating to the economy's requirements.

2. Instructed Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez to firm up negotiations for availment of trade and other credits and advances which would further bolster the President's efforts in stabilizing the monetary situation.

Secretary Romualdez conferred lengthily with the President prior to his departure for Washington and New York.

The President, on the eve of the 106th birthday anniversary of Andres Bonifacio, issued the following message:

"I think it is only fitting that, in remembering Andres Bonifacio, we should as a people summon the same spirit which moved him and his equally inspired followers to strike the blow for freedom despite, the overwhelming odds against victory.

"I like to believe that Bonifacio triumphed because he would not admit defeat, and thus imbued the Filipinos with the sense of achievement. The revolution he started is not finished. We have gained our freedom, but are still far short of the other goals implicit in nationhood. We have yet to develop our land with our own resources and energies, we have yet to unite toward a common purpose and a common dream. We have yet to conquer the new and overwhelming odds which face us.

"If we can move forward even halfway of our envisioned goals, then we shall have measured up to the heroic stature of Bonifacio and the indomitable men who started us toward independence."

November 30—

PRESIDENT MARCOS made a full working day as he evaluated problems and developments relative to the administration's short- and long-range programs, specially those relating to the country's fiscal and monetary position and the development of foreign trade.

Immediately after hearing Mass at the Palace chapel with his family, the President retired to his study where he first went over the speech he was scheduled to deliver later in the afternoon in connection with the rites in Caloocan City commemorating the 106th birth anniversary of Andres Bonifacio.

Later, however, he asked Senator Jose J. Roy to proxy for him at the occasion so that he could work uninterrupted on urgent matters of state. In his speech, the President focused on the problems and challenges that confront the nation, and stressed that the call for unity Bonifacio sounded in his own time must be sounded anew.

“I call on you to rally behind the cause of their own revolution. Let us not be overwhelmed by problems, remembering that Bonifacio and his generation faced even greater obstacles,” he said.

Pursuant to the administration’s program aimed at increasing production of export goods at prices competitive in foreign markets, the President issued two proclamations reserving parcels of public lands in Mariveles and Limay, Bataan as sites of free trade zones and industrial estates.

The reservation of said parcels of land was recommended earlier by Vice President Fernando Lopez, in his capacity as secretary of agriculture and natural resources.

The foreign trade zone reservation in Mariveles total 682 hectares, while that in Limay consists of 3,881,991 square meters.

The President relaxed briefly later in the day with his children, then resumed work in his private study as reports from different government agencies reached his desk.

December 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to focus on his desk work, with many state problems to study and cope with, and the priorities for the coming year to consider.

Accordingly, he did not receive any visitors. Except for officials he consulted or worked with, and palace aides, he kept his schedule of callers closed.

In a formal appeal, the President asked members of Congress out of Manila, abroad or in the provinces, to participate in the canvass of votes cast in the last elections.

Most of the state business he dealt with were continuing matters, but two announcements *came from Malacañang, one, on the President’s pending appointment of four members of the UP board of regents, to fill vacancies, and for which recommendations, are awaited; and, two, on the resumption of the distribution of free medicines to rural folks.

Otherwise, the President worked uninterrupted through the day on undisclosed government business.

December 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took the first steps towards normalization of relations with Malaysia as a new initiative toward regional unity and cooperation, with a directive to the Department of Foreign Affairs to sound out Kuala Lumpur on this objective.

At the same time, the President moved to dissipate the cloud of doubt over the Philippine Constabulary which charges, speculation and continuing partisan sentiment have formed, by ordering the secretary of national defense to convene a general court-martial, or courts-martial, which will try all PC officers and men against whom charges of election law violations have been levelled.

The President took the latter action in an effort to exonerate the PC command in general, which in the main had performed well in policing the last national elections.

For the most part, he was involved during the day with continuing but urgent state matters.

He received no private visitors and limited those public officials who sought to see him.

He remained in his office through the afternoon and evening.

December 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS broke his concentrated desk work since the weekend last, to make an unscheduled visit to the Manila International Airport, and in the afternoon to speak as guest of honor at the inauguration of the new power unit of the Manila Electric Company.

For most of the working day, however, he continued to focus on state papers, during which he made an appeal to all traders especially those in the retail business, to desist from manipulating the prices of prime commodities even as he instructed all government agencies concerned to investigate hoarders of such goods and every instance of price manipulation.

“I wish it known that I will not hesitate to use the full force of the law” to protect the public, the President ‘said in a letter to Ralph Nubla, president of the Federation of Chinese Chambers of Commerce, on whom he called to lead the Chinese community in extending full cooperation.

The President was especially concerned about the participation of the Chinese traders because of confidential reports received in Malacañang that certain Chinese wholesalers and importers of essential commodities are hoarding or “planning to hoard” these items.

Making an unexpected visit at noon at the MIA, the President inspected the facilities of the airport, then conferred with CAA Administrator Federico Ablan, Jr., MIA Manager Luis Tabuena and MIA Customs Collector Salvador Mascardo on the various means of improving civil aviation capacities, MIA facilities, and the processing of plane passengers to; expedite movement and ease the strains on visitors. Returning to Malacañang, the President again buckled down to his desk work, and late in the afternoon, he left for Sucat, Muntinlupa, Rizal, for the Meralco Gardner Unit No. 2 inaugural rites.

In his speech, the President saw the end to the economic restrictions within the next year, which were taken to rehabilitate the nation’s foreign reserves. He said that success is assured with the people’s cooperation.

Again, in the evening the President was back in his study to carry on his desk work.

December 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS focused once again on his homework, with no outside engagements to fulfill and with his schedule of visitors quite blank.

Among other directives, the President:

1. Asked Acting Commissioner Jose Rivera of the Bureau of Public Highways to help repair roads in Manila, notably by making available all the equipment and personnel that the bureau could spare.

The President noted the sad state of city streets on his frequent movements around the city and suburbs.

He also ordered Rivera to submit a progress report on the projected improvement of the road to Tagaytay City.

The President was interested in the improvement of this highway from Manila to the scenic summer resort overlooking the unique Taal Volcano, "because it is vital to the promotion of tourism in this country."

2. Ordered the Reparations Commission to foreclose on and take possession of all vessels procured through reparations, the end-users of which have violated the condition that the vessels should be utilized in international operations.

The use of these vessels in international trade serves the dual purpose of conserving foreign exchange, which would otherwise be spent on foreign bottoms, and of increasing the country's dollar earnings through the international operations of Philippine flag carriers.

For the most part, the President went through year-end reports from various government offices, and studied the plans projected for the coming year. He also dealt with all urgent matters referred to him.

He worked through the day at his study, receiving few visitors, most of them officials, in order to concentrate on official business

President's Week in Review: December 5-11, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

December 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received a few callers even as he continued to work steadily on state papers.

Among others, the President:

1. Signed Executive Order No. 200, promulgating a new manual of student rights and responsibilities, which aims at bringing about tighter rapport between students and school authorities, to the end that {academic development and fruitful social participation by the campus community may be achieved.
2. Ordered the deportation of five aliens, whose continued presence in the country was considered a menace to the peace and safety of the community.
3. Issued an administrative order creating a special committee to take charge of the observance of Rizal Day on December 30. The committee is headed by Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz.
4. Instructed Director Fernando S. Busuego, Jr. of the Bureau of Mines to work out a bill to be submitted to Congress which would set forth procedures for administrative disposal of conflicts in mining claims.

The President underscored the fact that such conflicts have been one of the principal deterrents to the development of mining.

At about 9:30 a.m., the President interrupted his paper work to confer with a group of government officials and private leaders on the existing policies relating to banking and money problems.

Present at this meeting were Central Bank Gov. Alfonso Calalang and Deputy Gov. Amado Brifias, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, Chairman Cesar E. A. Virata of the Board of Investments, PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., Chairman Gregorio Licaros of the DBP, Chester Babst of the Bankers Association, and Victor Lim of the Philippine Chamber of Industries.

Other callers paid courtesy calls on the President, among them Ching Tan of the La Suerte Cigar and Cigarette Factory; Hugh Cullman, Justus Heymans, and Hamish Maxwell, all of Philip Morris, International.

Among other callers on the President were NP senatorial candidate Mamintal Tamano, Rep-elect and Mrs. D. O. Plaza of Upper Agusan, and Gov. Henry Regalado of Misamis Occidental.

December 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to work at his desk, for which reason he called off a personal appearance at the opening ceremonies of the Telecommunications and Electronics Week, where his scheduled speech was read instead by Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda.

In the speech, the President endorsed the Filipinization of the telecommunications and electronics industries, and asked Filipinos involved in these fields to accelerate their efforts toward attainment of this objective.

During the day, the President received Secretary of Education O. D. Corpuz and Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio Feliciano, both of whom submitted the draft of the policy statement of the Commission on Population.

The President approved the document, which gave full recognition to the urgency of instituting rational family planning in accordance with individual conscience, through education and reasonable persuasion.

The program was deemed crucial because uncontrolled population growth will hamper the improvement of Filipinos living standards and the common effort to achieve national development goals.

The national population policy and program are to be developed as organic parts of social and economic planning and development activity, and will have the following principal elements:

1. The establishment and adoption of specific and quantitative population goals on the basis of reliable demographic data and expected demographic trends.
2. The promotion of the broadest understanding by the people of the adverse effects on family life and national welfare by unlimited population growth, and extension of the means by which couples can safely, effectively and freely determine the proper size of their families.
5. Integration of planning into a broad educational program oriented to the harmonious development of the individual personality, the family, and the nation.
4. Deeper study of legal and administrative policies and measures affecting family size, and if deemed essential, the revision of such policies and measures to balance family size with social and economic goals.
5. The continuation of efforts toward the further reduction of the still high rates of morbidity and mortality among infants.
6. Adoption of policies and programs which will guide and regulate the flow of internal migration, and influence spatial distribution in the interest of development progress.
7. The establishment and maintenance of regular contact with international and private organizations concerned with population problems.

In other actions, the President:

1. Asked for a report on the status of all bills submitted to Malacañang for action, to which the legislative secretary's office said that only three bills signed by the President are yet to be transmitted to Congress.
2. Gave a temporary permit to the Royal Air Cambridge for twice weekly flights between Phnom Penh and Manila. Grant of the permit to Air Cambridge follows the policy laid down earlier, that of giving reciprocal rights to foreign airlines desiring to fly to the Philippines. Under this condition the same right will be given to Philippine air carriers by countries concerned.

This reciprocal "open skies" policy was adopted last year by the administration in conformity with its goals of promoting international friendship and developing the local tourism industry.

3. Created a committee to study the problems of the tourist industry and recommend measures for promoting it and expanding its contribution to the national economy. Named to compose the committee were Executive Secretary Ernesto M. Maceda, as chairman; and Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, Atty. Teodoro F. Valencia, Director of Civil Aviation Federico Ablan, Jr., and Miss Nimia Arroyo, as members.

The President received few visitors so that he could work on important state business with a minimum of distraction.

He remained at his desk through the afternoon and into early evening.

December 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the day quietly at Malacañang with his family.

With the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and their children, Imee, Bongbong and Irene, the President heard Mass about noontime at the Palace chapel.

Although a Sunday, the President also spent a great deal of his time conferring with key officials over the telephone.

He discussed with Chairman Gregorio S. Licaros of the Development Bank of the Philippines the progress of the Greater Manila Terminal Food Market, and ordered Licaros who is also president and chairman of the GMTFM, to put the farmers market into business operation immediately.

In his study, the President also went over price situation reports, and summoned for a conference in Malacañang several leaders of the sugar and flour industries.

He also directed Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to effect a 10 per cent across-the-board reduction of the proposed budget for the ensuing fiscal year, in conformity with the government's austerity program.

The President, however, indicated that notwithstanding the austerity program and the reduction of 10 per cent of the cost of government for the next fiscal year, the policy should be followed to channel more and more funds to capital outlays.

This policy envisions the expenditure of more and more funds for purposes that will generate additional income.

December 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS called to a conference sugar and flour producers and millers in the wake of reports that prices of prime commodities were scaling upward, and gave notice that he will also discuss the situation with other handlers of such goods in the next few days.

The President worked for most of the day on state papers, but gave Primary attention to the reports on price spirals, since there is no ground for marking up the prices of essential goods,

Aside from the meeting with the sugar and flour people, the President, among others, ordered the Board of Liquidators to release into retail outlets the goods stockpiled since the National Marketing Corporation (NAMARCO) went out of business to ease the strain in supply of goods in the market.

On another front, the President directed the Department of Education to implement immediately the project on the printing of textbooks, to meet the requirements of Philippine schools.

At the same time, he named an advisory committee of the Special Project Group for Textbooks. The committee will oversee the printing contracts, and make the necessary recommendations on these matters for the secretary of education's consideration.

In the morning, the President had a welcome and pleasurable break from state affairs when he attended the program in which his eldest daughter, Imee, participated at her school, the Assumption Convent.

In this connection, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, also had the pleasant duty of attending in the afternoon a school program where the youngest of the brood, Irene, participated.

The President met late in the afternoon with representatives of the sugar and flour milling industries, to inquire into the reports that prices of these commodities have gone up. He was informed, however, that the two industries have held fast to current prices, and that if any increase have been made, these were done on the initiative of retailers.

The President therefore set an early meeting with retailers of prime commodities.

For the rest of the day, the President focused on his desk work. He received limited visitors, which included a number of legislators who paid unofficial calls.

December 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a fuller schedule than usual, which included conferences with private and public groups, addressing a ceremonial gathering and acting on official matters in-between.

The President started the day with a breakfast meeting with Messrs. Stephen H. Fuller, president of the Asian Institute of Management; Lew Calloway, vice chairman of the board of Newsweek; and George P. Baker of Harvard University.

At about 10:15 a.m., the President conferred with Vice President Lopez on government projects earmarked for implementation in the next four years.

Following his meeting with the Vice President in his study, the President repaired to his office at the Executive Building where he received the participants in the Regional Seminar on Equality of Opportunity in Employment being held in Manila.

The seminar delegates are E. S. Appadurai of Ceylon, A. N. Buch and Vishu Sahay of India. Dr. David Chew Chin Eng of Singapore, S. Tomas de la Cruz of the Philippines, J. J. Hernandez of the Philippine Trade Unions Council, D. Juzar of Indonesia, Myer Kangan and G. Polites of Australia, F. A. Mehta of India, P. P. Narayanan of Malaysia, Y. Shimomura and Kyuma Tamio of Japan, S. Thondaman of Ceylon. Trung-Cong-Long of South Vietnam and Jeffrey Yang Cheng-Yu of Nationalist China.

Also in the group were the following ILO officials: Donald L. Snyder (Kuala Lumpur), C. Rossillion (Geneva) H. Karasaki (Bangkok), C. A. L. von Knorring (Geneva) and D. L. Khanna (New Delhi).

They were accompanied to Malacañang by Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople.

The President then met with the officials and members of the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce on the problem of spiraling prices, during which the President succeeded in getting the members' pledge to hold prices down.

The Federation informed the President that while there has been a rise in the prices of certain commodities, the prices of the majority of essential goods have remained constant.

Nevertheless, they pledged to cooperate with the government in bringing prime commodity prices within the reach of the general public.

The President stressed that the government is ready to take stern steps to maintain normal price levels, and if hoarding should force price hikes he will use his powers to break such a move, even to the extent of raiding warehouses.

He added that in the case of any real shortage, he will use trade credit and authorize government importation to maintain the market supply-However, he expressed the hope that none of these steps will have to be taken.

In the afternoon, the President motored to Makati, Rizal where he was guest speaker at the dedication rites of the Asian Institute of Management (AIM).

The projected multi-million peso building complex of the Institute was donated by the Eugenio Lopez Foundation.

In his remarks, the President assured the nation that the balance of payments problems are manageable and that measures to solve them are already being implemented. (See pp. 13826 to 13838 for full text of the President's Speech.)

The President was back in Malacañang early in the evening, with just enough time to prepare for the formal dinner given by the board of trustees of the AIM for Mr. Eugenio Lopez at the Intercontinental Hotel.

December 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS again focused on his desk work, receiving few visitors, most of them officials with whom he consulted on various state problems.

In the course of the day, the President approved the new list of commissioned officers for the nation's reserve force, among other official business, and late in the afternoon held a press conference with the newsmen covering his office on the new initiatives taken by the government to promote Philippine exports and the local tourist industry.

The President has already asked for bolder plans in promoting Philippine export trade, which would emphasize the incentives to be used beyond those provided now.

He asked his fiscal policy advisers recently to draw up this incentives plan, and have it ready for discussion at the next meeting the President will call.

At the same time, the President directed the University of the Philippines to make a study of what incentives to adopt in order to better promote local exports in world markets.

The President has given impetus to the promotion of Philippine exports since last year by encouraging business, industrial and commercial groups to press hard on broadening efforts to expand export products.

On the development of tourism, the President created recently a special committee which will study the problems of the tourist industry and recommend measures to maximize its dollar-earning capacity.

The President has likewise directed that drastic improvements in the country's civil aviation facilities be undertaken to meet the expected increase in tourist traffic in the coming years.

He underscored the huge potentials of tourism as a major dollar earner, pointing out that this area can be vastly stimulated with the modernization of the country's air transport capabilities.

Because of the heavy pressure of paper work, the President was unable to deliver a speech at the banquet honoring Northern Luzon candidates in the last national elections, who won the posts they aspired for.

Instead, he delegated PVTA Chairman Federico Moreno to act as his proxy.

In his speech, the President asked the newly elected officials to abide by the trust given them by the electorate, and to do better than their best in fulfilling their assigned duties and in exercising leadership.

Among the few callers received by the President were the Papal Nuncio, Msgr. Carmine Roceo, who paid him a social call; and a group of officials from Negros Oriental headed by Gov. Mariano Perdices, who took up local problems with him

The Negros officials were accompanied to Malacañang by Sen. Lorenzo Teves.

The President worked at his desk through the evening.

December 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to concentrate on desk work, as he pressed forward the priority programs of the government.

He was again concerned with the initial steps toward the expansion of the country's international trade and the development of the tourism industry.

The President issued a memorandum enjoining the executive branch to participate in the planning and implementation of the priority projects he has set.

He asked specifically for the submission of explicit plans and goals, to enable him to follow the progress of implementation.

At 10:30 this morning, the President disengaged from state papers to receive Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, and the noted Eurasian novelist, Han Suyin, and her husband, Col. Vincent Ruthnaswami.

Secretary Romulo saw the President for last minute instructions preparatory to leaving for Kuala Lumpur to attend the ministerial meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) in the Malaysian capital.

Han Suyin called to pay her respects to the First Couple. She arrived yesterday from Japan, for a series of lectures before educational, civic and professional organizations here.

Just past noon, the President had a taped interview with Peter Grant of Commercial Broadcasting, Hongkong.

The President was back at his study in the afternoon, working on urgent papers through the evening.

While at work in his office, the President received a congratulatory message from the Student Council of the University of Indonesia on his reelection as President of the Philippines.

The letter was coursed through the Philippine Embassy in Djakarta and was signed by Hariadi Darmawan, president of the Student Council and Aulia Rachman, secretary.

Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo acknowledged the Council's letter on behalf of the President.

The Council's letter follows in full:

"Your Excellency:

"The Student Council of the University of Indonesia would like to congratulate Your Excellency, on his reelection as President of the Republic of the Philippines.

"May God protect and guide Your Excellency in undertaking his future tasks."

President's Week in Review: December 12-18, 1969

President's Week in Review: December 19-25, 1969

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

December 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS broke his rigorous schedule of desk work to meet visitors and confer with several officials, and enjoyed a Christmas party for the children of Malacañang employees at Malacañang Park.

Following the proclamation of his victory at the polls by Congress, the President created the inaugural committee to take charge of the ceremonies, with the injunction that everything should be as simple and inexpensive as possible.

Designated co-chairman of the committee were Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo and Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, with the following named as members:

Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Secretaries Onofre D. Corpuz of education and Bias F. Ople of labor, OEC Administrator Constancio Castañeda, Press Secretary Francisco S. Tatad, Governors Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal and Benjamin Romualdez of Leyte, Mayor Antonio Villegas and Vice-Mayor Felicisimo Cabigao of Manila, Roberto Benedicto, PNB president; Gen. Manuel Yan, armed forces chief of staff; Commissioner Gregorio Araneta II of tourism, and Mrs. Lourdes Villacorta, social secretary of Malacañang.

Among the visitors he received in the morning were Secretary Romulo, who reported on the recent ASEAN ministerial conference in Kuala Lumpur and on his meeting with Malaysian leaders; and the members of the Philippine goodwill mission to Taipei, composed of students.

In the afternoon, the President conferred with his fiscal advisers, then received Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer and Majority Floor Leader Marcelino Veloso.

Before buckling down to his desk work, the President joined the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the Blue Ladies, and other volunteers to launch the "Maligayang Pasko" project, which sent a 50-truck convoy to all depressed areas in Manila and suburbs where deserving poor families were cheered with gifts. The President stayed after the brief rites to play host, along with the First Lady, to the Malacañang employees and their children who also received gifts.

Afterward, he returned to his study to carry on his paper work.

Earlier, the President ordered the immediate suspension of arbitrage, as one of the means of regulating the dollar outflow.

Arbitrage is the simultaneous purchase and sale of securities in two different places with the view of making profits from the difference in prices of such securities in the two places.

The President's order followed closely the recommendation of his fiscal policy committee which he met this evening.

December 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was guest speaker in ceremonies commemorating the 34th anniversary of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. He also personally led a large group of welcomers which met the returning Philcag contingent from Vietnam, at Pier 15 in the South Harbor.

Early in the morning, the President received Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez who just arrived from abroad where he met representatives of the World Bank and consortiums of foreign banks.

Accompanied by Sixto K. Roxas, president of the Bancom Development Corporation, Secretary Romualdez reported, among -others, that trade credits were offered to the Philippines by consortiums of banks in America, Europe and Japan.

About 9 a.m., the President motored to Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City where he addressed AFP officers and men on their 34th anniversary. Present at the anniversary rites were other ranking government officials, members of the diplomatic corps and ranking foreign military officers.

The President asked the officers and men of the AFP to “set the highest example” in self-discipline and sacrifice in order that the nation will attain its goals.

“Our armed forces today are faced with the increasing challenges of modern life, and of a nation set to break out of its age-old restraints,” the President said, as he asserted the progress made in the last four years.

“I am proud to say, as your commander-in-chief, that you have shared in the accomplishments of our nation,” he declared.

In the armed forces, he said, “we can see the rewards of self-discipline”.

The AFP, he continued, has concrete proofs of achievement. “Your productive hands and spirit have given our people more roads, more bridges, more livable rural communities, more healthy children, more schools, more confidence in the authority of the law and the healing hand of justice,” the President stated.

Despite the critics of the armed forces, he said the organization as a whole “is sound, is purposeful, is dedicated to the ideals which make the best of soldiers also the best of citizens.”

The President told the members of the AFP:

“I ask you to continue your good work. I ask you to give all of your loyalty to flag and country. I ask you to live always with honor, to fight with courage, and if necessary, to die for a good cause.”

In the afternoon, the President motored to the Port Area where he met the more than 1,000 officers and men of the Philcag who disembarked from two Philippine Navy LSTs, the EPS Albay and the EPS Bohol, which ferried them from South Vietnam.

He was accompanied to the welcome rites by his son, Bongbong. Also at the rites was Nguyen Van Loc, charge d’affaires of the South Vietnamese embassy in Manila, and a large group of relatives and friends of the returning contingent.

The President disclosed at the welcome rites that the Philcag will be redeployed to Central Luzon where its training and experience in Vietnam will be utilized to improve the living conditions of the masses in the region.

Headed by Brig. Gen. Ceferino Carreon, Philcag commander, all the returning troopers had a chance to shake hands with the President, as they filed past him single file.

The President said to them: “Good work and carry on.”

December 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent a quiet weekend with his family. As usual, he was up early, and read the newspapers and weekend magazines. The President found time to work at his desk towards noontime. Among other actions, he directed the NBI and the PC CIS to investigate thoroughly the killing of a trader, described by a newspaper as a “business rubout.”

The President specifically ordered the NBI and the CIS to identify the alleged Malacañang official involved in the business deal, “without fear or favor.”

December 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed his old, regular schedule as he met visitors and worked in his study. Still, he still gave prior concentration to his deskwork.

Notable among his callers today were legislators and local officials, and the South Vietnamese minister of state. The only visitors to come as a group were the members of a family planning organization.

Minister of State Pham Quang Dan of the Republic of South Vietnam paid his courtesies shortly after arrival here, in the course of a Southeast Asian tour. He brought a letter from the South Vietnam prime minister, formally thanking the Philippine government for the services of the Philcag in Vietnam.

Minister Dan also told the President that his country “supports wholeheartedly the concept of ASEAN of which the Philippines is a most prominent and active member.”

The group of family planning activists was headed by Dr. Ruben Apelo. The group, composed of the officers of the Family Planning Organization of the Philippines, submitted proposals to the President on the advancement of family planning in the country, which proposals were endorsed to the Commission on Population for study.

One of the proposals endorsed by the President was the setting up of family planning clinics in hospitals.

Others in the group were Dr. Jose Katindig, FPOP vice president, Mrs. Louise Orendain, Dr. Raymundo Rivera, Dr. Esperanza de Castro and Mrs. Luz Einsindel.

Also among the callers at Malacañang were Reps. Ramon Durano of Cebu, Indannan Anni of Sulu, Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte; Rep-elect Guillermo Sanchez of Agusan del Norte; Gov. Murphy Sangkula of Sulu, and Mayor Titina Anni of Siasi, Sulu.

The President continued his desk work through the evening.

December 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS closeted himself in his study the whole day, to work on state papers.

Except for a few officials whom he summoned, the President received no callers.

He had given strict instructions to Col. Venancio S. Duque, appointment secretary, that he would not be available to visitors the whole day.

One of those the President met was Teodoro Q. Peña, whom he designated member and executive officer of the Foreign Trade Zone Authority. Peña was inducted into office by the President.

He was the latest member assigned by the President to the free trade body since the FTZA was made operational last August 29.

The initial assignment that the President gave to Pena was to assist the FTZA board in the drafting of overall plans to make the Mariveles free port immediately operational.

The President specifically asked Peña to draft the rules and regulations for the implementation of Republic Act No. 5490, and the overall operations of the free trade zone.

In a memorandum dispatched to Camp Aguinaldo, the President ordered Gen. Manuel T. Yan, AFP chief of staff, to submit in 24 hours a report on the progress of the investigation and prosecution of all armed forces officers and men charged with terrorism and other irregularities during the November elections.

He reminded Gen. Yan of his previous orders issued immediately after this year's polls for the prompt investigation of all AFP personnel reportedly involved in poll complaints to determine the veracity of the charges against them.

The President recalled he had ordered the institution of court-martial proceedings should the results of the investigations warrant or the filing of charges in the civil courts, if necessary.

He directed that all witnesses to the complaints be extended all assistance, including the necessary transportation to enable them to testify before the appropriate tribunals.

In his memorandum, the President likewise directed the chief of staff to await the results of the current investigation being conducted by the Commission on Elections on alleged poll terrorisms in Batanes and to file, the corresponding charges against any officers and men who might be found guilty of the charges.

December 24—

ON THE EVE of Christmas, President Marcos carried on as usual, adhering to a regular work schedule, with emphasis on state papers.

Among other actions, he:

1. Signed an executive order directing that payments of national internal revenue taxes may be made through the banking system.

This procedure will prevent losses in tax collections arising from falsification of tax receipts and misappropriation of collections, minimize payment of taxes by rubber checks, and improve the recording of tax collections and accounting of tax payments.

2. Issued another executive order placing state universities, colleges, schools and other educational institutions under the supervision of the secretary of education.

The order was given in line with the President's policy of decentralizing the powers of his office. The President said this arrangement will meet the need of integrating the activities of all educational institutions in order that they may, individually and collectively, participate more actively in the socio-economic development of the country, as, for instance, extending the necessary educational, research and extension services to the various sectors of the economy.

3. Gave executive clemency to 198 prisoners, on recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Parole, in line with the holiday tradition of accommodating deserving prisoners.

A decision, however, on the cases of 98 other prisoners who had been convicted of capital offense had been deferred by the President for his further study of their individual cases.

December 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS just like most Filipinos spent the day quietly at home with his family, to enjoy Christmas Day.

In his message to the Filipino people, the President said:

In the timeless spirit of “peace on earth and goodwill toward men,” we once again celebrate Christmas today.

The austere atmosphere under which we celebrate this day makes it all the more meaningful for us, because it asks of us—in the spirit of giving—to give more of ourselves to the human endeavors which our nation must undertake. Amidst our present anxieties, this occasion provides us with an opportunity for closer introspection and assessment of our capabilities.

It is my hope that we shall strive to make this spirit live in our country, not merely in our circle of family and friends, but also in the circle of our human community.

Together, let us share not only in the blessings that are ours today, but also in the labor and the burden that now dawn on our highest aspirations as a people.

To each and everyone of my countrymen, I commend this thought while I convey the very best wishes for the holiday season.

Merry Christmas to you all.

After attending an early Mass at the Palace chapel, the President settled down to a quiet day. Except for the most urgent state matters, which required his attention, he spent most of the day with his family.

Earlier, the President created a commission to assess and improve the nation’s educational system.

Through an executive order, he established a presidential commission to survey the Philippine educational system, with a view to making the system responsive to the challenge of modernization and the goals of national development.

The President named Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz chairman of the Commission, with PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. as vice-chairman. From the private sector, he picked Dr. Lino Q. Arquiza, Rev. Fr. Horacio de la Costa, Dr. Miguel B. Gaffud, Dr. Sixto K. Roxas, and Dr. Abelardo G. Samonte as members.

The President charged the Commission to make a thorough study and evaluation of education in the Philippines, and make recommendations for policy and implementation.

President's Week in Review: December 26, 1969 - January 1, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

December 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS once again focused on his paper work, receiving no visitors all day except public officials who came to consult him on particular problems.

Among state matters he studied was the Land Reform Code, for which he proposed certain amendments to make it work better and to bring the farmers and tenants themselves into the center of the program.

The President proposed, among others, the enlargement of the National Land Reform Council, by including a member from the farmer or peasant group.

The President emphasized that amendments should be embodied in one single bill, which will be submitted to the next Congress.

The original law, which was approved on August 8, 1969, has had two amendments, namely:

1. RA 4366, defining the annual compensation, powers and duties of the clerks of; court of the Court of Agrarian Relations.
2. RA 4886, which enlarged the responsibility of the Office of the Agrarian Counsel, to "include representation before courts, including appellate, in cases, civil or criminal, instituted by or against said tenant, agricultural lessees, farm workers or owner cultivator!, or the, members of their immediate farm household, where ,the cases arise from or are connected with, or are results or effects of, an agrarian dispute."

For the rest, the President was involved with other state business projected for the coming year and covering priority programs during his second term.

He also worked on his inaugural speech.

December 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had an interesting day as he received a variety of callers while also coping with his usual heavy desk work and other state matters.

In the morning, he received a group from Hawaii composed of Filipinos here to attend his inauguration, with Miss Hawaii-Filipina of 1969, Leilani Tumaneng Petranek, easily a standout.

She, conveyed the personal message of Gov. John Burns of Hawaii, congratulating the President on his reelection; and greetings from compatriots as the official goodwill ambassador of the Hawaii Filipinos.

The President also met later in the afternoon Mexican Minister of External Affairs Antonio Carillo Flores, who is also here; for the inauguration of the President. The affable dignitary brought gifts for the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos. He also met all the, three children of the First Family. He was accompanied to Malacañang by Ambassador Librado Gayco, the Philippine envoy to Mexico.

Others in the Hawaii-Filipino group were Gov. Jose Evangelista of Ilocos Norte, Consul General Trinidad Alconsel, and PTTA Executive Director Salvador C. Pena.

At about noon, the President and the members of his family sat down for a television interview with an ABS-CBN team.

During the interview, the President pointed out that the concept of providing a national solution to the peace and order problem is “faulty.”

He stressed, “It should be a regional solution,” adding that “we are going into this now.”

In the evening, the President and the First Lady honored at dinner Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York, who is an overnight houseguest at the Palace. The Catholic prelate is in Asia to visit US military personnel in various bases and in Vietnam, a personal Christmas commitment he has observed for some years now.

Among other actions, the President cautioned Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to proceed slowly in the filing of charges against LP leaders for various offenses by making sure first that there is a strong and Valid case against each of them; and ordered the NAWASA general manager to submit a report on the projected increase in consumer rates as announced earlier by the water firm.

December 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent a quiet weekend with his family at Malacañang.

With the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos and their children Imee, Bongbong and Irene, the President heard Mass celebrated at the ceremonial hall by Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York.

Cardinal Cooke, who was an overnight houseguest at the Palace, stopped briefly in Manila in the course of a tour of American military installations in the Far East, a Christmas trip he has undertaken for years.

Vice President and Mrs. Fernando Lopez also attended the Mass at Malacañang, along with Senate President Gil J. Puyat, justices of the Supreme Court led by Chief Justice Roberto Concepcion, and some Cabinet members and their wives.

The President worked on-state papers in the afternoon, in the course of which he granted executive clemency to 31 jockeys and six race horses suspended-from the race tracks for various violations of regulations.

December 29—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of his time at his desk in his study, primarily working on his inaugural speech, but also polishing off the urgent state papers coming to his desk. He did not receive any visitors. But he called in aides and advisers as he worked.

Although the pressure of work caused him to miss the arrival at Malacañang of U.S. Vice President Spiro Agnew and Mrs. Agnew, whom the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos welcomed, the President later saw the distinguished visitors, who are houseguests at the Palace during their stay in the Philippines.

The US Vice President will represent President Richard Nixon at the inaugural of the President.

After a bit of relaxing late in the afternoon, the President, refreshed, returned to his study to work further on his speech. He also studied other official papers brought to his attention.

On the eve of Rizal Day the President issued the following message:

We commemorate Rizal Day this year with the relevant theme of “Freedom Through Discipline,” not only in remembrance of an overriding principle which governed the life of the hero, but also in emulation of his ethic with the purpose of applying to our present tasks and concerns that virtue which carried Rizal through the profound dilemmas of his life and caused him to triumph.

As we accept our own sacrifices and undergo the test of self-discipline, let us remember that Rizal and other committed Filipinos in their own time unquestionably submitted to this rigor so that their nation will live in freedom and dignity.

December 30—

THIS WAS A HISTORIC day for President Marcos.

His entire daylong activities were centered on the inauguration ceremonies installing him as President of the Republic for a second term, and on the observance of Rizal Day.

He was up early with his first activity attending a Mass. Then he prepared for the inaugural at the Luneta, now known as Rizal Park.

Riding with his son, Bongbong to the Luneta, he arrived at about 10:50, then received military honors with characteristic crispness. He then led the crowd in saluting the national flag. After the salute to the flag, he ascended the grandstand, signalling the start of the military parade.

At high noon, he took his oath of office administered by Supreme Court Chief Justice Roberto Concepcion, in Filipino, the first in the Republic’s history.

Then he delivered his inaugural address, which pledged vigorous leadership, both in transforming the land, the people and in making the nation more self-reliant, morally responsible, and progressive.

“It is our destiny to transform this nation,” he said, adding that “we begin by transforming ourselves first”.

The President thanked the people for the new mandate given him and pledged “the severest leadership in integrity as well as discipline”.

He stressed, “Public officials shall set the vision for simplicity within the bounds of civility”.

The presidency, he vowed, will “set the example of his official morality and oblige others to follow”. He promised to punish extravagance in government, and to attain “our dreams no matter at what cost of personal pain and suffering” (See pp. 46-A to 46-F for full text of the Inaugural Address)

Returning to Malacañang, the President and his family followed custom by registering in the Palace registry, which signified tenancy of Malacañang. In their case, for another four years.

In the afternoon, the President went out again, first to lay a wreath at the Rizal monument on the Luneta, then to present Rizal Pro Patria awards to Teodoro F. Valencia and Leoncio Lopez Rizal, and a presidential citation to Senator-elect Mamintal Tamano.

He then proceeded to Fort Bonifacio where he laid a wreath at the Libingan ng mga Bayani.

In the evening he and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, were hosts at a dinner honoring foreign guests representing various nations at the inaugural.

In an exchange of toasts, the President said that although the nations of the world, including the Philippines, had their own individual problems, the common problem among them was still war, diseases and ignorance.

“We join all nations in the pursuit to overcome and surmount these problems,” he said. “Small and impoverished as our country is, we know our duties and we shall perform such duties”.

December 31—

PRESIDENT MARCOS started his new term as President of the Republic.

Highlight of the President’s activities was his issuance of an official statement in which he made public his decision to give away his worldly possessions.

Full text of the President’s statement follows:

Moved by the strongest desire and the purest will to set the example of self-denial and self-sacrifice for all our people, I have today decided to give away all my worldly possessions so that they may serve the greater needs of the greater number of our people.

I have therefore given away, by a general instrument of transfer, all my material possessions to the Filipino people through a foundation to be organized and to be known as the Ferdinand E. Marcos Foundation.

It is my wish that these properties will be used in advancing the cause of education, science, technology and the arts.

This act I undertake of my own free will, knowing that, having always been a simple man, my needs will always be lesser than the needs of many of our people, who have given me the highest honor with their gift, an honor unshared by no other Filipino leader.

Since about a year ago, I have asked some of my closest confidantes to study the mechanics of this decision. Today studies have been completed, and a foundation will now be formed to administer these properties and all funds that may be generated therefrom.

My wife, Imelda, is in full agreement, and wholeheartedly supports me in this decision.

Provisions will be made for my children, so that they shall be assured of satisfactory education and be prepared to meet their lifetime duties and endeavors.

For the moment, my most sincere hope is that this humble act shall set the example, and move to great deeds of unselfishness and compassion, many of our countrymen whose position in society gives them a stronger duty to minister to the needs of our less fortunate brothers and countrymen.

Early in the morning, he relaxed a bit with former Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi of Japan, Ambassador Toshiro Urabe, also of Japan, and Ambassador Jose Laurel HI, Philippine envoy to Tokyo, and others at the Malacañang Park golf course.

Refreshed, the President began his paper work, then at 9:30 knocked off to receive the special representatives of 44 countries to the Inaugural. He and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, greeted the guests as they were presented.

He then individually received Korean Prime Minister Chung II Kwon, former Prime Minister Kishi of Japan, Foreign Minister Gregorio Lopez Bravo of Spain, and U.S. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, in that order.

During the meeting with the Spanish foreign minister, the President was presented with a Katipunan battle flag and several bladed weapons used by the revolutionaries against Spanish troops.

Vice President Agnew gave the President a moonrock and the Philippine flag flown to and from the moon by the Apollo II astronauts. Astronaut Eugene Cernan, Apollo 10 Commander was also present.

Speaking of the Katipunan weapons consisting of two sabers, two krises and a bolo, the President said he was overwhelmed “by these symbols of courage and manhood that are returned to our land,” adding that “our land was occupied, but our hearts were not conquered.”

The Katipunan flag, which showed its age, measures about three feet by nine, and was the battle standard of one of the Katipunan field units:

In receiving the moonrock from Astronaut Cernan, the President recalled that when President Nixon visited here last June he promised Bongbong a ticket on the first commercial liner to the moon.

“I remind the Vice President (Agnew), or rather, at the instance of Bongbong, I am reminding the Vice President about this,” the President remarked in a light vein.

In the afternoon, the President presided at several meetings with NP leaders, beginning at 4 p.m. He first met governors and mayors at the residence of Gov. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal at Mandaluyong; then sat down with representatives at Speaker Jose B. Laurel’s home, also in Mandaluyong; then he drove to the house of Senate President Gil J. Puyat in Quezon City, to meet with the senators and other NP leaders.

In the evening, he conferred with the members of the Blue Ladies and the COSEC at the house of NACIDA Administrator Pacita Gonzales in Makati.

On the eve of New Year’s Day, the President issued the following message:

As at no other time in the past perhaps, a new tide of change is upon us, and the new year as well as the new decade brings us to heart of unusual and not easily understood problems which man-kind has not had to face before.

While it has been our good fortune as a people and a nation to surmount the problems of the past decade, it shall be our fate to wrestle with the essential difficulties of the 70’s.

Because progress creates its own problems, it cannot be hoped that technological and industrial progress will automatically bring about a period of general ease.

Our main task, as I pointed out on my second inaugural address, will be not only to seek to excel the performance of other nations, but to transform the character of our people so that there shall grow in this nation a new heart and a new spirit that relies solely in the capacity of the individual to understand and apply himself to his burdens, without depending on the generosity of others.

But on the other side of this ethic is the even more demanding moral responsibility of those endowed with material possessions that offend and oppress the stations of the poor.

Henceforth, they will be called upon to share whatever they can of their lot with all your people. Having the duty to lead in this endeavor, I have today renounced my material possessions in favor of the Filipino people.

United in effort, singular in resolve, let us now work together to make this new year a new era in which our people will continue to be free and secure in their freedom because they concern themselves not only with their personal interests but above all the nation’s well-being.

January 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent a quiet New Year's day with his family at home in Malacañang.

However, because state matters could not wait, he also worked a while in his study, as urgent papers came up for action.

Among other matters, he decided to defer the implementation of the plan of the NAWASA to raise service rates by directing the water agency to shelve the proposal until after public hearings are held.

Otherwise, the President enjoyed a relaxing day with his family, in the immemorial Filipino way on the first day of the new year.

President's Week in Review: January 2-8, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

January 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS stepped into the current efforts to clear up the alleged election irregularities in Batanes when he advised school teachers to testify at the Comelec probe of the case, directing at the same time the AFP chief of staff to provide protection for the teachers and all others who would testify at the hearings.

The President's action came on the heels of the plan of Comelec Chairman Jaime N. Ferrer to hold hearings in Batanes so that teachers and that a telling other witnesses may testify. The Comelec has received reports "judge and a fiscal had been going the rounds of Batanes towns the teachers that they would be charged with perjury if they testified.

Buckling down to his ever flowing paper work early in the morning, the President quickly whittled down the first pile of papers on his desk, deluding the issuance of an executive order creating a committee to conduct public hearings on the proposal of the NAWASA to hike service rates in order to meet financial commitments.

Then at mid-morning, he received a group from Guam, headed island's Speaker of the Legislature Joaquin C. Arriola. In the group were Mrs. Arriola, Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Kurt Moylan, and other islanders of Filipino descent. Accompanying the visitors were Secretary of Blas F. Ople. Undersecretary Tomas dela Cruz, and PTTA Director Salvador Peña.

The President was pleased with the memento presented by the Guamanians, consisting of colored rocks found on the island, mounted on a hardwood stand. The group came here primarily to represent Guam t the presidential inaugural.

There were few other visitors, giving the President time enough to work on other state matters till lunchtime. Early in the afternoon, he sat down with his fiscal advisory council to thresh out current problems -the regular weekly meeting of the council. Present at the conference were President Roberto Benedicto of the Philippine National Bank, airman Gregorio S. Licaros of the Development Bank of the Philippines, Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez, Social Security Sys-Administrator Gilberto Teodoro, GSIS General Manager Benjamin Rosario, Central Bank Governor Alfonso Calalang, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Board of Investments Chairman Cesar E. Virata, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata and PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr.

After the meeting, he crossed over to Malacañang Park for a bit of relaxation. Then he returned to his study to continue his labors. He worked through the evening.

January 3—

WORKING IN HIS study through the morning, President Marcos studied reports and other state papers on various government concerns, including measures for further paring down government expenditures.

The President, notably, moved to effect the lay-off of Malacañang technical assistants, on which the Executive Office is now working, to weed out all dispensables.

He also issued a directive suspending all public school athletic meets for 1970.

The decision to suspend the meets would save the government about P15 million, and relieve teachers who had just undergone heavy election duties of additional loads normally entailed in the preparation of the athletic meets.

The President returned to his study early in the afternoon, and remained there going through more state papers brought to him for action. Late in the afternoon, he disengaged to relax a bit at the Malacañang Park.

But he returned shortly to his desk, and worked till dinnertime.

January 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, assisted by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos and their children Imee, Bongbong and Irene, received the New Year greetings of about 50,000 government officials, foreign dignitaries and the general public from 9 a.m. to about 1 p.m. at the traditional Malacañang open house.

In an exchange of toasts with members of the diplomatic corps, the President gave assurance that the Philippines will continue to work together with other freedom loving countries for a “one world for all humanity.”

The reception was open to all comers.

After the reception, the President had a late lunch, and then rested briefly before sitting down in his study to work.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Appointed Vice President Lopez as ad interim Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources.
2. Ordered studies made on how the nation's heroes, could be remembered appropriately on their birth or death anniversaries without declaring special public holidays each time.
3. Designated the Filipinescas Dance Company as the Philippines ambassador of goodwill for this year, which they will discharge by giving performances around the world.
4. Directed the Department of Education to prepare a new integrated athletic program, which will take effect once the suspension of regional sports meets is lifted.

January 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received the credentials of a new foreign envoy and handed out awards to a total of 99 officials, lay leaders and civic organizations, among other activities during an unusually crowded day.

The President also received a number of callers, including Antonio Delgado, chairman of the Golden Jubilee Committee of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines, with whom he conferred on preparations for the observance of the 50th year of the scout movement in this country.

Delgado, who is vice president of the International Scouting Commission, reported on the recent World Conference on Scouting held in Helsinki, at which conference he was elected vice chairman.

In the morning, the President accepted the credentials of Ambassador Abdul Hakim Tabibi, first envoy of the Kingdom of Afghanistan to the Philippines. Present at the presentation rites, which was held at the Palace ceremonial hall at 9 a.m., were members of the Cabinet headed by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo and ranking officials of the Afghanistan embassy in Manila.

Then the President crossed over to the Maharlika Hall in the Executive Building, where he gave away trophies, medals, plaques and other awards to a sizeable number of national, provincial, city, municipal and barrio officials, as well as to lay leaders, and civic organizations for outstanding accomplishments in community development and land reform.

The award ceremony was held in connection with the observance of the 14th anniversary of the Presidential Arm on Community Development. Assisting the President was Executive Secretary Ernesto M. Maceda, concurrently PACD secretary.

The awardees included four senators, namely, Dominador Aytona, Jose Roy, Lorenzo Teves and Leonardo Perez, who through legislation they authored or sponsored contributed substantially to the promotion of the government's community development efforts.

January 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had two important meetings, first, with his Cabinet and, second, with his Fiscal Policy Committee, to round out a day devoted to the examination of current and long-range problems.

At the Cabinet meeting, which was the first called by the President after winning a second term, the President directed members of his official family to analyze the problems facing the nation and set [the objectives of their respective departments in the light of these studies.

The President also asked members of his Cabinet to reevaluate their achievements during the last four years and draw up plans covering the next four years to attain national objectives.

A good part of the Cabinet meeting was devoted to the promotion of tourism and the development of exports.

During his meeting with fiscal policy advisers, the President likewise directed the preparation of a list of infrastructure projects that should be given top priority in the allocation of funds, and thus be implemented immediately.

The list will be made by a committee composed of Secretary of Finance Eduardo Romualdez as chairman, and Acting Secretary of Public Works and Communications Manuel Syquiao, PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. and Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco as members.

The Cabinet meeting began 10:30 a.m. and ended 12:30 p.m., while the fiscal policy conference which followed immediately lasted up to 1 p.m. Both meetings were held at the Council of State room in Malacañang.

Earlier in the morning, the President received a few callers. Among those who saw him were Ambassador and Mrs. Bob Lebacqz of Belgium who called to pay their respects.

The President did not receive callers in the afternoon, but worked on in his study, remaining at his desk through the evening.

“While working on state papers, the President:

1. Directed the Philippine Air Force to ferry to Manila by military plane Batanes school teachers willing to testify at the current probe of alleged election irregularities committed there.

The President issued the order following receipt of a request from Comelec Chairman Jaime N. Ferrer for a PAF plane to transport the schoolteachers to Manila. The Comelec had been informed earlier that three Batanes schoolteachers had expressed readiness to testify before the Comelec in response to a call from the President for them to do so “without fear.”

2. Gave the go signal for public schools to hold athletic meets with, however, certain conditions to be met designed to make these sportfests more economical.

The President imposed the conditions on the recommendations of Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz during the Cabinet meeting held at Malacañang.

Among the conditions are:

1. That no school official or personnel not directly involved with sports or connected with the athletic meets be made a member of athletic meet delegations;
2. That the number of officials and other personnel accompanying delegations be reduced to the minimum;
3. That certain standards of performance be set and met by athletes before they are qualified to participate in the meets.
4. That optional events like pingpong and badminton be scrapped;
5. That no facilities of the Philippine Air Force or the Navy be utilized to transport delegations;
6. That no public works funds be expended for the construction or repair of roads, ports or airports solely for the promotion of the meets; and
7. That teachers and students will not be required to contribute to funds being raised to finance meets.

January 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS again pressed efforts to boost the country's export and tourist industries, as he met with various groups of government and private sector leaders.

He conferred with tourist industry entrepreneurs at Malacañang in the morning, and at noontime he was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Manila Rotary Club, held at the Manila Hotel.

The President also received a number of callers at his office in the Executive Building.

Among those he received were Prof. Francisco Ventura; Ambassador Modesto Farolan. Philippine envoy to Indonesia; and former Senator Manuel P. Manahan, chairman of the Philippine Rural Reconstruction Movement (PRRM).

At mid-morning, the President met behind closed doors Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata; Gen. Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff; Brig. Gen. Ismael Lapuz (ret.), chief of the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency; Brig. Gen. Felizardo Tanabe, commanding general of the first PC zone; and Col. Fidel Ramos, chief of AFP intelligence.

Later, the President met with Antonio Delgado, Mrs. Rebecca Panlilio, Rodolfo Cuenca, Jose O. Cobarrubias, and Reneo A. Albano.

Also attending were Roberto Benedicto, PNB president; and Cols. Gerardo Tamayo and James Barbers, chief and deputy chief, respectively, of the Manila Police Department.

The President discussed with this group the plans for promoting tourism, and for encouraging foreign tourists to visit the Philippines.

Shortly after 12 noon, the President, accompanied by Antonio Roxas Chua, Manila Rotary Club president, motored to the Manila Hotel where he was guest speaker at the regular luncheon meeting of the club.

In his speech, the President reaffirmed the determination of the government to press the development of the tourism industry with the move to adopt the open skies policy and to do away with visa requirements for foreign visitors.

“We have to get involved more intensively with tourism.” the President told the Rotarians.

As a start, he said, the directed the immediate study of the possibility of opening the country’s skies to all foreign airlines with no limit on frequencies.

The President explained, however, that the open skies policy will be experimental, to take effect for only one year. (See pp. 166-276 for full text of the President’s speech).

In the afternoon, the President worked mostly in his study. Pie remained at his desk through the evening.

While working on state papers, the President:

1. Listed the suspension of loans by government financing institutions and commercial banks primarily to meet the needs of export industries, as well as those of the mining and new and necessary industries.

The suspension was scrapped in order to meet the credit needs of export-oriented industries, especially, those industries engaged in mining and the new and necessary industries needed by the economy.

2. Directed all government agencies to adopt a policy of not assigning field officials and other ranking government personnel to their respective home provinces. The President called for the adoption of this policy in order to preclude possible charges of favoritism that normally arise when government officials have to deal with their own relatives and friends in the performance of their duties.

3. Directed Commissioner Mama Sinsuat of National Integration to limit the number of Muslim pilgrims to Mecca to one shipload only, in follow-up of a decision arrived at during the Cabinet meeting yesterday.

The President said that the pilgrims should be so selected that all Muslim provinces are represented.

He emphasized that only one ship of Philippine registry preferably of the Compania Maritima, which has successfully transported pilgrims before, be utilized for this year’s pilgrimage.

The President also imposed two conditions before any pilgrim is allowed to leave the country, namely:

1. That the mutawiff, the fee imposed by the Saudi Arabian government on every pilgrim, be paid by the pilgrim himself through the Philippine National Bank.

2. That the pilgrim should pay his fare direct to the shipping company before accommodation can be obtained for him aboard the ship.

The President emphasized he had to impose these conditions to avoid recurrence of embarrassment suffered by the government in connection with the annual pilgrimage.

President's Week in Review: January 9-14, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

January 9—

THE PRESIDENTIAL pace visibly quickened as he met various congressional leaders, received a sizeable delegation of citizens and individual groups from various sectors, while in-between putting in a full day's work at his desk.

The President started the day off with a working breakfast attended by Speaker Jose Laurel, Jr., Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer and Majority Floor Leader Marcelino Veloso, during which the legislative program was discussed and priority legislation eyed by the administration threshed out.

After this meeting, the President began his desk work, firing off several directives on such matters as the reported landgrabbing cases in Laguna, and the reappointment of members of government examination boards.

At mid-morning, the President began receiving private visitors, among them Earl Mazo of the U. S. News Digest; executives of the Standard Fruit Co., and a farmer, Primitivo Aclan, who presented the President with his millionth bunch of bananas, grown on his 7-hectare farm,

The Standard Fruit executives were Geronimo Velasco, president, and Charles Bauman, executive vice president.

This meeting was followed with a conference with Rep. Cornelio Villareal and Gov. Cornelio Villareal, Jr. of Capiz, both of whom took up local problems.

Then the President received a 500-man delegation of Batanes folk, composed of prominent civic and community leaders, and including students from that province studying in Manila.

As a result of the meeting, the President ordered a special team of NBI agents to probe the reported terrorism by goons in that province and bring to heel the malefactors. In this connection, he froze all movements of transportation in that province, after being informed by delegation members that goons usually clear out when probers show up, only to return after the government men leave the province.

While engaged in paper work, the President signed the appointment of DBP Chairman Gregorio S. Licaros as governor of the Central Bank, vice Alfonso Calalang, who has resigned.

The President also reappointed a total of 30 chairmen and members of Boards of Examiners for different professions and of the Board of Pardons and Parole.

Reappointed were:

1. Eric C. Nubia and Tomas Arguelles as Members of the Board of Examiners for Architects;
2. Petronilo Gaitos, Jr. as chairman of the Board of Examiners for Chemical Engineers.
3. Jones R. Castro and David P. Cruz as chairman and member, respectively, of the Board of Examiners for Mining Engineers;
4. Socorro A. Gillera as chairman, and Rafaelina T. Legaspi and Patrocinio S. Santos as members of the Board of Examiners for Pharmacists; and

5. Dean Vicente Abad Santos and Catalino Macaraeg as members of the Board of Pardons and Parole.

January 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed his regular weekday schedule, a departure from his usual weekend norm, when he usually focuses on his desk work and does not receive visitors.

He had several visitors in the morning, a conference in the afternoon, and inducted the new Central Bank governor in addition. In-between all these chores, he also worked at his desk going over state papers and reports.

The President inducted Gregorio S. Licaros, the DBP chairman in the last four years, as the governor of the Central Bank vice Alfonso Calalang, at a simple ceremony in Malacañang.

Present at the ceremony were members of the Licaros family, officials of the DBP and the CB, and other prominent public officials.

Among the President's callers were:

1. A wartime buddy of his, American Capt. Donald Jamesen and his wife, whom the President met when he was brought in by submarine to help guerrillas operating in Northern Luzon.
2. USAF Brig. Gen. Joseph Capuchi, and his wife, who is here as official guest of Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata. The USAF brass called to pay his respects.
3. A group of teachers from Batanes who came here to testify at the Comelec probe of election venalities in that province.

The teachers attended the meeting between the President and Comelec Chairman Jaime Ferrer and Commissioners Cesar Miraflor and Lino Patajo. Also at the meeting were Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval, PC chief, and Col. Rafael Dumlao, C-2, who reported on the Batanes situation.

During the meeting, the President announced that he was ready to call a special election in the lone congressional district in Batanes should the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify to the existence of a vacancy on the basis of findings and recommendations of the Commission on Elections.

In the afternoon, the President directed Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to designate one city court and one court of first instance as salas for hearing cases involving foreign tourists visiting in the Philippines.

The President specified to Secretary Enrile that these courts should operate with specific instructions from the secretary of justice "to dispose of any case brought before them within 48 hours."

In two separate memoranda, the President also formalized various decisions he announced earlier, namely:

1. To the Secretary of National Defense, to organize a special Metrocom team to help the Manila police and the Pasay City police provide protection and security for tourists, [especially those within the tourist belt area.

The team shall include a mobile patrol unit and a foot patrol group, which will be deployed in coordination with the police units from the Manila and Pasay City police departments which have primary patrol responsibility in the tourist belt area.

2. Also to the defense secretary, to place at the disposal of the Board of Travel and Tourist Industry two Philippine Navy hydrofoil, which will be used to ferry tourists to and from Corregidor, and other nearby areas.

On this point, the defense secretary was instructed to discuss with the Commissioner on Tourism the matter of expenses for the operation of the two boats, preferably on a 50-50 basis.

3. A joint memorandum to the secretary of foreign affairs and the commissioner of immigration, to abolish visa requirements for any tourist bound for the Philippines.

“For their entry to the Philippines, it shall be sufficient for tourists to present confirmed airplane or ship, as well as hotel, reservations for their trip to and out of the Philippines,” the President specified.

The President also told the foreign office and customs officials to take any other steps, or adopt other measures, that will facilitate the entry of tourists into the country.

He stressed, “It is my desire that efforts be exerted to make crossing of papers of tourists a very pleasant experience for them.

In another directive, the President asked Secretary Alejo Santos of the Anti-Crime Commission, and concurrent director of prisons, to ensure that working prisoners get mere privileges such as better food and clothing, medical care, and other essential needs.

In this connection, the President directed the prisons chief to Organize a management council which will supervise all the properties¹ of the Bureau of Prisons, particularly the rich untapped lands belonging to the penal colonies.

The President gave these instructions to Secretary Santos upon the latter’s submission of a proposed bill to Congress which would authorize payment of reasonable compensations to prisoners working at trades in the colonies.

January 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS moved for the hastening of the country’s agro-industrial development by creating a top-level body, with himself as chairman, to formulate national development policies.

Dubbed the National Development Council, it has as members the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the majority and minority leaders of both houses of Congress, the chairmen of the Senate and of the House committees, the work of whose committees is related to the subject to be discussed by the council; and the Cabinet member or members, the work of whose departments is related to the subject to be discussed by the council.

With the new arrangement, the leaders of Congress, the policy making body of the government, will be fully informed on the thinking of leaders in the executive. This is expected to hasten legislation of measures affecting the nation’s economic development.

Earlier, the President directed Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile to draft a bill reorganizing the Public Service Commission, make this quasi-judicial body more responsive to the interest of the general public.

The President’s directive comes in the wake of complaints continuously denouncing the PSC for acts allegedly inimical to the welfare of the general public, the supposed beneficiaries of public services.

The latest of these complaints pertains to the increase in shipping fees imposed by the management of interisland vessels, and said to have been approved by the PSC “when the public was not looking.”

To make the PSC more of an instrument of public service, thereby protecting the general welfare as its utmost mission, the President has asked Enrile to draft a bill to reorganize the PSC.

On another front, the President supplemented his earlier moves to make the tourists' sojourn here more pleasant by ordering the establishment of tourist shopping booths at the Nayong Pilipino and inside the customs zone.

The President instructed acting Secretary Manuel B. Syquio of Public Works and Communications and Customs Commissioner Rolando Geotina to coordinate efforts and put up bonded warehouses inside the customs zone and in the Nayong Pilipino, where goods could be sold to tourists free of tax.

This arrangement is also aimed at providing easily accessible stores for tourists, especially these who pass by Manila only very briefly while enroute to other destinations, or transients about to leave who may have last minute decisions to buy Philippine goods as well as foreign products.

January 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS formally received six vessels from the US government, in the only activity which took him away from Malacañang.

The rest of the day, the President worked on state papers and received callers.

At 9 a.m., the President motored to the Philippine Navy headquarters, where he received for the government three LST's, one patrol craft and two landing craft from the US government, which were extended to the Philippines under the military assistance program.

US Ambassador Henry Byroade made the presentation.

Back at Malacañang about 11 a.m., the President first received Roy Mason, president of the Board of Trade of the British government, who paid his respects. The British official is here on a three-day working visit.

Mason was accompanied by British Ambassador John Mansfield Addib.

At the Council of State room later, the President met with the young officials who took over the Manila city hall in connection with the observance of Boys and Girls Week.

Led by Lilian Romero of the Manila Science High School, who was chosen mayor, the youthful officials paid their respects to the President.

They discussed various matters with the President, including a proposal by the youngsters to legalize gambling under certain conditions; the activation of a manpower and youth program, and the lowering of the voting age to 18 years.

At noon, the President met with Senator Dominador Aytona, House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso, and Rep. Artemio Mate.

He worked at his desk afterward through evening, in the course of which he ordered the Bureau of Immigration and the police agencies concerned to deport immediately eight Chinese nationals convicted of various offenses and considered as undesirable, directing that they be put on the first available transport to China or Formosa.

January 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted most of the day to his desk work, breaking off only to confer the Rizal Pro Patria Award on Don] Vicente Madrigal at simple ceremonies held in the morning at Malacañang.

The President paid moving tribute to the venerable economic leader and industrial pioneer in brief remarks during the award rite, stressing that Don Vicente's example should be followed by other Filipinos.

Present at the ceremony were the sons and daughters, children-in-law, and other kin of the honoree, close family friends, colleagues in the Senate where he served a term, and other dignitaries. Also present was the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos.

The President presented the award to Antonio Madrigal, son of the honoree, who proxied for his father, who has long been incapacitated by illness and old age.

During the day's stint at his desk, the President, among others:

3. Directed the Budget Commission to release in three segments the P6.5 million earmarked for the expansion and modernization of the Manila International Airport, beginning with the initial release of P2.5 million for the immediate improvement of the MIA terminal building.

The project is considered urgent in the face of the coming of the jumbo jets, scheduled next November.

2. Required the Land Authority to course its plans for resettling squatters in public lands through Malacañang, which will assess and approve the plans before implementation.

This procedure was set following complaints received from various sources about the conduct of the resettlement of displaced families in the San Pedro Tunasan Estate in Laguna.

3. Ordered Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda to integrate all peace and order bodies created by previous presidential decrees under one central agency, in order to pinpoint responsibility for the overall anti-crime drive.

Slated for integration are such groups as the Peace and Order Council, the Peace and Order Coordinating Council, the Peace and Order Commission, and possibly the Anti-Crime Coordinating Office.

The President did not receive visitors the whole day, but instead remained working at his desk through the afternoon and evening.

January 14—

PRESIDENT MARCOS addressed a gathering of priests, met with sugar industry leaders, and attended a caucus of representatives, thus once again projecting the variousness of a presidential working day.

President's Week in Review: January 16-22, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

January 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS in the morning received a few callers at the Executive Hall, and worked on state papers the rest of the day.

At 10 a.m., the President met with officials of the Philippine Council of the International Chamber of Commerce, led by Dr. Manuel Lim, who called to submit formally their written pledge of support to the President's program of government.

Later, the President inducted the new set of officers of the Federation of Provincial Press Clubs of the Philippines, headed by Felipe Delfin of the Aklan Press-Radio Club, the federation president.

Other callers of the President were Msgr. Mariano Gaviola of the Catholic Bishops Conference, Consul Jose Teodoro of the Philippines . Consulate in Seattle, President Takeshi Watanabe of the Asian Development Bank, and acting Secretary of Public Works and Communications I Manuel B. Syquiao.

Secretary Syquiao reported personally on the fire which occurred at the Post Office building the previous night.

The President, in a speech read for him in the evening by Chairman Cesar E. A. Virata of the Board of Investments at the anniversary dinner of the Philippine Society of Mining, Metallurgical, and Geological Engineers and the Geological Society of the Philippines, said that the development of the mining industry will continue to receive greater encouragement and support from the government, it being one of the brightest and most dependable hopes of the country's economy.

"We must now make a bold and purposeful effort to realize its fullest potential for the nation," the President added.

The President however said that while the government is ready to give the industry the support it needs, the leadership in spurring it must still come from the mining engineers.

January 17—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the day in Malacañang, working at his desk in his private study.

Among others, he went over the curriculum vitae of individuals being considered for appointment to various key positions in the government, including the judiciary.

The President signed the ad interim appointments of four associate justices of the Court of Appeals and three district judges.

The President also elevated Presiding Justice Julio Villamor of the Court of Appeals to associate justice of the Supreme Court and CA Associate Justice Salvador Esguerra to presiding justice of the appellate court, vice Villamor.

Extended ad interim appointments as associate justices of the Court of Appeals were Undersecretary of Justice Felix Q. Antonio, Judges Jose N. Leuterio and Manuel P. Barcelona of the Manila court of first instance, and Judge Lourdes P. San Diego of the court of first instance of Rizal.

Named ad interim district judges were:

1. Senior State Prosecutor Alejandro Sebastian for the 16th judicial district, to preside over the CFI of Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur and Davao Oriental, Branch VIII, with official station at Tagum, Davao del Norte;
2. Sisenando Villaluz for the 15th judicial district, to preside over the CFI of Agusan del Sur, with station at Prosperidad; and
3. Judge Amado B. Reyes of the Cagayan Criminal Circuit Court, for the 5th judicial district, to preside over the CFI of Bataan, Branch II.

The President previously expressed his desire to fill up more than a hundred new judges and fiscal to clear crowded court dockets. He had directed Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Emile to set up a comprehensive criteria, embodying rigid requirements for nominees to the post of CFI judge and other members of the judiciary.

The President has also directed Secretary Enrile to pinpoint how many more judges are needed in the CFI to improve and accelerate the administration of justice, in connection with the government's peace and order campaign.

In the afternoon, the President motored to the Veterans Memorial Hospital in Quezon City where the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, is confined following a surgical operation to remove a benign cystic maps from the right chest wall.

Before leaving Malacañang, the President signed the appointment of Col. Rafael G. Zagala as ad interim brigadier general of the Armed Forces of the Philippines

Zagala is area commander of the first military area.

He also directed PC Chief Brig. Gen. Vicente Raval to investigate the departure of a private plane from Batanes even while the isolation of the province, which he had ordered last week, was in force.

The President issued the order upon receipt of a report from Gov. Silvino Agudo that three of the suspected malefactors in connection with the November 11 polls had escaped m- a private plane.

January 18—

PRESIDENT MARCOS asked Commissioner Abelardo Subido of the Civil Service Commission to resign his post, in view of the findings of the Presidential Investigating Committee of his culpability in one of ; the charges filed against him.

The Committee, headed by Dr. Gaudencio Garcia and with former Justice Edilberto Barot as member, in an 86-page report, found Subido guilty of the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act (RA 301&).

The case against Commissioner Subido arose from a formal complaint to the President, in a sworn letter dated February 20, 1967, by Faustino Tugade charging the CSC chief with the commission of various irregularities.

The Committee refrained from making a recommendation on the case when it submitted its report on July 1, 1969, and "leaves the decision to the President as to the penalty, if any, that should be imposed on the Commissioner (Subido)."

Executive Secretary Ernesto Maceda, who reviewed the Committee report, recommended dismissal as penalty for Commissioner Subido in view of the seriousness of the offense committed.

Maceda said that the nature of the position of respondent (ex officio member of the Cabinet) and the strict policy of the President in administrative cases against public officials and employees warrant the dismissal of the CSC chief.

January 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS started his day with a meeting early in the morning with his fiscal policy advisers at the Veterans Memorial Hospital, before coming to Malacañang where he received callers and worked on state papers.

Topping the list of callers was Ambassador John Mansfield Addis of the United Kingdom, who paid a farewell call prior to his departure for London Thursday for a new assignment.

A group of 138 Filipino teachers also paid a farewell call, on the eve of their departure for Addis Ababa to fulfill a three-year teaching-contract with the Ethiopian government.

The group was accompanied by Pompeyo Gregorio of the Department of Education.

In connection with the teachers' call, the President directed Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo to make a study on the redeployment of Philippine diplomatic missions, particularly to African countries where many Filipinos are residing.

In other separate actions the President:

1. Ordered the investigation and cancellation of mining concessions granted to mining companies which are not capable of developing them but secured them merely for speculative purposes.
2. Signed a proclamation declaring the period from January 24 to 31 this year as National Securities-Investment Consciousness Week.
3. Summoned Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido to appear at Malacañang in connection with his demanded resignation from his post.

The President also gave an interview to Burt Hoffman, of the Washington Star, who was accompanied by Amando Doronila of the Daily Mirror, who is also the Philippine correspondent of the American publication.

The fiscal policy meeting in the morning was held at the Presidential Suite of the VMH, where the President spent the night.

At the meeting were Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Central Bank Gov. Gregorio Licaros, Chairman Cesar E. A. Virata of the Board of Investments, PNB President Roberto Behedicto, General Manager Benjamin del Rosario of the GSIS, PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., SSS Administrator Gilberto Teodoro, and Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave.

The President directed Commissioner Sy-Changco to prepare and implement balanced budgets during the next four fiscal years and to take steps to generate a surplus in order to reduce the deficit incurred by the government during the first six months.

In a speech read for him in the morning by Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz before the 9th World Congress of the International Committee of Catholic Nurses, the President paid tribute to the average nurse whose dedication and devotion to work is almost a universal trait among nurses the world over.

"If only we can approximate the devotion of the average nurse to her work," the President said, "then perhaps men and nations will attain the higher goals that they conceive."

The President expressed the hope that one day, “Filipinos shall become a race of devoted workers, not working for themselves alone but for all their fellows, including those generations yet to come.”

January 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met with members of Congress who called at Malacañang in the morning.

The President also received Civil Service Commissioner Abelardo Subido, whom he had earlier asked to resign from his post in view of the findings of the Presidential Investigating Committee that the CSC chief violated the anti-graft law.

Subido requested the President for a reconsideration of his case. The President advised him to make a formal written petition to this effect, and to submit evidence which would warrant a reinvestigation.

In his meeting with the lawmakers the President was informed by the Nacionalista majority in the House if Representatives that Reps. Cornelio Villareal and Jose B. Laurel, Jr. have reached an understanding for Laurel to continue as Speaker of the House in accordance with the wishes of the majority congressmen.

The President also witnessed the oathtaking of Senator Ambrosia Padilla as a new member of the Nacionalista Party.

Sen. Padilla, who was reelected senator as a guest candidates in the Nacionalista ticket last year, took his oath of affiliation with the NP before Senate President Gil J. Puyat, who is also the NP president.

Padilla’s oathtaking took place at the President’s office beside the Maharlika hall.

The President’s meeting with the lawmakers lasted until early afternoon, in time for him to welcome the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, who came home from her brief confinement at the Veterans Memorial Hospital, following an operation. The President congratulated her for her quick recovery, adding that she didn’t look like one who had just been to a hospital.

Pursuing efforts to promote the tourist industry, the President asked Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz to direct efforts toward the eradication of cholera and other quarantinable diseases in the country’s ports of entry, especially the port of Manila, through an intensive program of environmental sanitation, immunization and other epidemiological measures.

This will include proper garbage disposal, adequate water supply and food sanitation.

“But with or without tourist,” the President stressed, “government owes it to the people to maintain healthy surrounding for the citizens, especially the children.”

The expansion of the tourist industry is one of the top priority programs of the administration because of its huge potential as a major dollar-earner for the country.

While working on official papers in his study, the President signed the ad interim appointment of former CIR Judge Vicente Rafael as associate justice of the Court of Appeals, to fill one of the two remaining vacancies in the appellate court.

He also designated Lucio N. Tan as acting City Treasurer of Oroquieta City.

January 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met with the Cabinet, conferred an award on a ranking US Air Force official, and received two foreign newspapermen, and in-between worked at his desk.

At the Cabinet meeting held at the Council of State room starting about noon, the President served notice that the executive branch is the sole implementing arm of the Republic, and that it will discharge this constitutional duty without any interference from the other branches of the government.

“There has been much talk about forming a centralized agency of the government to implement programs to meet national problems,” the President said. “The President is the centralized implementing arm under our republican form of government. I think we are capable of implementing these programs and we will do it.”

The President pointed out that because of the limited resources of the government, there was need of pinpointing projects to be given priority. Among such priority projects, he said, are rural electrification and the emphasis on arts and trades in school curriculum in connection with the manpower development program of the administration.

The President stressed, however, that the establishment of priorities did not mean the abandonment of old projects, like infrastructure, land reform and resettlement. He asked Vice President Lopez, concurrently secretary of agriculture and natural resources, and other Cabinet members concerned, to push through these projects.

During the Cabinet meeting, the President emphasized anew the need to pare down expenses. He directed his department secretaries to refrain from filling up vacancies, except urgent ones like those in the judiciary and in the prosecuting agencies of the government.

The President also called the attention of his Cabinet to reports of petty graft again reaching his office. He ordered not only the dismissal but also the prosecution of erring officials and employees.

He warned anew against the misuse of government vehicles, singling out those of the Armed Forces and the Department of Public Works and Communications which, he said, were reported roaming around picnic grounds on Sundays, with large “For Official Use Only” signs painted on their sides.

At a simple rite earlier, the President awarded the Philippine Legion of Honor, degree of commander, to Lt. Gen. Francis Gideon of the U.S. 13th Air Force, for meritorious services to the Filipino people.

During the day the President also received William Winter, who conducts “William Winter Comments,” and Joseph A. Amter, president of the World Press Syndicate, Inc.

The two American journalists, who were accompanied by their wives during the call, exchanged views on a wide range of subjects with the President.

Among other official actions, the President directed Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo to waive the fees for the travel documents of Muslim pilgrims who are leaving for Mecca.

January 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS attended the meeting of the Nacionalista Party Junta and later presided at the caucus of NP senators, as titular head of the Nacionalista Party.

The four-hour long sessions, held at the Pangarap, across the Pasig from Malacañang, engaged the President’s attention and concern, particularly because of the spirited rivalry for the Senate leadership.

But all ended well, as the conferees reached consensus on Senator Gil J. Puyat as the NP choice for Senate president. It was also agreed that Senator Jose J. Roy will be acting NP president.

The President first attended the Junta meeting, then had a caucus with the NP senators: later he sat clown with Senators Roy, Puyat, and Arturo Tolentino. All the meetings were private.

The President then met individually with the other senators present, namely: Senators Lorenzo M. Tañada, Magnolia W. Antonino, Rene Espina, Salvador Laurel, Ambrosio Padilla, Helena Z. Benitez, Dominador Aytona, Lorenzo Sumulong, Wenceslao R. Lagumbay, Eva Estrada Kalaw, Lorenzo Teves, and Leonardo Perez.

The Junta members present were Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Gov. Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal, Mayor Leroy Brown of Basilan City, Rep. Jose Aldeguer, OEC Administrator Constancio Castaneda, who is NP secretary-general; Gov. Conrado Estrella of Land Authority, former SWA Administrator Francisco E. F. Remotigue, House Majority leader Marcelino Veloso, RCA Chairman Alfredo Montelibano, Sr., and Leyte Gov. Benjamin Romualdez, assistant NP secretary-general.

Also present were former President Carlos P. Garcia and Vice President Lopez.

Earlier the President worked at his desk to dispose of urgent state papers, and after the meetings with the NP leaders, he returned” to” his study to continue his desk work.

President's Week in Review: January 23-27, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

January 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS worked mostly on his state-of-the-nation speech. He also considered urgent state business brought to his attention, signed papers and studied reports.

But for the most part, he was engaged by the speech he is set to deliver Monday, at the joint session of the two houses of Congress, which marks the opening of the regular session of the legislature.

The President remained at his desk through the evening.

January 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to concentrate on his desk work with the polishing of his state-of-the-nation speech getting his primary attention.

However, he also disposed of a big pile of state papers, inducted two justices and received a group of AFP generals who paid a courtesy call after taking their oaths.

The President at simple ceremonies administered the oath of office to Justice Julio Villamor as associate justice of the Supreme Court and Justice Salvador V. Esguerra as presiding justice of the Court of Appeals.

The President inducted the two justices at Malacañang in the presence of members of the judiciary led by Chief Justice Roberto, Concepcion of the Supreme Court and associate justices of the high tribunal and the appellate court, as well as immediate members of their families, relatives and friends.

Until his appointment to the -Supreme Court to fill the post vacated recently due to the retirement of Justice Francisco Capistrano, Justice Villamor was presiding justice of the appellate court.

He was succeeded by Justice Esguerra, who is the most senior associate justice of the Court of Appeals.

In his brief meeting with the top brass of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, the President enjoined them to be more vigilant than ever and to exert their utmost in preserving the security of the country.

The President told the group of newly-appointed generals who called on him that there are elements, including foreign, bent on disturbing the stability of the government but that he had complete faith in the military's ability to recognize and thwart the hostile designs of these elements.

Those who called on the President were Brig. Gen. Roso Sabalones, deputy commander of the I PC zone; Commodore Hilario Ruiz, deputy commander of the Philippine Navy; Brig. Gen. Domingo Tucay, commander of the second military area; Brig. Gen. Jose Rancudo, commander of the Fifth Fighter Wing, PAF; Brig. Gen. Antonio Tamayo, chief of the AFP Supply Center at Camp Aguinaldo; and Brig. Gen. Juan D. Cruz, commander of the Fourth Infantry Division. They were accompanied by Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata and Gen. Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff.

The President received no other visitors, and after these welcome interruptions, he returned to his desk work. He remained in his study through the afternoon and evening.

January 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent quite a busy day even though it was a Sunday.

He started with a breakfast meeting with the country's labor leaders, inducted the new associate justices of the Court of Appeals, conferred with military generals, and later met with the leaders of student demonstrators.

In his meeting with labor leaders, accompanied by Secretary of Labor Bias F. Ople, the President asked them for first hand accounts on the prevailing situation in the country's economic and social life.

Thus, the President obtained direct information from the representatives of the working masses, without relying on the cumbersome formality of written reports.

From this conference, the President excused himself to administer the oath of office to newly appointed Associate Justices of the Court of Appeals, namely: Felix Q. Antonio, Lourdes San Diego, Jose Leuterio, Manuel Barcelona, and Vicente Rafael.

After his meeting with the labor group, the President conferred with a group of military generals headed by Gen. Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff

The President told the generals to prepare themselves for even greater service to country, even after they are retired from military duty.

He said the administration was prepared to help the retiring officers, especially those with valuable technical, executive and organizational abilities in getting into responsible positions in the civilian sector where they could further help in the economic development of the country.

At a meeting with leaders of student demonstrators later, the President prevailed upon them to call off their picket.

An understanding was reached between the President and the students on the latter's demands.

Led by Miss Portia Ilagan, the student leaders included Pedro Barrameda of UP, Philip Parca, Julius Ballesteros and Cris Aranda of PCC, Jose Sayson of CLSU, and Victor Parawan and Dever Besana of the PMMA.

They were accompanied by UP President Salvador P. Lopez, Dr. Nemesio Prudente, president of PCC and of the Philippine Association of State Universities and Colleges; Secretary Ople, Labor Relations Director Amado Gat Inciong; and Antonio Policarpio, Felixberto Olalia and Rogelio Villegas, all labor leaders.

The President rested briefly after a belated lunch, and then put the finishing touches on his state-of-the-nation message to Congress.

He also signed the ad interim appointment of four new members of the Board of Regents of the University of the Philippines, and reappointed another member whose term had expired.

Appointed for various tenures in office were:

- 1) Abel L. Silva, for a term expiring August 6, 1975.
- 2) Alexander Sycip, for a term expiring August 6, 1974.
- 3) Leonides S. Virata, for a term expiring August 6, 1973.
- 4) Fernando T. Barican, for a term expiring August 6, 1970.

Reappointed for another term expiring August 6, 1976, was Dr. Ambrosio F. Tangco, whose original appointment to the UP Board of Regents expired August 6, 1969.

January 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS laid down the imperative of self-discipline as “our salvation as a nation and the key to our future greatness.”

In his state-of-the-nation address before the joint session of the 7th Congress, which opened its regular session, the President affirmed confidence in the capacity of the Filipinos to solve their problems and move their country forward.

But, first, he said, there must be national discipline, and he called on the leaders of government, including the members of Congress, to set the example.

The next four years, he said, are crucial, with the nation compelled to embrace change, to make innovations, to accelerate development, and break the barriers to progress.

But these exertions, he said, already started in the last four years, have strained and will continue to strain the resources and energy of the nation. (See pp. 989 to 1044 for full text of the President’s state-of-the-nation address).

Earlier in the day, the President officiated at a mass-oathtaking ceremony in Malacañang, where he administered the oath to a group of ad interim colonels, out of a total of 137. The induction was held at the spacious Malacañang reception hall.

In brief remarks following the oath-taking, the President declared that he looks to the new colonels to establish higher standards of morality, proficiency, incorruptibility, and patriotism “which others may not even approach and approximate.”

He stated: “This is the role of the soldier, this is the role of the public servant; and the man in uniform sets a higher standard than anybody else.”

Congratulating the new coloneis, the President asked them to always “do honor to our flag, do honor to our country, do honor to our Constitution.”

The First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, top military officials led by Secretary of National Defense Ernesto Mata and General Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff, the inductees’ wives and close kin witnessed the oathtaking.

Shortly before 1 p.m., the President received the special committee from Congress, composed of senators and representatives which officially informed him that the 7th Congress was convened.

The committee was composed of Senators Alejandro Almendras, Magnolia Antonino, Rene Espina, Mamintal Tamano and Benigno Aquino, Jr., and Reps. Marcelino Veloso, Mohamad Ali Dimaporo, Emerito Caldemn and Antonio Villar.

The President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, then left for Congress. On arrival at the session hall of the House of Representatives, the First Couple was given a standing ovation by all those gathered.

The President, took exactly 40 minutes to deliver his speech. Then after the thunderous ovation died down he shook hands with Congress leaders and prominent guests, including Vice President Fernando Lopez and Mrs. Lopez. Shortly after, he and the First Lady left for Malacañang, arriving there at about 7 p.m.

In a statement issued later, the President made an urgent appeal to the students who demonstrated in front of Congress in the afternoon to cooperate with the authorities of government in trying to determine what precise elements provoked violence during their demonstration.

The President also reiterated the position that the students “have a legitimate right to manifest their grievances in public and we shall support their just demands, but we do not consider violence as a ” legitimate instrument of democratic dissent, and we expect the students to cooperate with government in making sure that their demonstrations are not marred by violence.”

January 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, in a long conference with the police chiefs of the Greater Manila area, asked for the dropping of charges preferred by the Manila police against student demonstrators, and enjoined them to be “more tolerant of the future leaders of the country.”

He told the police chiefs that steps will also be taken to have the students drop their charges against the police but, at the same time, the President directed Chairman Crispino de Castro of the Police Commission to look into charges against individual policemen.

The President summoned the chiefs of the various national investigative and law enforcement agencies and the Manila and suburban police to Malacañang to brief him on the demonstration which erupted in violence in front of Congress.

The President, however, said that the police should continue with their investigations and to press charges against non-students who were in the demonstration and who were found to have been guilty of violence.

He also ordered the different law enforcement agencies to refine their techniques and methods in dealing with disorders and to avoid the unnecessary use of force.

Apart from this conference, the President was involved mostly with desk work, receiving no visitors except U. S. Ambassador Henry Byroade and Rep. Justiniano S. Montano of Cavite, both in the morning.

Later, in a television interview, the President said:

“I personally feel that every Filipino should have the opportunity, as you have the right, to ventilate any grievances peacefully. However, I consider that violence should never be a rightful or lawful instrument of ventilating grievance. I have directed Gen. De Castro, the PC and METROCOM to prepare their own critiques. We will then determine what measures should be taken to prevent any untoward event like the event yesterday. I have asked the police to be more tolerant of the students. We are living in an Aldeguer, Marcelino Veloso, and Aguedu Agbayani; and Governor Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal.

The only other engagement the President had was the meeting with members of the Nacionalista Party junta, who sat down with him in Malacañang in the morning to consider primary state problems. The President received no other visitors the whole day.

In-between these two engagements, the President concentrated on his paper work.

He also sent a directive to Mayor Antonio J. Villegas of Manila asking the latter to maintain peace and order “in all demonstrations that may be held in the territorial jurisdiction of the City of Manila.”

The President issued the order in the wake of reports that Mayor Villegas had withdrawn Manila policemen assigned to demonstration areas purportedly because of criticism of the way the MPD handled the riotous student rally before Congress last Monday.

The President's order was handcarried to Mayor Villegas by Col. Gerardo Tamayo, MPD chief, who was summoned to a conference at Malacañang at noon.

President's Week in Review: January 28 - February 5, 1970

President's Week in Review: February 6-12, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

February 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met with former Ambassador Amelito R. Mutuc who, along with seven of his nine children, staged a "demonstration at the freedom Park in front of Malacañang.

"I was just showing my children, Mr. President, how to conduct a peaceful demonstration," the former ambassador informed the President who had invited him up the Palace upon learning of the "demonstration."

Earlier, the President received a large delegation composed of officers and members of different veterans organizations who formally pledged support to various government programs.

Headed by Col. Simeon Medalla and Col. Agustin Marking, president and executive vice president, respectively, of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines, the delegation also presented a resolution adopted by the VFP Supreme Council in a meeting on Feb. 2 reiterating their faith in the leadership of President Marcos.

Among the President's other callers were Mayor Amelia Gordon of Olongapo City and Placido Real, Jr., who was accompanied by Manuel R. Benedicto.

Mayor Gordon submitted to the President for approval the master plan for the development of Olongapo City along modern lines, calculated to make the city less dependent on the United States naval base in Subic.

According to Mayor Gordon, implementation of the plan will make the people less dependent for their livelihood on the U. S. naval base. She foresees the development of Subic as another free port like Mariveles in. the event the U.S. relinquished it to the Philippine government.

The other callers, Placido Real, an Ilocano writer, and Manuel R. Benedicto, a local business executive, presented the President with 500 copies of the book "Ferdinand Edralin Marcos," written in Ilocano by Real and published by the firm headed by Benedicto.

Among the actions taken by the President in the afternoon was the designation of Undersecretary of National Defense Alejandro Melchor as spokesman on defense and military matters.

He also directed Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, Jr. to investigate reports of an alleged kidnapping of a young labor union leader by Philippine Constabulary soldiers last January 26.

The President further directed the justice secretary to immediately prosecute the parties responsible if the alleged facts were confirmed to be true.

February 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS presided over a meeting of the National Development Council and of the Cabinet.

Convoking the development council for the first time since its reactivation tort last Jan. 11, to a luncheon meeting at the Pangarap guesthouse in Malacañang Park, the President impressed upon the Council members the agency of enacting price and rent control laws, and other measures designed to alleviate the conditions burdening low-income groups of the population.

Due to the limited resources of the government, the President in consultation with the Council, drew up a list of priority projects for which special funds must be provided for prompt implementation. The programs chosen are land reform, peace and order, and housing.

With the President as chairman, the council is composed of Congress leaders, members of the Cabinet whose departments are concerned with matters taken up by the Council, and presidents of all major political parties.

After the council meeting which lasted from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. the President crossed over to Malacañang proper where he presided over a meeting of his Cabinet.

During the Cabinet meeting, the President decided to order the resumption on Monday (Feb. 9) of classes in public and private schools in the Greater Manila area which had been suspended by the Department of Education for one week.

The President also took up with his Cabinet other urgent legislative measures, including the 1970-1971 budget which is due for submission to Congress on Feb. 10.

Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco reported at the meeting that a balanced budget has been programmed in compliance with the instructions of the President.

Next year's budget will also include special funds for the implementation of the land reform program, the peace and order drive and other high priority projects.

In the evening, the President conferred with Brig. Gen. Vicente R. Raval who called at Malacañang to submit his resignation as chief of the Philippine Constabulary. The President accepted his resignation.

He named Brig. Gen. Eduardo Garcia, commander of the First Infantry (Tabak) Division, to succeed Raval as PC chief, and Brig. Gen. Rafael Zagala, First Military Area commander, to replace Garcia in the Tabak Division stationed in Fort Magsaysay, at Laur, Nueva Ecija.

In a message issued on the eve of Constitution Day, the President said:

"As we prepare ourselves for the constitutional convention of 1971, it is desirable that the nation involve itself in a dialogue of ideas that would lead to a strong Constitution embodying the best aspirations of Filipino nationhood.

"It is appropriate that all sectors of the population now participate in such a dialogue so that those who will take part in the convention will be able to bring to that convention the best ideas that have been refined and distilled in the forums of free expression and free speech.

"Today, as we observe Constitution Day, it is with a deep sense of gratification that I note the involvement of our youth in the effort to ensure a free constitutional convention, to make sure that it is not dominated by any single party, but dominated only by the people's highest interest.

"I am also gratified to note that at a time of stress, the Constitution has remained the best guarantee against abuse, and continues to serve as an instrument of social and political order during a time of tumultuous manifestations and violent debate."

February 8—

PRESIDENT AND MRS. MARCOS honored the surviving members of the Constitutional Convention with a reception in Malacañang.

In brief remarks, the President expressed the belief that while we recognize the virtues of the Constitution, we must also recognize the fact that no Constitution can remain static, unmoving, unchangeable, inflexible or rigid, nor preserve the prescription of a bygone age while the world move on to new frontiers.

“For it to embody the nation’s soul,” the President said, “for it to speak its voice and pulsate with the nation’s heartbeat, it must move and grow with time, reflecting the metamorphosis and evolutions of our values and our mores.”

The President also said that the Constitution must also contain utmost understanding of human conditions and frailties and weaknesses, bordering on tolerance, because it is not only the recognized framework of government, but the source-spring and the very vitality of the institutions.

“It must also develop particular sensitivity to the various demands of our people, including the minorities of our society. It must resound with responsibility, and guarantee the protection of the rights of every citizen, whoever he may be; whether engaged in violence or not, and even the latter still has rights. This is the beauty of the Constitution,” the President added. (See pp. 1550-1553 for full text of the President’s remarks.)

Later in the afternoon, the President inducted into office five newly-appointed members of the Cabinet and one official of lower rank.

Inducted were:

- 1) Former Secretary of Justice Juan Ponce Enrile, Jr., as acting secretary of national defense.
- 2) Chairman of the Board of Investments Cesar E. A. Virata, as acting secretary of finance.
- 3) Former Solicitor General Felix V. Makasiar, as acting secretary of justice.
- 4) Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., concurrently as chairman of the National Economic Council.
- 5) Administrator Constancio E. Castañeda of the Office of Economic Coordination, as secretary of general services.
- 6) Newly-appointed Court of Appeals Justice Felix Antonio, as Solicitor general.

The President also announced the appointment of Brig. Gen. Florencio Medina (ret) nuclear physicist, as chairman of the National Science Development Board. Gen. Medina, however, could not take his oath as he is in Bangkok.

The President announced that Secretaries Ernesto Mata of defense, Eduardo Romualdez of finance, and Salih Ututalum of general services, and Chairman Marcelo Balatbat of the National Economic Council and Juan Salcedo of the National Science Development Board have all retired from the government.

However, the President said that he will recommend Ututalum to the Board of Regents of the Mindanao State University, for MSU president, and expressed the hope that he may be prevailed upon to stay in the service.

The President administered the oath of office to the new officials in the presence of members of the Senate and the House of Representatives, the judiciary, and surviving- members of the Philippine Constitutional Convention.

In announcing the new appointments, the President said that it was his desire to engage the services of young men who can help face the problems now confronted by government.

He said that evolving problems of government must be faced by men qualified to do so mainly because they belong to those who can confront the present generation with imagination, with confidence, with talent with patriotism and with vision.

The President also inducted into office former Defense Undersecretary Alejandro Melchor as Executive Secretary, vice Secretary Ernesto Maceda.

Secretary Melchor took his oath of office in the presence of the other newly-inducted members of the Cabinet and other officials led by Vice President Lopez.

February 9—

AFTER DOING his usual early morning desk work, President Marcos headed for the Philippine Navy headquarters on Roxas boulevard to attend the rites celebrating the 31st anniversary of the nation's sea arm as guest of honor.

Given the usual military honors on arrival, the President afterward delivered an address calling on the Navy to help preserve civil liberties, to increase vigilance against subversion, and to set the example in self-discipline as the country confronts the big problems and tasks of nation-building.

After conferring awards on servicemen, PN civilian employees and plain civilians for outstanding accomplishments in service to the Navy, the President inspected new products of the naval shipyard, then whisked back to Malacañang.

He worked for a while on papers that had come afresh to his desk, then took time out to receive James Conway, president of Rotary International, and local Rotary officials including Francisco Delgado. David Sycip and Antonio Roxas Chua, among others.

For the rest of the morning, the President was busy with state affairs issuing among others orders to investigate violations of the minimum wage law in sugarlandia, the reported illegal detention of a labor leader and the dismantling of the alleged tobacco blockade in the Hocus.

He also issued an executive order slimming down the Cabinet to a more handy and efficient size, by pulling out several offices from his official family and integrating them into other offices involved with the same responsibilities.

Henceforth the regular members of the Cabinet shall be limited to the following:

1. Department of Foreign Affairs
2. Executive Office
3. Department of Finance
4. Department of Justice
5. Department of Education
6. Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources
7. Department of Labor
8. Department of National Defense
9. Department of Health
10. Department of Commerce and Industry
11. Department of Public Works and Communications
12. Department of Social Welfare
13. Department of General Services
14. National Economic Council

The heads of the National Science Development Board, Civil Service Commission, Office of Economic Coordination, Commission on National Integration, and the Budget Commission shall maintain their cabinet rank, but shall attend Cabinet meetings only upon call by the President.

In the afternoon, the President's day was highlighted by the ceremonies launching the preparation for the celebration of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines' Golden Jubilee in 1973.

Among other callers in the afternoon were William Campbell and Antonio Delgado, who are scouting leaders; and later, Rufino Cardinal Santos and Julio Cardinal Rosales.

February 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS was busy all day with state matters, conferences and visitors, making a fuller day than usual, topped late in the afternoon with a merienda with student and labor leaders.

In the morning, he received former Senator Manuel Manahan, and later Dr. Jorge Juliano who came with a group of student leaders of the Central Luzon State University, not to render a protest but to discuss certain problems of the institution.

Also in the morning, the President received Lt. Gen. Marvin McNickle, who took over command of the U.S. Thirteenth Air Force, with head quarters at Clark Air Base, from Lt. Gen. Francis Gideon.

The President also received Kervin Buckley of Newsweek magazine and Stanley Karnow of the Washington Post. Both interviewed the President.

Early in the afternoon, the President submitted to Congress his budget proposal for the fiscal year 1970-71, which calls for a total expenditure from all funds of P3.482 billion, against expected receipts of P3.668 billion, or an expected surplus of P186 million.

The President submitted his budget proposal within the deadline set by the Constitution which provides that the budget message be submitted to Congress within 15 days after the opening of the regular session (January 26).

In his message to Congress, the President said that the expenditure policy for the incoming fiscal year was formulated in the light of current economic and monetary problems, which require fiscal policy to complement the monetary policy.

The President said the measures supporting restraint embodied in the proposed budget are necessary to correct the imbalance in the country's international transactions.

The following guidelines were set by the President in relation to the expenditure policy for the coming fiscal year:

- 1) To observe the rule of fiscal restraint.
- 2) To limit total general fund obligations to the level of collectible revenues.
- 3) To curtail current operating expenditures, particularly for travel, supplies and materials, equipment and personnel.
- 4) To rechannel savings to productive programs.
- 5) To postpone new public investments until after the completion of on-going projects.
- 6) To give priority to programs promoting food production and to dollar-earning industries.

7) To provide funds for social services requiring urgent expansion or upgrading.

8) To limit the budget for national defense and maintenance of peace and order to a level consistent with a policy of self-reliance and internal security.

9) To use the proceeds from the sale of bonds exclusively for self-liquidating or income-producing projects.

10) To avoid borrowings from inflationary sources.

In accordance with these guidelines, the President ordered enforcement of austerity measures such as the sidelining of new positions; the suspension of purchase of supplies and equipment, including motor vehicles; restriction of domestic and foreign travel as well as overtime services; reduction of the number of casual workers; and implementation of the economy proposals made by the Reorganization Commission.

Late in the afternoon the President sat down with student and labor leaders at merienda. The meeting, attended by Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople, lasted till evening.

Earlier, the President directed acting Secretary of Finance Cesar E.A. Virata to conduct an examination of the financial status of the government's financial institutions.

These financial institutions are the Philippine National Bank, Government Service insurance System, Social Security System, Development Bank of the Philippines, and Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office.

The President said that the examinations should reveal their respective financial status as of September 30, 1969 and as of December 31, 1969.

He asked Secretary Virata to submit to him a report on the examinations as soon as possible.

In an address read for him in the afternoon by Legislative Secretary Flores Bayot on the occasion of the observance of Constitution Day at the National University, the President pledged that civil rights and all the freedoms guaranteed in the Constitution will be protected under his administration.

The President said the democratic system was not a perfect system but it is the only option for men who care for their freedom. "The reforms may come slowly, but they will come," the President declared, "for otherwise, the democratic spirit will wither."

Addressing himself to the radical youth, the President asked them "to help build and not tear apart our society and our government,"

"I ask the hardliners among the student activists to give this system a second hard look and to consider its advantages over any other

"I ask the student groups on both the extreme left and the extreme right to give us the benefit of a second chance and accept our invitation to more purposeful dialogue and reconciliation with our people.

"I ask the students and all our young people to wage the peaceful revolution—one that will not maim bodies but which will enrich minds, the kind that will not divide our people but would bring them together.

"I am with you in this movement. As long as I am President, it shall be a matter of national policy to assimilate the views of the young in our political and national policies," the President said.

February 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS continued to carry on an increasingly substantive dialogue with student leaders, when he conferred with a representative group in Malacañang for about an hour.

The leaders of the National Union of Students of the Philippines who met with the President were:

Edgar Jopson, president; Lulut Valte, vice president; Melanie Dacudao, secretary; John Dimalanta and Alfredo Zamora of the Philippine Science High School; Jimmie Dizon of San Sebastian College; Gigi Katigbak of St. Theresa's College and Paul Dominguez and Romy Chen of Ateneo University.

Also present at the conference were Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Press Secretary Francisco S. Tatad, Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople and Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave.

Following his conference with the students, the President received Liharat Ham, president of the International Chamber of Commerce, who paid his respects to the Chief Executive following his arrival here on a tour of ICC chapters.

Dr. Ram was accompanied to Malacañang by the officials of the Philippine chapter of the ICC, headed by Dr. Manuel Lim, and including Dr. Ralph Nubla, Roger Manalo, Luciano E. Salazar, Justo N. Lopez, Kay Sham, Ramon Faustmann and William H. Quasha.

After receiving Dr. Ram, the President inducted into office Brig. Gen. Florencio Medina (ret.), as acting chairman of the National Science Development Board, vice Dr. Juan Salcedo.

Present at the oath-taking were congressmen led by Speaker Jose B. Laurel Jr. officials of the NSDB led by outgoing Chairman Salcedo, and close relatives and friends led by Mrs. Medina.

At well past noon, the President started receiving callers, most of whom were congressmen, it being Congressmen's Day at Malacañang.

Later Director of Forestry Jose Viado called to submit a partial report on the resettlement of urban squatters. Viado pinpointed some 3,000 hectares of the public domain in Rizal, and 9,000 hectares in Bataan, as possible sites for the relocation of squatters from the Greater Manila area.

Director Viado added that he will continue to look for other likely areas for resettling squatted.

Rep. Aguedo Agbayani of Pangasinan also submitted a plan to the President, for developing the Hundred Islands as a potential tourist attraction. Rep. Agbayani proposed the improvement of a 9-kilometer road serving Lucap, Alaminos, Pangasinan, from where tourist will have easy access to the Hundred Islands.

Chairman Faustino Tobia of CEPOC Industries, Inc. called on the President to report on the progress of negotiations for the acquisition of machinery, which is needed to fully exploit the CEPOC Malangas coal deposits.

Chairman Tobia reported that due to lack of machinery, the monthly production of Malangas coal, which is considered of very high grade, was limited to from 200 to 400 tons, which is not enough to meet even local needs.

Tobia reported that according to estimates, the Malangas coal mine has deposits of between 15 to 20 million tons of high quality coal, and that if fully exploited this could be a high-potential dollar-earning industry.

Rep. Jose Neri of Camiguin reported to the President that Hibok-Hibok volcano was showing signs of activity and requested that the Commission on Volcanology be asked to conduct investigations.

Other callers who took up with the President matters affecting their districts were Reps. Guillermo Sanchez of Agusan del Norte, Felipe Abrigo of Eastern Samar, Lamberto Macias and Jose Pro-Teves of Negros Oriental, Antonio Diaz of Zambales, Mariano Peñaflorida of Iloilo, Felipe Azcuña of Zamboanga del Norte, Joaquin Ortega and Jose E. Aspiras of La Union, Manuel Zoza, Emerito Calderon and Eduardo Gallas of Cebu, and Roberto Sabido of Albay.

The President finished receiving callers at almost 3 p.m.

Later in the afternoon and through the evening, the President attended to his desk work.

Among other actions, the President:

1) Directed Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio Feliciano to extend all possible relief and assistance to the victims of the fire which hit Dagupan City recently.

The President also asked the Philippine National Bank and the Development Bank of the Philippines to extend rehabilitation loans to the fire victims at liberal terms.

2) Instructed Roberto Benedicto, president of the Philippine National Bank, to leave for the United States and assist Central Bank Governor Gregorio S. Licaros in present economic negotiations with the United States.

3) Submitted to the board of the National Housing Corporation the name of Major General Gaudencio Tobias [unreadable] as general manager and executive vice president of the housing corporation with instruction for him to undertake massive attack on the nation's resettlement and housing problem, aimed at bringing about a substantial solution to that problem by 1971.

The NHC board of directors will elect the NHC general manager and executive vice president.

At the same time, Presidential Press Secretary Francisco S. Tatad said that surveys will be immediately initiated to determine how many families and individuals are directly affected by the housing and resettlement problem in the metropolitan areas.

Immediate government efforts in this direction will include studies on credit for housing, along with similar studies on credit for education and self-employment.

February 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS received only a few callers. He spent the day mostly in his study with a bunch of state papers.

In the morning, the President received Rolf Deinoff and Ove Sundberg, executives of the Swedish Match Company who called to pay their respects.

The President also received Don Vicente Araneta who proposed the establishment of agro-industrial enterprises in the rural areas as a means of providing employment and improving the living conditions in outlying communities.

Among others with whom the President had conferences were Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Senators Leonardo Perez and Rene Espina, NEC Chairman and PES Director General Placido Mapa, Jr., and Undersecretary of Finance Roman Cruz, Jr.

Working on state papers in-between callers and conferences, the President:

- 1) Issued a proclamation declaring February 15 to April 16 this year as a period for a national fund campaign for educational and other youth welfare purposes;
- 2) Granted reprieves to all convicts in the national penitentiary sentenced to die by electrocution pending serious study by the government on the possible abolition of capital punishment; and
- 3) Proclaimed Monday, Feb. 16, as a special public holiday in Caloocan City, to give the people of the city a chance to observe with appropriate ceremonies the 8th foundation anniversary of their city.

The Chief Executive also certified to Congress the necessity of the immediate enactment of a Senate bill providing for price control “to protect the common consumer who suffers most from high prices, specially of prime commodities.

“We are all aware of the difficulties of implementing a price control and rent control law,” the President said in his message to Congress.

However, in view of the attempts of some heartless businessmen and merchants to manipulate prices by such practices as hoarding, it becomes imperative and necessary for us to immediately adopt appropriate measures to protect the common consumer who suffers most from high prices,” he said.

The bill seeks to authorize the President to create a Price Administration Board and to fix the ceiling prices of certain commodities. Certain acts are required of importers, producers and distributors and their violations penalized.

To prevent an arbitrary fixing of ceiling prices, certain guidelines are provided for in the bill, and producers as well as distributors are given representation in the board.

President's Week in Review: February 13-19, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

February 13—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had an early breakfast with Virgilio Marco, executive director of the World Bank for the area including the Philippines, Brazil, Colombia, among other countries, starting off a day which counted many conferences.

Marco reported to the President on his talks with heads of local agencies having business transactions with the World Bank.

Also present at the breakfast were Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Carlos P. Romulo, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata, NEC Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr., PNB President Roberto Benedicto and Acting Central Bank Governor Amado Briñas.

After this meeting, the President received John McDavid, supreme grand knight of the Knights of Columbus, who is in the Philippines to visit all KC chapters in the country.

McDavid gave the President a replica of the chalice that President Kennedy donated to the President of Mexico. He also presented a replica of the tiara of Pope Paul VI.

McDavid was accompanied by former Ambassador Oscar Ledesma, president of the KC in the Philippines; Fr. George Wilmann, national deputy commander; Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar; Dr. Ramon Campos; Fr. Francisco Tantoco, secretary-general; and Melquiades Virata, Jr.

The President then received Antonio Delgado, who took up with the President, in behalf of the Philippine Chamber of Tourism, the ways and means of attracting to the Philippines tourists from the United States and Japan who might go to Expo '70 in Osaka.

Shortly before 12 noon, the President received a delegation which presented him with a "responsible parenthood program" prepared by a group of civic and religious leaders.

Headed by Jaime Zobel de Ayala, a management expert, and Bishop Felix Perez, the delegation sought the President's endorsement of the plan entitled, "Catholic Approach: The Rhythm Method." The group intends to launch a nationwide information campaign aimed at securing public acceptance of the plan.

The President referred the plan to the Population Control Commission headed by Secretary of Education O. D. Corpuz.

The President also conferred with officials of the People's Homesite and Housing Corporation on the launching of a massive housing program for the working class and other low-income groups.

He informed them that he had designated Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor to coordinate the operations of all government agencies engaged in housing and to marshal their combined resources and facilities behind this new housing program for the poor.

Through the rest of the day, the President concentrated on his desk work.

Working on state papers, the President among others:

1. Issued a proclamation creating the Tondo Condominium Project and placing government lands and buildings in Vitas, Tondo, Manila on sale to actual occupants. The proclamation will enable the 252 families, consisting of 1,712 persons, to own the units they occupy in the 252-apartment tenement building, which was constructed at a cost of P3,084,000 on a 15,000 square meters foreshore land in Vitas.
2. Appointed Ramon Duremdes of Dumangas, Iloilo, as representative of the minority party in the Committee on Disposal of Valuable Government Properties, vice former Rep. Toribio Perez of Albay. Duremdes was recommended by Senator Gerardo Roxas, president of the Liberal Party, as provided for under Republic Act No. 5169. The same law empowers the President to sell government properties for the purpose of raising funds to pay for the government subscription to the Land Bank and to finance the operations of the Agricultural Credit Administration.

February 14—

PRESIDENT MARCOS issued a number of directives on certain problems requiring early action, received some visitors, met officials on other problems, and made at least one appointment to a special post.

Otherwise, he kept his Saturday activities light, except for the usual concentration on urgent state papers and other official matters.

Among his first callers were officials of the Commission on Elections, who discussed a sheaf of proposed bills aimed at strengthening the authority of the Comelec, and introducing some reforms in the election process.

Earlier, the President named Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata as governor of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development representing the Philippines and as representative on the Board of Governors of the Asian Development Bank, replacing former Secretary of Finance Eduardo Z. Romualdez, who had resigned.

Calling at Malacañang in the morning were Comelec Chairman Jaime N. Ferrer and Commissioners Lino Patajo and Cesar Miraflores who submitted four bills proposing amendments to the Revised Election Code, with the request that the President certify them to Congress.

After meeting with the Comelec officials, the President conferred with Director of Forestry Jose Viado regarding the possible release of public lands which will be used as relocation sites for squatters from the Greater Manila area. Eyed were public lands in Rizal and Bataan.

After this conference, the President worked for a while on official papers. Among others, the Chief Executive:

1. Created a committee to look into all educational foundations assisted by United States funds, and directed it to submit a report on its findings as soon as practicable.
2. Directed PHHC General Manager Sebastian Santiago to give a 90-day grace period to PHHC tenants facing eviction for delinquency in settling accounts. In giving the order, the President emphasized that "no tenant or awardee shall be deprived of his property nor should his rights be in any way disturbed without first giving him the opportunity to settle his obligations to the corporation."
3. Proclaimed Monday, February 16, a special public holiday in Muslim regions, in connection with the feast of Eidul Adh-ha.

February 15—

PRESIDENT MARCOS called on a united labor front to join the government in pursuing measures for change and progress by the times.

The President, addressing the delegates to the merger convention of the Pinagbuklod na Manggagawang Pilipino, or Trade Union Congress of the Philippines, also urged them to seek closer ties with other segments of Philippine labor not covered by the merger.

The President motored to the GSIS Social Hall at 4 p.m. to deliver his address.

The merger of the Philippine Trade Unions Congress headed by Pedro D. Fernandez and the Philippine Labor Center headed by Roberto S. Oca, brought into the new organization some 300,000 organized laborers, comprising about 65 per cent of all workers in the country.

The President said that the merger climaxed a long and difficult struggle of the workingman for solidarity because over the decades Philippine Labor had always been “fragmentized, a house divided against itself, organized around personalities, and therefore powerless and impotent.” (See pp. 1805 to 1812 for full text of the President’s speech.)

Earlier, the President issued an executive order requiring government offices, agencies and instrumentalities to submit to the Bureau of Internal Revenue an annual list of money payments on transactions with private individuals, corporations, partnerships and associations.

The Chief Executive issued the order after it was ascertained that many government offices, including government-owned or controlled corporations, have not withheld from money payments to private individuals, corporations, partnerships and associations the internal revenue taxes due and payable on account of said money payments on transactions made.

This practice, the President pointed out, is not only a clear violation of the provisions of Republic Act No. 1051 and Revenue Regulations No. 21-67, but it also creates opportunities for unscrupulous taxpayers to evade the payment of internal revenue taxes.

The President also issued another executive order creating a Presidential Census Coordinating Board, which will be responsible for the systematic coordination of government agencies and instrumentalities involved in the conduct of the 1970 census of population and housing.

As counterpart of the census board at the local government level, there shall be established provincial, city or municipal census boards in each province, city and municipality, which shall provide such facilities and assistance as the Bureau of Census and Statistics may require.

In the same executive order, the President designated May 6 this year as Census Day, the date when the field enumeration for the census of population and housing of 1970 commences.

February 16—

PRESIDENT MARCOS concentrated mostly on state papers, but also received a number of callers, including a 40-man delegation representing tenants of the Tondo foreshore lands, and two officials going abroad on assignments.

In the case of the Tondo group, the President was informed of irregularities allegedly committed by certain Land Authority personnel in connection with applications for acquisition of lots in the foreshore lands. The President ordered the immediate filing of charges in court against erring personnel.

Earlier, in the morning, the President received Ambassador Romeo S. Busuego, who called for final instructions preparatory to departing for his post in Kuala Lumpur, as Philippine envoy to Malaysia.

Busuego, who was accompanied by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo to Malacañang, was chief of mission in Malaysia for more than two years, returning home when Philippine-Malaysian diplomatic relations were suspended in November, 1968.

The President also received Brig. Gen. Felix Pestaña, who paid his respects prior to his leaving for Bangkok where he will assume his post as deputy chief of the Military Planning Office of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO).

General Pestaña has been in the service for almost 30 years, rising to the rank of vice commander of the Philippine Air Force and later deputy chief of staff of the AFP. He will be away for two years.

In the afternoon, the President received the Council of Tondo Foreshore land Community Organization, a conglomerate of 76 individual organizations representing 100,000 residents of Vitas and Isla Puting Bato in Tondo, and areas in-between.

Accompanied by PANAMIN Secretary Manda Elizalde, the group headed by Restituto de Leon and Feliciano V. Reales, vice-chairman and executive vice-chairman, respectively, included Leonard A. Villacorta, Josephine J. Domico, Gervacio D. Acebo, Francisco Militar, Joseph Venida, Feliciano Maraliga, Eleodora B. Tuazon, Patria Valles and Fr. Henry B. Aguilar, adviser.

Present at the meeting were Vice President Fernando Lopez, Secretaries Felix V. Makasiar of Justice, Gregorio Feliciano of Social Welfare, Amadeo Cruz of Health, and Blas F. Ople of Labor. Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Deputy Governor Benicio Eusebio of Land Authority and Customs Commissioner Rolando Geotina.

The President also received Reps. Manuel Zosa, Emerito Calderon, and Celestino Sybico, who took up problems of their respective districts, with the President.

February 17—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took immediate steps to resolve peace and order problems which were brought to his attention.

The President, together with Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar, met with a delegation of Masbate students, who requested that NBI team be sent to look into the unsolved killings and the presence of goons in their province.

The President immediately directed Secretary Makasiar to confer with NBI Director Jolly Bugarin and organize an NBI investigating team. In addition, the Chief Executive also placed under the PC command the Masbate Anti-Cattle Rustling Team.

Earlier, the President received Wesley C. Haraldson director of the United States Agency for International Development who bade goodbye before leaving for a new assignment in Washington, D.C

The President later met with Undersecretary of Public Works Manuel Syquio and inquired into the status of various public works projects.

The President devoted most of his time to working on state papers, until late in the evening.

In the course of acting on official papers, the President approved the increase from P1 to P2 daily of the subsistence allowance of government hospital personnel.

The President also recommended to the Board of Directors of the Philippine National Bank the election of Secretary Makasiar as chairman of the board, and designated Generoso Tanseco as board member.

February 18—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met with some 100 provincial governors and city mayors at Camp Aguinaldo in the morning.

The provincial and city executives received a military briefing on the national situation from Lt. Col. Delfin Castro of the AFP intelligence section.

The President announced that he has issued an executive order authorizing the provincial governors to organize provincial strike forces from existing municipal police forces.

These strike forces will be used in case of emergencies. They will be under the control and supervision of the Philippine Constabulary but will be at the disposal of provincial governors.

The President said that while it was his duty to preserve peace and order throughout the country, it was the primary responsibility of local executives to maintain peace and order within their jurisdictions.

He assured the conferees that the national government was strong and stable and able to defend itself against any force seeking the overthrow of its democratic institutions.

The President said his administration will continue to encourage student demonstrations but warned subversive elements against violence.

He urged the provincial and city executives to conduct an information campaign on the national situation and acquaint the people against the dangers of communism and subversion.

Back in Malacañang early in the afternoon, the President resumed filling up vacancies in the judiciary with the appointment of eight new judges of courts of first instance covering judicial districts in different parts of the country.

Nominated as judges of courts of first instance were:

1. Fernando Santiago for the 9th judicial district, Branch VI, with station at Lucena City;
2. Catalino Macaraig, Jr. for the 8th judicial district, Branch VI, with station at Calamba, Laguna;
3. Alberto Q. Ubay, for the 7th judicial district, Branch XXXII, with station at Caloocan City;
4. Mrs Floraiana C. Bartolome, for the 5th judicial district, Branch VI, stationed at Malolos, Bulacan;
5. Cavetano Tuason, for the 16th judicial district, Branch X, with station at Mati, Davao Oriental;
6. Moises Dalisay, for the 15th judicial district, Branch V, with station at Malabang, Lanao del Sur;
7. Mario J. Gutierrez, for the 2nd judicial district/Branch III, with station at Vigan, Ilocos Sur; and
8. Severo Malvar for the 15th judicial district, Branch VIII, with station at Cagayan de Oro City.

Nominations of the eight new judges were forwarded to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation.

In his talk with ASEAN secretaries who called on him later, the President expressed hope that the just concluded meeting in Manila of the administrative machinery of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) would pave the way for greater cooperation among the nations of the region.

The ASEAN secretaries bade the President goodbye prior to their departure for their respective countries.

The President said he was pleased to note that the other ASEAN member nations entertain the same hope for cooperation, and that the United Nations had sent a special technical team to help the ASEAN nations.

According to Gunal Kansu, leader of the UN mission to ASEAN, ASEAN nations need not go from one financing institution to another for funding. The UN special team will study specific projects and recommend funding to the proper UN agencies.

Accompanied by Ambassador Modesto Farolan, the group included S. T. Stewart, permanent secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Singapore; Mohd. Yusof Hitam, charge d'affaires, Malaysian Embassy, Manila; and Rukmito Hendraningrat, secretary general, ASEAN National Secretariat of Indonesia.

PRESIDENT MARCOS focused on his desk work, receiving few visitors, mostly public officials with whom he discussed current problems and consulted in the course of coping with official matters.

The biggest group to see him were lawmakers, including both senators and representatives, and a number of local chief executives.

The solons discussed with the President matters concerning their constituencies, particularly community improvement projects.

Among the solons who called on the President were Senators Ambrosio Padilla and Dominador Aytona, and Reps. Felix Fuentebella of Camarines Sur, Pablo Ocampo and Ramon Bagatsing of Manila, Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte, Natalio Castillo of Bohol, Indanan Anni of Sulu, Lamberto Macias of Negros Oriental, Joaquin Chipeco of Laguna, Pablo Malasarte of Bohol, Constancio Maglana of Davao Oriental, Fernando Veloso of Western Samar, and Frisco San Juan of Rizal.

The local chief executives who discussed with the President problems in their bailiwicks were Governors Lino Chatto of Bohol, Francisco Nepomuceno of Pampanga, Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales, Jose Evangelista of Ilocos Norte, Ramon de los Santos of Davao del Sur, Recaredo Castillo of Surigao del Sur; and Mayor Elias Lopez of Davao City.

The President finished conferring with the solons and local executives at about 3 p.m.

He then resumed his desk work.

President's Week in Review: February 20-26, 1970

President's Week in Review: February 27 - March 5, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

February 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had several conferences with public officials, a couple of interviews with newsmen, and to top the day delivered a speech before Rotarians.

The President started the day much as usual, by working at his desk. About 10 a.m., he received once again the leaders of Mindanao and Sulu, with whom he had conferred on peace and order problems in that southern region.

The second meeting with the same group was a follow-through on the conclusions and agreements reached at the earlier conference. The Mindanao-Sulu leaders pledged in a signed paper their support of the President's stand against communism and of his policy of maintaining public order.

Among those at the conference were former Secretary of General Services Salih Ututalum, Rep. Indanan Anni of Sulu, Rep. Salipada Pendatun of Cotabato, Governors Linang Mandangan of Lanao del Sur, Mayors Omar Dianalan of Marawi City, Datu Balakat Sangki of Ampatuan, Cotabato, and Barlie Abubakar of Jolo, Sulu; Mr. and Mrs. Blah Sinsuat of Cotabato; and former Governors Arsad Sali and Benjamin Abubakar of Sulu.

Later in the morning, the President conferred with Speaker Pro-Tempore Jose Aldeguer, and Reps. Fermin Caram and Lamberto Macias.

Two foreign journalists interviewed the President, namely, Eve Desscarre of Combat magazine and Carol Goldstein of Keystone Press Agency.

In the afternoon, the President concentrated mostly on his interrupted deskwork. Shortly after 7 p. m., he motored to Manila Hilton where he was guest of honor at the annual convention of International Rotary District 308.

The President pledged "sympathy and understanding to the true student who seeks reform" but warned that there can only be one answer to the hard core communist who advocates anarchy—"force against force."

Speaking before the annual convention of Rotary International District 380 at the Manila Hilton, the President said: "We will be patient with the reformist students no matter how radical, for these are our children, but we can be firm and forceful with the violent no matter how intellectual."

The President said the state is capable of preserving itself and has the power to fight its enemies.

At the same time, he reaffirmed his administration's commitment to liberal democracy.

He called upon the nation to embrace the same commitment. (See pp. 2319 to 2321-G for full text of the President's speech.)

February 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS practically spent the whole day working on state papers.

Early in the day, the President wrote letters addressed to members of both houses of Congress urging the immediate passage of the bill regulating the selection of delegates to the forthcoming Constitutional Convention.

About noontime, the President received Antonio Heras of the JD Transit and Ramon Manzano and Jose Crisanto of the Alarco of Iriga City, who took up problems of bus companies.

A 40-man delegation of provincial officials of the new province of Agusan del Sur, led by Rep. Democrito O. Plaza, later called on the President to pledge their faith and confidence in his leadership. Also with the group were officials of national government agencies assigned to the province.

The President assured the delegation that he would give the province the needed assistance from the special highways fund to carry on the development projects there.

After the delegation departed, the President returned to his desk to work. State papers kept him busy through the afternoon and into the evening.

Matters acted upon by the President included the promotions of 631 regular and reserve officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines upon the recommendation of the Secretary of National Defense and the AFP chief of staff.

The promotions were to ranks ranging from lieutenant colonel to captain in the Philippine Constabulary, Philippine Army, and Philippine Air Force, from commander to lieutenant junior grade in the Philippine Navy and the Bureau of Coast and Geodetic Survey, as well as in the various special services of the AFP.

In a speech read for him by Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata at the second national convention of the Hotel and Restaurant Association of the Philippines, held at the Hotel Intercontinental in the evening, the President called for a common effort in developing tourism, saying that it is the entire nation's concern, aimed both at earning dollars to further overall development and at familiarizing other peoples with the Philippines' true virtues and conditions.

The President said that a well developed tourist industry will "open up the country" to the world.

He pointed out that many foreigners who have come to visit or work here have remained to make the Philippines a second home "because they have made personal self-discoveries here, have become intimate with the many good things we have."

He stressed, "this is the kind of discovery we would want tourists to make in the Philippines. And this is the kind of opening up I mean when I say that tourism will open up the Philippines. It is our opening up to the hearts and minds of other peoples, and the opening up of the hearts and minds of peoples in the world outside to our special world here." (See pp. 2321-H to 2321-J for full text of the President's speech.)

March 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took note of the grievances of jeepney, taxi and bus drivers by receiving leaders of a confederation of these workers and listening to their problems; at the same time, he also gathered police chiefs in the Greater Manila Area and in nearby towns, to discuss ways of improving police efficiency.

These two conferences highlighted the President's day which was also featured by other callers and some paperwork.

One of the first callers was Senator V. C. Gair of Australia, who is here at the beginning of a Southeast Asian tour to study conditions in the region. The Australian solon was accompanied by his country's envoy here, Ambassador Francis Hamilton Stuart, and the foreign office's deputy protocol officer, Mariano C. Ruiz.

After this visit, the President received the police chiefs, including Police Commission Chairman Brig. Gen. Crispino de Castro (ret.), who presented the drafts of bills designed to upgrade police work as well as beef up the Polcom's effectiveness. The President said that he will certify the bills to Congress, after they have been studied by his office.

Among those at this conference were Cols. James Barbers of Manila, Tomas Karingal of Quezon City, Francisco C. Villa of Pasay City, and the chiefs and members of the municipal police forces of Muntinglupa, Cainta, Teresa, Taytay, San Mateo, Montalban, Pateros, Cardona, Angono, Baras, Binangonan, Marikina, Parañaque, Mandaluyong, San Juan, Rizal; San Pablo City; Biñan, Sta. Cruz, Magdalena, Sta. Maria, Famy, Nagcarlan, Rizal, Parigil, Alaminos, Pagsanjan, Siniloan and Pila, Laguna; and Hagonoy, Valenzuela, Angat, San Ildefonso, Malolos, Baliuag, Obando, San Rafael, and Bocaue, Bulacan.

Then the President sat down with representatives of the Philippine Confederation of Drivers Organizations. He threshed out their problems, notably alleged mulcting by policemen, and received a list of requests from the group aimed at improving conditions for their drivers.

Among those at this meeting were Manuel Villano, Tomas Mendoza, Alberto Celubequel, Teotimo Mulete, Pedro Bolivar, Mario Balane, Alfredo Geray, Mario Malnay, Manuel Madrid, Pol Castro, Jose Calixto, Rodolfo Beso, Jose Ancheta, and others.

For the rest of his working day, the President focused on the state papers brought to him for action, in the course of which he accepted the resignation of Godofredo Reyes, Jr. as chairman and general manager of the Philippine Coconut Administration (PHILCOA).

Reyes resigned in order to assume the post of director in the Asian Coco nut Community, based in Bangkok, Thailand. The post has a term of five years.

March 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met with various key officials of the government.

The President also accepted the credentials of two new ambassadors accredited with the Philippine government in presentation ceremonies held at the Palace ceremonial hall.

Earlier in the morning, the President received Lt. Gen. Lucious D. Clay, Jr., vice chief of staff of the United States Air Force, Pacific, with head quarters in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Accompanied to Malacañang by U. S. Ambassador Henry Byroade, Gen. Clay is currently on a round of calls on heads of states within the Pacific area following his assumption of his new post.

The President received the letters of credence of Ambassador Khurram Khan Panni and Ambassador B. Devi Rao, new Pakistani and Indian envoys to the Philippines, respectively, in separate presentation ceremonies attended by members of the Cabinet headed by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo.

In accepting their credentials, the President told the new envoys that the Philippines will continue to maintain close collaboration and cooperation with the Republics of India and Pakistan.

Back at his study, the President held conferences with a number of key government officials, including some members of his Cabinet who consulted him on pressing problems in their respective departments

Among those who saw the President were Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor Jr., Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar, Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata, NEC Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr., and Commissioner of the Budget Faustino Sy-Changco.

The President also conferred with Brig. Gen. Carlos Oanes, IV PC zone commander, and the provincial commanders of Cotabato, Sulu and the two Lanao provinces who reported on the peace and order situation in the South.

March 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met with representatives of drivers and transport operators to consider both short-range and long-range solutions to be problems of transport operations in the Greater Manila area.

Key government officials concerned with the problem attended the meeting Jeepney drivers in Manila and suburbs had staged a three-day strike to project their varied complaints.

The conference, held at the Malacañang Council of State room was attended by Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar and acting Secretary of Public Works and Communications Manuel B. Syquiao; Mayor Antonio Villegas of Manila, Land Transportation Commissioner Romeo F. Edu, Public Service Commissioner Enrique Medina, Solicitor General Felix Antonio and Police Commissioner Jose Lukban;

Antonio Heras and Guy Rodriguez, acting president and director-treasurer, respectively, of the Bus Operators Association of the Philippines; officials of Jeepney Drivers of the Philippines headed by Bonifacio de Luna;

Brig. (Jen. Mariano Ordonez, chief of the Metrocom, Col. Jaime Catral, Trafcon chief, and the chiefs of police of the greater Manila area.

The late morning conference was the only one held by the President, thus giving him time to concentrate on urgent paper work which he started soon after breakfast.

In the course of the day, the President issued a directive to the Central Bank and the National Economic Council to undertake a thorough study of the effect and impact of the floating peso-dollar rate on the country's economy.

He told CB Governor Gregorio S. Licaros and NEC Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr. to submit to him within fifteen (15) days all the necessary data and research gathered by their respective technical staffs to guide him in instituting measures to curb any undue rise of prices.

March 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS attended to the problems of two important groups, the leaders of which he met in conference in the morning, while also sticking close to his regular schedule which included private visitors and the usual desk work.

One of the first callers on the President was C. C. Pocock of the Royal Dutch Shell Group of Companies, who called to pay his respects. Pocock planed in the course of a tour of the firm's offices in Asia.

At mill-morning, the President sat down with officers of the Philippine Copra Exporters Association, with whom he discussed the present dollar policy, in respect to its impact on the copra industry. The President asked for a memorandum from the group which he said he would refer to monetary officials for study, with an eye to helping the copra exporters solve their problems.

Among those at the meeting were Juan Collas, president; Manuel J. Igual, vice president; Luy Kim Guan, 2nd vice president; Benjamin Salvosa, Enrique P. Boitiz and Thou Baker.

In an hour-long conference, the President also charted the ways by which the Philippine National Railways could enhance its standard while providing cheap and efficient transportation for the general public. A number of measures were agreed upon by the President and leaders of the PNR's Federation of Labor Unions, aimed at solving the problems of the firm.

Present at the meeting were PNR General Manager Nicanor T. Jimenez who brief the President on the present situation of the railway firm, and Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., whom the President designated to confer with various finance officials on ways of meeting the financial requirements of the firm.

The PNE union leaders presented the President with a manifesto signed by Macario C. Roque and Eduardo L. Morales, chairman and general secretary, respectively, of the PNR Federation of Labor Unions, embodying several requests.

Earlier, the President appointed Secretary Leonides S. Virata, the incumbent secretary of commerce and industry, as the new chairman of the Development Bank of the Philippines.

Chairman Virata succeeds former chairman Gregorio S. Licaros, who is now governor of the Central Bank.

Chairman Virata will remain at the Department of Commerce and Industry in a concurrent capacity while awaiting the appointment of his successor.

In the afternoon, the President focused on his desk work. He remained in his study throughout the rest of his working day.

President's Week in Review: March 6-12, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

March 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of the day working on state papers during which he freely consulted with his financial and economic advisers.

In the morning, the President had a long conference with Vice President Fernando Lopez, concurrently secretary of agriculture and natural resources, and Chairman Alfredo Montelibano of the Rice and Corn Administration.

After this conference, the President met with Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso and Rep. Tito Dupaya of Cagayan. They discussed the status of administration bills pending in Congress.

The President also had consultations with PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr., who is concurrently chairman of the National Economic Council, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco and Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, who took his oath of office as Chairman of the Development Bank of the Philippines before the President.

About noontime, the President received the officers of the Manila Live stock Marketing Corporation who came to discuss certain problems, not ably the suspended arrangement with the Greater Manila Terminal Food Market on the stabilization of the price of meat.

The President summoned GMTFM General Manager Eliseo Ocampo and directed him to make arrangements for the continuing stabilization of the price of meat in Manila markets.

Early in the afternoon, the President received the congressmen, governors and city mayors of the Bicol region who were accompanied to Malacañang by Senator Dominador Aytona.

The Bicol leaders took up with the President problems facing their respective provinces. The officials also informed him that they had organized "peace forces" which will be utilized in the event of emergency.

The group consisted of Reps. Felix Fuentebella of Camarines Sur, Roberto Sabido of Albay, Rafael Aquino of Sorsogon, and Jose Alberto of Catanduanes," Governors Armando Cledera of Camarines Sur and Jose Esteves of Albay; Provincial Board Member E. Tible of Camarines Sur; and Mayors Gregorio Imperial of Legaspi City and Jose Villanueva of Iriga City, and S. P. Bigay.

The President also designated Arturo R. Tanco, Jr. as acting undersecretary of agriculture.

Secretary Tanco, the latest of young technocrats tapped by the administration for a top level post, fills the vacancy in the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources left by Dean Dioscoro Umali.

Until his designation, Tanco was president and general manager of the Management and Investment Development Associates, Inc. (MIDA), as well as a ranking executive in 15 other private firms.

The President likewise submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation 44 nominations to judiciary posts, all of whom had been extended ad interim appointments prior to the opening of the regular session of Congress.

Topping the list of nominees was Justice Julio Villamor, who was named associate justice of the Supreme Court. The other nominees include five associate justices of the Court of Appeals; two judges of the Court of First Instance;

ten city judges; 12 municipal judges; nine clerks of court; one member of the Board of Pardons and Parole; one solicitor, one assistant provincial fiscal, and two special attorneys in the Office of Agrarian Counsel. (See pp. 2571 and 2572 for the list of nominations submitted to the Commission on Appointments.)

In the evening, the President was the keynote speaker at the special convention of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines, held at the Rizal provincial capitol in Pasig.

In his address, the President stressed the massive scale of the reforms envisioned in the nation's life and government, and asked that the people come together to work out these reforms on the basis of reason and through peaceful means under the democratic process.

The Chief Executive conceded the urgent need for change, but appealed to the people that in instituting change they should "submit first of all to the authority of reason."

In the face of the vast dimensions of the reforms sought, he said, "if we are to succeed, we must work together, pool our energies and vitality, chart together our course and agree to follow it unwaveringly."

And to do all this, he added, "we must move on the basis of reason." (See pp.2570-A to 2570-D for full text of; the President's speech).

March 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted his time, as is usual for him on weekends, to his desk work during which he received no callers except for government officials and close aides whom he expressly called for consultation.

About noon, he broke off his desk work to attend as guest of honor the reunion of ROTC graduates of the" University of the Philippines, under the association known as Vanguard, of which he is a member.

Delivering the main speech, the President reiterated the need for transforming the nation, in which he said the youth, possibly with the example set by ROTC graduates can participate through substantive contributions to the effort to uplift the masses and improve the rural areas.

He also asked that the AFP continue to escalate its civic action missions aside from its regular military duties, in keeping with the new concept of a citizen army and an: army for peace.

Arriving back at Malacañang about 2 p.m., the President resumed his desk work after a brief rest. Among his actions was to proclaim March 9 a special public holiday in Batangas and in chartered cities within the province, in order that people in these places can properly celebrate the birth anniversary of the late Senator Jose P. Laurel.

The President remained working in his study through the evening.

Meanwhile, as an aftermath of the recent transportation strike in the Greater Manila area, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. issued a memorandum circular creating a committee to study the possible establishment of a mass transit system to service the Greater Manila area.

The committee is composed of the Secretary of Public Works and Communications as chairman, and the Secretary of Justice, the Mayor of Manila, the chairman of the Public Service Commission, the Land Transportation" Commissioner and a representative of the executive secretary, as members.

Specific objectives of the committee are:

1. To resolve the existing serious transportation problems to the mutual convenience and satisfaction of vehicle owners and operators on the one hand and commuters on the other;
2. To evolve a modern system of transportation comparable to the best existing transportation system in other countries; and
3. To submit necessary legislation to Congress and such other measures as may be necessary towards the accomplishment of these objectives.

In view of the urgency of its work, the committee was directed to submit its recommendations to the office of the executive secretary on or before April 30.

March 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted his time, as is usual on weekends, working on state papers during which he received no callers except for government officials and close aides whom he called for consultation.

In a message issued on the eve of the birth anniversary of Dr. Jose P. Laurel, the President said:

“Today, many years after his passing, we find the voice of Senator Jose P. Laurel still strong and relevant to our gravest concerns as a people.

“Today’s clamor for change recall much of what Senator Laurel had first and consistently brought before the high councils of our nation.

“Senator Laurel sought a change in the course of the nation not out of forlorn hope of coming doom, but out of an infinite faith in the capacity of the Filipinos to fulfill their destiny as a free and democratic people.

“We are now called upon to heed his admonition, especially his advocacy of peaceful and democratic action towards a new and freer Philippines.”

March 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a comparatively well-focused day with few visitors to divert his attention from the state matters at hand.

He had only two callers in the morning; the first was C. Maxwell Stanley, well-known philanthropist, who arrived recently to receive an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from a local university and to address the Manila Rotary Club.

The visitor was accompanied by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo.

Later in the morning, Senator Helena Z. Benitez called along with Mrs. Belen Enrile Gutierrez, president of the Philippine Women’s University and member of the Monetary Board, to take up some official business with the President.

The President was free all afternoon to work on state papers and discuss problems with his aides and ranking officials concerned. In the evening he went out to the Hotel Intercontinental to speak as guest of honor at the opening of the 6th Asia-Pacific Food Production Conference.

Expressing hope that the meeting will contribute to the world's response to the challenge of food production, the President noted that the so-called "miracle rice" in the development of which the Philippines has pioneered, has produced a rice glut which in turn scaled down the price of rice in the world market.

The President also urged that immediate attention be given to the production of more protein foods, pointing out that protein deficiency in Asian countries "accounts partly for the poor health of our peoples."

He said that new and modern techniques of agricultural production and management are needed in Asia, adding that in order to attain self-sufficiency in food, closer "collaborative effort, a sharing of knowledge, a continuing exchange of information" must be undertaken by Asians.

Closer cooperation between governments on one hand and between governments and the private sector on the other would help meet the many challenges that agricultural development in Asia faces in the Seventies, the President asserted.

In a memorandum circular, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. listed additional exemptions to the ban on filling vacant government posts, in connection with the fiscal restraint policy of the administration.

The new exemptions as authorized in the circular with the approval of the President are:

1. Vacancies resulting from the retirement, resignation or death of the incumbent;
2. Essential positions in law enforcement agencies and postal and communication services;
3. Essential positions in newly created units undertaking vital social services or implementing projects of the Capital Development Program such as extension classes, hospitals, INDESCOR, Free Trade Zone, munitions plant and the Upper Pampanga Multipurpose Project; and
4. Private, and assistant private, secretaries of department and agency heads.

Only positions in the judiciary and the prosecuting arm of the government were exempted, because they were considered essential to the peace and order drive.

Secretary Melchor, in recommending the additional exemptions, informed the President however that no appointments will be retroactive.

May 10—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a series of conferences with various entities, and received as well all scheduled callers, notably two royal princes of Malaya and a large number of mayors.

Early in the morning, the President first put in a session of work at his study, then began receiving callers.

The group from Malaysia, headed by Prince Tengku Makhota of Pahang and Raja Muda of Johore arrived in Manila upon invitation of the Manila Polo Club, to participate in a series of matches with local polo teams.

Among the visiting Malaysians were Tengku Ismael, Major Daud, Lt. Hussein, Dr. Vijay Lukshumenyah, Rajah Harun, Al Rashid, Mohammed Hatta, and Ali Ismael.

After this courtesy call, the President conferred in succession with Congress leaders and his fiscal advisers, to thresh out the problem of prices and assess the status of pending administration bills in both houses; a group of Laguna mayors; and finally with Cagayan mayors, who were his guests at lunch.

Among the bills submitted to Congress were those seeking:

1. improvement of the tax collecting machinery;
2. creation of a Special Peace and Order Fund;
3. funds for Land Reform;
4. revision of the Minimum Wage Law;
5. creation of the Oil Commission.

The mayors pledged full support to the President's leadership and policies. For the rest of his working day, the President attended to state papers.

March 11—

PRESIDENT MARCOS devoted most of his working day to state business, particularly in the study of state papers and reports, while acting on urgent problems.

Among others, he made new designations to important posts notably that of the Gold Mining Industry Assistance Board to which he named Norberto de Guzman, former Baguio City Mayor.

He also received officials and consulted with aides during the day. Among the groups he received were those composed of Public Service Commission officials and the officers of the University of the Philippines Planning Society.

The PSC officials headed by Commissioner Enrique Medina conferred with the President on the petition of jeepney operators to hike their fares.

The President told the commissioners it was his feeling that a hearing be set as soon as possible to decide the petition.

Present were Commissioners Jose Cadio and Paz Planas, among other officials, with Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar sitting in on the talks.

The UP group called to present the President with a plaque of appreciation for his concern for the planning profession, as borne by the scholar ships granted to government personnel for advance study at the UP Institute of Planning.

Toward noon, the President received a group of congressmen who took lip with him various matters affecting their constituencies.

Early in the afternoon, the President directed Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata to look iiito reports that a number of gasoline retailers have increased their prices.

The Chief Executive has received reports that despite assurances from big oil companies that they will not raise the price of fuel, some retailers have actually gone ahead and increased the prices on their stock.

The President also directed Secretary Virata to include in his investigation the prices of auto spare parts.

In the course of the day, the President forwarded to the Commission on Appointments two nominations for national posts in Davao Oriental and in Oroquieta City.

Nominated were Teodoro D. Nano, Jr. as register of deeds of Davao Oriental, and Arercio O. Casing as city engineer of Oroquieta City.

March 12—

PRESIDENT MARCOS for the most part was involved with his usual heavy desk work, in-between callers. But at about mid-morning, he put aside his chores to attend the ceremonies at Assumption Convent elevating to Star Scout a bunch of girl scouts including Irene, the youngest of the First Family's brood.

Back at Malacañang, the President resumed his chores, including receiving, among others, Col. Simeon Medalla of the Philippine Veterans Bank; Bishop Mariano Gaviola; Mayor Amelia Gordon of Olongapo City; and Mayor Udtog Matalam, Jr. of Pikit, Cotabato.

The President also saw Secretary of Social Welfare Gregorio Feliciano who brought a petition from a number of student leaders, seeking the improvement of the general well-being of college students in the Greater Manila area, including living conditions, school and campus facilities, and school fees.

In response to the plea, the President created a special committee to inquire into the problems of students and plot solutions.

The Cabinet committee is composed" of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs as chairman, and the Secretary of Social Welfare, the Secretary of Public Works and Communications, the Secretary of Education and the Executive Secretary as members.

Later, the President once more sat down with Senate leaders to further assess the urgent problems of the country, particularly those which could be solved by pertinent legislation.

In the afternoon, the President met with a group of officials and leaders of the business community on the stabilization of commodity prices which lately have unreasonably spiralled upward.

In the afternoon, the President held a two-hour meeting with representatives of importers, producers, wholesalers, retailers, processors of food stuffs and other prime commodities at the Maharlika hall in Malacañang.

During the meeting, the President:

1. Appealed anew for cooperation in government efforts to bring down the prices of prime commodities;
2. Announced plans for the importation of prime commodities such as milk, meat and fish products in quantities sufficient to stabilize prices at reasonable levels;
3. Directed the Central "Bank to make available immediately $200,000 for the importation of prime commodities. The President said this is only an initial amount being made available to cooperatives.
4. Created a committee composed of Undersecretary of Agriculture Arturo Tanco, Jr. as chairman and the Undersecretaries of Commerce, Justice, and representatives of the Central Bank, Board of Industries and the Presidential Economic Staff as members, to reconcile the varied problems of importers, producers,, distributors, wholesalers and retailers, with the end in view of stabilizing prices of prime, commodities;
5. Was informed that the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce headed by its president, Ralph Nubla, and other importers were ready to turn over to the government all their stocks acquired at the old P3.90 to $1rate at very minimal profits, for distribution to the consumers, to show their readiness to cooperate with the administration;
6. Announced that the Free Trade Zone in Bataan is ready to take on imported prime commodities for storage and for distribution to the market as needed to stabilize prices.

Present at the meeting which was held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. were some 500 leaders of private business, including importers, wholesalers, food processors, retailers and heads of various business and commercial chambers.

Also present at the meeting were Vice President Fernando Lopez, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Leonides S. Virata, Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata, Central Bank Governor Gregorio S. Licaros, Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. and Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr. of the National Economic Council.

For the rest of the working day, the President worked quietly in his study, in the course of which he signed the designations of Esteban Buhat as acting city treasurer, Jose M. Aquino as acting chief of police, and Ricardo E. Villena as acting city assessor, all in the City of Batangas.

President's Week in Review: March 20-26, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

March 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS said that the floating exchange rate for the peso will remain for sometime although he predicted that by the end of May a fixed dollar-peso exchange rate will emerge.

Speaking as guest of honor at the luncheon marking the 21st anniversary of the Manila Lions Club, held at the Manila Hotel, the President devoted a large part of his speech to explaining the necessity for passing the export tax bill which will supersede CB Circular 289.

In this connection, he appealed to the exporters to accept the tax as their share of the burden of stabilizing the economy and the fiscal position of the country.

The President stressed that Circular 289 will have to go because of the storm of speculation it has stirred which has resulted in the inability of the business sector to fix prices of commodities.

Earlier in the morning, the President accepted the credentials of two new ambassadors in separate presentation rites held at the Malacañang ceremonial hall. The formal rites were attended by members of the Cabinet led by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo.

The newly accredited envoys were Herr Jobst Freiherr von Buddenbrock of the Federal Republic of Germany and T. A. Meurs of the Netherlands.

After the presentation rites, the President received a group of Hilton general managers who informed him that contrary to "exaggerated" reports in foreign publications, demonstrations in Manila are relatively tame compared to the violent riots in other cities of the world.

Accompanied by Antonio Delgado, the Hilton executives who called at Malacañang asked the President how they could help promote tourism in this country.

The Hilton executives were Kenneth Moss, area vice president for the Far East. Albert Grieder of Tokyo, Ewe Hin Lim of Singapore, Hans Oppacher of Bangkok and Andre F. Charriere of Manila Hilton .

Shortly before 1 p.m., the President motored to the Manila Hotel where he was guest speaker of the Manila Lions Club at a luncheon meeting commemorating its 21st anniversary.

While working on state papers in the afternoon, the President signed the nominations of nine municipal judges, an auxiliary city judge and two clerks of court. The nominations were forwarded to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation. (See p. 3152 for list of nominees.)

He also accepted the resignation of Mrs. Pacita M. Gonzales as administrator of the National Cottage Industries Development Authority (NACIDA), as well as personally acted on complaints from the public against abusive increase of transportation fares.

The Chief Executive issued a memorandum addressed to the Public Service Commissioner, the Land Transportation Commissioner and the Chief of the Trafcon, asking them to work jointly to prevent such abuses.

March 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the day mostly at his desk working on state papers, among others firing off a directive to Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar to wind up the probe of alleged irregularities in the San Pedro Tunasan Resettlement Site operations in three days, and through Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. calling on the Manila mayor to prevent violence during transportation strikes.

The President broke off from his desk work only to swear in newly designated Secretary of Commerce and Industry Ernesto Maceda, vice Leonides S. Virata, now the chairman of the Development Bank of the Philippines.

The President also approved the promotion of 95 regular Philippine Army majors to lieutenant colonel and 321 reserve officers in the inactive status to their next higher grades.

The President likewise approved the commission of 6.5 graduates of the Philippine Military Academy, Class 1970, in the regular force for assignment in the major branches and 145 individuals in the reserve force of the Armed Forces.

Through the day the President concentrated on desk work, and did not receive callers. He worked through the evening to clear his desk of all urgent state business before trekking to Baguio City where he is slated to go into his annual spiritual retreat in connection with the Holy Week observance.

March 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS appealed to the nation for quiet and solemnity in keeping with the spirit of the Holy Week.

The President made the appeal in an informal interview with newsmen shortly before going into retreat at Mirador Hill in Baguio City.

He said: "Today is Palm Sunday, and we are entering the most solemn period in the Christian calendar.

"I appeal to those who are thinking of strikes, demonstrations and violence to reflect on the meaning of this period and think of our country.

"Let us take care of our country because nobody else will."

The President continued: "We are working on the things that cause us impatience, the reforms that some people want today we have been working for and advocating since the beginning of our first term, and even before that.

"I hope that as I go into retreat this afternoon, everybody including those who had in the past used and espoused violence to attain then-ends, think deeply of the principles on which the Christian faith is founded."

The President was scheduled to end his spiritual retreat Tuesday evening.

He arrived in Baguio City at 9 a.m., accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos and their children Imee, Bongbong and Irene.

Upon arrival at the Loakan airport, the President's party was met by a tog group of welcomers headed by Baguio City Mayor Luis Lardizabal and Governor Ben Palispis of Benguet.

Also on hand to meet him were officials of neighboring provinces, including Reps. Andres Cosalan, Jose D. Aspiras and Joaquin Ortega; Gov. Juvenal Guerrero of La Union and Mayor Lorenzo Dacanay of San Fernando.

The President flew to Baguio to address the graduation ceremonies of the Philippine Military Academy and to go into spiritual retreat.

The President had a conference with officials who met him, upon arrival at the Mansion House. In the afternoon, he went to Fort Del Pilar, where he was guest of honor at the commencement exercises of the PMA.

Among those who joined the President in the summer capital were Vice President Fernando Lopez, Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile and Secretary of Commerce and Industry Ernesto Maceda.

At the PMA commencement, the President was introduced to the graduating cadets by Brig. Gen. Cesar M. Garcia, PMA superintendent.

After addressing the cadets, the President proceeded to his retreat.

Meanwhile, Malacañang transmitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation 47 nominations to various posts,

Leading the new list of nominees were Alejandro Melchor, Jr. as executive secretary, Placido Mapa, Jr. as chairman of the National Economic Council, and Brig. Gen. Florencio Medina (ret.) as chairman of the National Science Development Board. (See pp. 3152 to 3154 for list of nominees.)

March 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took further steps to decentralize the executive office by delegating several of its important powers to heads of departments, offices and agencies.

In this connection, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. issued Executive Order No. 218, signed by the President on March 21, to amend Executive Order No. 70 of 1967, a 17-point order implementing the policy of decentralization.

The new decentralization move was the latest in a series of actions designed to relieve the Presidency of functions which could be delegated to department heads, thereby, minimizing official “red tape” and ensuring speedy action on purely administrative matters.

The President also moved to speed up the distribution of lots in Tondo Foreshorelands to deserving citizens in need of homesites.

In response to the clamor of residents in the Tondo Foreshorelands for the immediate distribution of lots, the President:

1. Designated Sebastian Santiago, general manager of the PHHC, as action officer of the Presidential Coordinating Committee on Housing and Urban Development pending appointment of a permanent action officer.
2. Directed the Land Authority to designate Associate Governor Ernesto Valdez as successor to Associate Governor Venecio Eusebio in the PCCHUD, and to speed up action on land distribution including immediate processing of applicants, determining allocation procedures of uncontroverted areas and publication of the names of applicants and corresponding allocations;
3. Directed Public Works Director Alejandro Deleña to meet with the recognized leaders of the Tondo Foreshorelands residents on the proposed amendments of Proclamation No. 378 establishing a port zone in the Tondo Foreshorelands.

Later, the President submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the names of 41 other nominees to positions in the executive department, boards of government corporations, boards of regents and the judiciary. (See pp. 3154 to 3155 for list of nominees.)

March 24—

PRESIDENT MARCOS abolished 30 government bodies and transferred the functions of 16 others, in line with the administration policy to simplify government operations and avoid duplication of efforts, functions and activities.

The abolition was embodied in Executive Order No. 219, and the transfers in Executive Order No. 220, which were issued by the President shortly after checking out of the Mirador Hill retreat house in Baguio City.

The transfers of certain offices hitherto directly under the Office of the President was part of the decentralization process, through relinquishment of presidential powers to regular departments.

In scrapping the offices, the President pointed out there were other proper government agencies wherein the functions of the abolished bodies could be embraced and consolidated.

The President checked out of the retreat house at the conclusion of his two-day spiritual retreat in connection with the Holy Week observance.

The President was met upon his arrival at the Mansion House by Manila newsmen covering him with whom he had a brief interview.

Following the interview, the President buckled down to work on piles of urgent state papers he brought along with him as well as those brought up by Malacañang aides.

March 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, refreshed by a two-day spiritual retreat, took up public affairs with some zest as he interspersed private consultations and desk work with conferences with local officials who flocked to the Mansion House for an airing of; their problems.

Among other urgent concerns, the President discussed with PSC Commissioner Enrique Medina by telephone the public outrage against exorbitant bus and jeepney fares. He then asked the PSC chief to crack down on the unscrupulous operators.

In consultations with national officials, the President talked with Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., Director of Forestry Jose Viado, Director of Mines Fernando Busuego, Jr., Vicente Arancill, DBP branch manager in Baguio; and District Land Officer Angel Sangalang.

Among the local delegations he received were those from Benguet headed by Gov. Ben Palispis and Mayor Luis Lardizabal of Baguio. The Benguet group put before the President the problem of conflicting mining claims, reforestation projects and public works improvements for the province.

Mayor Lardizabal discussed the city's perennial water shortage, the relocation of squatters and other concerns.

In the afternoon, the President conferred with Councilors Antonio Romero, Jose Florendo, Ruben Ayson, Dionisio Claridad, and Pedro Claraval, all of Baguio City.

In the course of the day, the President reconstituted four high advisory bodies with which he consults on various matters relating to national policies.

The agencies reorganized were the Council of Leaders, to supersede the abolished Council of State; the Financial Policy Committee, the Air Navigation Services Coordinating Committee, and the Exchange Visitors Program Committee.

The President also ordered the release of some P37 million from the highways special fund for the improvement and maintenance of national and provincial roads.

The amount released corresponds to the allotment for the fourth quarter of the fiscal year ending June 30.

Of this amount, P18, 754,688 will be used for the maintenance of national and provincial roads, with the provincial roads getting P6, 155,349.

The sum of P17, 739,966 will be utilized for the improvement of national and provincial roads, with the provincial roads getting P3, 859,685.

The Bureau of Public Highways will allot the sums released to the different engineering districts and offices.

In a speech read for him by Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile at the opening of the SEATO Exercise "Sea Rover," the President called for the pooling of will and strength in a common thrust to lick poverty and uplift the status of the masses in Asia. The President said that the framework for this type of cooperation exists.

"It will be a kind of undertaking vested with a more enduring validity that along with the series of military exercises we hold periodically, there shall be in SEATO some worthy forms of 'economic exercises' that will similarly test and demonstrate the fruitful coordination and willingness to cooperate among our member countries in this particular regional association," he said.

The President pointed out that the ancient challenges of mass poverty and economic inequities affect all of Asia which will inevitably affect the social stability and the quality of peace in the world should they remain unchecked. (See pp. 3156-3161 for full text of the President's speech.)

March 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS took off in the presidential plane early in the morning for Laoag City, where he was slated to confer with local officials on various urgent problems and projects.

Arriving at Laoag just before 9 a.m., the President was met by a large group of welcomers headed by Gov. Jose Evangelista, Mayor Eulalio Siazon and Rep. Simeon Valdez.

After the usual welcome ceremonies, the President set down with the Ilocos Norte officials to discuss among other things the need for extending the Ambuklao line to the province, and an additional waterworks system.

Following the talks, the President heard Mass at the parish church of Laoag. After the services, the President set off by car for his hometown, Batac, where he briefly visited with relatives and friends.

It was nearly noon when he flew off from the Laoag airport for San Fernando, La Union. At the airport, he was met by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos and son Bongbong, as well as by another big crowd of welcomers headed by Reps. Jose D. Aspiras and Joaquin Ortega, Gov. Juvenal Guerrero and Mayor Lorenzo Dacanay.

From the airport, the President and the First Lady drove to Barrio Lingsat where they laid a wreath at the memorial to the local heroes and martyrs, notably his own father, Don Mariano.

Then the First Couple retired to Poro Point to relax a bit before trekking back to Baguio, where they will stay for the duration of the Lenten season.

President's Week in Review: March 27 - April 2, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

March 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent the day quietly.

He received a few visitors, among whom were City Mayor Luis Lardizabal and Peter Rindel, an Austrian author, who called for an interview.

The President also consulted with key administration officials, among whom were Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar, and Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr. of the National Economic Council, concurrently Director-General of the Presidential Economic Staff.

Together with Secretary Melchor, the President also met with Vicente Arancillo, branch manager of the local Development Bank of the Philippines; and Angel Sangalang, district lands officer here.

The two branch officials gave the President a detailed briefing on the Baguio City squatter problem, how the Bureau of Lands is working to solve it, and how the DBP could assist to help the squatters.

Most of the time during the day, the President worked on pending state papers.

The Chief Executive approved the Third Investments Priority Plan prepared by the National Economic Council in accordance with Republic Act No. 5186, otherwise known as the Investment Incentives Act.

The third IPP was approved by the NEC last March 18 and submitted to the President by NEC Chairman Mapa, Jr.

Consisting of 89 projects, the plan is expected to have an aggregate output of P12.4 billion.

In preparing the plan, the NEC took the following into consideration:

- 1) The 15 criteria in Section 3(k) of RA 5186;
- 2) The plan's consistency with previous IPPs;
- 3) Its consistency with basic policies for industrial and agricultural development, such as export oriented industries, industrial projects with high forward and backward linkages, industries which require further processing, traditional export products to increase dollar receipts, and preference for capital goods industries;
- 4) Consistency with the objectives of the overall economic development programs, particularly industries that generate employment, contribute to sustain growth of the gross national product and income, improve the balance of payments position, promote social welfare, and improve the people's standard of living.

March 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a work-day not very much removed from his usual norm in Malacañang, as he worked on state papers, received callers, and presided at a round of conferences.

Among the top officials he received was Vice President Fernando Lopez, the first visitor to see him. The two officials discussed a wide range of government problems.

After this meeting, the President received the group of officials who came to thresh out the mechanics of the proposed reorganization of the National Waterworks and Sewerage Authority. In this connection, the President named a special committee to oversee the reorganization and to look into the recommendations of a previous presidential committee which studied the problems of the government water firm.

The next group of officials took up with the President the needs of the tobacco industry, and as a consequence of this meeting, the abolition of the government subsidy to the industry was mapped out to cover three years.

Other callers included Sen. Ambrosio Padilla and Rep. Emilio Espinosa of Masbate.

During the day, the President also found time to meet with Manila newsmen covering Malacañang.

In the afternoon, he worked mostly on state papers, staying at his desk till evening.

In an Easter Message to the nation, the President said:

As Easter Sunday dawns, the Christian community once again feels the unmistakable surge of hope and the affirmation of faith. Today more than ever, Christians the world over need such an affirmation of the spirit for the Christian ethic is engaged by relentless forces which seek to destroy it. Already, many of those professing Christianity are wavering in their beliefs. Others have all but buried their faith.

Not long ago, the question was asked, or rather stated, God is dead. It would seem so, with certain peoples turning godless, certain ideologies denying indeed the existence of a Supreme Being. But for the larger community of the civilized world, God remains at the center of the universe and at the center of life.

We in the Philippines certainly assert this belief, in our continuing allegiance to our Christian faith. And though other Filipinos may worship other faiths, they too in their own way affirm God, and in thus upholding the spiritual side of man, they share with all Filipinos a sense of holy community.

I like to think that Easter this year, the beginning of a new decade, observed as in years past with the same luminous joy, the same vitality of faith, will also mark the beginning of a new promise of national community. A community welded together both by common aspirations and by a renaissance of spiritual fervor. For Easter is a rebirth, Easter is regeneration. This ushers in for us a new nation, a new national fervor. Let it be the harbinger of a better day to come.

We are often challenged by thoughtful countrymen to reassert moral authority over the nation. I feel that if ever this country will return to a high moral plane, there must first be a spiritual rebirth. For such a condition must be both the work of the people and of their leaders. As faith springs from below, so must the moral order spread from the roots to all the components of a living being.

Let Easter Sunday be the beginning of this miracle for the Filipino people.

March 29—

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Marcos spent a pleasant Easter Sunday.

In the morning the First Couple joined the Marcos children and their friends for an “Easter egg hunt” behind the Mansion House.

Later, the First Family heard Mass at the amphitheater kiosk.

After the Mass, the President conferred with government officials, among them Sen. Mamintal Tamano and other Mindanao leaders, who were spending the Holy Week in Baguio City.

At noon, the President had lunch with a group of Air Force officers led by Brig. Gen. Jose Rancudo, commander of the 5th Fighter Wing, with headquarters at Basa Air Base, Floridablanca, Pampanga.

The Air Force officers called at the Mansion House to present Bongbong with a miniature model of the latest jet fighter aircraft.

In the course of the day, the President called a number of Cabinet officials by telephone for briefings on their respective areas.

In an interview with Malacañang newsmen, the President said that the problem of prices was the first to be tackled after the Holy Week.

The President has alerted the Department of Commerce and Industry, on the implementation of the price control measure.

The bill, which created a Price Control Council, was one of the key measures enacted by Congress before the Holy Week recess.

The President also disclosed that the groundwork has been laid for a nationwide network of consumers and agricultural cooperatives, "being-established by the PACD, the Agricultural Productivity Commission and the Agricultural Credit Administration.

"I would like to see a direct tie-up between the producers cooperatives and the consumers cooperatives," the President said.

March 30—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived about 9 a.m. in Manila after an early morning flight from Baguio City where he spent most of the Holy Week, with side trips to the Ilocos provinces where he surveyed conditions and conferred with local officials on the region's problems.

Soon after settling down to his Malacañang schedule, the President summoned various officials for impromptu conferences on urgent state business. Most of the talks were held in private in his study. Among others, he conferred with Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile and AFP brass; Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, and close aides.

Among other actions, the President created two special committees, one to look into the Tondo foreshorelands problems and the needs of residents in the area; the other to study the salary and wage scales of personnel of government-owned or controlled corporations.

The Chief Executive also ordered Government Corporate Counsel Leopoldo Abellera to act within three days on all contracts of government corporations coursed through his office.

The President noted with concern the adverse financial effects of the delay in the processing of contract documents for projects proposed by the various government corporations, which are usually coursed through the Office of the Government Corporate Counsel for evaluation ultimately resulting in loss of income among implementing government Corporations.

He also directed Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople to mediate immediately the strike called by some 50 employees of Rizal Park against the park management.

The President said he could not grant off-hand the demands of the striking workers without first conducting an investigation. He stressed that both sides in the dispute should have a fair hearing.

Because of the pressure of work, which built up during his sojourn in the Pines City, the President rescheduled the meeting of the Foreign Policy Council, formerly set for this week, to a date still to be decided next week. The Council will assess the events in Cambodia, in relation to the country's interests.

The President worked at his desk through the afternoon and early evening.

He took time out from his paper work late in the afternoon to confer with the prospective members of the Price Control Council on the implementation of the Price Control law which was enacted by Congress recently.

Present were Vice President Lopez, who is also the Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Ernesto Maceda, NEC Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr. and Secretary of Health Amadeo H. Cruz.

Also present was Agriculture Undersecretary Arturo Tangco, Jr.

The council also have a representative of the consumers as member.

March 31—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a long meeting with Nacionalista Party senators and Congress leaders on measures pending in Congress, particularly bills pertaining to labor welfare.

He asked the prime movers in Congress during the 3-hour meeting starting at 10:30 a.m. to expedite the movement of the bills through the legislative mill in view of the need for them.

Present at the caucus were Vice-President Fernando Lopez, Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Speaker Jose B. Laurel, Jr., Senate President Protempore Jose J. Roy, Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer; Senator Arturo M. Tolentino, Dominador Aytona, Wenceslao R. Lagumbay, Helen Benitez, Leonardo Perez, Lorenzo Teves, Emmanuel Pelaez, Lorenzo Sumulong, Salvador Laurel, Rene Espina, Mamintal Tamano;

Reps. Marcelino Veloso, Jose Alberto and Natalio P. Castillo; Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata, NEC Chairman and PES Director-General Placido Mapa, Jr. Central Bank Governor Gregorio S. Licaros, Bud get Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Assistant Executive Secretary Flores Bayot, and Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave.

The President saw no other outside group during the day, except a delegation of some 59 press photographers who presented their views on the right of Malacañang photographers to cover student demonstrations. They were headed by Manuel Silva and Domingo Suba of the Manila Times.

For most of the working day, the President focused on his desk work. Among other actions, he named four more members to the PTTA board, leaving only one vacancy; and ordered Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. to study the feasibility of putting up a village for handicapped persons, in response to the petition of an organization of blind people, Tinig ng mga Pinagkaitan ng Liwanag, for such a place where they could live and work.

Appointed to the PTTA board were: Firmo Liwanag, president of the Manila Jaycees; Antonio Delgado, Jose Cobarrubias, and Immigration Commissioner Edmundo Reyes.

The President also appointed Francisco G. Abrogar as member of the Provincial Board of Misamis Oriental.

April 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS pledged the government's continuing commitment to positive change while standing fast for the preservation of orderly society and the country's democratic tradition.

In a speech delivered for him by Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile at the annual field day of the Manila ROTC and PMT units at the Quezon City stadium, the President said that "continuity and change" must be every citizen's responsibility.

"The continuity of democracy" the President stated, "remains today the strongest element in our national life."

Official business started at breakfast for the President when he had as guests Senator Dominador Aytona, Rep. Jose Alberto, Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata, NEC Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr. who is also concurrent PES director-general; Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. and Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco.

As may be gleaned from the composition of his breakfast companions, the talk at the table focused on economic fiscal matters.

After breakfast, the President worked for a spell at his desk, during which he received PANAMIN Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr. and Anionic Delgado, recently named member of the BTTI board.

At 10 a.m., the President sat down with Congress leaders and labor bosses for a thorough study of the various minimum wage proposals. After this conference, the President received individually congressmen who called, it being Congressmen's Day at Malacañang.

For the rest of the day, the President continued to receive congressmen who sought consultations with him, while tending to his desk work in-between.

Among other actions, the President:

1) Signed Administrative Order No. 213, which created a committee to study budget concepts as they relate to national plans.

In signing the order, the President ordered that budgets should henceforth be formulated to reflect income sources and provide financial support for duly approved national plans and programs.

2) Appointed Mario R. Reyes acting administrator of the National Cottage Industries Development Authority (NACIDA), vice Mrs. Pacita M. Gonzales, resigned.

Reyes's nomination was forwarded to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation.

3) Issued a proclamation declaring Thursday, April 2, a special public holiday in Bulacan, to give the people of the province the opportunity to celebrate appropriately the birth anniversary of Francisco Balagtas, Prince of Filipino poets, who was a native of the province.

4) A Memorandum Circular enjoining all government offices, agencies and instrumentalities to use Pilipino in all official communications on April 2, which is Balagtas Day, was also issued.

Malacañang also released the text of Memorandum Circular No. 340 signed by the Executive Secretary, Alejandro Melchor, Jr. prescribing new work hours for the summer season, covering the period April 1 to June 15, 1970. (See p. 3481 for full text of Memorandum Circular No. 340.)

April 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS made a flying trip to Tuguegarao, Cagayan, where he conferred with local officials on projects, problems, and particularly on the initiatives for elevating the standards of tobacco growing and processing so that local tobacco may compete successfully in the world market.

Leaving Malacañang early in the morning, the President arrived in Tuguegarao to a warm welcome, and then spoke at a huge rally in the public plaza. He received pledges of confidence and support from the region's leaders, and from various citizens in the province.

After a series of conferences with local officials, the President flew back to Manila, arriving early in the afternoon.

Resuming his schedule, the President first worked on state papers, then took time off to sign into law Senate Bill No. 194 (H. No. 938), otherwise known as the Price Control Bill, which fixes the maximum selling price of essential articles or commodities, and creates a Price Control Council which will carry out the aims and purposes of the law.

Present at the signing ceremony were Senators Dominador Aytona, Wenceslao Lagumbay and Alejandro Almendras, Rep. Constantino Navarro, Secretary of Commerce and Industry Ernesto M. Maceda and Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr.

He worked in his study for the rest of the afternoon, and through evening.

Earlier, the President directed that immediate studies be made towards streamlining present procedures in the processing and issuance of land titles.

Towards this end, he ordered the creation of a Management Audit Committee to undertake this task, giving it up to May 30, this year to submit its report and recommendations.

The committee will be composed of a representative each from the PES-DND Computer Center (Camp Aguinaldo), the Management Services of the Budget Commission, and the Bureau of Lands, which issues land titles.

The President also created a committee to take charge of preparations for the inauguration of the Dambana ng Kagitingan, a shrine to Filipino heroes, built on Mt. Samat in Bataan, on April 9.

With Defense Undersecretary Manuel Q. Salientes as chairman and Commissioner Gregorio Araneta of the Board of Travel and Tourist Industry as vice-chairman, the committee members are:

Rizalino P. Lacuna of the Defenders of Bataan and Corregidor; Public Works Undersecretary Mariano Dy Reyes; General Manuel Yan, AFP chief of staff; Director Jose Viado of the Parks and Wildlife Office; and Col. Manuel A. Acosta, secretary.

President's Week in Review: April 3-9, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

April 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed up the organization of the Price Control Council with a meeting with the members, as he directed the setting up of the machinery of the Council so that it can function as soon as possible.

Headed by Vice President Fernando Lopez, the Council members discussed with the President various steps for making the group an effective agency. Also present at the meeting was RCA Chairman Alfredo Montelibano, who explained the policies of the cereal agency as they relate to prices. Others at the meeting were Secretary of Commerce and Industry Ernesto Maceda, action officer; Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz and NEC Chairman Plaeido Mapa, Jr., members.

In the morning, the President received the letters of credence of the new ambassadors to the Philippines of Lebanon and Indonesia.

In separate ceremonies which were attended by members of the Cabinet and officials of the Department of Foreign Affairs and the diplomatic missions of the two countries, the President received the credentials of Ambassador Toufic Aouad of Lebanon and Maj. Gen. Kusno Utomo of Indonesia.

Ambassador Aouad will be the first ambassador of Lebanon to the Philippines while General Kusno Utomo succeeds former Ambassador Moersjid who was recalled to Jakarta last year after completing his tour of duty in the Philippines.

Other callers during the day included Rep. James Chiongbian, PANAMIN Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr., Gen. James McNitt, president of the ITT, and other executives of the firm; and Msgr. Oscar L. Calvo, who called to invite the President to the consecration of Msgr. Felixberto Camacho Flores, a Guamanian of a Filipino mother.

Msgr. Flores, the President was informed by Msgr. Calvo, is a descendant of one of the three Filipinos exiled along with Apolinario Mabini in Guam. He married in Guam and remained.

In-between callers, the President as usual worked at his desk, and continued to do so through late afternoon and evening.

The President directed the Department of Labor, the Social Security System and the National Bureau of Investigation to work jointly in enforcing labor laws, particularly in the Greater Manila area.

The President's directive was issued in Pilipino through Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., pursuant to Memorandum Circular No. 339, which enjoined all government entities to use Pilipino as far as practicable in all official communications.

Joint action by the Department of Labor, SSS and NBI was deemed necessary by the President in order to ferret out violators of labor laws, especially those who operate so-called "sweat shops," where working conditions jeopardize workers' health.

Investigations have shown that some employers violate the Social Security Act, by evading payment of premiums on the social security coverage of their workers.

April 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS caught up with his paper work aboard RPS 777, enroute to Iligan City after a MI day of unabated activity.

Before flying from Manila at mid-morning for Zamboanga del Norte, the President along with the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, honored at breakfast the delegate to the 32nd Southeast Asia Treaty Organization military advisers conference, held in Baguio City, and their wives.

Among the honorees were Air Chief Marshal Dawee Chullasapya of Thailand, dean of the military advisers group; Admiral John S. McCain, Jr. of the United States, Admiral Peter Hill-Norton of the United Kingdom, Lt. Gen. Leonard Thorton of New Zealand, Lt. Gen. Thomas Daly of Australia, Maj. Gen. Autrey Maroun, chief of the SEATO military planning office; General Manuel T. Yan, General Jesus Vargas (ret.), SEATO secretary-general; Mrs. McCain, Lady Hill-Norton, and Mrs. Chullasapya.

Also present were Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile, Ambassador and Mrs. Henry Byroade, and Ambassador and Mrs. Amayatakul.

Then he received officials of Pepsi Cola, namely: Donald M. Kendall, president of Pepsi Inc., and Peter Warren, president of Pepsi Cola International, who called to pay their respects. They were accompanied by Theodore Michel, William L. Moran, Jr. and former Senator Pedro Sabido.

Arriving in a light plane at Ozamis City shortly after high noon, the President immediately addressed the crowd which had gathered for the inauguration of the Salug Irrigation System in Mahayag, Zamboanga del Sur.

From that point, the President helicoptered to Molave where he addressed another big crowd.

In both speeches, the President touched on the present agitation for reform, and admitting that the point has been made by activists, he called for national unity in order to do better the tasks of development and of transformation of the country.

He pledged full commitment to the effort to rid the body politic of graft and corruption, and to move the nation forward.

After these engagements, the President boarded this ship, to fulfill other engagements, including conferences with local officials and church leaders and to make a personal assessment of development projects in this region.

In a speech delivered for him by Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata, at the closing ceremonies of the First National Credit Congress, held at the Hotel Intercontinental, the President again sounded a call for unity, saying that all the creative forces of the nation must work together in these difficult times, and that dissension and conflict at this stage of development will “only make us vulnerable to our real enemies.” The President asked the nation to “return to reason” and stop the internicine strife and violence which “ultimately create physical and psychological havoc” among the people.

“These are times that call for cool-headed thinking, reasoned discourse, and humane consideration of the manifold problems of our land, a good number of which as you know date back to our colonial past,” the President emphasized, adding that the country “cannot achieve much if our efforts at nation-building and our vision of the future are hampered by those who would resort to violence and anarchy.”

The nation is committed to the elimination of “all vestiges of imperialism, and oppression in our land, but let us do so in an orderly way, in a democratic manner that respects the rights of all our citizens and all those who have chosen to make the Philippines their home.” he declared. (See pp. 3724 and 3725 for full text of the President’s speech.)

PRESIDENT MARCOS urged early development of the Surigao nickel deposits which constitute one of the bright hopes for the country's export earnings.

At a briefing at the Research and Development Center in Surigao, capital town of Surigao del Norte, and at the inauguration of the local airport, the President said Surigao has one of the world's biggest nickel deposits which has not been tapped.

He said Mindanao, except Surigao, will be the center of investments in the next few decades because it is below the typhoon belt.

The President said that corollary infrastructure support is being provided in the form of cement roads, wharves and airports, because it is ridiculous to talk of development without adequate transportation and communications facilities.

He said he plans to build at least one cemented airport at every province, and one wharf at every coastal province.

The President expressed satisfaction over the assurances of loyalty presented him last night in Iligan City by officials, political and religious leaders of the two Lanao provinces, and the cities of Marawi and of Iligan.

The President and the First Lady arrived in Surigao aboard the RPS 777, at 9 a.m., and were met by a large crowd including delegates to the Public Schools Interscholastic Athletic Association, headed by Governor Jose Sering and Rep. Constantino Navarro.

After inaugurating the wharf extension, they proceeded to the local parish church to hear Mass, then to the provincial capitol for a briefing.

From the capitol, the President's party proceeded to the airport for the inaugural ceremonies of the newly modernized airfield.

From there, the President motored to the Pacific Cement Company compound where his party had lunch.

Later in the afternoon, the President formally opened the Public Schools Interscholastic Athletic Association Meet.

In his address, the President said he had started the regionalization of Malacañang with his trip to the different provinces of Mindanao.

"This is the beginning of a regionalization of Malacañang. It is my intention to transfer my office regionally and periodically so that the President will stay in the barrios from now on."

The President said it is a fact that people sometimes do not see the President and other national officials except during political campaigns.

"From now on, the First Lady and I will be available in various regions," the President said.

The President also wished the students success, pointing out that although he had been advised to-stop athletic meets in order to economize, he decided to continue with them, subject to certain conditions, because it is the best way of building-character and physical fitness among the people.

After the Meet opening, the President and his party boarded the RPS 777 for an overnight voyage to Cagayan de Oro City.

Among the congressmen who saw the President were Reps. Teodulo Natividad, Nicanor Yniguez, Vicente Cerilles, Jose de Venecia, Democrito Plaza, Floro Crisologo, Ali Dimaporo, Eduardo Cojuangco, Jose G. Puyat, Ramon Durano, Artemio Loyola, and Pablo Malasarte.

April 6—

PRESIDENT MARCOS ordered the immediate release of 5,000 hectares of public land in Sitio Kematu to T'boli and Ubos tribesmen in the PANAMIN settlement there.

The President directed the Bureau of Forestry and the district lands officer to coordinate with PANAMIN Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr. to effect the release without prejudice to private rights that may exist.

The President issued the instruction on request of the resettled tribes who gave the President and the First Lady a very rousing welcome.

The President had brought along with him national officials concerned with the minority problems.

The President and his party arrived at Cagayan de Oro City aboard the RPS 777 9:30 a.m. and was met by delegations of officials, students, laborers and townspeople.

After the inauguration of the newly constructed airport in Cagayan de Oro City, he flew to Surallah where another big delegation awaited him.

From there, the President and the First Lady helicoptered to Sitio Kematu, a PANAMIN project, and then to Lake Sebu where he also looked into the peace and order problems.

From there, the President went to Dole Philippines in Polomolok, South Cotabato, for the night.

April 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS mobilized all national relief agencies including the Armed Forces, in the aftermath of the strong earthquake which rocked Southern Luzon and other parts of the country.

The President also ordered a survey of damages.

The Chief Executive was informed of the quakes in a radiophone conversation with Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr.

Secretary Melchor informed the President that the earthquake which occurred at about 1:35 p.m. was recorded as Intensity VII in Manila and Quezon City.

The President thanked the broadcast media for helping the city residents and preventing panic among the people.

Upon the President's instruction, Secretary Melchor made an ocular inspection of some areas in Manila, especially the collapsed P. Guevarra Elementary School on San Fernando Street, Binondo, Manila.

The President also told Secretary Melchor to start an investigation into the construction of the building to determine the culpability of the contractors for substandard work.

Following his inspection, Secretary Melchor:

1. Organized a task force headed by Col. Amado Santiago of the 52nd Engineer Brigade to excavate the ruined schoolbuilding to rescue any possible victim.
2. Instructed Brig. Gen. Mariano Ordonez, Metrocom commander, to secure the disaster area, to facilitate the relief work.
3. Instructed the 51st Engineer Brigade to assist the 52nd brigade in the rescue operations. In this regard, Secretary Melchor directed Col. Santiago to organize a shifting of the rescue work for continuity of operations.
4. In a telephone conversation with Mayor Antonio Villegas of Manila, asked the city executive to investigate the cause of the building's collapse.
5. Instructed Cabinet Secretary Aguinaldo Maaba to coordinate the activities of all government agencies concerned to facilitate relief operations in other areas of the country where disasters may have occurred.

Secretary Melchor also told the President that the provincial PC commands were required to send their respective reports immediately.

Other matters reported by Secretary Melchor to the President included:

1. As a result of the earthquake, he had authorized all government employees to be dismissed from work so that they could be with their families. Only those engaged in relief work were required to be on standby duty.
2. Some public utility operators continued their services and did not join the nationwide stoppage of work, and therefore public transportation services in the Greater Manila Area did not get to be as difficult as expected.
3. The Price Control Council was meeting at 3 p.m. to continue studies on realistic scale of prices for commodities, as well as the floor wages demanded by the country's labor sector.
4. Upon the recommendation of Mayor Villegas, the Department of Education was directed to suspend classes in Manila as well as in the suburban areas, and to survey the fitness of school-buildings for further use.

On another front, Malacañang said that residents of the western lake-shore areas in the vicinity of Taal Volcano could be allowed to return to their homes.

However, Volcano island itself would remain off limits.

The Commission on Volcanology reported to the President that the activity of Taal Volcano had subsided and evacuees may be allowed to return to their homes in the lakeshore barrios along the western side of lake Taal.

April 8—

PRESIDENT MARCOS arrived early in the afternoon after five days in the provinces, where he conferred with officials and assessed for himself conditions there. His focus was Mindanao, where he officiated at public functions, inaugurated two irrigation systems, and addressed rallies.

The President inaugurated four infrastructure projects, namely: the Salug Irrigation System in Mahayag, Zamboanga del Sur; the concrete airport in Surigao, Surigao del Norte; another concrete airport and a concrete wharf at Cagayan de Oro City.

The Chief Executive also visited the PANAMIN settlement at Sitio Kematu, Surallah, where there is reportedly a peace and order problem, and released 5,000 hectares of the public domain to the T'boli, Ubos and Bilaan settlers.

He officiated at the closing ceremonies of the 16th PRISAA meet in Ozamis City, and formally opened the PSIAA '70 meet in Surigao del Norte.

Cutting short his trip, the President, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, rushed back to Manila following the strong quake which damaged a number of buildings, took 14 lives, and toppled an annex of the P. Guevarra Elementary School in Binondo, which was completed only this year.

From Nichols Air Base, the President and the First Lady drove straight to the sprawled elementary school where rescue workers-were hard at work trying to reach, the classrooms buried under the rubble.

The President spent some 45 minutes at the site, peering into the debris, examining the parts of the building, talking with the rescue workers, and getting a full briefing from officials overseeing the rescue work.

He authorized school officials to use the nearby Namarco building as a school site pending a thorough inspection of the P. Guevarra school buildings.

The President thanked all those who assisted in emergency operations to rescue possible victims of yesterday's earthquakes.

"The work they have done and the spirit they have demonstrated speak so much for, the courage and the compassion that continue to bind our people during critical emergencies such as this," he said.

"I have no doubt that as this emergency passes, it shall leave us stronger and more united by richer humane bonds."

Returning to Malacañang, the President sat down almost immediately with Congress leaders to discuss pending legislative measures, such as the proposed increase minimum wage,, the export tax and the national budget for the next fiscal year.

Present at the conference, which began at 2:30 p.m. and finished at 3:30 p.m., were Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Senate President Protempore Jose Roy, Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo M. Tolentino, House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso, Senator Wenceslao Lagumbay and Reps. Jose Alberto, Natalio P. Castillo and Pablo Ocampo.

Also present were Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile, Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople, Labor Undersecretary Raoul Inocentes, PES Deputy Director General Apolinario Orosa and Director Tito Mijares of the Bureau of Census and Statistics.

The President also conferred with Secretary of General Services Constancio E. Castañeda on the reported loss of valuable records and documents in the archives division of the Bureau of Records Management.

Secretary Castañeda who investigated the report with assistance of the National Bureau of Investigation and the Metropolitan Command, reported to the President that only xerox copies of certain documents were found missing and that measures had been taken to secure all valuable records.

The President also conferred with Director Jose Viado of the Parks and Wildlife Office.

He directed Director Viado, who is concurrently director of forestry, to look into complaints that forest concessions are encroaching on parks and settlement reservations. The President received these complaints during his five-day visit to Mindanao.

The President also ordered Director Viado to go after kaingeros, saying that he had seen a number of forest fires ranging in some of the areas he visited in Mindanao.

April 9—

PRESIDENT MARCOS expressed confidence that the nation's problems can be successfully solved and progress attained if the people remained united.

In a speech highlighting the ceremonies marking the fall of Bataan held at the Dambana ng Kagitingan shrine on Mt. Samat in Bataan, the President said that if the nation can set aside internal conflict, the people shall overcome every difficulty.

Emphasizing the timeless values which forged the spirit of Bataan, the President said that on his visits to the provinces, he has found the same spirit arising from cherished Filipino values still alive among the people.

"These values," he said, "are those which give a man dignity, freedom, the right of self-determination, the sense of national community."

The veterans of Bataan are "still united today in faith and loyalty to the same ideals which carried them to battle," he said, and Filipinos follow gratefully in the path of the soldiers of Bataan.

"For men who cherish freedom, these values indeed are timeless," the President said, adding that they "cannot disintegrate or change even against the onslaught of alien ideologies, nor could these values be destroyed by self-interest, greed, the lust for power." (See pp. 3726 to 3729 for full text of the President's speech.)

The President led the observance of Bataan Day at Mt. Samat, scene of the last organized resistance to the enemy hordes.

Accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, and all three of their children, the President left Manila shortly after welcoming UN Secretary General U Thant, who arrived early in the morning, and will be a state guest during his stay here.

Crossing to Bataan by boat, the President and party then motored up the slope of Mt. Samat to its peak, where the Dambana ng Kagitingan, the national shrine to the heroes of Bataan, has been built.

In a speech highlighting the rites at the shrine, the President called for firm national unity in order to move development forward, saying that every obstacle may be overcome by concerted and dedicated effort by the people in the spirit of the men of Bataan who turned defeat to victory.

Returning to Manila early in the afternoon, the President went straight to a conference with labor leaders and government officials concerned, to continue the talks on the proposed minimum wage and thresh out other problems affecting workers.

Present at the conference were Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople, Labor Undersecretary Raoul Inocentes, Labor Relations Director Amado Inciong, PES Deputy Director General Apolinario Orosa, Director Tito Mijares of Census and Statistics;

Roberto Oca of the Pinagbuklod ng Manggagawang Pilipino, Juan Tan of FFW, Eulogio Lerum of NLU, Jose H. Hernandez of PTUC, Antonio Diaz of ULO, Fortunato Biangco of PALEA, Israel Bocobo of PAFLU, Henry Santos of PCWF, Amorito Cañete of ALU, Clemencio Leaño of PLUM, Vicente Arniogo of PTUC, Temostecles Dizon of UOEF, and Pelagio Villegas, Jr. of FDW.

After the drawn-out conference which lasted well past 8 p.m., the President rested briefly, then worked on the state matters at his study.

President's Week in Review: April 10-17, 1970

President's Week in Review: April 18-23, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

PRESIDENT MARCOS underscored the administration policy of training bright young men in technology and science, two areas which could help accelerate the country's economic development.

Addressing the Fourth Annual Inventors Week at the Alta Vista restaurant, the President emphasized that the very salvation of the Filipino people lies in the hands of productive bright young men who work quietly in laboratories and schools and not in the hands of those who only make speeches.

The President delivered his address after presenting the Presidential Merit Award to Col. Francisco Baula and Oscar B. Varona, first prize winners in chemical and electrical experimentation, respectively.

Baula won first prize with his fuel economizer and anti-air pollution device while Varona won with his electric burglar and fire alarm.

In the afternoon the President swore in former Undersecretary of Finance Roman Cruz, Jr., as general manager of the Government Service Insurance System.

The President then received a delegation of mayors from Marinduque, who consulted him on problems of their constituents, and discussed public works projects such as highways and waterworks systems.

The Marinduque mayors were Wilfredo S. Pe of Buenavista, Dominador Llonida of Boac, Policarpio Retardo of Sta. Cruz, and Vicente del Prado of Mogpoc.

For most of the day, the President was free to tackle state papers, having cleared his schedule of other callers except for government officials with urgent matters to take up with him including Undersecretary of Public Works Manuel Syquiao, who reported on the status of on-going public works projects, and Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco.

The President directed national police agencies to extend all possible assistance to Rey Pablo Ocampo who in a privileged speech had denounced the alleged existence of vice dens in Manila.

The President issued the directive in response to the appeal of the Manila solon for police assistance in his campaign against vice in the city.

He also asked Mayor Antonio J. Villegas to extend the full cooperation of the Manila Police Department in clearing the city of all kinds of vice.

April 18—

PRESIDENT MARCOS concentrated on his desk work, in the process also acting on a number of official matters coming to his attention.

Upon receipt of reports on the successful return of Apollo 13's crewmen aboard their crippled spacecraft early in the morning, the President sent the following cablegram to President Richard Nixon:

"We share with you the deepest feeling of all mankind upon the safe return of the Apollo 13 and the brave men who manned it stop It was with one heart that the world prayed for their safe return and it is with one heart that it welcomes them back to earth stop The Apollo voyage has demonstrated not only a new heroism in space by those brave men who kept their courage and composure in a situation which not much of the world understood but also a unity on earth among those who watched that voyage with nothing but the best hopes that its triumph would once more be a triumph for man stop My family and I and the Filipino nation are one with you in spirit stop”

The President did not receive callers.

Among others, the Chief Executive:

1. Regulated the representation of the country in various international official gatherings by directing that whenever possible Philippine diplomatic missions abroad should make up the representation;
2. Approved the designation by the National Irrigation Administration board of Alfredo Juinio, as administrator of the NIA.
3. Reiterated his order to the Public Service Commission to stop giving permits to new jeepney operators in the Greater Manila area, in the face of the saturation of all possible jeepney routes in the area by present operators.
4. Submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the nominations of Gaudioso R. Zerrudo and Jesus C. Demorito as municipal judges of Mina and Bingawan, Iloilo, respectively.

Zerrudo has actively practiced law since 1955 when he was admitted to the bar, while Demorito is an assistant provincial fiscal of Iloilo.

The President remained at his desk through the afternoon and evening, except for a lunch break and a brief rest during the early afternoon hours.

April 19—

PRESIDENT MARCOS concentrated on urgent matters of state, going over reports from a number of government agencies, and acted on official papers.

The pressure of desk work, forced the President to ask Secretary of Justice Felix V. Makasiar, to deliver for him his speech at a conference of judges of courts of first instance.

In his speech, the President underscored the importance of fair and efficient administration of justice as a means of insuring peace and order which, he said, were so necessary to the growth and survival of a democratic society.

“It is only when the citizens are assured that justice within their concent of government is unassailable that peace and order will reign unbroken,” he said.

The President said that the success of a democracy rests on the ability of its citizens to obey the laws. Without an orderly society, no democratic nation can flourish, he said.

“When a free society comes to the point where order no longer holds, then we can be sure that the very system will collapse,” he said.

“Then the forces of disorder will take over, and this usually means the employment of the instruments of repression, of force, such as we see employed in police states.”

April 20—

PRESIDENT MARCOS confined himself to desk work, breaking off only to attend the ceremonies at Assumption Convent marking the end of the school year, because daughter Imee was among those of her class receiving academic honors.

Accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, the President proudly stood by as Imee received honors for finishing her first year high school at the top of her class.

The rest of the day the President worked at his desk on state papers, from time to time calling in aides for consultations.

Among other actions, the President:

1) Directed the government agencies concerned to work out the resettling of victims of the fire yesterday in Malate which rendered some 700 families homeless.

Towards implementation, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. called a meeting in the afternoon of representatives of government agencies, civic and religious organizations and relief services to plan the resettlement of the homeless.

2) Ordered the immediate deportation of seven foreign nationals whose continued presence in the Philippines is considered a menace to the peace and safety of the community.

Ordered deported were: Eduard Rudolph Johnson, a Canadian; Dolores Ong Chua, Ramon Cua, Johnny Uy, Tan Hiong alias Fidel Nandiego alias Fidel Tan alias Tan Ona, Elho Che Cham, Tan Hinalias Tan King alias Alberto Tan.

3) Received a pledge of faith in his leadership from the citizens of Libagon, Southern Leyte stressing confidence in the President's ability to "lead this country to peace and prosperity and enhance the faith of the people towards our government if given the full cooperation by his constituents."

The letter was signed by, among others, members of the municipal council, barrio councils, and parents-teachers association, and school and church officials.

He worked undisturbed through the afternoon and evening.

April 21—

PRESIDENT MARCOS left Malacañang after a few hours of desk work, to officiate at the turnover of three planes which will be used in the crash program aimed at developing a local capability for inducing artificial rain and moderating the weather.

The ceremony, held at the Nichols Air Base, included a brief speech from the President, outlining the program and acknowledging the primary roles to be played by the Philippine Sugar Institute and the Philippine Air Force. The President also cited the assistance provided by the U.S. government, particularly technical men, and USAF pilots in an earlier rainmaking project.

After the ceremonies the President returned to Malacañang where he received callers, notably a delegation representing the principal Mangyan tribes in Mindoro Oriental, which made representations for the proclamation of certain public lands in that province as reservations for the Mangyans.

The President forthwith directed the bureaus concerned to make a study of the lands pinpointed, making sure that they were all in the public domain and defining clearly the borders.

The President also reactivated the Special Presidential Mission on Dollar Reparation, to determine the effect of Central Bank Circular No. 289 on the dollar remittance program.

The reactivation of the dollar remittance mission was made to determine the effects of the increased inflow of dollars to the country, which was estimated at $70 million in the latter part of last November from dollar repatriation by Filipino workers abroad.

As reactivated, the mission will be again headed by Labor Undersecretary Raoul M. Inocentes. He headed the previous special mission.

Other callers included Secretary of Commerce and Industry Ernesto Maceda, BTTI Commissioner Gregorio Araneta II, Rep. Roque Ablan, Jr., Salvador Peña, and A. Fonacier. The group discussed with the President the problems and plans of the tourist industry and the government program seeking to develop fully the country's potentials for tourism.

The rest of the day President devoted to his homework. He huddled with state papers in his study through the afternoon, and well into evening.

April 22—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had occasion to discuss a wide range of problems, notably legislative proposals pending in Congress, with members of the House of Representatives, who came calling on Congressmen's Day, regularly set on Wednesday.

Among others, the President urged speedy action on the export tax bill. Earlier, he was briefed by other officials on the details of the bill, during which he asked that a better system of classification be devised for export products eyed for levies, to make taxation more equitable.

Those who briefed the President were NEC Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr., and Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata.

Taking time off from his meetings with congressmen, the President inducted Dr. Josefina R. Navarro as Manila's assistant superintendent for elementary education, vice Mrs. Virginia M. Buenaflor, retired.

Among the congressmen who saw the President were Speaker Pro-tempore Jose Aldeguer, House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso, Natalio P. Castillo of Bohol, James Chiongbian of South Cotabato, Lamberto Macias of Negros Oriental, Felipe Azcuña of Zamboanga del Norte, Justiniano S. Montano of Cavite, Amando Cope of Albay, Manuel Zosa of Cebu, Artemio Mate of Leyte.

Corazon Primicias of Pangasinan, Democrito O. Plaza of Agusan del Sur, Jose Neri of Camiguin, Fernando Veloso of Western Samar, Guillermo Sanchez of Agusan del Norte, Andres Cosalan of Benguet, Vicente Cerilles of Zamboanga del Sur, Ali Dimaporo of Lanao del Sur, Rodolfo Albano of Isabela, Romulo Lumauig of Ifugao, Nicanor Yñiguez of Southern Leyte;

Pablo Malasarte of Bohol, Constantino Navarro of Surigao del Norte, Felipe Almazan of Kalinga-Apayao, Felipe Abrigo of Eastern Samar, Floro Crisologo of Uocos Sur, Felix Fuentesbella of Camarines Sur, Leopoldo Diaz of Nueva Ecija, Jose Puyat of Surigao del Sur, Indanan Anni of Sulu, Emerito Calderon of Cebu, Alfredor Lamen of Mountain Province, and Rafael Aquino of Sorsogon.

For the rest of the day, the President concentrated on his desk work. Except for brief rests, he continued to work at his desk through the afternoon and evening.

The President certified to Congress Senate Bill No. 153, seeking to institute a Coconut Investment Fund and creating the Coconut Investment Company to administer it.

Introduced by Senators Dominador Aytona, Emmanuel Pelaez and Lorenzo Tañada, the bill proposes a tax on copra and other coconut products, out of which a special fund will be set up, to be known as the Coconut Investment Fund.

The bill aims at accelerating the development of the coconut industry by providing adequate medium and long term financing for capital investment, precisely through the special fund to be administered by the Coconut Investment Company.

The President also asked the Police Commission to “give the country the best policemen it can train,” by stepping up its police training program to increase its output to 2,400 trained policemen per quarter, from the present rate of 1,200.

The Chief Executive’s instruction to the Polcom was in line with the government’s accelerated program to modernize and improve police services.

The President immediately authorized the release of 18 units of prefabricated school buildings for the police academies, and ordered the establishment of new ones.

April 23—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spelled out the qualities of leadership which he commended to the youth of the country, saying that the ’70s need leaders because of the aggressive society that is developing.

In a speech as guest of honor at the commencement exercises of De La Salle College’s elementary school, held at the college auditorium in Greenhills, Mandaluyong, Rizal, the President said that the student leaders of this decade must be “homegrown nationalists, preachers of a Philippine ideology, and inspired by Philippine revolutionary and intellectual leaders.”

The qualities of leadership which the President singled out are scholarship, rectitude, self-discipline, a sense of humor, and involvement with the nation’s history, traditions, and aspirations.

He also underlined the need for the young, including those who would be leaders, to undergo intensive preparation for youth’s central role in the affairs of the country. (See pp. 4273 to 4277 for full text of the President’s speech.)

The pleasant journey to the De La Salle College capped the President’s day. He was both a proud parent watching his son Ferdinand, Jr. graduate, and an ebullient guest speaker at the exercise.

Other than this excursion to Greenhills, he worked at his desk in Malacañang through the day, disposing of urgent state papers. He resumed his work shortly after arriving from the De La Salle graduation ceremonies.

The President filled a number of vacancies in the Department of Education with the designation of two new bureau directors, four assistant directors, one assistant city superintendent of schools and one member of the Board of National Education. I

Those designated were:

1. Assistant Director Liceria B. Soriano as acting director of public schools, vice Juan L. Manuel who was promoted to undersecretary of education;
2. Dr. Lorenzo G. Cesar as assistant director of public schools, vice Jose Enriquez, retired;

3. Ponciano B. Pineda, assistant director, Institute of National Language, as director of the institute, vice Jose Villa Panganiban, retired.
4. Fe Aldaba Yap, a division chief in the Institute of National Language, as assistant director of the institute, vice Pineda;
5. Andres R. Asistin as assistant director of the Bureau of Vocational Education, a newly-created position under the current general appropriations act;
6. Godofredo L. Alcasid as assistant director of the National Museum, which position has been vacant for years;
7. Dr. Josefina H. Navarro as assistant superintendent of schools for elementary education in Manila; and
8. Arturo M. Guerrero as member of the Board of National Education, representing the Association of Christian Schools and Colleges.

President's Week in Review: April 24-30, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

April 24—

ONE OF THE FIRST callers on President Marcos was Gen. Charles Lindbergh, who has become in recent months a regular visitor to the Philippines.

The famed Lone Eagle, a devoted advocate of conservation of natural life, is once again here to promote ways and means of preserving native flora and fauna. Calling at Malacañang at 9 a.m. to pay his respects, the first man to fly the Atlantic solo and nonstop, was accompanied by his son John, and Dr. Taylor Pryor and his son Ted, the elder Pryor being the president of the Sea Life Park in Hawaii. With the visitors were Sixto Roxas and Jose Alvarez, chief of the Parks and Wildlife Office.

President Marcos approved the plan for setting up marine parks in various parts of the country, to serve both as sanctuaries for Philippine marine life, and as a tourist attraction.

The President endorsed to the bureau of fisheries and the Parks and Wildlife Office a list of probable marine park sites asking these offices to determine the sites' boundaries as a prerequisite to the proclamation of these sites as reservations.

The President presented General Lindbergh with a plaque of appreciation for his deep concern for the preservation of the country's flora and fauna, particularly the monkey-eating eagle and the tamaraw.

The President also received two delegations, one representing the major taxi operators in Greater Manila, headed by Felipe Monserrat; the other representing the War Widows Association.

The first delegation sought presidential assistance on the cabmen's petition with the Public Service Commission asking for authority to raise fares. The President suggested that the operators submit a fact sheet on the state of the taxicab business, showing why cab fares deserve to be upped,

In the meeting with the war widows, the President endorsed the group's request to import allowable commodities, through the Reparations Commission, to the commissioners for the Repacom's study and recommendations.

Later in the day, the President received other callers, among them SSS Commissioner Adrian Cristobal and Mayor Germanico Carreon of Dapitan City.

The President also created a national committee to take charge of the preparations for the celebration of Philippine Independence Day on June 12.

Secretary of Education Onofre D. Corpuz and Secretary of Labor Blas F. Ople were named chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the committee.

The committee may create such sub-committees as may be necessary for the purpose of discharging its functions.

For most of the day, however, the President focused on his desk work.

April 25—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, as is his wont on weekends, concentrated on his desk work. However, he received a few callers with urgent business at Malacañang, including Thomas Niblock, USAID director here, who presented the first shipment of surgical instruments, which the aid agency donated to the Philippine General Hospital, and Dr. Zahir Ahmed, UN land reform expert, who discussed with the President the land reform program and offered to make a study of the land reform effort here.

At around noon, the President met privately with Senate and House leaders, including Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo Tolentino, Senator Wenceslao Lagumbay, Speaker Protempore Jose Aldeguer, House Majority Floorleader Marcelino Veloso and Rep. James Chiongbian of South Cotabato.

In the evening, he addressed the Confederation of Quezon City Barrio Councils, at the induction of the officers of the group at the D & E restaurant in Quezon City.

The President stressed the need in the country's urban communities for organized action, pointing out that the problem that must be solved is that of apathy and the loss of a sense of community.

The sense of community that small towns have, he said, may be restored among city folk "without sacrificing any of the attributes of progress and bigness, without doing away with any of the advantages of city life."

"The division of the city into districts or barrios permits the city resident to relate with his neighbor," he said, and allows him to work with others "in pursuit of specific objectives for the betterment of his community."

Finally, he asserted, it allows him "to participate in the conduct of local governments, because he has recourse to organized action with his immediate neighbors."

Earlier, the President designated Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata and NEC Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr. as members of the Joint Legislative-Executive Tax Commission.

The two Cabinet members will represent the executive department in the commission.

The Chief Executive also named four others to various government boards. They are:

- 1) Arturo D. Tolentino, Jr., as chairman of the Board of Examiners for Medical Technology;
- 2) Felix E. Asprer, as member of the Board of Examiners for Medical Technology.
- 3) Adrian Cristobal, as member of the board of administrators of the Philippine Coconut Administration.
- 4) Florencio Moreno, Sr., as member of the Board of Technical Surveys and Maps. He will represent the civil engineering profession in the board.

April 26—

PRESIDENT MARCOS directed the National Bureau of Investigation to intensify its hunt for the remaining suspects in the kidnapping and rape of a 24-year-old coed last April 3.

The Chief Executive also appealed to other victims of the sex gang to assist the NBI in identifying and effecting the arrest of the suspects.

Informed that relatives of one of the suspects had offered to surrender in exchange for lenient treatment, the President told the NBI to reject such compromises, and instead deal sternly with known suspects no matter who may be protecting them.

The President also directed the NBI to effect the immediate arrest of four men accused in the killing of actor Jess Lapid on the strength of a court order for their re-arrest.

The President ordered the NBI to determine why the warrant, issued last April 18, had not been served on the suspects.

The Chief Executive also proclaimed May 3 to 9 this year as Mindanao Week, to fill the need to accelerate the social and political integration of the inhabitants of Mindanao into the national mainstream.

During the week, there will be cultural presentations reflective of the ways of life in the southern region which will in effect boost tourism and promote awareness of our cultural heritage from that region.

April 27—

PRESIDENT MARCOS met anew with the leaders of both houses of Congress to further consider the means of speeding up passage of the minimum wage bill and the export levy bill.

The President renewed his appeal to the Congress leaders for the early passage of the bill raising the minimum wage for industrial and agricultural workers, as a lever for minimizing the effects of rising prices.

Present at the conference were Senate President Gil J. Puyat, Senate President Protempore Jose J. Roy, Senate Majority Floorleader Arturo M. Tolentino, Senators Lorenzo M. Tanada, Dominador R. Aytona, Wenceslao R. Lagumbay and Jose W. Diokno; House Majority Floor-leader Marcelino Veloso, Reps. Jose Alberto, Natalio P. Castillo and James Chiongbian.

Also present were Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, "jr., Chairman Leonides S. Virata of the Development Bank of the Philippines, Chairman Placido Mapa, Jr., of the National Economic Council, Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Deputy Director General Apolinario Orosa of the Presidential Economic Staff, and Eusebio Villatuya, president of the Philippine National Bank,

After the meeting, which started at breakfast and ended more than three hours later, an agreement was reached on several specifics to help iron out controversies over portions of the export levy bill.

Towards noon, the President motored to Quezon City where he addressed the opening session of the annual convention of the League of Provincial Governors and City Mayors.

The President called on provincial and city executives to take the initiative in solving local problems and assured them of the full support of the national government.

The President particularly emphasized to the provincial and city executives that they should be wary about those who would impose a "national democracy," which he said, is just another term for "people's democracy which the communists have coined.

Touching on the current agitation for change, the President reminded the governors and city mayors that "we are the ones who should bring about change," pointing out that they were chosen by the people to lead in changing the nation.

"I appeal to you to utilize this power given by the people to bring about that change required by them," the President stated.

Noting that certain elements in the protest movement have proposed new systems of government, he said that the present democracy is "still much better than the systems" eyed by other factions.

The President stressed that some “dissenters are trying to rise to power by fomenting disorders.”

Enlarging on the tactics of communism, he said that communists “ride on any vehicle and if capitalism will advance communist interests.” the supporters of communism will align themselves with capitalism for as long as it will suit their purposes,

The President was fetched from Malacañang by Governor Isidro Rodriguez of Rizal, chairman of the League of Provincial Governors and City Mayors.

Except for these two activities, the President largely worked on state papers in his study. He did not receive callers for the rest of the day.

The President ordered a study of government requirements in motor vehicles, with a 5-year projection.

In this connection, Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr. sent separate memorandums to the secretaries of national defense and of general services, asking them to coordinate on the possible standards to be followed in procurement.

The President said that the projection should cover all offices and agencies of the government, including the armed forces, and should distinguish between vehicles to be secured by purchase and those through foreign assistance programs.

He also asked that inquiry be made into the possibility of car manufacture in the country, utilizing local components as far as practicable.

April 28—

PRESIDENT MARCOS certified to Congress a number of urgent bills, among other matters he Look up during a long stint at his desk, which extended through almost all of his working day; from 8:00 in the morning to well over 8:00 in the evening.

The certified bills are:

- 1) House Bill No. 491, which seeks to propose that governing bodies or heads of offices concerned should be jointly liable with the collecting agent for the non-remittance of premiums.
- 2) Senate Bill No. 253, which seeks to amend the GSIS charter.
- 3) Senate Bill No. 28, which seeks to prohibit and penalize shipments of explosives and flammable corrosives or poisonous materials in passenger aircraft, and regulating the shipment of the same materials in cargo aircraft.
- 4) House Bill No. 1537, a consolidation of House Bills which seeks to create a Peace and Order Fund, to be constituted from the proceeds of the tax on travel and the tax on securities transactions, and for which purpose would amend Republic Act No. 1478, as amended, and the National Internal Revenue Code.
- 5) House Bill No. 679, and Senate Bill No. 74, both of which seek to accelerate national community development, converting for the purpose the Office of the Presidential Ann on Community Development into a regular department.
- 6) A proposed bill authored by Senator Alejandro Almendras which seeks to amend Section 3 of Republic Act No. 6124, also known as the Price Control Law.

Occasional breaks occurred during the day, such as the courtesy call of T. P. Wu, a Taiwanese who has been here studying local pulp production well qualified for the task, Wu is a manufacturer himself, and is involved with several companies in Taiwan concentrating on this medium. He promised to make a report on his observations here.

The President at some time in the morning had two interviewers from overseas papers, one with Kenneth Gotti of Business Asia; the other with Robert Novak of the Washington Post.

Conferences made up the rest of his day, with Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata coming in with economic matters to discuss; Customs Commissioner Rolando Geotina with a report on customs collections; and Dr. Manuel Lim, chairman of the Price Control Council, with recommendations for the amendment of the price control law.

As usual, the President rounded out his day late in the night, with certain matters to study further.

He ordered the immediate reactivation of the task force which spearheaded the anti-carnapping campaign in the past, with orders to nip the resurgence of widespread carnapping.

The task force was placed under the supervision and control of the chief of constabulary.

April 29—

PRESIDENT MARCOS had a big group of callers—a delegation of governors and city mayors—who came upon the close of the annual convention of the League of Provincial Governors and City Mayors.

In a talk with them, the President outlined the priorities for the release of previously frozen public works funds. He also discussed with them various problems in the provinces.

The President advised the local executives to prepare their programs and requests for fund releases according to the priorities set, so that these funds, whenever available, can be included in the overall program.

The main priorities are:

- 1) Portworks, particularly those which will boost export trade.
- 2) Schoolhouses, which will be allotted first to areas which suffered the total destruction or damage of such buildings.
- 3) Waterworks, which had been started but were stopped for one reason or another.

The President also directed the Budget Commissioner and the Public works Director to determine which provinces up to now have no capitol funding, and to give top priority to the construction of the same.

Through Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., the President also asked Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco to release initially P50,000 each for provinces which need to build capitol buildings.

The total allocation authorized by the President for each provincial capitol was P400,000.

It being congressmen's day in Malacañang, the President also received all' comers from Congress. Among those who saw him for consultations on various problems of their constituencies were Reps. Roque Ablan, Jr. of Ilocos Norte, Lorenzo Sarmiento of Davao del Norte, James Chiongbian of South Cotabato, William Chiongbian of Misamis Occidental, and Felipe Azcuria of Zamboanga del Norte.

Apart from these callers, the President attended mostly to state papers. Among others, he certified a new batch of bills to Congress for early action. He also approved new appointments, most of them to the public schools system.

Aside from the four bills, the President also certified Senate Joint Resolution No. 1 which would establish basic policies for social and economic development through environmental planning.

The bills certified were:

- 1) House Bill No. 1056, which seeks to increase the rates of import duties on certain articles.
- 2) House Bill No. 537, which seeks to regulate the practice of agricultural technology in the Philippines.
- 3) Senate Bill No. 1, which seeks to ordain and institute a National Building Code of the Philippines.
- 4) House Bill No. 1674, which would recognize the juridical personality of, and exempt from taxation, the Southeast Asian Regional Center for Graduate Study and Research in Agriculture.

Appointed by the President were:

- 1) Dr. Clodualdo H. Leocadio as assistant director of the bureau of public schools.
- 2) Maria Clara Lorenzo-Lobregat as member of the Board of Administrators of the Philippine Coconut Administration;
- 3) Abraham R. Foronda as municipal judge of Kabugao, Kalinga-Apayao; and
- 4) Dr. Estefania Aldaba Lim (re-appointment) member, Board of Textbooks.

The President also created an executive committee which will take charge of the arrangements for holding the 21st Colombo Plan Consultative Committee meeting scheduled in the Philippines next November.

Named to compose the executive committee were Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Manuel Collantes, chairman; and Commerce Undersecretary Johnny Araneta, Defense Undersecretary Manuel Q. Salientes, Education Undersecretary Juan Manuel, Presidential Executive Assistant Jacobo C. Clave, Assistant Executive Secretary Ponciano Mathay, NEC Executive Director Rizalino R. Pablo, PES Deputy Director-General Apolina-río Orosa, Mayor Antonio Villegas, and Chief Budget Analyst Antonio de la Torre of the Budget Commission, members.

He continued to study government reports and act on official papers through the afternoon, and into evening.

April 30—

PRESIDENT MARCOS spent most of the day out of Malacañang, as he visited Magalang, Pampanga where he participated in the rites breaking ground for the model farm community project in that town, inspected the Home Defense Force at San Isidro, a barrio of that town, and finally attended as guest of honor the anniversary celebration of the Tabak Division in Fort Magsaysay, Laur, Nueva Ecija, as well as the graduation exercises of the 20-year-old military trainees.

In Magalang, the President said the success of the -pilot project will determine the future policy of the administration in pressing the land reform program.

At San Isidro, the President announced that he had ordered the Armed Forces to organize home defense forces in every barrio where there is need for it, notably in Tarlac and Pampanga, as well as in other provinces.

The President congratulated the organizers of the barrio home defense force and expressed the hope that it will be able to provide the necessary protection against lawless elements.

Barrio San Isidro is vital to the maintenance of peace and order in Central Luzon because it lies at the very heart of Huklandia. It used to be a Huk sanctuary.

The President, the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, their children, imee, Irene and Bongbong, left Malacañang at about 8:30 and flew to Magalang where they were met by a large delegation headed by Magalang Mayor Daniel Lacson, Filipinas Foundation Chairman Enrique Zobel, Rep. Jose B. Lingad and Gov. Francisco Nepomuceno of Pampanga.

After the ground-breaking ceremony, the President proceeded to Barrio San Isidro where he inspected the home Defense Force, before flying on to Fort Magsaysay.

Upon arrival at Fort Magsaysay, the President and his party proceeded to the post chapel for the Te Deum., and then to the parade ground where military honors and a review were rendered.

After addressing the armed forces and the graduate trainees, the President witnessed a demonstration of an infantry battalion attack stage by elements of the Tabak Division with the support of helicopter units.

After the demonstration and lunch at the officers Rest House, the President and his family returned to Manila, arriving at Malacañang about 2 p. m.

Among those present at the Fort Magsaysay ceremonies were government officials led by Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., Reps. Leopoldo Diaz and Angel D. Concepcion, and Governor Eduardo Joson; and the Armed Forces led by Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile, General Manuel Yan. AFP chief of staff. Brig. Gen. Rafael Iletto, commanding general of the Philippine Army, Brig. Gen. Jesus Singson, chief of the Philippine Air Force, and Brig. Gen. Eduardo Garcia, chief of the PC and former commanding general of the Tabak Division.

In the afternoon, the President nominated Angel Limjoco, Jr. and Vicente Paterno as members of the Board of Investments.

The President submitted to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation the names of 14 successful candidates for the post of Foreign Affairs Officer, Class IV, and as Vice Consul, who passed the prescribed examination given last year.

Nominated were Maxie S. Aguillon, Bernarditas de Castro, Romeo A. Arguelles, Eloy Bello III, Jose U. Fernandez, Juanito P. Jarasa, Fortunate D. Ablena, Alfredo L. Almendrala, Clemencio F. Montesa, Ernesto C. Tullid, Edmundo B. Libid, Fructuoso D. Calagui, Erlinda D. Fadera, and Oscar G. Valenzuela.

The President also issued an executive order naming additional members to the National Social Action Council.

President's Week in Review: May 1-7, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

May 1—

PRESIDENT MARCOS followed a full schedule of official activities.

It being Labor Day, the President's schedule was highlighted by a luncheon at Malacañang with labor leaders. Addressing the labor leaders the President said his administration will continue to exert great effort so that the common workingman will live in comparative health, efficiency and well-being.

May 1 also has a special significance for the First Couple—it was their 16th wedding anniversary.

Early in the morning, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, heard Mass at the Malacanang Chapel. With them were their children Imee, Bongbong and Irene, the President's mother, Mrs. Josefa Edralin Marcos, and other close relatives and friends. Following the Mass, the First Family repaired to the Palace dining room where they had breakfast with well-wishers. Then the President proceeded to his study and the First Lady to the music room, to attend to their respective schedules.

Among the President's callers was a delegation of United Nations officials led by Francisco Aquino, executive director of the FAO World Food Programme; and General Mashudi, vice chairman of the Indonesian Consultative Council who called at Malacañang to pay his respects. At noon, the President signed into law H. No. 1105, imposing a stabilization tax on exports for a four-year period, as a means of accelerating economic development.

The Act imposes a 10 per cent levy on the gross F.O.B. peso proceeds of exports on logs, copra, centrifugal sugar, and copper ore and concentrates, and eight per cent on other export products, both levies to be phased out by two per cent annually up to June 30, 1974. Then the President and the First Lady went to the state dining hall where they had lunch with labor leaders and their ladies. Among other actions, the President forwarded to the Commission on Appointments for confirmation his 61 nominees to various posts. The nominees were previously given interim appointments and are now occupying their posts. (See pp. 4757 to 4758 for list of nominees.)

May 2—

PRESIDENT MARCOS affirmed the ability of the "moral and physical strength of freedom" to prevail over those who may seek to destroy democracy.

In a speech at the ceremonies celebrating the 35th anniversary of the Philippine Air Force, held at Nichols Air Base, the President said that the Republic "represents a society of free men deriving their strength and faith from God and freedom," and knowledge of this gives the government the confidence of allowing the fullest freedom for all, including those who subscribe to "unpopular ideas."

The PAF, he said, in helping put down disorder expressed its loyalty "to our traditions of freedom and democracy" without resorting to repression.

Stating that "we believe in social justice," and seek to narrow the gap between the rich and poor through orderly change and democratic processes, he stressed that this needed change will be achieved through democratic action.

He reiterated that the government will not tolerate violence and destruction as a means of bringing about social change. Reason must prevail, he added. (See pp. 4758-A to 4758-C for full text of the President's speech.)

After attending the ceremonies marking the PAF's 35th anniversary, the President and the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, sailed for Palawan on the first leg of a tour of southern Philippines.

In another speech read by Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile at the closing session of the Lions State Convention in Naga City, the President urged all citizens to “build up and not destroy,” in keeping with the code of ethics of Lionism, saying that “our nation is worth preserving, our democratic institutions are worth nurturing, and our economic foundations worth strengthening”.

The Filipino citizen more than ever should always bear in mind his obligations to the nation and community, to which he should give his unswerving loyalty in word, act and deed, he said, both strictures culled from the Lions’ code of ethics.

“The spirit of creation and fidelity to the community that is in the Lions Code of Ethics should be imbibed by all our citizens,” the President said, pointing out that “this spirit is coupled by a commitment to compassion, as when member Lions are enjoined to aid (his) fellowmen by giving (his) sympathy to those in distress, . . . aid to the weak, and . . . substance to the needy.’ And in the pursuit of his vocation for service to the community, the Lion is expected to exercise those qualities of fairness, self-respect, friendship, and generosity that we wish are exercised by all of the more fortunate and successful Filipinos” (See pp. 4758-D to 4758-F for full text of the President’s speech.)

May 3—

PRESIDENT MARCOS, accompanied by the First Lady, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, arrived in Puerto Princesa, Palawan at 3 p.m. on board the Presidential yacht, the RPS 777, on the first leg of his visiting tour of the Mindanao-Sulu-Palawan area.

Upon arrival, the President’s party which included his children Imee, Bongbong and Irene, was met by a big crowd of Palaweños headed by Rep. Ramon Mitra, Jr., Gov. Salvador Socrates and Puerto Princesa Mayor Felixberto Oliveros, Jr.

The President had a meeting with the local officials wherein he inquired into their problems.

Addressing a public rally at the Mendoza Park, the President described the great potentials of Palawan, particularly as source of national income and as a tourist attraction.

At an interview with Manila newsmen covering his trip, the President said he would convoke meetings of the National Security Council and the Foreign Policy Council upon his return to Manila.

He would discuss with councils the request for arms by the government of Cambodia. He pointed out that the Cambodian government did not ask for troops, but indicated that if the Philippines were to help at all, it would be a token help, which he would discuss with the councils.

May 4—

PRESIDENT MARCOS asked Gov. Salvador Socrates of Palawan and Mayor Felixberto Oliveros, Jr. of Puerto Princesa to organize provincial and municipal development committees as oil exploration in the province intensifies.

During a meeting, with local officials in Puerto Princesa and at a public rally at Plaza Mendoza, the President predicted that Palawan will become one of the most prosperous, if not the most prosperous, regions in the country.

The President revealed that all initial surveys point to the possibility of oil deposits in Palawan, probably because of its proximity to Borneo.

The President met with the local officials of the province to discuss such problems as the water supply, electrification, portworks, and the transfer of the Iwahig Penal Colony to Agusan.

Earlier, at Plaza Mendoza, the President took up the individual problems submitted to him by the people with local and national government officials.

The Chief Executive issued directives on the processing of teachers appointments, land classification, schoolhouses and allotments, which were among the problems raised by some 200 provincial, municipal and barrio officials of Palawan in conference with the President.

The local officials travelled on short notice to Palawan to bring before the President urgent problems.

On the proposed transfer of Iwahig, the President asked the Palawan officials to discuss the matter with the officials of Agusan so that the smooth transfer of the economy could be arranged.

The President also announced his plan to convert Puerto Princesa into a free port, so that ships from foreign countries could readily pick local products for delivery to ports abroad. He said that this port would be most convenient for vessels from such countries as Indonesia and Australia, and others in South Asia.

After conferring with local officials, the President and his party boarded the RPS 777 for the next stop on the week-long presidential inspection trip of the southern Philippines.

Enroute to Taganak Island, the President wired instructions to Chairman Gregorio- Abad of the Reparations Commission to expedite the shipment of irrigation pumps from Japan, following the court order lifting the restraints on the said equipment.

There were 1,100 pump units acquired by the ISU through Reparations, earmarked for farmers in Central and Southern Luzon. However, shipment of the pumps was held due to a restraining order of the court.

Through Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., the President directed Abad to ship the pumps immediately.

In a speech read for him by Vice President Fernando Lopez, the President told the opening session of the First World Medical Congress of Military Surgeons that the Philippines gives equal concern to the “building of a more humane society within the framework of democratic government,” as it does to economic development which logically should be given more importance by a developing country.

The President said that the “monumental challenge” of accelerating national development and bringing about overall change has “created certain tensions” among the people.

But he stressed that despite the tensions and the excesses of certain activist groups, “none of the Filipinos who value freedom, doubt that the nation will hold together, and that it will prevail.” (See pp. 4758-G to 4758-J for full text of the President’s speech.)

May 5—

PRESIDENT MARCOS surveyed conditions in Sibutu Island, and consulted with local officials on the problems in the locality.

The President found this remote island in southernmost Philippines a tranquil place, and the islanders hardworking.

Apart from inquiring into island conditions, the President also took note of official matters which needed his attention, as relayed to him from Manila.

Among others, the President:

In a speech read for him by Secretary of Health Amadeo Cruz, at the opening of the 63rd annual convention of the Philippine Medical Association in Cebu City, the President urged wider and sustained public support for a comprehensive health care program the government has initiated and is committed to implement.

The President said that though the overall health situation in the country is good, there are still serious pockets of concern, due to the prevalence of residual diseases and uneven sanitation.

The need to uproot these problems, he said, “offers opportunities for action in both the government and private medical sectors of the nation.”

He asked the members of the PMA to consider the government program in this area and to give it its support. He noted that the PMA can be very effective, in the light of its past achievements in the same area, including the initiation of such projects as Medicare, rural health seminars and clinics, and health training programs.

May 7—

PRESIDENT MARCOS said that contrary to some reports, the Muslim Filipinos “are not thinking of participating in any secessionist movement out are very loyal to the Republic.”

In an interview at the clubhouse of the Dole (Philippines) plantation m Polomolok, the President said:

“I am glad that the Muslims are not thinking of participating in any secessionist movement but, on the contrary, are very loyal to the Republic of the Philippines. I have received pledges from Muslim leaders of southwestern Mindanao to this effect.”

“I have received messages from the alleged secession leaders denying the supposed movement and vowing to fight on the side of the Republic against anyone who wants to wreck it,” he said.

The President said he made the trip in connection with Mindanao Week and in order to learn of the people’s problems without, their having to go to Malacañang.

Among these problems, the President said, were:

- 1) Reports of infiltration from the south;
- 2) Unsolved killings in Sulu and Cotabato;
- 3) Reported secession movement.

The President said he would send medical teams to Sitangkai and Sibutu where there are no rural health officers.

The President also ordered that both the military and the Bureau of Telecommunications set up radio stations at Taganak Island.

The President flew to the Dole plantation where he met with Gov. Sergio Morales and Rep. James Chiongbian of South Cotabato, Secretary Manuel Elizalde, Jr. of PANAMIN, Lt. Col. Cirilo Bueno, PC provincial commander and Surallah Mayor Jose Sison.

The President told the conferees to settle the dispute between the PANAMIN and Christian settlers and the Muslims led by Datu Plang and Datu Ma Dusa.

After the conference, the President flew back to General Santos and boarded the presidential plane for Manila.

Immediately upon arrival the President received in private audience a personal emissary of Indonesian President General Suharto to receive a message from the Indonesian President and to listen to Indonesia’s proposal for a meeting in Djakarta of Asian countries to discuss the Cambodian situation this month.

The emissary, Dr. Anwar Sani, director-general of political affairs at the Indonesian foreign ministry, outlined to the President Indonesia's views on the proposed meeting, emphasizing its urgency in the light of current development.

The President expressed the view that it seems most desirable that a new Asian initiative be launched to produce such a "constructive formula" for the troubled area.

Dr. Sani was accompanied to Malacanang by Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo and the resident Indonesian ambassador here, Kusno Utomo. The audience lasted 15 minutes.

President's Week in Review: May 8-14, 1970

OFFICIAL WEEK IN REVIEW

May 8—

PRESIDENT Marcos had a series of conferences as he caught up with the pace of official business after returning to Manila from an inspection trip to the southern region, while also formally receiving the credentials of two new ambassadors.

Early in the morning, the President received briefings on current official concerns from close aides and ranking officials, notably Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo and Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile.

After these conferences, he settled down to study reports and act on urgent papers brought up to his desk. Then he received Representative Antonio Diaz and Governor Vicente Magsaysay of Zambales and Olongapo City Mayor Amelia Gordon, to discuss problems of the province and of Olongapo City.

The President then disengaged from callers, to preside at the ceremonies where Malaysian Ambassador Hashim bin Sultan and British Ambassador John Noel Ormiston Curie presented their credentials.

At lunchtime, the President had Secretary of Finance Cesar E. A. Virata and Central Bank Governor Gregorio S. Licaros for guests, during which they discussed financial matters.

The President relaxed briefly after this conference, and afterward continued to work on official papers.

May 9—

PRESIDENT Marcos worked uninterrupted through most of the morning, with his schedule of visitors all clear.

At about noon, he conferred with Secretary of Foreign Affairs Carlos P. Romulo, Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile, and Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., who came to submit the report of the executive committee of the National Security Council, which met earlier in the morning.

The President went back to the study of state papers till about 12:30 p.m. when he motored to the Manila International Airport to greet Australian Prime Minister John Gorton and Mrs. Gorton, who were making a brief stopover in Manila enroute home to Sydney from Osaka.

In the 30 minutes the Gortons spent at the MIA, the President and Prime Minister Gorton has only time for casual conversation. As soon as the Australian Air Force plane, took off with the Gortons, the President motored back to Malacañang.

He went back to his study to work further on state papers at mid-afternoon. He remained at work through the rest of the day.

Among other actions, the President:

1. Designated Alfredo Pio de Roda as acting Undersecretary of Finance vice Undersecretary Roman Cruz, who was named acting GSIS general manager.
2. Directed the Philippine Navy to ferry to their home province the remains of the 13 persons who were killed in a house in Fort Bonifacio when a plane crashed there last Thursday.

The President made available the services of the Navy on the representations of Representative Cornelio T. Villareal, who sought to help the families of the unfortunate victims bring back to Sapián, Capiz the remains for burial.

3. Directed the foreign office to lend every possible assistance to the families of deported Chinese nationals, Quintín and Rizal Yuyitung, to gain free access to Taipei in order to visit the two deported nationals.

May 10—

PRESIDENT Marcos ordered the immediate relief of a watchdog team on log exports found guilty of extortion activities while on official assignment in Mindanao.

Ordered relieved on recommendation of Lt. Gen. Pelagio Cruz (retired), chairman of the Anti-Smuggling Action Center (ASAC), were Conrado Unlayao of the Bureau of Customs and Antonio Lizardo of the Bureau of Forestry, team leader and member, respectively, of a composite team operating in Davao.

The team was specifically assigned in the Davao area to prevent dollar hoarding through undervaluation of log exports.

In another move, the President laid down the policy favoring the carrying of firearms.

At the same time, the president ordered Secretary of National Defense Juan Ponce Enrile to effect a simplified program for the registration of all firearms in the country.

The President issued this directive following his recent trip to Mindanao where he received numerous complaints concerning the difficulties encountered by possessors of firearms who wanted to register the same.

While this machinery is still under preparation, the President authorized owners or assignees of motor vehicles used for personal or official business, to carry firearms while travelling in their respective motor vehicles.

This authority applies to those with permits to possess firearms, “but without specific permits to carry the same outside of residence.”

The new order in effect makes a person’s motor vehicle an extension of his residence.

May 11—

PRESIDENT Marcos again held a round of conferences with both public and private officials, while also receiving a number of callers.

In-between, he worked on state papers in his study. In addition, he attended the organizational meeting of the League of City Mayors as guest speaker, held at the Manila Hotel.

The President’s first conference was with officials of the Philippine Air Lines, attended by PAL President Benigno Toda, Jr., Buenaventura Velos and Rafael Igoa, both of PAL; and Secretary of Commerce and Industry Ernesto Maceda and MIA Manager Luis Tabuena.

After this conference, the President met with representatives of the Philippine Public School teachers Association (PPSTA) with Executive Secretary Alejandro Melchor, Jr., GSIS Chairman Benjamin del Rosario and Fernando Santico, GSIS board member, also present.

The PPSTA delegation sought representation of public school teachers in the GSIS board of trustees. Those who spoke for the organization were Andres M. Fonacier, PPSTA president; Arturo U. Armas, vice president; Santos P. Pascual, general manager; Leonido V. Razo, Manuel B. Adivoso, Cayetano Tejano, Melanio L. Mallari, Gregorio Baguioro, Prisco F. Castro, Pacifico A. Lota and Esmeraldo R. Acorda, president for Zamboanga del Norte, Camarines Norte, Bohol, Davao City, San Carlos City, Masbate, and Enlisted Personnel of the Philippines, respectively; Board Members Celta P. Reyes, Fictoriano A. Pasillao, Francisco P. Orillos, Trinidad R. Estrada, Matilde F. Padernal, Johnny A. Santos. Paciano T. Simbajon and several others.

The third conference of the day was with Budget Commissioner Faustino Sy-Changco, Representative Jose Alberto and Senator Dominador Aytona. The President took up the government's fiscal concern with the three officials.

He also received Ted Tyderligh, Australian business executive, who made a courtesy call. The visitor was accompanied by Senator Helena Benitez and local business executive Rey Navarro.

In the afternoon, the President motored to the Manila Hotel to attend the founding ceremonies of the League of City Mayors, where he gave the keynote speech and inducted the League officers.

"In government, I can see no group of officialdom more qualified to take the vanguard in generating and managing change than local executives, particularly those in our cities," he said. "In many ways, they will be the leaders in this decade and the next most deeply engaged because the cities are the political economic and social centers of the country." he added.

The President urged the city mayors to begin participating more actively in the planning and implementation of programs that will enhance the growth of their communities.

He appealed to the city executive to initiate plans for the development of industries, creation of more job opportunities for the steadily increasing metropolitan population, to upgrade the maintenance of peace and order, to promote the effort against air and water pollution and to press slum clearance, beautification and other urban improvement programs.

The President pledged the assistance of the Presidential Economic Staff, the National planning Commission and other national government agencies in the formulation and implementation of these development program.

Returning to Malacañang, he relaxed briefly, then resumed his work in his study.

The President directed the National Economic council to prepare a formal request for a pilot housing project under the United Nations Development Program with the Asian Development Bank providing the financing.

The President also directed the presidential Economic Staff and the Presidential Assistant on Housing and Resettlement to coordinate with the NEC in pushing through this project.

May 12—

PRESIDENT Marcos met with the Foreign Policy Council to discuss a request for assistance from the Cambodian government of Premier Lon Nol.

The Council met for one and a half hours.

The Council agreed that the government should await the results of the Asian conference scheduled in Jakarta, Indonesia on May 16 to 18 and wait for the Cambodian situation to clear up before any decision is taken on what aid, other than military, might be sent by the Philippines, if it becomes absolutely necessary for aid to be sent.

The Council unanimously agreed that the Philippines attend the Jakarta conference with the Secretary of Foreign Affairs as chairman of the delegation, and the chairmen of the foreign relations and foreign affairs committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, as members; and with the following guidelines:

1. The government does not support the idea of military aid to Cambodia.
2. The government supports the idea of a civilian observers team being dispatched to Cambodia to assess the situation and to report its observations to the member-nations of the conference.
3. The government supports the maintenance of Cambodia's neutrality.
4. The government is interested that the principles of the first Afro-Asian conference in Bandung be upheld at the Jakarta meeting.
